KIRKCOWAN, or KIRKOWEN, a par. in the co. of Wigton, Scotland, 7 miles N.W. of Wigton. It is a station on the Glasgow, South-Western, and Portpatrick railway. It is 15 miles long by 4 broad. The surface is naturally a series of bleak moors, with a poor thin soil only adapted for pasture. The parish is watered by the rivulets Bladenock and Taaf, and is intersected by the roads between Ayrshire and Wigton and Portpatrick and Dumfries. It is in the presb. of Wigton and synod of Galloway. The minister's stipend is £293. In the district are three schools. The ancient church was dedicated to St. Keuin, hence Kirkuan, the old name of the parish. A granite rocking-stone was discovered here a few years ago; it is 4¾ feet high, and 16¼ feet in the girth, and is balanced to such a nicety as to be kept in motion by the wind. Craighlaw House is a fine seat in this parish. Here are granite and greywacke quarries, also a woollen mill.

KIRKCUBRIE, an ancient par. in co. Ayr, Scotland, now joined to Ballintrae.

KIRKCUDBRIGHT, commonly called a stewartry, but to all intents and purposes a sheriffdom, or shire. It is situated in the S. of Scotland, and forms the eastern, and by far the most extensive, portion of the ancient district of Galloway. It is bounded on the N. by the co. of Ayr, on the S. by the Irish Sea and Solway Firth, on the E. by the rivers Cairn and Nith, which separate it from the co. of Dumfries, and on the W. by the co. of Wigton. It extends from N. to S. 40 miles, and from E. to W. 44 miles, and contains an area of 954 statute miles, or 610,734 acres. It has no subdivisions, but the four most northerly parishes—Carsphain, Kells, Dalry, and Balmaclellan, are commonly designated the district of "Glenkins." The character of the country naturally separates it into two divisions; if a line be drawn from the centre of Kirkpatrick, Irongray parish, to the Gatehouse of Fleet, all to the N.W., with little exception, is so mountainous, that it may with propriety be termed a Highland district; while the southern and eastern portions exhibit a fine champaign and cultivated country. The principal eminences are Cairnsmuir, 1,728 feet, Crawfell, or Criffel, 1,800, Bencairn 1,200, and Cairn 1,000 above the level of the sea. Its principal rivers are the Dee, the Cree, the Urr, and the Ken, of which the latter is the largest, being fed by numerous tributaries from the neighbouring hills. The whole of these rivers rise in the N. and empty themselves in the Irish Sea, or Solway Firth. The smaller streams are the Cluden, the Deugh, the Fleet, and the Tarf. The Solway Firth, in a circular form, washes the coast of the county from the Nith to the head of Wigton Bay, a coast-line of 50 miles, exclusive of sinuosities. The coast on the E. is flat, but elsewhere, in general, bold and rocky, the cliffs in some instances rising to a great height. Wigton Bay is on the W., and a large estuary on the E.; the other principal bays are Kirkcudbright Bay, Fleet Bay, Heston Bay, and Auchencairn Bay. The Rough frith is formed by the mouth of the river Urr. There are numerous lakes, the chief of which are the Ken, the Doon, and the Kinder. There are several chalybeate springs in the stewartry, that of Lochenbrack being the most celebrated.—In the southern portion of the district the climate is mild, but in the moors it is sharp. The most prevalent rocks are varieties of greywacke and slates, but a large portion of the mountainous district consists wholly of granite, which is quarried at Rerwick and Colvend. Sandstone and limestone are also met with, but the latter only in large quantities at Kirkbean. A good deal of money has been expended in searching for coal, which has been found at Kirkbean, but is not worked. Ironstone and lead-ore abound in several parts of the district. At Colvend a copper mine was formerly worked. The lakes and mosses of the stewartry supply a large quantity of shell marl of the finest description. The soil, which is principally composed of a thin mould, or a brownish loam mixed with sand, is generally incumbent on gravel, in many places on rock. The surface is interspersed with meadows and mosses, but a large portion of the lowlands is under tillage. The size of the farms in the lowlands averages about 200 acres, while in the highlands they are about 6 to 12 square miles in extent. The ordinary length of leases is nineteen years. The pasture of the district is of excellent quality, such as few counties can boast of. The attention of the farmer is chiefly directed to the rearing of cattle for the Norfolk fairs, where the beasts are sold to graziers, by whom they are fattened for the London market. On the hills large quantities of sheep are pastured, the sheep here being chiefly black faced, mixed with Cheviots, South Down, the Morf and the Mendip breeds. The peculiar breed of horses which this and the adjoining county of Wigton formerly possessed, and which was known by the name of the Galloway breed, has nearly disappeared, its place having been supplied by horses of a larger size, and better adapted to draught. Large numbers of pigs are reared chiefly for the English markets. In many parts great attention is given to bees, and the honey procured from this quarter is of a superior quality. Oats are chiefly cultivated. The potato crops are considerable, many tons of which are sent to England. The estimate gross produce is about 49,276 bushels of wheat, 60,068 bushels of barley, 1,068,887 bushels of oats, 946 bushels of bere, 14,149 bushels of beans, 212,660 tons of turnips, and 8,372 tons of potatoes. Considerable plantations have of late years been formed by several noblemen and gentlemen of the stewartry, and much has been accomplished in reclaiming mosslands. There are scarcely any manufactures. Both the cotton and the woollen manufactures have been introduced, but, with rare exceptions, they have either died out, or are of very limited extent. The chief exports are cattle, sheep, grain, potatoes, and wool; and the imports, coal, lime, and colonial produce.—The excellence of the roads in the county has been long celebrated, the original formation of many being attributed to the Romans. About the middle of the 18th century a military road was made through the stewartry from Carlisle to Fort Patrick, and, of late years, the old roads have been much improved, and new ones constructed. The Glasgow and South Western railway intersects the county, and has stations at the following places—viz. Moaxweltown, Lochanhead, Killywhan, Kirkgunzeon, Southwick, Dalbeatie, Castle Douglas (here is the Kirkcudbright junction), Crossmichael, Parton, North Galloway, Dromore, Creetown, and Palnure.—It contains the royal burghs of Kirkcudbright and New Galloway, the former being its county town. The burghs of barony are Maxwelton, Gatehouse, Castle Douglas, and Creetown. The county sends one member to parliament. The population in 1851 was 43,121, and in 1861, 42,495, showing a decrease of 626 in the decennial period. At the county town, stewart and commissary courts are held on Thursdays and Fridays; stewart small-debt courts every second Friday during session. The quarter sessions are held by the justices of peace on the first Tuesday of March, May, and August, and last Tuesday of October. The stewart circuit courts, under the Small Debt Act, are held at New Galloway on the 4th March, 3rd June, and 23rd September; at Creetown, 8th March, 7th June, 27th September; at Castle-Douglas, 8th January, 8th April, 8th July, 30th September; and at Maxwelton, 9th January, 9th April, 9th July, and the 1st October. Justice of peace small-debt courts are held as follows:—at Kirkcudbright on the second Tuesday of every month; at Castle-Douglas on the first Monday of every month; at New Galloway on the second Monday of every month; at Maxwelton on the first Thursday of every month; at Gatehouse on the first Saturday of every month; and at Creebridge on the first Saturday of every alternate month.—That portion of the county W. of the river Urr belongs to the synod of Galloway, and is distributed into eighteen parishes, sixteen of which constitute the presbytery of Kirkcudbright, while two are included in that of Wigton. The district E. of the Urr is distributed into ten parishes, and belongs to the synod and presbytery of Dumfries. There are places of worship in the county belonging to the Established Church, the United Presbyterians, Free Church, Reformed Presbyterians, Episcopalians, and Roman Catholics.—Previous to its subjugation by Agricola in A.D. 85, this part of Scotland was possessed by the Selgovæ, of whom, and of the races which preceded them, numerous remains have been found, including cairns, tumuli, circles of stones, &c. Nor are the marks of the civilised occupation of the Romans less rare—arms, coins, and utensils of that people having been, and still continue to be found. The denomination of "stewartry" originated at the period when, by the forfeiture of the possessions of the Baliols, the Cummins, and their various vassals, this district became the property of the crown, when it is understood to have been first put under the authority of a royal stewart. In subsequent times the office of stewart, in the appointment of the king, was one of much honour, and often the subject of contest. For a considerable time, however, after the establishment of a separate stewartship, the district was still, in some measure, esteemed to be politically attached to Dumfriesshire, but this nominal connection was dissolved before the civil wars of Charles I. From the force of ancient usage, the appellation of stewart, instead of that of sheriff, has, down to the present day, been popularly continued, although, by the civil arrangements of modern times, there is not the least difference in the two offices. The events of early times are connected with Kirkcudbright, its capital. It was for the siege of Creive Castle, the chief seat of the Douglas family, on an island in the river Dee, that "Mons Meg," the great cannon (now at Edinburgh Castle), was manufactured in 1455. Edward I. held Kirkcudbright for some time, and was followed here by his court. Wallace embarked for France from this port. Edward Bruce became Lord Galloway on Baliol's forfeiture. Henry VI. took refuge and resided at Kirkcudbright with his queen; and the Duke of Albany landed here in 1523. Sir Thomas Carleton, in the reign of Edward VI. of England, besieged the town. Queen Mary resided in Kirkcudbright for some days before applying for refuge to Queen Elizabeth. A visit from James VI., a riot on the attempted thrusting on the town an Episcopalian curate in 1663, the pursuit and death of several of the Scottish martyrs, a visit from the fleet of William III. on its way to Londonderry, and from Paul Jones in 1778, when this American admiral robbed the house of Lord Selkirk, are the other chief events in the history of the county. The principal ecclesiastical antiquities are the abbeys of Tongland, Dundrennan, and New Abbey, the convent or college of Lincluden, and St. Mary's Isle Priory. The chief mansions are Cumloden, the Earl of Galloway; St. Mary's Isle, the Earl of Selkirk; Earlston, Sir William Gordon, Bart.; Cassencaire, Sir John M. Mackenzie, Bart.; Netherlaw, Sir G. S. Abercromby; Woodhall, Mollance House, Ardwall House, Bargally House, &c.

KIRKCUDBRIGHT, a par. containing a royal burgh of its own name, in the co. Kirkcudbright, Scotland. It is situated on the coast, and is bounded on the S. by the Solway Frith, on the N. by the par. of Kelton, on the W. by Kirkcudbright Bay and the river Dee, and on the E. by the par. of Rerwick. It is 8¾ miles long, and measures 3½ miles at the broadest point. The greater portion of the surface is hilly, and the number of acres under tillage is about 3,000. It possesses fine pasture for black cattle and sheep. The river in this parish partakes both of the nature of a river and of an estuary, and is navigable as far as Tongland, 2 miles above the town. In the upper part of its course it forms several cataracts. There are two or three streamlets or burns. Loch Fergus, which once contained two islets, is now a meadow. The islets, now hills, bear decided marks of ancient fortification, and appear to have been the sites of castles belonging to Fergus, Lord of Galloway. In the 17th century the pars. of Galtway and Dunrod were annexed to this par. Near the burgh is a chalybeate spring. The par. is the seat of a presb. in the synod of Galloway, in the patron. of the crown. The minister's stipend is £306. The parish church is a modern building, with accommodation for 1,500 persons. The original church, erected in the 8th century, was dedicated to St. Cuthbert, who has given his name to the parish, Kirkcudbright signifying "the church of St. Cuthbert." Its site is still marked by a cemetery. There is a Free church, an United Presbyterian church, and a Roman Catholic chapel. The burgh school is attended by 200 pupils. There are several schools for both sexes, some being endowed. In the neighbourhood of the town are many vestiges of British and Roman camps; and Baxter identifies Kirkcudbright as the ancient Benutium, situated on the banks of the Dee, which was called by the Romans Deva. There is also a battery constructed by William III., when wind-bound here on his voyage to raise the siege of Londonderry. The foss of Raebury Castle, which overhung a precipice on the Solway, is yet visible; but the castle of Kirkcudbright, a massive building, erected in the 16th century by the Maclellans, is the most entire of all the ancient fortresses in this part of the country. The mansions are St. Mary's Isle, Janefield, Balmae, and St. Cuthbert's Cottage. The Earl of Selkirk is the principal landowner.

KIRKCUDBRIGHT, a royal burgh, seaport, market town, and county town of Kirkcudbrightshire, Scotland, 10 miles S.W. of Castle-Douglas, 28 S.W. of Dumfries, and 101 S.S.W. of Edinburgh. It occupies a peninsular situation on the E. of the river Dee, about 6 miles from the confluence of that river with the Solway Frith. It is a railway station on the Glasgow and South-Western railway. It has been materially improved of late, and at the present day presents an aspect remarkably pleasing. The town is regularly built, and is kept clean and neat. It consists chiefly of six or seven distinct streets, crossing each other at right angles. The houses are well built, and bespeak the taste and easy circumstances of the inhabitants. The town was supplied with spring water by leaden pipes so early as 1764, and it is well lighted with gas. The new stewartry buildings and gaol form a remarkably handsome building near the centre of the town. The ancient gaol and court-house were left standing, near the old market cross. In the centre of a beautiful plantation stands the Established church, which is a modern stone structure with a tower and spire of considerable height. Not far from this church are the ruins of the ancient castle of Kirkcudbright, built in 1582 by M'Clellan, ancestor of the lords Kirkcudbright. There are places of worship in connection with the United Presbyterians and Free Church. The academy, or grammar school, is a handsome edifice. The Johnstone's free school, for the tuition of both sexes, is a stone structure with a tower. The Countess of Selkirk's school is held in a portion of the ancient church. The chief inns are the King's Arms, Selkirk Arms, and the Commercial. The Bank of Scotland and the National Bank of Scotland have branch offices in the town. Here are 13 insurance agencies, also reading-rooms, literary institutions, and several religious and charitable institutions. Provisions are comparatively cheap. The manufacture of cotton goods and hosiery is carried on to a limited extent. The harbour is the best in the stewartry; at ordinary spring tides the depth of water is 30 feet, and at the lowest neap tides 18 feet. The river is navigable 2 miles above the town to the bridge of Tongland. As yet there is no bridge at this town over the Dee, and communication is maintained across the river by means of a chain ferry boat. The commerce of Kirkcudbright is small, the chief imports consisting of coal and lime, and the exports of potatoes, oats, and barley. There is regular steam communication with Glasgow, Liverpool, and Whitehaven. The port has 20 vessels belonging to it of an aggregate tonnage of 1,144. During the domination of the Douglases in Galloway, Kirkcudbright became a burgh of regality under their influence. On their forfeiture James II. erected the town into a royal burgh in 1455, which grant was renewed and confirmed by Charles I. in 1633. The burgh is still governed under this chapter by a provost, two bailies, and 13 councillors, with a treasurer and chamberlain. The corporation revenue amounts to £1,044, almost the whole of which is derived from burgh property. It unites with Dumfries, Annan, Lochmaben, and Sanquhar, in sending one member to parliament. The population of the parliamentary burgh in 1861 was 2,638. Quarter sessions are held on the first Tuesdays of March, May, and August, and on the last Tuesday of October. Stewards and commissary courts are held on Thursdays and Fridays, also small-debt courts. Friday is market day. Fairs are held on the 12th August and 29th September, or on the Fridays following.

KIRKDALE, an ancient par. in the co. Kirkcudbright, Scotland, now joined to Kirkmabreck.

KIRKDALE, a par. in the wap. of Ryedale, North Riding co. York, 1 mile S.W. of Kirkby Moorside, and 4 N.E. of Helmsley, its post town. It is situated on a branch of the river Wye, and contains the tnshps. of Wombleton, Nawton, Welburn, Skiplam, Muscoates, and Bransdale Westside. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the stone quarries and in agriculture. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, val. £137, in the patron. of the University of Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Gregory, is an ancient structure standing in a valley. It has two very fine Saxon arches, with a Saxon inscription over the S. doorway bearing date 1065. It contains monuments of the Gibsons, Robinsons, and Caleys. In 1820, near the church, was discovered a cave extending for 300 feet into a solid white rock, at the bottom of which, embedded in a layer of mud, were found fossil bones of the elephant, rhinoceros, hippopotamus, hyena, tiger, bear, wolf, fox, weasel, horse, ox, rabbit, rat, pigeons, &c. It was supposed to have been a hyenas' den, as the teeth of upwards of 300 of these animals were found. A very ancient ornamental tomb was discovered near the church, with Runic characters, supposed to be of the 7th century. The parochial charities produce about £8 per annum. There are Wesleyan chapels at Brans-dale Westside and Norton, also National and Sunday schools.

KIRKDALE, a tnshp. in the par. of Walton-on-the-Hill, hund. of West Derby, co. Lancaster, 2 miles N. by E. of Liverpool, of which borough it forms part. It is situated near the Leeds canal and the river Mersey. It has a station at Bootle-lane, on the Liverpool and Bury section of the Lancashire and Yorkshire railway. It forms a populous suburb of Liverpool, and contains the county gaol, sessions-house, and Liverpool Industrial Schools, which last were built in 1845, at the cost of £32,000, and educate about 1,200 pauper children, who are taught trades, &c., at an annual expense of above £10,000. In the playground is a model of a ship. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Chester, val. £300. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a modern edifice. There are United Presbyterian and Independent chapels, also two National schools. There is a cemetery for all denominations at Walton-road.

KIRKDEN, or IDVIE, a par. in the co. Forfar, Scotland, 7 miles N.W. of Arbroath. It is intersected by the Aberdeen railway, which has two stations in the parish—Frockheim and the Guthrie Junction. The size of the par. is 5 miles long by 1 mile broad. Its surface is 250 feet above the level of the sea, and consists chiefly of poor land, which, however, has been greatly improved by cultivation. It is watered by the Finny burn and Lunan water, which have both good trout fishing, and drive several mills. The par. is in the presb. of Arbroath and synod of Angus and Mearns, in the patron. of the crown. The minister's stipend is £158. The church is a substantial structure erected in 1825. At Frockheim there is a chapel-of-ease and likewise a Morrisonian chapel. A large number of the inhabitants are employed in cotton weaving for the manufacturers of Dundee. Gardyne Castle, Pitmuies House, and Middleton House, are the principal mansions. The road between Arbroath and Forfar traverses this parish. It takes its name from the situation of the church, which is in a dell or den. Its ancient name was Idvie, by reason of its glebe being situated in the barony of Idvies. In the neighbourhood are good sandstone quarries. On Idvie and Gardyne laws were the gallows, and there was a castle near the latter, built in 1568.

KIRKDOMINÆ, an ancient chplry. in the par. of Girvan, but now included in the par. of Barr, co. Ayr, Scotland. It is situated on the river Sinchar, on the N. bank of which stood the ancient chapel belonging to the monks of Crossraguel. A fair is held here on the last Saturday in May.

KIRK-ELLA. See ELLA, KIRK, co. York.

KIRKFIELD, a quoad sacra par. in the par. of Gorbals, co. Lanark, Scotland, 1 mile from Glasgow, of which it is a suburb. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the manufactories of Glasgow. The living is in the presb. of Glasgow, and in the patron. of the Church Building Society. The church is a modern structure. There is also a Free church and several schools.

KIRKFIELDBANK, or KIRKLAND, a vil. in the par. of Lesmahagow, co. Lanark, Scotland. It is situated near Lanark, and contiguous to the river Clyde, which here forms an island, and is crossed by a bridge of three arches.

KIRKFOTHER, an ancient chplry. now united to the par. of Markinch, co. Fife, Scotland, 8 miles N. of Kirkcaldy. The chapelry is now in ruins, but the burial-ground is still used.

KIRK-GERMAN, a par. in Glanfaba sheading, Isle of Man, 1 mile E. of Peel, the greater part of which town is situated in this parish. It includes the chplry. of Cronky Voddee. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Sodor and Man, val. £160, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. Besides the parish church, there is a district church dedicated to St. John, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £67, in the patron. of the crown. There is a village school. Fairs are held on the 1st and 18th May, 5th July, 1st and 18th November.

KIRKGUNZEON, a par. in the co. Kirkcudbright, Scotland, 6 miles E. of Castle-Douglas. It is a railway station on the Glasgow and South-Western line. It contains a vil. of its own name, and the vil. of Gateside. Its length is about 7 miles, and its breadth 5. The surface consists generally of hilly grazing land. It is watered by the Kirkgunzeon and Dalbeattie burns, and by three or four minor brooks. Granite is abundant in the S. part of the parish. It is in the presb. and synod of Dumfries. The minister's stipend is £158. The church is a small structure built in 1790. It belonged to Holme-Cultram Abbey, and was given in 1369 by David I. to Sir John Herries, of Terregles, whose seat was at Barclosh. The ancient name of the parish was Kirkwinong, or Kirkwinnyn, so named from a spring near the church known as Winning's Well. In the neighbourhood are the remains of three Roman camps, and near Drumcultrum Tower is a Druid circle. Maxwell of Terregles is chief heritor.

KIRKHAM, an ext. par. place in the wap. of Buckrose, East Riding co. York, 6 miles S.W. of New Malton. It is situated on the river Derwent. The York and Scarborough railway passes through it, and has a station near the village, which contains only three houses. There are ruins of an Austin priory founded in 1121 by Walter d'Espec and his wife. The Gothic tower was blown down in 1784, but the portions which remain present a beautiful specimen of the pointed style of architecture. They comprise a gateway, with richly carved ornaments, and two magnificently formed windows with trefoil heads and beautiful tracing. Some portions of the cloisters and walls are still standing. The revenue of the priory at the Dissolution was estimated at £300 15*s.* 6*d.* The land is entirely owned by E. C. Taylor, Esq.

KIRKHAM, a par., post and market town, in the hund. of Amounderness, co. Lancaster, 8½ miles N.W. of Preston, 10 E. of Blackpool, and 5 N.E. of Lytham. It is a station on the Preston and Wyre railway. The par. is very extensive, embracing 13 tnshps. and chplries., the principal of which are, Freckleton, Goosnargh, Hambleton, Newton-with-Scales, &c. The town, which is ancient, is a polling place for the county elections. Petty sessions are held fortnightly, and county courts monthly. It contains a police station, market-place, and savings-bank. The inhabitants are principally engaged in the cotton and flax mills. The houses are in general well built, and the town, though small, may be considered as the capital of the surrounding district called the Fylde country. Within 3 miles of the town is the estuary of the river Ribble, and at Wardless, within 8 miles, is a small port on the N.E. bank of the river Wyre, which is navigable for vessels of 300 tons. The Preston and Wyre railway and the Lancaster canal pass through the parish. A constable and other officers are appointed annually at the court-leet of the lord of the manor. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £750, in the patron. of the Dean and Canons of Christ Church, Oxford. The parish church, dedicated to St. Michael, is a modern stone edifice with a square tower crowned by a lofty spire, and containing eight bells. It occupies the site of a very ancient one which was given by Roger de Poitiers to the abbey of Shrewsbury, and afterwards bestowed by Edward I. on Vale Royal Abbey. In addition to the parish church, there are eleven district churches at Goosnargh, Hambleton, Lund, Ribby-with-Wrea, Great Singleton, Treales, Warton, Freckleton, Weeton, and Whitechapel, the livings of all which are perpet. curs., except Freckleton, varying in val. from £382 to £90. There are chapels for Wesleyans and Independents. The Roman Catholic church, dedicated to St. John, is a modern erection with a tower surmounted by an octagonal spire. The grammar school, originally founded in 1655 by Isabel Wildinge, has an endowment of £596 per annum, besides an exhibition of £100 at Cambridge university. There is an endowed school at Newton-with-Scales, and in the chapelry of Goosnargh is a hospital with a considerable endowment. There are also an endowed school for girls, a National school for boys and girls, Roman Catholic schools, and Sunday-schools in connection with the various chapels. Market day is Tuesday, but little business is done. Fairs are held on the 4th and 5th February, 29th April, and 18th October.

KIRKHAM-GATE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Alverthorpe, par. of Wakefield, West Riding co. York, 3 miles from Wakefield, and 26 S.W. of York. It is situated near the river Calder.

KIRK-HAMMERTON, a par. in the upper div. of the wap. of Claro, West Riding co. York, 7 miles N.E. of Wetherby, and 8 E. of Knaresborough. It is situated on the North-Eastern railway, which has two stations in the parish. The par. contains the tnshps. of Kirk-Hammerton and Wilstrop. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £148. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is an ancient stone edifice, with a tower containing two bells. The parochial charities produce about £6 10s. per annum. There is a chapel for Wesleyans, and a parochial school for both sexes. Colonel Thompson is lord of the manor.

KIRKHARLE, a par. in the N.E. div. of the ward of Tindale, co. Northumberland, 2 miles S. of Kirk-Whelpington, and 20 N.W. of Newcastle. It is situated on the river Wansbeck, and contains the tnshps. of Little Harle, Kirkharle, and West Harle, besides several hmlts. The high road from Newcastle to Jedburgh passes through the parish. It was formerly held by the Bolbecks and William de Strother, from whom it passed to the Loraines. The soil is various, in some places resting on sandstone and clay, and in others on limestone, which last is extensively quarried for burning into lime. A coal-field extends over the greater part of the manor of Kirkharle, which was formerly worked. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £185. The church, dedicated to St. Wilfred, is a small stone structure. Near Kirkharle House is a pillar to the memory of some of the Loraine family who were cut to pieces by the mosstroopers. This was the birthplace of Sir William de Herle, chief justice in the reign of Edward III.; and of the well-known landscape gardener, Launcelot Brown, commonly called "Capability Brown."

KIRKHAUGH, a par. in the W. div. of Tindale ward, co. Northumberland, 2½ miles N. of Alston, its post town, 10½ S. of Haltwhistle, and 2 S. of the Slaggyford railway station. A branch of the Newcastle and Carlisle railway passes through the parish, from Haltwhistle to Alston, in Cumberland. The parish is situated in a wild mountainous district, near the south-western extremity of the county, and is intersected by the South Tyne. The land is chiefly in grass; and the hills are mostly covered with heath, and abound with grouse. The Roman road Maiden Way passed through this parish. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Durham, val. £70. The church is a small stone edifice. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum. There are two parochial schools, with small endowments. The Commissioners of Greenwich Hospital are lords of the manor. At Castle Nook, in this parish, are traces of a Roman station covering an area of nearly 9 acres, and defended on the W. side by ten breastworks and trenches. Camden says an inscription was set up here in honour of the Emperor Antoninus, and a palace built about the year 213 by the third cohort of the Nervii. In the vicinity have been found several altars, one dedicated to Minerva and Hercules, and fragments of a colossal statue.

KIRKHEATON, a par. and manufacturing district in the upper div. of the wap. of Agbrigg, West Riding co. York, 3 miles E. of Huddersfield, its post town. It is situated in a valley near the London and North-Western railway, which has a station at Heaton Lodge. The par., which is of large extent, contains the tnshps. of Dalton, Lepton, and Upper Whitley. It is bounded on the E. by the river Calder, which separates it from Mirfield; and on the N.E. by the Colne, over which is a handsome bridge. The surface is mountainous, and the road from Huddersfield to Wakefield, and the Manchester and Leeds railway, pass through the parish. There are several collieries in operation, also quarries of good building and flag stone. The land is highly cultivated. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the manufacture of fancy woollen and worsted goods, and in the making of vestings. At Colne Bridge is a large cotton-mill. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £537, in the patron. of trustees. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is a large ancient building, with a tower containing a clock and six bells. It was partly rebuilt in 1823, and contains some marble monuments to the Beaumont family, whose mortuary chapel is attached. The Independents, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. There are National schools. The Earl of Dartmouth, and H. F. Beaumont, Esq., are lords of the manor and principal landowners.

KIRKHEATON, an ext. par. chplry. in the N.E. div. of Tindale ward, co. Northumberland, 18 miles N.W. of Newcastle, its post town, and 9 N. of the Corbridge railway station. Near the village are collieries and a lime-kiln, which afford employment to the inhabitants. Freestone and limestone are also extensively quarried for building purposes. The river Blyth takes its rise in this chapelry, on the N. side of Black Hill, from the summit of which is an extensive view. The soil is clayey, and subsoil limestone and clay. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Durham, val. £70. The chapel was rebuilt in 1775. In the churchyard is a yew-tree upwards of 600 years old. There is a National school with a small endowment.

KIRKHILL, a vil. in the par. of Pennycuick, co. Edinburgh, Scotland. It is situated near the vil. of Penicuick, on the river North Esk. Its inhabitants are principally employed in weaving and paper making.

KIRKHILL, a par. in the co. Inverness, Scotland, 6 miles W. of Inverness, its post town. It comprehends the ancient pars. of Farnna and Wardlaw. It is about 8 miles long by 3 broad. Its surface consists of heathy sheepwalks, with a great extent of plantation. There are several high hills, and abundance of game. The par. is in the presb. of Inverness, and synod of Moray. The minister's stipend is £247. There is a Free church, with two schools. The chief seats are Newton, Fingask, Reelick, Auchnagairn, and Lentram. The greater part of the land is possessed by Lord Lovat, whose family have a mortuary chapel on the site of the ancient church of Wardlaw. Coals and lime are imported, and grain and timber exported, through Wester-Lovat and Fopachy, which are situated on the coast. Here are the remains of two Druid circles. On Blarnacuiflich Moor, where a battle was fought between two rival clans, are many tumuli.

KIRKHILL, a vil. in the par. of Cambuslang, co. Lanark, Scotland, 2 miles from Glasgow. It is chiefly inhabited by weavers.

KIRKHOBLE, a vil. in the par. of Penningham, co. Wigton, Scotland, 7 miles N.W. of Newton-Stewart.

KIRKHOLM, a small island situated at the mouth of Selivoe, in the par. of Sandsting, Shetland, Scotland.

KIRKHOPE, an ancient par. in co. Selkirk, Scotland. It is situated near Selkirk, its post town, and was incorporated with the pars. of St. Mary's and Duchoire to make the modern par. of Yarrow; but in 1652 it was disjoined from Yarrow, and reconstituted into a separate par. The minister's stipend is 18 chalders, in the patron. of the crown.

KIRKHOUSE-GREEN, a hmlt. in the pars. of Kirk Bramwith and Campsall, West Riding co. York, 5 miles N.W. of Thorne.

KIRKIBBOST, one of the Inverness islands, coast of Scotland. It is situated in the par. of North Uist. It is 1 mile long, but is narrow and sandy, and only insulated at high water.

KIRKIBOLL, a vil. in the par. of Tongue, co. Sutherland, Scotland, 41 miles N. of Dornoch, and 4 N. of Loch Loyal. It consists of a manse, inn, and a few houses.

KIRKINNER, a par. in the co. Wigton, Scotland, 3 miles S.S.W. of Wigton. It comprises the ancient par. of Longcastle, and the vils. of Kirkinner, Marchfarm, and Sloabert. Its size is about 7 miles by 4. The surface is hilly, with carse land, which has been much improved of late. Wigton Bay washes the western border of the parish, and Dowalton Loch forms a portion of its southern boundary. It is watered by the Bladenoch water and the streams Malzie and Mildriggen. The par. is in the presb. of Wigton and synod of Galloway. The minister's stipend is £265. The church, built in 1828, is a commodious structure. The ancient church was dedicated to St. Kinneir or Kinner, and belonged to Whithorn Priory, but in 1503 was exchanged for that of Kirkandrew, co. Kirkcudbright, that it might be annexed to the chapel royal of Stirling. The principal ornament in this neighbourhood is the stately modern mansion of Barnbarroch, the seat of Agnew of Sheuchan. Here also are the remains of the ancient castle of Baldoun, formerly the residence of the Dunbars, an incident in which family is supposed to have served Sir Walter Scott as the foundation of the "Bride of Lammermoor." There are two round camps in the neighbourhood, also the ruins of the church of the ancient parish of Longcastle.

KIRKINRIOLA, a par. in the bar. of Lower Toome, co. Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, containing Ballymena, its post town. The par. is 5½ miles long by 1½ mile broad. The surface consists partly of bog and waste, but the greater part is good arable land. It is traversed by the road from Belfast to Coleraine. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Connor, val. £126. In the parish are several places of worship, including Established Church, Roman Catholic chapels, Presbyterian and Methodist meeting-houses, and several day schools. See BALLYMENA.

KIRKINTILLOCH, a par. in the co. Dumbarton, Scotland. It is bounded by the cos. of Stirling and Lanark and the par. of Cumbernauld. It is a station on the Campsie branch of the Edinburgh and Glasgow railway, and is intersected by the Monkland and Kirkintilloch railway and the Forth and Clyde canal. The length of the parish westward is about 7 miles, and its greatest breadth 3½ miles, hardly one-half of the area of which is under regular tillage. It is watered by the streams Luggar, Kelvin, and Skinna. In the neighbourhood sandstone, ironstone, and limestone, are plentiful, and there are extensive coal mines at Barrhill, Shirva, and Strow. The par. is in the presb. of Glasgow, and synod of Glasgow and Ayr. The minister's stipend is £323. The parish church was erected in 1644, and repaired in 1840. There is a chapel-of-case, two Free churches, and United Presbyterian church, United Original Secession church, and a Wesleyan Methodist chapel. There are nine schools, two of which are endowed. The ancient church stood near Oxgang, and was dedicated to St. Ninian. It formerly belonged to Cambuskenneth Abbey. Antoninus' Wall ran for 6 miles through the parish, and one of his principal forts stood on the summit of a hill a little S.W. of the parish church. The site of the fortress is even to this day recognised by a deep moat called "Peel." There are ruins of a quadrangular tower formerly a stronghold of the Boyds, earls of Kilmarnock. The present name of the parish, Kirkintilloch, is a corruption of the original designation, Caer-pen-tulloch, signifying in Cambro-British "the fort at the end of the hill," which is descriptive of the site of the town. The town of Kirkintilloch is an ancient burgh of barony, 10 miles W. of Edinburgh, 7 N. of Glasgow, and 3 S.E. from Campsie. It is situated on the road from Glasgow to Kilsyth, and possesses extraordinary advantages for inland conveyance, having ready access by the railroads and canal already mentioned to all parts of the kingdom. It is a free burgh of barony. Its first charter was conferred by William the Lion, and dated at Forres. This was granted to William Cumming, of Cumbernauld and Kirkintilloch. Its privileges have been subsequently confirmed and enlarged. It is governed by 2 bailies and 12 councillors, elected by the burgesses, about 33 in number. The bailies possess the power of deciding all causes within the liberty of the burgh, equal to the right exercised by sheriffs of counties. The town has a police establishment under the regulation of commissioners. A justice of peace court is held once a month, on Saturday, and a burgh court every Saturday. It is an irregularly built town, containing a court-house and gaol, a substantial building ornamented with a spire containing a clock. The parish church, a cruciform structure, stands in the centre of the town, on a site once occupied by a chapel dedicated to the Virgin Mary. There are Free Church, United Presbyterian, and other places of worship, scattered about the town. There are also gas works, an iron foundry, and other works, but the majority of the inhabitants are employed in cotton weaving. The Western and City of Glasgow banks have branches, and there is a savings-bank, also several insurance agents, religious and charitable societies, and agricultural and horticultural associations. Saturday is market day. Fairs are held on the second Tuesday in May, the last Thursday in July, and the 21st October.

KIRK-JURBY, a par. in Michael sheading, Isle of Man, 10 miles N.W. of Ramsey. The village, which is small, is situated near Jurby Point, commanding a fine sea view. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Sodor and Man, val. £200, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Patrick. In the churchyard is a barrow. A fair for the sale of cattle is held on the 20th November, and a statute fair for hiring servants on the 5th April.

KIRKLAND, a vil. in the par. of Wemyss, co. Fife, Scotland. It is situated on the banks of the Leven Water, 1 mile E. of the town of Leven. It is inhabited chiefly by persons employed in one of the most extensive flax-spinning mills in Scotland.

KIRKLAND, a vil. in the par. of Glencairn, co. Dumfries, Scotland, near Minnihive.

KIRKLAND, a vil. in the par. of Kirkinner, co. Wigton, Scotland, 4 miles W. of Sorby.

KIRKLAND, a hmlt. in the par. of Torpenhow, ward of Allerdale-below-Derwent, co. Cumberland, 7 miles N.E. of Cockermouth. It is situated near the river Ellen, and is joined with Blennerhassett to form a township. Limestone and coal are worked.

KIRKLAND, a tnshp. in the par. of Garstang, hund. of Amounderness, co. Lancaster, 1½ mile S.W. of Garstang. It is situated on the river Wyre and Lancaster canal, and contains the vil. of Garstang Church Town, at which place stands the parish church of Garstang. The soil is gravelly. There is an endowed school, also a Sunday-school in connection with the church. In the centre of the village is an ancient stone pillar. Thomas B. Cole, Esq., is lord of the manor.

KIRKLAND, a tnshp. in the par. and ward of Kendal, co. Westmoreland, adjoining and forming part of the borough of Kendal. It contains the parish church. See KENDAL.

KIRKLAND, a par. in Leath ward, co. Cumberland, 9 miles E. of Penrith, its post town and railway station. It is situated near the river Eden, under Cross Fell, and contains the tnshps. of Skirwith and Blencarn, and the chplry. of Culgaith. The old Roman road Maiden Way traverses the parish. The soil is various, and the surface boldly varied, rising into hills of mountainous elevation. Above half the parish is in pasture, the remainder arable, except about 1,000 acres of improvable common. The high pasture lands are principally kept as sheepwalks. Coal is wrought at Ardale, and on Cross Fell is a lead mine, containing a large proportion of silver, called Bullman Hills Vein; copper ore is also found, and smelting furnaces have been erected. Cross Fell, which here rises to the height of 2,901 feet above the level of the sea, commands an extensive view over six counties. The sides of the mountain produce a variety of plants, and its summit is covered with snow during the greater part of the year. A little below the summit is a well which has the same temperature in winter as in summer. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £221, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The parish church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, is an ancient stone building with a bell-turret. There are two district churches at Culgaith and Skirwith, the livings of which are perpet. curs. The charities produce about £74 per annum, £60 of which go to the support of a school. On Bank Ridge are three artificial terraces of 200 yards each in length, and on the top are remains of ancient buildings known as the Hanging Walls of Mark Antony. A singular phenomenon frequently occurs here during harvest time which proves very destructive to the crops.

KIRKLAND OF TINWALD, a vil. in the par. of Tinwald, co. Dumfries, Scotland, 4 miles N.E. of Dumfries.

KIRKLANE, a vil. in the par. of Kincardine, co. Perth, Scotland, near Doune.

KIRK LEATHAM, a par. in the E. div. of Langbaurgh lib., North Riding co. York, 2½ miles S. of Redcar, its post town and railway station on the Stockton and Darlington line, and 5 N.W. of Guisborough. In the reign of Edward I. a chantry was founded here by John de Lythegraynes for a master and six chaplains, the revenue of which at the Dissolution was valued at £9 6s. 8d. The village is situated near the river Tee's mouth. The par. contains the tnshp. of Wilton, and the hmlts. of Yearby and East and West Coatham. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of York, val. £88. The church, dedicated to St. Cuthbert, is a stone structure with a tower containing three bells. The roof of the church is supported by six columns of the Tuscan order. In the interior are several brasses, also a statue of John Turner, bearing date 1688. Near it is the marble tomb of Sir William Turner, Lord Mayor of London, bearing date 1669, and adjoining the N. side of the choir is the mausoleum erected by Cholmley Turner in 1740 in remembrance of his son, Marwood William Turner. There is also a district church at Coatham, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £50. The parochial charities produce £2,016, of which £290 goes to Turner's free grammar school, and £1,622 to his hospital, which is designed for the relief of 20 aged men and women, and the education of 20 boys and girls. The former are required to be single, and 63 years of age, the latter 8 years old, and remain until the age of 16 years. The chapel is highly decorated, and has an arched roof subdivided into compartments and supported by Ionic columns. There is a stained-glass window over the altar, and the floor is inlaid with marble. Above the houses inhabited by the sisters is a library, 60 feet long, containing 3,000 volumes of choice works.

KIRKLEES, a vil. in the chplry. of Clifton, and par. of Dewsbury, West Riding co. York, 4 miles N. of Huddersfield. It is situated on the river Calder, near the Leeds and Manchester canal and railway. Here was formerly a Cistercian nunnery, founded in the reign of Henry II., where Robin Hood was bled to death by the treacherous nun in 1247. The principal residence is Kirklees Hall, the family seat of Sir G. Armytage, Bart.

KIRK LEVINGTON. See LINTON-KIRK, co. Cumberland.

KIRKLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Ponteland, W. div. of Castle ward, co. Northumberland, 6 miles S.W. of Morpeth, and 10 N. of Newcastle-upon-Tyne. It is situated on the river Blyth, and contains the hmlts. of Benridge and Carter-Moor. The Presbyterians have a place of worship. The manor was formerly owned by Eures. The Rev. E. C. Ogle is lord of the manor, and resides at Kirkley Hall.

KIRKLEY, a par. in the hund. of Mutford, co. Suffolk, 1½ mile S. of Lowestoft, its post town, and 12 miles S. of Yarmouth. It is situated on the coast of the North Sea, near Kirkley Hamm, which leads into Lake Lothing. A short distance from the village is Pakefield lighthouse, which stands on a lofty eminence overlooking the German Ocean. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in fishing. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £137 10s. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £142. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient edifice with a lofty square tower. It is situated on lofty ground, and serves as a landmark to mariners. It was in ruins for many years prior to 1760, when the south aisle was rebuilt. In the interior are several old brasses. The parochial charities produce £15 per annum, which is distributed in coals to the poor. There is a village school.

KIRKLINGTON, or KIRTLINGTON, a par. in the Southwell div. of the hund. of Thurgarton, co. Nottingham, 8½ miles S.E. of Mansfield, 8 N.W. of Newark, and 3 N.W. of Southwell. It is situated on the river Greet and the high road from Mansfield to Newark. There are remains of an ancient camp in the neighbourhood. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £49, in the patron. of the Chapter of the Collegiate Church of Southwell. The church, dedicated to St. Swithin, is a stone structure with a brick pinnacled tower containing three bells. The charities produce about £20 per annum. There is an infant school. Kirklington Hall is situated in a spacious park, well wooded, and watered by an extensive lake.

KIRKLINGTON-WITH-UPSLAND, a par. in the wap. of Hallikeld, North Riding co. York, 6 miles W of Thirsk, 6 S.E. of Bedale, its post town, and 1 mile W. of the Sinderby railway station. It contains the tnshps. of Kirklington, Sutton, and East Tanfield, where are the remains of a Danish encampment. The land is chiefly arable, with about 300 acres of woodland. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £1,034. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient edifice, with a tower containing three bells. There is a National school.

KIRK-LINTON. See LINTON-KIRK, co. Cumberland.

KIRKLISTON, or K'LISTON, a par. partly in co. Edinburgh and partly in co. Linlithgow, Scotland, 9 miles W. of Edinburgh. It is intersected by the Falkirk and Edinburgh turnpike road, and by the Edinburgh and Glasgow railway, which latter has a station at Winchburgh, and a viaduct of thirty arches across the river Almond, in this parish. It comprehends a vil. of its own name and the vils. of Newbridge, Niddry, and Ninchburgh. Its length is 5½ miles, and its greatest breadth 4½. The surface is varied by rising grounds. The soil, which is rich, is well cultivated, and produces excellent crops. Here Lord Stair first introduced the culture of cabbages in the open fields. The river Almond bisects the parish, which is also watered by Brox-burn. The Edinburgh Union canal passes through the district. Stone is quarried here to a large extent. Near the village are mineral springs. The par. is in the presb. of Linlithgow, and synod of Lothian and Tweeddale, in the patron. of the crown. The minister's stipend is £285. The parish church is an ancient and commodious structure. It contains the graves of the Earl of Stair, of Kirkliston, and of his grandmother Dame Margaret, the original of Lady Ashton, in Sir Walter Scott's "Bride of Lammermoor." The church formerly belonged to the Knights Templars, hence the ancient name of the place, Temple Liston. Here are also a Free church and several schools. Within a field on the E. bank of the Almond stands a remarkable monument of antiquity called the "Catstane," supposed to be a corruption of Constantine. This stone is believed to commemorate the slaughter, near this spot, of Constantine the usurper, in a battle fought in 955 with Kenneth, the brother of King Malcolm. In a field in this parish King Edward I. is said to have encamped on his way to Falkirk, in 1298. Hallyards, Newliston, Clifton Hall, Ingleston, and Foxhall are the chief seats. An ancient structure called Eliston, on the Earl of Hopetoun's estate, is supposed to have been at one period a hunting seat of the kings of Scotland. At Niddry Castle, a seat of the Earls of Wintoun, Mary Queen of Scots is said to have passed a night, whilst on her flight from Lochleven to Hamilton. A fair is held at the village on the last Tuesday in July.

KIRK-LONAN, a par. in Garff sheading, Isle of Man, 8 miles N.E. of Douglas. It is situated near the coast, on the river Laxey, which rises in Snafell, the summit of which is 2,004 feet above the sea-level. The village is very considerable, and many of the inhabitants are engaged in the paper and flax mills. In the parish are lead and copper mines. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Sodor and Man, val. £150, in the patron. of the crown. The church is dedicated to St. Lomanus. Besides the parish church there is a district church at Doon, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £60, in the patron. of the bishop. There are a Dissenting place of worship and two schools. The principal residence is Ballamenagh. In the vicinity are two Druidical circles, one known as the Cloven Stone, the other King Orry's Grave; also cairns, barrows, and other remains.

KIRKMABRECK, a par. in the co. of Kirkcudbright, Scotland, 12 miles N.W. of Kirkcudbright. It is situated on the river Cree and Wigton Bay, and is intersected by the road between Portpatrick and Dumfries. Its length is 10 miles, and its greatest breadth 4½. Its surface consists for the most part of hilly sheep-walks. Here are extensive granite quarries, employing at least 200 men. Lead and copper have been found, but are not worked. In the district are several springs, some of which are medicinal. The par. is in the presb. of Wigton, and synod of Galloway, in the patron. of the crown and Macculloch of Barholm. The minister's stipend is £305. The parish church is a modern and commodious structure situated near Creetown, where also the United Presbyterians have a church. There are several schools. The ruins of the ancient parish church are still to be seen. In 1636 nearly the whole of the ancient parish of Kirkdale was annexed to this parish. Cassencarrie, Barholm House, Hill House, and Kirkdale House are the chief seats. In this parish is a kistaven, or "holy cairn," the burial-place of King "Galdus;" also two quadrangular towers and a Druid circle. Dr. T. Brown, the philosopher, was a native of this place.

KIRKMADRYN, an ancient par. in co. Wigton, Scotland, now joined to Sorbie.

KIRKMAHOE, a par. in co. Dumfries, Scotland, 3 miles N. of Dumfries. It is situated on the river Nith, and comprises the vils. of Duncow, Dalswinton, and Kirkmahoe, or Kirkton. The Holywood and Auldgirth stations of the Glasgow and South-Western line are in the neighbourhood of this parish. It is 7½ miles long by 5½ at its broadest part. Its surface is hilly, and about 10,000 acres are arable. In the neighbourhood are several streamlets. The par. is in the presb. and synod of Dumfries. The minister's stipend is £238. The parish church is a modern Gothic structure. Here also is a Free church. There are parochial and other schools. The chief seats are Milnhead, Dalswinton, and Carnsalloch. Vestiges of old forts and tumuli are scattered about the parish.

KIRKMAIDEN, an ancient par. now joined to Glasserton, co. Wigton, Scotland.

KIRKMAIDEN, a par. in co. Wigton, Scotland. It occupies nearly the whole of the western portion or peninsula of the county, projecting into the mouth of the Solway Frith, and terminating at a point known as the Mull of Galloway. Its size is 9¾ miles long by 2¼ broad. Its surface produces good crops of corn and potatoes, and the hills supply fine pasture for cattle. The coast is generally bold, and is indented by caves scooped out by the furious lashings of the sea against the opposing barrier in stormy weather. There are good anchorages on both sides of the peninsula. The par. includes the vils. of Drumore, a coastguard station, and Port Logan. Winstone and greywacke are abundant, and slate is quarried. The par. is in the presb. of Stranraer, and synod of Galloway. The minister's stipend is £151. The parish church is a plain modern edifice situated in the centre of the parish, near Drumore Bay. The ancient church was dedicated to St. Medans, and stood on the lands of Mull, near the site of which is a curious fishpond hewn out of the solid rock, and communicating with the sea by means of an ingeniously contrived iron-grating. Here are also a Free church and several schools. This parish is the most southerly of Scotland, and is used—as in the poet Burn's line, "From Maiden-Kirk to John o' Groat's"—to indicate the extremities of Scotland. Here are remains of Pictish strongholds, and of the castles of Clanyard and Drumore.

KIRK-MALEW, a par. in Rushen sheading, Isle of Man, 12 miles S.W. of Douglas. It contains Castletown, the seat of the Manx government and House of Keys, also Castle Rushen, the residence of the kings of Man, of which the walls and two square towers, one 80 feet high, still remain. The keep was restored in 1815; and here the Deemster's Court and Rolls Office are held. This venerable structure is said to have been built in the middle of the 10th century by the Danish prince Guttred, and was defended by Charlotte, Countess of Derby, against the parliamentary forces in the civil war of Charles I., but was finally surrendered by Captain Christian, for which act he was shot by the Stanleys. The par. also includes Derby Haven and Langness peninsula, with the vil. of Balla Salla, near the old bridge, where was a Cistercian abbey dedicated to St. Mary, founded in 1098 by King MacMarus, and afterwards the burial-place of his successors. The surface is broken, and in some parts mountainous, attaining an altitude at South Barrule of 1,550 feet above sea-level. The public buildings are chiefly situated in the town of Castletown, where is a market-house, bank, prison, barracks, literary institution, and King William's College, founded in 1830 by Lieutenant-Governor Smelt. There are breweries, corn and flax mills, and in the vicinity lead mines and slate quarries. A good business is done in corn and the coasting trade. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Sodor and Man, val. £180, in the patron. of the crown. The church, dedicated to St. Lupus, is an ancient structure containing the tomb of Captain Christian. Besides the parish church there are the three district churches of St. Mark, St. Thomas, and St. Mary. Besides King William's College above mentioned there are Bishop Barrow's free school, and five other schools at Castletown, besides others in various parts of the parish. On the esplanade at Castletown is the Doric pillar to Lieutenant-Governor Smelt, and at the Government House is preserved a Roman altar and three Roman coins. In this parish was the site of Black Fort and Goddard Govan's Stones, the scene of many traditionary tales referred to in Sir Walter Scott's "Peveril of the Peak." Fairs for the sale of cattle are held on the 5th January, 12th May, 12th August, and 29th September.

KIRKMANSHULME, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Newton, par. of Manchester, co. Lancaster, 3 miles N.E. of Manchester, within which borough it is included.

KIRK-MAROWN, a par. in Glanfaba sheading, Isle of Man, 5 miles W. of Douglas. The village, which is small, is situated under Greeba mountain, which rises to the height of 1,478 feet above the sea-level. Some of the inhabitants are engaged in the Union Mills woollen factory. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Sodor and Man, val. £150, in the patron. of the crown. The church is a modern structure. St. Trinian's chapel is now in ruins, having been destroyed, as the popular belief is, by the "buggane," or evil spirit. The principal residence is Ellerslie House. On Mount Murray is a Druidical circle 42 feet in diameter, known as the Glendarragh. There are barrows and several ancient kiels.

KIRK-MAUGHOLD, a par. in Garff sheading, Isle of Man, 13 miles N.W. of Douglas. It is situated near Maughold Point, on the rivers Dhoon and Sulby, and includes the chplry. of Ramsey, with Port Vullin. It is a very populous parish, comprising within its limits the market town of Ramsey, where is a new pier and lighthouse 25 feet high, set up in 1800 at the mouth of the Sulby. Many of the inhabitants are engaged in the neighbouring lead and iron mines. Bailie and deemster's courts are held at Ramsey, where history relates that the good king Olave was murdered by his nephews in the 12th century. The Bay of Ramsey is protected from the western winds, and has from 4 to 9 fathoms water, with the Bahama bank at its mouth. A considerable business is done in mining, fishing, and the coasting trade. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Sodor and Man, val. £175, in the patron. of the crown. The church, which is a very ancient structure, had formerly the privileges of a sanctuary. It contained an antique font and several Scandinavian crosses. In the churchyard are a Runic pillar and a venerable cross 6 feet high, carved with the image of the Virgin and the island arms. The old church of St. Peter is now in ruins. There is a district church at Ramsey, dedicated to St. Paul, erected in 1819. The minister's income is £100, in the patron. of the bishop. There are several schools, including Cowell's grammar school. A fair is held on the 11th August.

KIRKMICHAEL, a par. in co. Banff, Scotland, 9 miles S.S.W. of Inveraven. It contains the vil. of Tomantoul. The size of the par. is 19 miles by 4. Its upper part is occupied by the Cairngorm Grampians, and is uninhabited. Its surface is generally moory, and it contains about 142,400 imperial acres, of which only 2,400 have been reclaimed. The rivers are the Aven and Altnach—the former having here a fall of 18 feet. The prevailing rocks are granite, slate, ironstone, sandstone, and limestone. Cairngorms are found on Cairngorm Hill, which is partly in this parish and partly in the parish of Abernethy. This hill rises to an altitude of 4,095 feet above the level of the sea. The par. is in the presb. of Abernethy and synod of Moray. The minister's stipend is £226. The parish church is a modern building. There is a government church at Tomantoul, also a Free church and a Roman Catholic chapel at Kirkmichael. In this parish are five schools, two of which are endowed. Near Loch Aven, on Cairngorm, is the Clachdhian Stone, 6 feet by 12; and on Meal-a-ghaneimh Hill is the Clach Oban, a sort of chair, which pregnant women sit in that their pains may be easier.

KIRKMICHAEL, a par. in the district of Carrick, co. Ayr, Scotland. It comprises the vils. of Crosshill and Kirkmichael, the latter being 10 miles S. of Ayr, and 3½ E. of Maybole. Its length is 12 miles, by 5¾ at the broadest part. The surface is hilly towards the S. and E., and in some parts even mountainous and rocky, but the whole is more or less cultivated. There are several limestone quarries, and one of freestone. The Doon traces its boundary for several miles, and the Dyrock and Girvan flow through the parish. It is in the presb. of Ayr and synod of Glasgow and Ayr, in the patron. of the crown. The minister's stipend is £277. The parish church is a commodious structure erected in 1787, on the site of one dedicated to St. Michael, from which the parish derives its name. In the churchyard is the tomb of Gilbert McAdam, who was shot in 1685 for his adherence to the Covenanters. There is a quoad sacra parish church, and a Free Church preaching station at Crosshill. There are two schools. The principal seats are Cloncaird Castle, Cassillis Castle, Kirkmichael House, and Blairquhan. A large number of the inhabitants are employed in cotton-weaving and other work in connection with the Glasgow factories. There are also extensive mills and works of various descriptions in this district. Fairs are held on the first Thursdays in April and August, the second Thursday in September, and the first Thursday in November.

KIRKMICHAEL, a par. in co. Dumfries, Scotland, 8 miles N. of Dumfries, its post town. It comprises the ancient par. of Kirkmichael, and a part of the ancient par. of Garvald. The length of the par. is 9 miles, and its breadth is 4½. About one half of the whole area is hilly sheep-walk, one-third arable, and the rest plantation. There are two mountain ranges, rising in some places to 1,000 and 1,500 feet above sea-level. The parish is watered by the river Ae, the Kinnel Water, and the Garvald and Glenkiln burns. It is in the presb. of Lochmaben and synod of Dumfries. The minister's stipend is £246. The church was erected in 1815. Many remains of ancient fortifications and Roman roads are visible in this district. There is a small fort on an eminence in the Knockwood, known as Wallace's House, near which are stones marking the spot where that hero killed six Englishmen. Kirkmichael House is the chief seat in the neighbourhood. More than half the parish belongs to the Duke of Buccleuch.

KIRKMICHAEL, a par. in co. Perth, Scotland. It comprises the vils. of Glenshee and Kirkmichael, the latter being 10 miles N.E. of Dunkeld. Its size is about 17 miles in length and 7 in breadth. Its surface being mountainous, is better adapted for pasture than tillage, and by far the greater portion has never been cultivated. It is watered by the rivers Airdle and Blackwater, the former having a handsome bridge near the village of Kirkmichael. The parish is intersected by the military road from Cupar Angus to Fort George, which passes through Glenshee, and the road from Blair Athol to Blair Gowrie, which passes up Strathardle. It is in the presb. of Dunkeld, and synod of Perth and Stirling. The minister's stipend is £158. The parish church was built in 1791. There is also a Free church, and at Glenshee is a chapel-of-ease. There are four schools, two of which are parochial. In the vicinity are several cairns and Druidical remains. On some of the hills in this district tradition fixes the scene of the Fingalian exploits. Ashintully and Woodhill are the principal seats.

KIRKMICHAEL, a par. in cos. Cromarty and Ross, Scotland, but popularly known as Resolis, which see.

KIRK MICHAEL, a par. in Michael sheading, Isle of Man, 10 miles N.E. of Peel. The village, which is considerable, is situated in a sheltered spot under Slieve-ne-fraughane Hill. It is the seat of a deemster and seneschal's court, and the residence of the Bishop of Sodor and Man, whose palace, called the Bishop's Court, is an interesting structure, with a tower built in the 13th century, the other portions, including the chapel, being of later date. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agricultural pursuits, and in the corn trade. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Sodor and Man, val. £165, in the patron. of the crown. The church is an ancient structure, containing monuments to several of the former bishops, including Wilson and Hydersley, the translators of the Bible into Manx; also a very ancient Runic pillar. There is a village school. Fairs for the sale of cattle are held on the 10th and 29th October.

KIRKMUIRHILL, a vil. in the par. of Lesmahagow, co. Lanark, Scotland, 3 miles from Lanark.

KIRKNEWTON AND EAST CALDER, a par. in the W. side of co. Edinburgh, Scotland. It contains the vils. of Kirknewton, Wilkinston, and East Calder, the former being 2½ miles E. of Mid Calder, a railway station on the Edinburgh and Glasgow railway. The par. is 6 miles in length by 4 in breadth, and is embraced by the river Almond and Water of Leith. The surface is hilly, but neither rocky nor mountainous. The lowlands are enclosed and highly cultivated, and the hills afford excellent sheep pasturage. It affords, from one spot, a view of thirteen counties. Limestone, whinstone, and sandstone are quarried. The par. is in the presb. of Edinburgh, and synod of Lothian and Tweeddale. The minister's stipend is £300. The parish church was built in 1750. The United Presbyterians and the Free Church have each a place of worship. Bellfield, Calderhall, Hillhouse, Meadowbank, and Ormiston Hill are the chief mansions. In the churchyard lie the remains of the celebrated William Cullen, M.D., who died in 1790, and was the proprietor of Ormiston Hill.

KIRK NEWTON, a par. in the ward of West Glendale, co. Northumberland, 5 miles W. of Wooler. This par., which is very extensive, comprising near 38,000 acres, includes the tnshps. of Akeld, Coldsmouth-with-Thompson's Walls, Coupland, Crockhouse, Gray's Forest, Heathpool, Howtell, Kilham, Kirk Newton, Lanton, Milfield, West Newton, Paston, Selbys Forest, and Geavering. It is situated on the river Glen, in the N. div. of the co.; and is bounded on the N. by the par. of Ford, on the S. by Coquetdale ward, on the E.

by Wooler, and on the W. by Scotland. The surface is varied by mountain and dale, including the valley of the Glen, and the mountainous region of the Cheviots, part of which range, at the Cheviot, in this parish, attains an altitude of 3,600 feet. The land is sparsely inhabited. The principal villages or hamlets are Kirk Newton; Kilham, on the N. side of the Kilham hills; Akeld, on the old road from Newcastle to Glasgow; Milfield, where the famous battle of Homildon Hill was fought on Holyrood Day, in 1402, and near which place Sir William Bulmer defeated a large body of Scots before the battle of Flodden Field. The other hamlets are West Newton and Paston. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agricultural pursuits, and in the breeding of cattle and sheep, for which last the Cheviot and Kilham hills afford excellent pasture. The soil is generally of a light character, and the chief crops wheat, barley, and turnips. The principal landowners are the Earl of Tankerville, Lord Grey, Sir F. Blake, Bart., Sir W. Davidson, and G. A. Grey, Esq., and several minor proprietors. The Earl of Durham occasionally resides at Copeland Castle. The Earl of Tankerville is lord of the manor. Milfield Hill, the residence of G. A. Grey, Esq., is a handsome mansion, commanding extensive views. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £631. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £490. The church, dedicated to St. Gregory, having become very dilapidated, it was resolved in 1858 to erect a new one. The old church was a very venerable structure, with a small bell turret, and had been, at some ancient period, of larger dimensions. It contained a rudely carved stone of great antiquity, representing the Adoration of the Magi. The Presbyterians and Independents have each a place of worship, and the Primitive Methodists have a spacious chapel at Milfield, erected in 1856. At the village of Kirk Newton are National, Sunday, and denominational schools. On the N. bank of the Glen, in the township of Lanton, is an obelisk, called Lanton Tower, erected by Sir W. Davidson, who owns the whole of the soil in this township. In the township of Milfield, and in other parts of the parish, Roman and British remains have been found; and on the hills in the township of Paston are traces of ancient encampments, and extensive earthworks, with fosses.

KIRK-OF-MOCHRUM, a vil. in the par. of Mochrum, co. Wigton, Scotland, 5 miles W. of Sorbie.

KIRK ONCHAN. See ONCHAN, Isle of Man.

KIRK OSWALD, a par. in Leath ward, co. Cumberland, 8 miles N.E. of Penrith, its post town, 15 S. of Carlisle, and 6 from the Plumpton station on the Lancashire and Carlisle railway. The village, which is considerable, but irregularly built, is situated on the declivity of a hill near the eastern bank of the river Eden. The par., which is about 6 miles in length by 4 broad, contains the tnshp. of Staffield. It was formerly a market town, but the market is now discontinued. At the W. end of the town are the remains of Kirk Oswald Castle, once held by the lords of Burgh, but now in the possession of the Musgrave family. There are paper, corn, and saw mills, which give employment to many of the inhabitants. The land is well cultivated, and chiefly arable. Over the Eden is a neat bridge of six arches, built in 1762. The Raven Beck, which flows through the town, is spanned by a bridge of one arch. Kirk Oswald is a polling place for the eastern division of the county. The parish is embellished with plantations of oak, fir, and other trees. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £120, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Oswald, is an ancient stone edifice, with a detached tower built on a hill 200 yards from the church. In the churchyard are some ancient gravestones. A spring of water runs through the church, which is supposed at one time to have been used for baptism. There are a few small charities for the poor. The Independents and Wesleyans have each a chapel, and there is a National school, with an endowment of £15 per annum. The principal residences are Eden Hall, Staffield Hall, and the College, which last is built on the site of the old college. This mansion was appropriated as the residence of twelve priests belonging to the church, and was plundered by the parliamentary troops in the reign of Charles I. Some remains of the old buildings are still to be seen. Fairs are held on the Thursday before Whit-Monday, and the 5th August, for pedlery.

KIRKOSWALD, a par. in the district of Carrick, co. Ayr, Scotland. It is situated on the coast of the Atlantic, and contains the vils. of Maidens and Kirkoswald, the latter being 13 miles S. from Ayr, and 4½ from Maybole. Its extent along the coast is 6 miles, and its greatest extent inland is 7 miles. It has a sandy beach in the northern portion, which is admirably adapted for bathing, and is much resorted to by visitors in the summer season. The surface of the parish is diversified. Near the sea the soil is abundantly fertile, while the interior or mountainous district affords pasturage for numerous flocks of sheep. Coal is worked to the amount of about 1,000 tons per annum. A coal mine in this parish caught fire in the middle of last century, and was burning for above 50 years. The fishery off the coast is very profitable. The par. is in the presb. of Ayr and synod of Glasgow and Ayr, in the patron. of the crown. The minister's stipend is £261. The church was built in 1777. The original church, founded in the 9th century, was dedicated to St. Oswald, King of Northumbria, and has given its name to the parish. Here is a Free Church preaching station, and several schools: 2 miles E. of the village are the ruins of Cross Regal Abbey, founded by the Earl of Carrick in 1244 for Cluniac monks. It is at present the most entire monastic ruin in this part of Scotland. On a promontory at the entrance of the Frith of Clyde are the ruins of Turnberry Castle, which in 1274 was occupied by the ancestors of the royal house of Stuart, and in 1306 by an English garrison under Earl Percy. It was afterwards taken by storm and demolished by King Robert Bruce. One of Bruce's nephews, in 1335, built in the vicinity the castle of Thomaston, which was inhabited so late as a century ago, and is now the property of the Marquis of Ailsa. Upon a rocky precipice overhanging the sea is the castle of Cullean. There are several remarkable caves at the foot of this rock termed the caves of Cullean. About 1 mile from Turnberry Castle is the farm of Shanter, once the residence of Douglas Graham, the hero of Burns' poem "Tam O'Shanter."

KIRKOWEN. See KIRKCOWAN, co. Wigton, Scotland.

KIRK-PATRICK, a par. in Glanfaba sheading, Isle of Man, 2 miles S. of Peel. It is situated on the coast, near Dolby Point, and was created a separate parish in 1714, having previously formed part of Kirk-German. The par. is very considerable, and includes the chplry. of Dolby. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the lead mines, slate quarries, and herring fishery. The principal residence is Ragget, the seat of Captain Cameron. In a dale called Glen Moji is a cascade much visited by tourists. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Sodor and Man, val. £180, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Patrick, and has given name to the parish. There is a school with a small endowment.

KIRKPATRICK DURHAM, a par. in co. Kirkcudbright, Scotland. It comprises the vils. of Bridge-of-Urr and Kirkpatrick Durham, the latter being 6 miles N.N.E. of Castle Douglas, its post town. It is 9 miles in length by 3½ in breadth, and lies along the eastern ride of the river Urr. The surface of the northern district, save a few arable patches, is wholly covered with heath, and appropriated as pasturage for black cattle and sheep. The district is chiefly distinguished for its abundance of game. The southern portion is mostly enclosed arable, and produces good crops. The par. is in the presb. and synod of Dumfries, in the patron. of the crown. The minister's stipend is £289. The parish church was built in 1748. Here are a Free church and three parochial schools. The parish derives its name from the old church dedicated to St. Patrick, at Durham, where it stood. Formerly a woollen mill furnished employment to many inhabitants of the village, but it has been removed. Races formerly took place here. An annual fair is held in March.

KIRKPATRICK-FLEMING, a par. and vil. in co. Dumfries, Scotland, 6 miles N.E. of Annan, and 7 S.E. of Ecclefechan. It contains the vils. of Newton and Hollee, and the post-office vil. of its own name, the latter being a railway station on the Caledonian line. Its length is 6 miles, and its greatest breadth 5. About two-thirds of the lands are in tillage. The parish is watered by the Black Sark stream and the Kirtle-water. Here are four mineral springs famed for their medicinal properties, and resorted to by invalids. Limestone, sandstone, freestone, and marble, are quarried. The par. is in the presb. of Annan and synod of Dumfries. The minister's stipend is £226. The parish church, erected in 1778, is a commodious structure. The ancient church was given to the monks of Guiseburn by Robert Bruce. There are also a Free church, two parochial schools, and the union poorhouse. The chief seats are Mossknow, Lankshaw, Cove, Wyesbie, Kirkpatrick, and Sprinkell. This last, the residence of Sir J. H. Maxwell, Bart., is a Grecian structure. The present par. of Kirkpatrick-Fleming includes the ancient pars. of Kirkconnel, Kirkpatrick, and Irvine. It received the adjunct to its name from the ancient family of Fleming, who possessed several towers on the border. The old tower of Woodhouse, which is still standing, is said to have given shelter to Robert Bruce. Near the tower is the Cross of Merkland, an octagonal stone 9 feet high, and finely sculptured. It is supposed to have been erected in 1483 to commemorate a base murder perpetrated on a member of the family of Maxwell. There are several tumuli in the neighbourhood. Sir John H. Maxwell, Bart., and William Graham, Esq., are the principal landowners.

KIRKPATRICK-IRONGRAY, a par. in co. Kirkcudbright, Scotland, 5 miles N.W. of Dumfries. It is 9 miles in length by 3 in breadth, and contains the vil. of Shawhead. The surface extends along the southern bank of the river Nith, and is intersected by the Cluden. The mountain termed the Bishop's Forest occupies the N.W. corner of the parish. It rises to a considerable height, is skirted with wood, and cultivated to its very summit. A great part of the S.W. of the parish is occupied by moorland and pasture, the rest is in tillage. Near the river Cairn is the Rowting Bridge, of one arch, so called from the noise of the waterfall above it. The living is in the presb. and synod of Dumfries. The minister's stipend is £254. The church is a modern structure. There is a Free church, also two parochial schools. There were formerly two chapels, and the cemetery attached to one of them still remains. Helen Walker, the original of Sir Walter's Scott's "Jeanie Deans," was born here. John Welsh, the great-grandson of Knox, and minister of this parish, suffered ejectment in 1662.

KIRKPATRICK-JUXTA, a par. in the district of Annandale, co. Dumfries, Scotland, 3¼ miles S. of Moffat. The parish is intersected by the main trunk of the Caledonian railway, which has a station at Beattock. It is 7½ miles long, and its greatest breadth 6¾. The river Annan traces its N.E. boundary, and several streamlets intersect the district. The westward portion is occupied by a range of mountains, one of which, the Queensberry, rises to the height of 2,140 feet above sea-level. About one-third of the land is under tillage, but the larger portion is unenclosed pasture. There are several springs and chalybeate wells in the parish. Bluestone and greywacke are quarried. The par. is in the presb. of Lochmaben and synod of Dumfries. The minister's stipend is £195. The parish church is a commodious structure built in 1799. There are five schools, two of which are parochial. The parish derives its name, meaning "the lands nigh to the kirk of St. Patrick," from a chapel dedicated to the famous missionary. Here is the castle of Augheancass, the ruins of which cover a large extent of ground. It was erected by Randolph, Earl of Murray, and afterwards became possessed by Douglas of Morton. The tower of Lochhouse, on the banks of the Annan, is the property of the Johnstones of Corehead. In the district are traces of a Roman road and camp, also of many cairns and circular forts.

KIRK SANDALL, a par. in the S. div. of the wap. of Strafforth, West Riding co. York, 4½ miles N.E. of Doncaster, its post town. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Don, and is surrounded by plantations. The par. contains the hmlts. of Streetthorpe and Trumpfleet. The soil is sandy, and the land chiefly arable. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of York, val. £393, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Oswald, is a modern stone building, with a tower containing one bell. It contains a monument to John Rokeby, Archbishop of Dublin, who was a native of this parish. The charities produce £72 per annum, chiefly the endowment of the free grammar school, founded by the Rev. George Wood in 1626. Streetthorpe and Sandall Grove are the principal residences.

KIRKSANDS POINT, a promontory in the island of Papastour, and par. of Walls, Shetland Islands, coast of Scotland. It lies on the S. side of Magus Bay, and is celebrated for the beautiful spars and crystals found in the rock, which is dark clay-stone.

KIRKSANTON, or CHAPEL SUCKEN, a tnshp. in the par. of Millom, co. Cumberland, 6 miles from Bootle, and 9 from Broughton. It consists of a few houses and scattered farms. It is supposed to have derived its names from a circular piece of water, 400 feet in circumference, which covers the ruins of a church. Kirksank Town is a small tumulus, with two large stones on the top, called "standing stones."

KIRKSANTON, or KIRK ST. ANNE, a par. in the middle sheading, Isle of Man, 5 miles N.E. of Castletown. The village is small, and the surface rugged. Kirksanton Head is a conspicuous promontory on the coast. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Sodor and Man, val. £150, in the patron. of the crown. The church is a small ancient structure, dedicated to St. Anne. There is a village school. In the vicinity is a Druid circle, and several barrows. A cattle fair is held on the 31st May.

KIRK SMEATON, a par. in the upper div. of the wap. of Osgoldcross, West Riding co. York, 2½ miles W. of the Womersley station on the Knottingley and Doncaster branch of the Lancashire and Yorkshire railway, and 6 S.E. of Pontefract. The village, which is small, is situated on the S. bank of the river Wente. The soil is fertile, and the subsoil magnesian limestone. The land is chiefly arable. On the S. bank of the river are remains of a Roman encampment. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of York, val. £370. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. It is an ancient stone structure, with a tower containing three bells. It has a handsome E. window, surmounted by the patron saint in the attitude of prayer; also an antique font, and register chest. There is an endowed National school for both sexes, also a Sunday-school. — Neville, Esq., is lord of the manor.

KIRKSTALL, a vil. and ecclesiastical district in the tnshp. of Headingley-cum-Burley, and par. of Leeds, wap. of Skyrack, West Riding co. York, 3 miles N.W. of Leeds, and 10½ from Bradford. It is a station on the North Midland railway. The village, which is large, is situated in the vale of the river Aire. Many of the inhabitants are employed at the Forge Iron Works, said to be the most ancient in the kingdom, and in the woollen mills. There is a good hotel, called the Star and Garter, adjoining the ruins of the ancient abbey, founded in 1152 by Henry de Lacy for Cistercian monks, and given at the Dissolution to Archbishop Cranmer. The ruins, which belong to the Earl of Cardigan, include the fine Norman church with its ivy-mantled tower, the chapter-house, refectory, and cloisters, covering a space of 445 feet by 340. The principal residence is the Grange. The living is a perpet. cur.,* val. £180, in the patron. of the trustees of Leeds vicarage. The church, dedicated to St. Stephen, is a stone structure, with a spire. It was erected in 1828 by a parliamentary grant, on land given by the Earl of Cardigan, who is lord of the manor. The Baptists and Wesleyans have places of worship. There are National and Sunday schools for boys and girls.

KIRKSTEAD, a par. in the hund. of Gartree, parts of Lindsey, S. div. of the co. Lincoln, 3 miles N.W. of Tattershall, and 6 S.W. of Horncastle, its post town. It is situated on the E. bank of the river Witham, and is a station on the Great Northern railway. There are remains of a Cistercian abbey, founded in 1139 by Hugh Fitz-Eudo. At the Dissolution its revenue was valued at £338 13*s.* 11*d.* At a short distance from the village is Moor Tower, an octagonal building, formerly used as an outpost to Tattershall Castle. The living is a don. cur. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £40. The church is a small edifice, supposed to have been built before the abbey, with lancet windows and groined roof. The stipend was for some time given to a Dissenting minister. The living was at one time held by Dr. J. Taylor. The parochial charities produce about £6 per annum. Hugh Kirkstead, a Benedictine monk, was a native of this place.

KIRKSTONE FELL and PASS, in co. Westmoreland, 3 miles N.E. of Ambleside.

KIRKSTYLE, a bar. in co. Lanark, Scotland, near Carluke.

KIRKTHORPE, a hmlt. in the par. of Warmfield-cum-Heath, West Riding co. York, 2 miles E. of Wakefield, and 1 mile from the Normanton railway station. It is situated on the E. bank of the river Calder. The parish church and vicarage, with the hospital and almshouses, are situated in this hamlet.

KIRKTHWAITE, a hmlt. in the par. of Wigton, ward and co. Cumberland, 8 miles S.W. of Carlisle. It is situated on a branch of the river Wampool, near the line of the Maryport and Carlisle railway.

KIRKTON, a vil. in the par. of Kirkmahoe, co. Dumfries, Scotland, 4 miles N. of Dumfries.

KIRKTON, a vil. in the par. of Balmerino, co. Fife, Scotland, 6 miles N. of Cupar.

KIRKTON, a vil. in the par. of Glenisla, co. Forfar, Scotland, 12 miles W. of Kirriemuir.

KIRKTON, a vil. in the par. of Auchterhouse, co. Forfar, Scotland, 5 miles N.W. of Dundee. It is situated on the river Dighty, near the line of the Dundee and Newtyle railway.

KIRKTON, a vil. in the par. of Largo, co. Fife, Scotland. It is situated on the shore of the Frith of Forth.

KIRKTON, a vil. in the par. of Burntisland, co. Fife, Scotland, 12 miles from Edinburgh, and 18 S.W. of Cupar. It is a populous village, situated on the Frith of Forth, near the steam ferry to Granton, and the line of the Edinburgh and North British railway.

KIRKTON, or KIRTON, a par. in the South Clay div. of the wap. of Bassetlaw, co. Nottingham, 3 miles N.E. of Ollerton, its post town, and 3 S.W. of Tuxford. The village, which is small, is situated at the foot of a steep and wooded eminence. The land is partly in hops. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment, under an Enclosure Act, in 1821. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £259. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is an ancient structure, with a lofty square embattled tower containing two bells. There are a place of worship for the General Baptists, and a school with a small endowment. The Earl of Scarborough is lord of the manor.

KIRKTON, a vil. in the par. of Strathmartine, co. Forfar, Scotland, 5 miles N. of Dundee.

KIRKTON, a vil. in the par. of Tealing, co. Forfar, Scotland, 6 miles N.E. of Dundee. It is situated under the Sidlaw hills, which attain an altitude of 1,100 feet at Craigowl.

KIRKTON. See also KIRTON.

KIRKTON-OF-KINNETTLES, a vil. in the par. of Kinnettles, co. Forfar, Scotland, 3 miles S.W. of Forfar.

KIRKTON-OF-WEEM, a vil. in the par. of Weem, co. Perth, Scotland, 24 miles N.W. of Perth. It is situated in the vicinity of the river Tay.

KIRKTOWN, a vil. in the par. of St. Fergus, co. Banff, Scotland, 4 miles N. of Peterhead. It is situated on the river Ugie, near Rattray Head.

KIRKTOWN, a vil. in the par. of Fenwick, co. Ayr, Scotland, 3 miles N.E. of Kilmarnock.

KIRKTOWN, a par. in the district of Hawick, co. Roxburgh, Scotland, 3 miles E.S.E. of Hawick, its post town. It is 8 miles in length by about 1½ mile in breadth. The surface is broken by ranges of hills, between which run numerous rivulets. The land is well adapted for the pasturage of sheep. The par. is in the presb. of Jedburgh, and synod of Merse and Teviotdale, in the patron. of the crown. The minister's stipend is £185. The church is a modern structure. The parish is intersected by the great road from Newcastle to Edinburgh through Selkirk. Dr. Leyden, the celebrated orientalist, was partly educated at Kirktown school.

KIRKTOWN-OF-FORDOUN, a vil. in the par. of Fordoun, co. Kincardine, Scotland, 10 miles S.W. of Stonehaven. It is situated under the Grampians, in Strathmore.

KIRKTOWN-OF-NEW-DEER, a vil. in the par. of New-Deer, co. Aberdeen, Scotland.

KIRKURD, a par. in the co. Peebles, Scotland, 5½ miles S. of Linton, and 5½ S.W. of Noblehouse, its post town. The surface lies considerably above sea level, and is broken by a range of heights running along its southern and south-western frontier. This chain sends up, among other summits, Hell's Cleuch, which attains an elevation of 2,100 feet above the sea; and on its summit is a cairn, known as the "Pyked Stane," marking the bounds of this parish, and those of Broughton and Stobs. One-third of the whole area of the parish is arable, about 600 acres are plantation, and the rest sheepwalks. It is watered by the Dean and Tarth burns, and their tributaries. There is a sulphureous spring near Castlecraig House, somewhat similar to those of Harrowgate and Moffat. The par. is in the presb. of Peebles, and synod of Lothian and Tweeddale. The minister's stipend is £158. The church was erected in 1766. The ancient church belonged at an early period to the bishops of Glasgow, one of whom gave it to the hospital of Soltra, the property of which charitable institution it remained until transferred to the hospital of Trinity Church, Edinburgh. Here is a Free church. In the park of Castlecraig are two mounds, each encircled by a dyke, and supposed to have been used as seats of feudal justice. Not far from these are two circular fortifications, called the Chesters and the Rings. The remains of a Druidical temple, and various other antiquities, have been discovered in the neighbourhood. The parish is intersected by the roads from Edinburgh to Moffat, and from Glasgow to Peebles.

KIRKWALL AND ST. OLA, an united par. in Pomona, or "Mainland," Orkney Islands, coast of Scotland. It contains the burgh and post town of Kirkwall, and is bounded on the N. and S. sides by the sea, on the E. by the pars. of St. Andrew and Holm, and on the W. by the pars. of Firth and Ophir. Its length southward is 6 miles, and its greatest breadth about 5½. The surface at Wideford Hill, in the N.W. portion of the parish, attains an altitude of about 5,000 feet above sea-level. The extent of arable land throughout the parish is about 2,000 acres. Its shores are rocky, with bold crags and deep caverns. Its bays are Kirkwall and Inganness on the N., which afford shelter for ships of large size, and Scalpa Bay on the S., which is resorted to by small craft. The par. is the seat of a presb. in the synod of Orkney. It is a collegiate charge, and in the patron. of the town council of Kirkwall. The stipend of the two ministers is £154 each. Until about twenty years ago, the cathedral was also used as the parish church; it then fell into decay, but has recently been fitted up for the performance of divine service. Near the cathedral is a commodious church, erected in 1841. The United Presbyterians, the Free Church, and the Independents have each a place of worship. There are several schools in the parish, the principal being the burgh grammar school, which has been established nearly 500 years. To the E. of Kirkwall Bay are traces of forts, thrown up by Cromwell for the protection of the town from attacks by sea. In the neighbourhood are remains of Picts' houses. On the high road to Holm is Blakeley's Well, a powerful chalybeate spring.

KIRKWALL, a town of great antiquity, seaport, royal burgh, and metropolis of the Orkney Isles. It is situated about the centre of an island, called, by way of pre-eminence, "Mainland," or Pomona, at the head of Kirkwall Bay. It is 12 miles E.N.E. of Stromness, and 41 N. by W. of Wick. The town is divided into two parts, distinguished as the old and new towns: the former bears evidence of its antiquity, and the principal street is very narrow. Many of the houses have their gables towards the street, which gives the town a singular appearance. The walls of the houses are of great thickness, and the doors and windows small. The houses of the New Town are in a more modern style, and vie, both as to convenience and elegance, with the houses of any other town of the same size in Scotland. Many of the landowners of Orkney reside here, and the general tone of society is good. The townhall is a convenient structure, forming a piazza in front; it contains a common prison, an assembly-hall, court-rooms, and a Freemasons' lodge. The National, Commercial, and Union banks have each a branch office. The most conspicuous building in the town is the cathedral, dedicated to St. Magnus, a Scandinavian Earl of Orkney, who was assassinated in Egilshay by his cousin Haco, about the year 1100. It was founded by Rowland, Earl of Orkney, in 1138, and though the work of different ages and individuals, is a noble structure, not only simple, but surprisingly regular in form. The material of the edifice is red sandstone. It has a chime of four large bells, which were presented to the cathedral by Bishop Maxwell, and were cast at Edinburgh in 1528. The ancient church of St. Ola, which is believed to have existed here before the foundation of the cathedral, stood near the shore of the bay of Kirkwall, and has given name to the town, Kirkwall, originally Kirkivvog, signifying "the church on the bay." A new church, intended at first as an extension church, was erected here in 1841. Here are also handsome places of worship belonging to the Free Church, United Presbyterians, and Independents. Near the cathedral are the ruins of the King's Castle, which was a place of considerable strength in 1581, about which time it was occupied by the infamous Earl of Orkney, natural son of James V. About 100 yards S. of the cathedral stand the much more ancient and interesting remains of the bishop's palace, of the period of the foundation of which both history and tradition are silent. Almost adjoining the bishop's palace are the ruins of the earl's palace, erected in 1607 by Earl Patrick, but not inhabited since 1688. This last is a specimen of the castellated mansions of the 16th and 17th centuries.—Kirkwall was first created a royal burgh by James III. in 1486, which was confirmed by James V. in 1536, and afterwards by Charles II., the last being deemed its governing charter. The burgh revenue is about £125. Its government is confided to a provost, four bailies, a treasurer, dean of guild, and fifteen councillors. It is a representative burgh, with a population in 1861 of 3,519, and unites with Tain, Wick, Dornoch, Dingwall, and Cromarty, in returning one member to parliament. The sheriff, commissary, and admiralty courts are held here on Thursdays, and a justice of peace small-debt court is held on the first Wednesday of every month.—The harbour of Kirkwall, constructed about 1811, is safe and commodious; it has two excellent piers, and the outer bay affords good anchorage. It has about fifty vessels belonging to it, with an aggregate tonnage of 3,000. The exports consist of cattle, sheep, pork, tallow, butter, hides, salt fish, and grain; and the imports of coal, wood, colonial produce, and other articles necessary for the consumption of the island. For many years the manufacture of kelp was extensively carried on, but through the introduction of foreign barilla it became extinct. In 1747 the manufacture of linen yarn was successfully introduced, but has since declined. There is at present an extensive whisky distillery, which carries on a large export trade. The town enjoys daily mail communication with the mainland, and a weekly communication by steamer with the chief ports on the E. coast of Scotland as far S. as Granton.—Malcolm Laing, the Scottish historian, and Sir Robert Strange, the eminent engraver, were natives of this parish. There is an annual fair of a fortnight's continuance, which commences on the Tuesday after the 11th August; and a monthly cattle market has recently been established.

KIRKWHELPINGTON, a par. in the N.E. div. of Tindale ward, co. Northumberland, 21 miles N.W. of Newcastle, 15 W. of Morpeth, and 8 S.E. of Elsdon. It is situated on the river Wansbeck, and contains the tnshps. of Great Bavington, Capheaton, Catcherside, Coldwell, Crogdean, Fawns, and West Whelpington. Near the vicarage is Whelpington Tower. The soil is loamy, and the land chiefly in pasture. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £330, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Bartholomew, is an ancient stone edifice with a square tower containing two bells. There is a National school. Petty sessions are held on the last Monday in each month. The Duke of Northumberland is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

KIRK-YETHOLM, or ZETHOLM, a vil. in the par. of Yetholm, co. Roxburgh, Scotland, 7 miles S.E. of Kelso. It is situated at the bridge over the river Beaumont, and is a burgh of barony. It was visited by Edward I. in 1304. At Yetholm Common, near the village, a colony of gipsies have made a settlement. In the vicinity are traces of Roman and British encampments.

KIRMINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Yarborough, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 7½ miles N.E. of Glanford Brigg, and 3 E. of Barnethy. Ulceby is its post town. The parish, which is situated in a vale, is small, and wholly agricultural. The village stands on the road from Boston to Hull. The tithes were commuted for land on the enclosure of the parish in 1777. The living is a vic. annexed to the rect.* of Brocklesby, in the dioc. of Lincoln. The church, dedicated to St. Helen, is an ancient structure with a spire, erected at the expense of Lord Yarborough in 1838. There is a chapel for Wesleyans. The Earl of Yarborough is lord of the manor.

KIRMOND-LE-MIRE, a par. in the hund. of Wraggoe, parts of Lindsey, E. div. of co. Lincoln, 6½ miles N.E. of Market-Raisen, its post town, and 8 S.E. of Caistor. The village, which is small, is situated on an acclivity. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £140, and the vicarial for £120. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £129. The church, dedicated to St. Martin, has a turret containing one bell. Christopher Turner, Esq., is lord of the manor and owner of the whole of the soil.

KIRMUNDIE NETHER, a vil. in the par. of Longside, co. Aberdeen, Scotland, 6 miles W. of Peterhead. It is situated near the river Ugie.

KIRRIEMUIR, vulgarly pronounced Killamuir, a par. in the co. Forfar, Scotland. It comprises the post town of its own name, and the vils. of Northmuir, Southmuir, Westmuir, Sledmuir, and Padanaram. It consists of two detached parts separated by the par. of Kingoldrum, and is 8 miles in length by 6 in breadth. The surface to the E. and W. of the town is almost level, but the greater portion of the district is varied with hills and dales. The whole of the northern portion is mountain and waste, with the exception of about 2,000 acres of partly arable and partly fine pasture and meadow. The southern portion has about 11,000 acres under tillage, and 4,500 in plantation and pasture. It is watered by the rivers Esk, Carity, Gairie, and Prosen, the latter giving name to the large district known as Glenprosen. The lake of Kinnordy has been almost entirely converted into meadow. Kinnordy and Balloch mosses are extensively used for fuel. Sir Charles Lyell, of Kinnordy, is the chief landowner. The par. is in the presb. of Forfar and synod of Angus and Mearns. The minister's stipend is £246. The parish church, a commodious structure, was built in 1786. The South church was erected in 1836, and is under the patron. of the communicants. There is also a church in the Glenprosen district, served by the same missionary minister as the church at Clova. The United Presbyterians have two churches, the Free Church two, the United Original Secession Church one, and the Episcopalians a chapel. Throughout the parish there are fourteen schools, two of which are endowed. Near the junction of the Carity with the Esk stands the castle of Invercarity, built of hewn stone, and in good repair, except the E. wing, which was demolished in 1445 by the Earl of Crawfurd in a feud between the Ogilvies (then its proprietors) and the Lindsays. The modern seats are, Ballandarg, Balnaboth, Kinnordy, and Shielhill. In the neighbourhood are two mounds respectively called Witch-pool and Court-hillock. There are tumuli, and remains of a Roman road; also canoes, battle-axes, and arrow-heads, have been discovered in this district. The parish is intersected by roads in all directions, and by a branch of the Scottish Midland line. There were anciently five places of worship in this parish besides the parish church. The town of Kirriemuir, which is of considerable antiquity, is a burgh of barony and a railway station on a branch of the Scottish Midland line, 18 miles N. of Dundee, 6 N.W. of Forfar, and 5 N. of Glammis. It is situated at the foot of the braes of Angus, on the northern edge of a glen, through which flows the small rivulet Gairie. The prospect of the lower part of the town is bounded by the southern braes of the glen, but from the higher part almost the whole of the valley of Strathmore is visible. The town consists of several streets, which are so arranged as to resemble the shaft and arms of an anchor. It contains a parish church with spire and clock, an Episcopal chapel surmounted by a spire, and a building formerly used as a townhall, but now converted into an United Presbyterian church. There are some good shops in the town, and although some of the houses are of mean appearance, the whole has a general air of industry and prosperity. There are offices of the British Linen, City of Glasgow, National, and Union banks, also a savings-bank, together with several insurance agencies. The principal inns are the Crown, the Commercial, and Lowden's. The town is well paved and lighted with gas. There are several religious and philanthropic institutions, also educational, horticultural, and other societies. For a long period Kirriemuir has been a thriving seat of the linen manufacture, comprising about twenty varieties. It is under Sir Charles Lyell, of Kinnordy, but has neither revenue, property, nor debt. The only magistrate is a baron bailie, appointed by the superior. At one period the jurisdiction of its bailie extended over a larger tract of country than at present. There is also a superintendent of police and a body of constables annually appointed. A sheriff's small-debt court is held on the third Mondays of January, March, May, July, September, and November, and a justice of peace small-debt court on the first Friday of every month. Friday is market day, and a cattle market is held fortnightly. Annual fairs are held in June, July, October, and December.

KIRSTEAD, a par. in the hund. of Loddon, co. Norfolk, 7 miles S.E. of Norwich, and 4 W. of Loddon. The village, which is small, is situated on the road from Bungay to Norwich. Kirstead Hall is an ancient mansion in the Elizabethan style. The living is a rect.* with the rect. of Langhale annexed, in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £326, in the patron. of Caius College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, is a small structure with a campanile turret. The register dates from 1663. The parochial charities produce £1 per annum. There is a school at Langhale, erected in 1855. The Baptists have a place of worship. There was formerly another church, dedicated to St. Christopher. G. S. Kett, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The principal residence is Langhale House, situated on an eminence commanding views of the surrounding country.

KIRTHWAITE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Dent and par. of Sedbergh, West Riding co. York, 6 miles S.E. of Sedbergh, and 10 N.E. of Kirkby-Lonsdale. It is situated in the valley of the river Dee, surrounded by lofty moors and fells.

KIRTLEBRIDGE, or KIRTLETOWN, a vil. in the par. of Middlebie, co. Dumfries, Scotland, 5 miles S.W. of Langholm, and 17 from Carlisle by the Caledonian railway, on which it is a station. It derives its name from the Kirtle burn, a trout stream which falls into the Solway Frith at Kirtle Foot.

KIRTLING, a par. in the hund. of Cheveley, co. Cambridge, 6 miles S.E. of Newmarket, its post town. The parish, which is chiefly arable land, has a large portion of common. The surface is generally flat, though in some parts elevated. The village, which is considerable, is neatly built. The old mansion of the Guildford family, in which Roger, the second lord, entertained Queen Elizabeth, is demolished, with the exception of the gateway. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £160. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient stone structure with a tower containing five bells. In the interior are several monuments of the North family, who at present hold the manor. The charities produce £6 per annum, besides six almshouses for the poor, erected by the late Marquis of Bute. There is a chapel for Baptists, and a National school for both sexes. At Kirtling Tower is a meet for the Suffolk hounds.

KIRTLINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Ploughley, co. Oxford, 6 miles S.W. of Bicester, and 4 N.E. of Woodstock. Oxford is its post town. It is a station on the Oxford, Banbury, and Birmingham branch of the Great Western railway. The par. is situated on the road from Bicester to Woodstock, and near the Oxford canal, and contains the hmlt. of North Brook. The river Cherwell, and the Oxford and Rugby section of the London and North-Western railway, pass through the parish. This place is of ancient date, and was called by the Saxons Kyntington. A synod of bishops was held here under St. Dunstan in 977. The manor was formerly held by the Bassets. The land is nearly equally divided between arable and pasture. The inhabitants are principally employed in agriculture. Good stone is quarried for building. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1811. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £286, in the patron. of St. John's College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient edifice with a square tower containing eight bells. In the interior are two stained-glass windows and tombs of the Dashwood family. The parochial charities produce about £12 per annum, a portion of which goes to the support of a school. Sir G. Dashwood, Bart., is lord of the manor, and resides at Kirtlington Park.

KIRTON, a wap. in the parts of Holland, co. Lincoln. It contains the pars. of Algarkirk, Bicker, Donington, Fosdyke, Frampton, Gosberton, Harts Grounds, Kirton, North Forty Foot Bank, Pelhams Lands, Quadring, Surfleet, Sutterton, Swineshead, Wigtoft, Wyberton, and part of Skirbeck, comprising 71,660 acres.

KIRTON, a par. in the wap. of Kirton, parts of Holland, co. Lincoln, 4 miles S.E. of Boston, its post town. It contains the chplry. of Brothertoft, and the ext. par. place of Simon Weir. It is a station on the Great Northern railway. The village, which is still considerable, was formerly a market town, but the market and fair are now discontinued. Part of the land is in hops. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1772. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £304, in the patron. of the Mercers'

Company, London. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is a commodious cruciform structure, with a square tower ornamented with battlements and pinnacles, and containing eight bells. It was built on the site of a more ancient one, founded by Bishop Alexander in 1405. It contains some fine carvings and an ancient octagonal font. There is a chapel-of-ease at Brothertoft, in this parish. The charities consist of the free grammar school, founded and endowed by Sir Thomas Middlecot in 1624, Hunt's almshouses for four poor women, and some minor charities. There are chapels for Methodists and Independents.

KIRTON, a par. in the hund. of Colneis, co. Suffolk, 7 miles S. of Woodbridge, and 9 S.E. of Ipswich, its post town. It is situated near Kirton sluice, at the mouth of the river Deben, which bounds the parish on the N.E. The soil is light, and the land principally arable. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £500. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £400, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient edifice with a stone tower. The charities produce about £12 10*s.* per annum. There is a chapel for Wesleyans. The father of Clara Reeve, the authoress of the "Old English Baron," was once rector of this parish. There are two manors, of which the Duke of Hamilton is lord of one, and Miss Cartwright lady of the other.

KIRTONHOLME, an ext. par. place adjoining the par. of Kirton-in-Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 2 miles N.E. of Swineshead.

KIRTON-IN-LINDSEY, a par., post and market town in the wap. of Corringham, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 10 miles N.E. of Gainsborough, 16 N. of Lincoln, and 8 N.W. of Glanford Brigg. The town, which is ancient, is situated on an eminence on the W. side of the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire railway, on which it is a station. It was formerly held by Robert de Mortaigne, Piers Gavestone, and the Black Prince, and now belongs to the Duchy of Cornwall. The inhabitants are principally employed in the iron mines, brick and tile works, rope walks, and corn mills. Quarter sessions are held here for the Lindsey division. It contains a courthouse and house of correction. The soil is very fertile. On Kirton Green stands the duchy courthouse, where the manorial courts are held and the records kept. In the vicinity are quarries of blue limestone, which is used for building, and also burnt into lime. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £300, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is a very ancient structure with tower containing a clock and six bells. It has some ancient carving, with a screen and piscina. The Wesleyans, Primitive and Reformed Methodists, and Baptists have each a place of worship. The charities produce £122 per annum, a large portion of which is the endowment of the grammar school on Kirton Green, founded by Lady May. It has two fellowships and six scholarships in connection with it, but they have not been claimed for some time. The school is now conducted on the National system. There are infant and day schools in connection with the Wesleyan chapel. Near the town is a railway tunnel cut through a hill called the Cliffe, 13 yards in length. Market day is Friday, and is the largest market for corn in the northern division of the county. There are fairs for cattle on the 18th July and 11th December.

KISH, a hmlt. in the bar. of Corran, co. Sligo, Ireland, 4 miles S.E. of Ballymote.

KISH-BANK, a shoal off the coast of cos. Dublin and Wicklow, Ireland, about 6 miles from the shore, in N. lat. 53° 19′, and W. long. 5° 56′. It is marked by a floating light 25 feet high, put up in 1812, and visible for 9 miles.

KISHORN, a sea loch on the W. coast of Ross, Scotland, opposite the Isle of Skye.

KISLINGBURY, a par. in the hund. of Nobottle Grove, co. Northampton, 3 miles S.W. of Northampton. The village is neatly built, and many of the inhabitants are employed in agriculture. The tithes were commuted for land and money payments under an Enclosure Act in 1779. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £547. The church, dedicated to St. Luke, has an embattled tower surmounted by a spire, and containing five bells. In the interior is an octagonal font. The parochial charities produce about £80 per annum, of which £25 is the endowment of a free school. There are chapels for Wesleyans and Baptists.

KITLEY, a seat in the par. of Plympton Earls, hund. of Plympton, co. Devon, 4 miles S.E. of Plymouth. It is situated near the Yealm, a branch of the river Plym. It came through the Pollexfens to the Bastard family. In the gallery is a collection of paintings by Reynolds.

KITS HILL, a granite peak in co. Cornwall, near Callington. It is the highest summit of Hengston Downs, and commands a fine view.

KITS-COTTY-HOUSE, a cromlech in co. Kent, 3 miles N. of Maidstone. It consists of one stone 12 feet by 9, resting on three supports, and is supposed to have been erected in memory of the British king Catigern, slain in battle by the Saxons.

KITSWALL, a hmlt. in the par. of Dunster, co. Somerset, 20 miles N.W. of Bridgwater. It is situated near the coast, and is joined with Cuffs.

KITTANE, or CYTTANE, a lough near the Glen of the Horse, co. Kerry, Ireland, 5 miles S.E. of Killarney.

KITTERICK, a lofty mountain in the par. of Minigaff, co. Kirkcudbright, Scotland, near Palmure Water.

KITTERLAND, an islet between the Isle of Man and the Calf of Man.

KITTERSAN, a vil. in the par. of Kirkcowan, co. Wigton, Scotland, 7 miles N.W. of Wigton. It is situated near the rivers Bladenoch and Tarf.

KITTISFORD, a par. in the hund. of Milverton, co. Somerset, 12 miles from Taunton, and 5 N.W. of Wellington, its post town and railway station. The village, which is small, is situated on the Western canal and the river Tone. The soil is clayey, and subsoil red shilly. Building stone is quarried. At a farm called Cothay is supposed to have been anciently a small monastery. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £230. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is an ancient structure with a tower containing three bells. A Sunday-school is held in the rectory-house. Robert C. T. Pearce, Esq., is lord of the manor.

KLEBERGIS, a wild spot near Fiedeland Point, in the par. of North Mavine, Shetland Islands, coast of Scotland. It is celebrated for its minerals, including asbestos, magnetic iron ore, &c.

KLOACHNABANE, or CLACHNABANE, a lofty mountain in co. Kincardine, Scotland, 5 miles S.W. of Strachan. It commands a magnificent view from its summit, which is 2,370 feet above the sea.

KNACKERS KNOWLE, a chplry. in the par. of St. Budeaux, hund. of Roborough, co. Devon, 3 miles N.W. of Plymouth. It is situated near the Saltash Ferry, in the vale of the Tamar. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Exeter, held with that of St. Budeaux.

KNAIK, a trout stream of co. Perth, Scotland, falling into the Allan.

KNAITH, a par. in the wap. of Well, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 3½ miles S.E. of Gainsborough, its post town, and 3½ N.W. of the Marton railway station. The village, which is very small, consisting of a few scattered houses, is situated near the river Trent, on the road from Gainsborough to Lincoln. It was anciently held by the Darcys and Willoughbys. Here was the Cistercian monastery of Hevening, founded about the year 1180. Its revenue at the Dissolution was returned at £58 13*s.* 4*d.* The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £40. The church, which anciently belonged to the monastery, contains some handsome details. Thomas Sutton, founder of the Charter House, in London, was a native of this place. W. Hutton, Esq., is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

KNAP, or KNEP, CASTLE, in co. Sussex, 4 miles from West Grinstead. It stands near the site of the old castle built by William de Braose, and is the seat of Sir Percy Burrell, Bart.

KNAPDALE, a district of co. Argyle, Scotland. This was formerly a parish, but in 1734 was divided into the two parishes of North Knapdale and South Knapdale.

KNAPDALE, NORTH, a par. in co. Argyle, Scotland. It belongs politically to the district of Islay, though it lies on the mainland. It is 12 miles in length by 3 in breadth, bounded on the E. by Loch Fyne, on the W. by Jura Sound, and deeply indented by the arm of the sea termed Loch Swin. The surface is mountainous after Cruach Lusach, which attains a height of 2,004 feet above sea-level, the loftiest eminences are Arichonan, Ervary, and Dunardary. The area of the par. is about 27,700 imperial acres, of which 3,400 are in tillage, 2,180 under wood, and the remainder in pasture or waste. The length of coast line within Loch Swin and along Jura Sound is about 50 miles. The parish is intersected by the Crinan canal, and has easy access to the steamers which pass to and fro. Here are upwards of 20 fresh water lakes, the largest, however, being but 3 miles in circumference. There are several springs. The par. is in the presb. of Inverary and synod of Argyle, in the patron. of the crown. The minister's stipend is £164. There are two parish churches situated on either side of Loch Swin; the one at Tayvallich, erected in 1827; the other at Kilmichael-Inverlussay, erected in 1819; they are used by the minister alternately. Here is a Free church, and also three parochial schools. The fisheries on the coast are prosecuted with much vigour, and their annual value amounts to £100. A few small vessels trade between this place and Liverpool, Greenock, and some parts of Ireland. On the N.E. shore of Loch Swin stands Castle Swin, parts of which are said to have been built in the eleventh century by Sweyne, Prince of Denmark. In the neighbourhood is a mound on which it is traditionally stated the Lords of the Isles held their courts of justice. Here also are three forts, an ancient cross 9 feet in height, and the remains of the chapel of St. Carmaig.

KNAPDALE, SOUTH, a par. in the district and co. of Argyle, Scotland. It is 20 miles in length by 16 in breadth, having the Atlantic Ocean on the W., and Loch Fyne on the E. It comprises the whole of the district of Knapdale, save that which is comprised in the par. of North Knapdale, and contains the post towns of Ardrishaig and Tarbert. The surface is mountainous, and the parish contains a large extent of waste and pasture land. The soil is for the most part of a mossy nature, lying on a stratum of sand, but in the low ground it is loamy. The par. is in the presb. of Inverary and synod of Argyle, in the patron. of the crown. The minister's stipend is £159. It contains two parish churches, one at Inverneill and the other at Achoish. Here the Free Church has a preaching station, and there are four parochial schools. In the neighbourhood are the remains of three chapels. A lead mine was formerly worked at Inverneill. The herring fishery on Loch Fyne employs as many as 50 boats. There are several bays with good anchorage.

KNAPP, a tythg. in the par. of North Curry, co. Somerset, 6 miles W. of Langport.

KNAPTHORPE, a hmlt. in the par. of Caunton, co. Notts, 3 miles N.E. of Southwell.

KNAPTOFT, a par. in the hunds. of Gartree and Guthlaxton, co. Leicester, 8 miles N.W. of Market Harborough, its post town, 7 N.E. of Lutterworth, and 2 from the Theddingworth railway station. It contains the tnshps. of Shearsby, Mowsley, and Walton. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in framework knitting. There is a famed mineral spring at the "Bath Inn" called the "Spa." The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Act of Inclosure in 1778. The living is a rect.* with the curs. of Shearsby and Mowsby annexed, in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £591. The inhabitants of Knaptoft frequent the church of Shearsby, as the old parish church is in ruins. The church of Shearsby, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene, has a tower containing four bells. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. There are remains of an old camp. The Duke of Rutland is lord of the manor. Dr. Richard Watson, Bishop of Llandaff, was incumbent of the parish.

KNAPTON, a par. in the hund. of North Erpingham, co. Norfolk, 3 miles N.E. of North Walsham, its post town, 17 from Norwich, and 8 from Cromer. The village is small, and situated on an eminence near the coast. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £295, in the patron. of the Master of Peter House, Cambridge, and Bern. Wigg, Esq., alternately. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is an ancient structure, with tower containing five bells. The church has a carved roof. The register dates from 1660. There is a Church school supported by the children and subscriptions. The parochial charities produce £1 per annum.

KNAPTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Acomb, York Ainsty, co. York, 1 mile W. of Acomb, and 3 N.W. of York.

KNAPTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Wintringham, wap. of Buckrose, East Riding co. York, 7 miles N.E. of Malton, its post town. It is situated near the navigable river Derwent, and has a station on the Scarborough and Malton railway. The tnshp. is well wooded. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, val. £48. The church is an ancient edifice, with a turret containing 1 bell. The Tindall family supports a school for the township. The Wesleyans and the Society of Friends have places of worship.

KNAPWELL, a par. in the hund. of Papworth, co. Cambridge, 4 miles S. of Swavesey, 5 N.E. of Caxton, and 8 N.W. of Cambridge. The parish is wholly agricultural and very woody. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1775. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £150. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure, with a low tower. The charities produce about £8 per annum. There is a school supported by subscription.

KNARESBOROUGH, a par., market town, and parliamentary borough in the lower div. of the wap. of Claro, West Riding co. York, 18 miles N. of Leeds, 16¾ N.W. of York, and 59 N.E. of Manchester. It is situated on the river Nidd, and is a station on the Thirsk and Leeds railway. It contains the tnshps. of Arkendale, Brearton, Bilton, and Scriven. It occupies part of the site of an ancient forest which was 20 miles in length, and is supposed by some writers to have been a Roman station. It was a crown manor prior to the Conquest, and was given by William the Conqueror to Serlo-de-Burgh, Baron of Tonsburg, in Normandy, by whom its stately castle was built. It was afterwards held by the Estotevilles, Richard Plantagenet, who founded a priory here, Piers Gavestone, and John of Gaunt, Duke of Lancaster, and since that period the manor has continued to form an appanage to the Duchy. The castle was for some time the place of confinement of Henry II. During the Civil War it was held for the king, but after the battle of Marston Moor it was taken by Fairfax, and dismantled by order of parliament in 1648. It was a remarkably fine building, perched on a lofty rock and covering an area of 400 yards in diameter. It was flanked by eleven towers, only one of which is still standing. The other ruins consist of a small portion of the keep and some vaulted apartments of very beautiful and elaborate workmanship, in which the murderers of Thomas-à-Becket took refuge. On the cliffs opposite to the castle is a dripping well famed for its petrifying qualities. About half a mile below the castle are the ruins of a friary for brothers of the Holy Trinity, founded in the 13th century by Richard Plantagenet, brother of Henry III. Its revenue at the Dissolution was returned at £35 10s. 11d. About half a mile S. of the castle, at a considerable elevation above the river, is St. Robert's Chapel, hewn out of the solid rock, 10½ feet in length by 9 wide, and 7½ feet high, the roof of which is groined. It has an altar on the E. side, and contains carvings of the Trinity and of the Virgin Mary. A little lower down the river is St. Robert's Cave, supposed to have been the residence of the hermit. This cave was notorious as the place where Daniel Clarke was murdered, in 1744, by Eugene Aram, a learned schoolmaster; the crime was not brought home to him till 1758.—The town is situated on an eminence on the northern bank of the river Nidd, here crossed by two bridges called High and Low Bridges, one at either end of the town. It was anciently surrounded by a wall, and externally by a moat and dyke. The houses are well built of stone, and the streets are paved and lighted with gas. Knaresborough is governed by a bailiff, who is the returning officer, and the paving, lighting, and cleansing are under the control of town commissioners, who have lately made great improvements in the town. It has returned two members to parliament since the reign of Queen Mary, and is a polling place for the West Riding elections. It is the head of superintendent registry and new County Court districts, and is the seat of a Poor-law Union. Petty sessions are held weekly and county courts monthly. The board of guardians meet weekly in the winter and fortnightly in the summer. The town contains the courthouse, a stone building, situated in Castlegate, a dispensary, market-house, literary institution, newsroom, gas works, gaol, two banks, and a savings-bank. The manufactures of the town are sheetings, towelings, diaper, huckabacks, union checks, hearthrugs, and doormats, which afford employment to a large number of the inhabitants. The town was formerly a place of fashionable resort for the efficacy of its medicinal waters, but they have long since been abandoned for those of Harrogate. There are some extensive quarries of limestone in the neighbourhood. The tithes were commuted for land and money payments under Inclosure Acts in 1772 and 1774.—The living is a vic.* with the curs. of Trinity and Brearton annexed in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £393, in the patron. of bishop. The parish church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is an ancient and commodious stone edifice erected at various periods. It has a square tower rising from between the nave and chancel, crowned by a spire, and containing a clock and eight bells. It has recently been restored, and has a beautiful E. window. There are also three district churches at Arkendale, High Harrogate, and Bilton, the livings of which are perpet. curs., vals. £80, £154, and 260 respectively. There are chapels for Independents, Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, and Roman Catholics. The parochial charities produce £586 per annum. The royal grammar school, which has an endowment of £20 per annum, was founded by Dr. Robert Chaloner in 1617. It provides free instruction for boys within the borough of Knaresborough and the village of Goldsborough. A parochial school for 30 boys and girls was founded and endowed, in 1765, by Thomas Richardson; it provides education, clothing, and the apprenticing of the boys. There are National schools for boys, girls, and infants, also Church and Dissenting Sunday schools. There is a day and Sunday school in connection with the Roman Catholic chapel.—In the vicinity of the town are traces of a Roman encampment, where many coins of Claudius and Constantine have been found. At Starbeck, between Harrogate and Knaresborough, are chalybeate and sulphurous springs, at which spot the inhabitants of Knaresborough have erected warm and cold baths. The medicinal qualities of these springs are different to those of Harrogate, and more suitable to delicate constitutions. John Metcalfe, the blind architect, was a native of this place. There are many fine seats in the neighbourhood; among them may be mentioned Conyingham House, Plumpton, Ribstone, Allerton-Mauleverer, and Copgrove.—Market days are Wednesday and Saturday, the former for corn, the latter for provisions. Fairs for cattle, sheep, horses, &c., are held on the first Wednesday after the 13th January, 12th March, 5th May, 11th October, and 10th December, also for cattle every alternate Wednesday.

KNARESDALE, a par. in the W. div. of Tindale ward, co. Northumberland, 7 miles S.W. of Haltwistle. Hexham is its post town. It is situated near the south-western extremity of the county, on the river Knare, a branch of the Tyne, and on the Haltwistle and Alston railway. It includes the hmlts. of Burnstones, Eals, Slaggyford, Town Green, and Williamston. The par., which is extensive, occupies a mountainous tract formerly frequented by red deer. Fruits were at one time produced in large quantities. A mineral spring was found in the neighbourhood. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £135, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is a plain edifice, erected in 1835. The Wesleyans have a chapel at Slaggyford, and there is a National school at Town Green. There are some small charities. The trustees of Lord Wallace are lords of the manor. Knaresdale Hall, the ancient seat of the Pratts, Swinburns, and Wallaces, is now converted into a farmhouse.

KNAVESTONE, a sunken rock to the N. of the Staples Islands, co. Northumberland.

KNAVINSTOWN, a par. in the bar. of West Offaly, co. Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles W.N.W. of Kildare. Monastereven is its post town. The par. is about 1 mile in length, and the same in breadth. It is situated on the bank of the Grand canal. The living is a suspended vic. in the dioc. of Kildare, in the patron. of the bishop. Knavinstown House and demesne occupy a considerable part of the parish.

KNAYTON-WITH-BRAWITH, a tnshp. in the par. of Leake, wap. of Allertonshire, North Riding co. York, 6 miles S.E. of Northallerton, and 3½ N. of Thirsk. The village is considerable. The Wesleyans have a place of worship.

KNEBWORTH, a par. in the hund. of Broadwater, co. Herts, 5 miles N. of Welwyn, and 4 S. of Stevenage, its post town and railway station on the Great Northern line. The village is small. It formerly belonged to the families of Hoos, Hotofts, &c., and, since the reign of Henry VII., to the Lyttons. Its inhabitants are chiefly employed in agriculture. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £500, in the patron. of Sir E. Bulwer Lytton, Bart. The church is situated in Knebworth Park. It is an ancient flint and brick structure, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, with an embattled tower, crowned with a low spire and containing five bells. Annexed is a mortuary chapel containing monuments to the Lytton family, also the brass of a priest bearing date 1414. The parochial charities produce about £3 per annum. There is an almshouse endowed by Mrs. Bulwer Lytton in 1836. There is a National school for both sexes. Knebworth House is the principal residence and the seat of Sir Edward Lytton Bulwer Lytton, Bart., M.P. It is situated on high ground in a well-wooded park, and contains some exquisitely carved oak.

KNEDLINGTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Howden, wap. of Howdenshire, East Riding co. York, half a mile S.W. of Howden. It is situated near the river Ouse, and contains the hmlt. of Booth. At the latter place the river is crossed by a ferry. The land is chiefly arable and highly cultivated. Thomas Clarke, Esq., the lord of the manor, resides at New Hall.

KNEESAL, a par. in the N. div. of the wap. of Thurgarton, co. Nottingham, 9 miles N.W. of Newark, its post town, 4 S.E. of Ollerton, and 6 N. of Southwell. The village is considerable. The par. contains the tnshps. of Ompton and Kersal. The land is partly in hops. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, with the cur. of Bougton annexed, val. £100, in the patron. of the Chapter of the Collegiate Church of Southwell. The church is an ancient stone structure, with a tower containing three bells. There is a school erected by the Earl of Manvers in 1842. The Wesleyans have a place of worship.

KNEESWORTH, a hmlt. in the par. of Bassingbourne, hund. of Armingford, co. Cambridge, 1 mile E. of Bassingbourne, and 3 miles N.E. of Royston. It is situated on the great N. road. Kneesworth Hall is the principal residence.

KNEETON, a par. in the N. div. of the wap. of Bingham, co. Nottingham, 8 miles S.W. of Newark, its post town, 5 N. of Bingham, and 3 E. of Lowdham railway station. It is situated at the ferry over the river Trent, which bounds the parish on the W., and near the Roman Fosse road. The higher ground commands views of the surrounding country. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £58. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient edifice, with a tower containing three bells. The interior of the church contains monuments to the Storey family. There is a parochial school supported by subscription.

KNEETON, a hmlt. in the par. of Middleton Tyas, wap. of East Gilling, North Riding co. York, 5 miles N.E. of Richmond. Kneeton Hall is the principal residence. The village is considerable.

KNELSTON, or KNOLLSTON, a par. in the hund. of Swansea, co. Glamorgan, 13 miles S.W. of Swansea. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of St. David's, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, formerly dedicated to St. Maurice, is in ruins.

KNETTISHALL, or KNATTISHALL, a par. in the hund. of Blackbourne, co. Suffolk, 5 miles S.W. of East Harling, its post town, and 8 N.W. of Ixworth. The parish, which is wholly agricultural, is bounded by the smaller river Ouse, which separates it from the county of Norfolk. There is no village, only a few farmhouses. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £184. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure, with a square embattled tower. The tithes have been commuted. Knottishall Hall is the principal residence. T. Thornhill, Esq., is lord of the manor.

KNIGH, a par. in the bar. of Lower Ormond, co. Tipperary, Ireland, 3 miles N.W. of Nenagh, its post town. The soil is mostly good. The river Nenagh, which flows into Lough Derg at no great distance, traces part of the S.W. boundary. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Killaloe, val. with Nenagh, £580, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is in ruins. Knigh House is among the chief residences.

KNIGHTCOTT, a hmlt. in the par. of Burton Dassett, co. Warwick, 4 miles S. of Southam.

KNIGHTLEY, a quarter in the par. of Gnosall, co. Stafford, 3 miles S. of Eccleshall.

KNIGHTLOW, a hund. in co. Warwick. It is crossed by the river Avon, the ancient Watling Street, and the Roman road Fosse Way. It contains the divs. of Kenilworth, Kirby, Rugby, and Southam, comprising an area of 167,280 acres.

KNIGHTON, a hund. in co. Radnor. It is situated in the N.E. div. of the co., and contains the pars. of Beguildy, Heyop, Knighton, Llananno, Llanbadarn-Fynyd, Llanbister, and parts of Abbey-cwm-hir, Bampton-Bryan, Llandewy-Ystradenny, and Llangynllo.

KNIGHTON, a par., market town, and parliamentary borough, in the hund. of the same name, co. Radnor, 9 miles E. of New Radnor, and 13 from the Craven Arms station on the Shrewsbury and Hereford railway, from which there is a branch line to Knighton. It was anciently called Tref-y-clawdd, or "the town on the dyke," in allusion to Offa's Dyke, which passes through the town. It is a crown manor, and includes the tnshp. of Cwmgilla and the lordship of Farrington. The town, which is clean and well built, consists chiefly of two streets. It is situated on rising ground overlooking the right bank of the river Teme, which flows between the counties of Radnor and Salop. It contains a bank, union poorhouse, &c. It is governed by a bailiff, burgesses, and constables; and is a contributory borough to Radnor, with the old limits. Petty sessions are held in the town, which is a polling-place for the county elections. Some of the inhabitants are engaged in the woollen trade. It is the seat of a Poor-law Union, and of a superintendent registry, but is included within the Presteign new County Court district. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £155. The church is dedicated to St. Edward. There are schools and almshouses. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. The principal residence is Knighton House. There are no remains of the old castle, but several military works, particularly Caer Caradoc, about 3 miles to the N., said to have been defended by Caractacus against the Romans under Ostorius; and Coxwall, about 5 miles to the E. of the town, on the summit of which are vestiges of an ancient fortress, also two barrows. Market day is Thursday. Fairs are held on the Thursday before Easter Sunday, the 17th May, the 2nd October, the last Thursday in October, and the Thursday preceding the 12th November. The races take place in June.

KNIGHTON, a chplry. in the par. of St. Margaret, hund. of Guthlaxton, co. Leicester, 2 miles S.E. of Leicester, its post town. It is situated near the river Sour. The Midland Counties railway passes through a tunnel of brickwork at this place, 100 yards in length. There are some handsome residences, with good gardens, chiefly inhabited by the merchants and manufacturers of Leicester. The living is a cur. attached to the vic.* of St. Margaret, in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £380, in the patron. of the Prebendary of Lincoln Cathedral. The church, dedicated to St. James, is a small edifice, with a tower crowned by a spire, and containing four bells. There is a commodious National school, and a small chapel for Wesleyans. Sir William Edmund Cradock Hartopp is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

KNIGHTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Mucklestone, N. div. of the hund. of Pirehill, co. Stafford, 7 miles N.W. of Eccleshall, and 5 N.E. of Drayton.

KNIGHTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Compton Beauchamp, co. Berks, 7 miles W. of Wantage, and 5 S. of Faringdon. It is situated on the Wilts canal, and on the line of the ancient Port Way.

KNIGHTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Wembury, co. Devon, 4 miles S.E. of Plymouth. It is situated on the coast, at the mouth of the river Yealm.

KNIGHTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Hermock, co. Devon, 3 miles N.W. of Chudleigh. It is situated near the river Teign.

KNIGHTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Beer Hacket, co. Dorset, 5 miles S.W. of Sherborne.

KNIGHTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Winfrith, co. Dorset, 7 miles S.W. of Wareham.

KNIGHTON, a tythg. in the par. of Durweston, hund. of Pimperne, co. Dorset, 2 miles N.W. of Blandford. It is situated on the river Stour.

KNIGHTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Canford Magna, co. Dorset, 2 miles N.W. of Wimborne, and 5 N.E. of Poole. It is situated on the river Stour.

KNIGHTON, a hmlt. in the bar. of Stogursey, hund. Cannington, co. Somerset, 7 miles N.W. of Bridgwater. It is situated on the coast of the Bristol Channel.

KNIGHTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Adbaston, hund. of North Pirehill, co. Stafford, 5 miles W. of Eccleshall. It is situated near the Grand Junction canal.

KNIGHTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Broad Chalk, co. Wilts, 5 miles S.W. of Wilton.

KNIGHTON, a ruin in the Isle of Wight, co. Hants, 4 miles S.E. of Newport.

KNIGHTON-ON-TEME, a chplry. in the par. of Lindridge, lower div. of the hund. of Oswaldslow, co. Worcester, 3 miles N.E. of Tenbury, its post town, and 5 S.W. of Cleobury Mortimer. It is situated on the river Teme and Leominster canal, and contains the hmlt. of Newnham. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £100, in the patron. of the Vicar of Lindridge. The church is dedicated to St. Michael.

KNIGHTON SUTTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Chew Magna, co. Somerset, 6 miles S. of Bristol. It is joined to Knowle.

KNIGHTON, WEST, a par. in the Dorchester div. of the hund. of Culliford Tree, co. Dorset, 3½ miles S.E. of Dorchester, its post town. It contains the hmlts. of Lewell, Little Mayne, and Fryar Mayne. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. About two-thirds of the land are arable and pasture, and the remainder waste. The soil, which is chiefly chalk and gravel, is very poor. The living is a rect.* with that of Broad-mayne annexed, in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £332. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, has been recently repaired and enlarged. The charities produce about £10 per annum.

KNIGHTSBRIDGE, a demesne in co. Cork, Ireland, near Macroom.

KNIGHTSBRIDGE, a suburban district of London, partly in the par. of St. Margaret, Westminster, but chiefly in the pars. of Kensington and Chelsea, Kensington div. of the hund. of Ossulstone, co. Middlesex, near Hyde Park Corner, and 3 miles W. of St. Paul's, London. This place, anciently called Kingesbridge and Knyghtbrigg, was, until a recent date, considered dangerous for travellers approaching the metropolis by the great western road. It is now one of the most fashionable parts of the West End, containing Lowndes and Trevor squares, Wilton-crescent, Belgrave-square, and several large mansions overlooking Hyde Park. Great improvements have been effected by the removal of a large portion of the wall which formerly separated the park from the road, now protected by iron palisades, and by the erection of Rutland Gate, on the site of Rutland House. On the N. side, adjoining the park, are extensive cavalry barracks, and at the entrance from London, on the S. side of the road, is St. George's Hospital, founded in 1773, and once the seat of Lord Lanesborough. It contains also Kingston House, the Chinese Exhibition House, Archæological Association, and extensive ale brewery, &c. There are three churches—St. Paul's, a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of London, val. £1,000, in the patron. of the Rector of St. Margaret's. The church, which stands in Wilton Place, was erected in 1840, at an expense of about £15,000. It is of brick and stone, with a lofty tower, in two stories, each having a window on its sides and front, and the whole terminating in a rich embattled parapet of open work, with eight crocketted pinnacles, four of which rise from the angles. Holy Trinity is also a perpet. cur. in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Westminster. The church, which was rebuilt in 1789, originally belonged to an ancient hospital, or lazar-house, under the jurisdiction of the Abbot of Westminster. All Saints is a modern structure, erected in 1849. The Baptists have a place of worship, and there are National and charity schools.

KNIGHTSFORD, a hmlt. in the par. of Knightwick, co. Worcester, 7 miles W. of Worcester. It is situated near the bridge over the river Teme.

KNIGHTS-HILL, a hmlt. in the par. of Streatham, E. div. of the hund. of Brixton, co. Surrey, 5 miles S. of St. Paul's. It is situated near Dulwich, and was formerly the seat of Lord Chancellor Thurlow.

KNIGHT-STAINFORTH, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Stainforth and par. of Giggleswick, West Riding co. York, 3 miles N. of Settle. It is situated near the river Ribble, which here forms a cascade called South Force.

KNIGHTS-WOOD, a vil. in the par. of New Kilpatrick, co. Dumbarton, Scotland, 7 miles W. of Kirkintilloch.

KNIGHT-THORPE, a tnshp. in the par. of Loughborough, hund. of West Goscote, co. Leicester, 10 miles N.W. of Leicester. It is situated near the Loughborough canal and river Soar. [See LOUGHBOROUGH.]

KNIGHTWICK, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Oswaldslow, co. Worcester, 9 miles W. of Worcester, its post town, 5 E. of Bromyard, and 4 S.W. of Martley. The village, which is small, is situated on the S. bank of the river Teme. It contains the ext. par. place of Kenswick. The inhabitants are employed in the brick and tile works. The surface is diversified with hills, and the soil in the valleys is a rich loam. The living is a rect.* with the cur. of Doddenham annexed, in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £266, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is situated at Knightford Bridge, and was erected in 1856. The old church is still used as a burial chapel. This was the burial-place of Colonel Lane's two daughters, who assisted Charles II. in his escape from Worcester. The parochial charities produce about £8 per annum.

KNILL, a par. in the hund. of Wigmore, co. Hereford, 4 miles N.W. of Kington, its post town, 3½ S.W. of Presteign, and 23 N.W. of Hereford. It is situated near the bridge on the river Lug, at a short distance from Offa's Dyke. There is no village, only a few scattered houses. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £90. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient stone structure, with a tower crowned by a wooden spire. Sir Samuel Romilly is buried here. Knill Court is the principal residence. Sir John Walsham, Bart., is lord of the manor.

KNIPE, a hmlt. in the par. of Bampton, co. Westmoreland, 4 miles N.W. of Shap. It is situated on the river Lowther, under Knipe Scar, where talc is found.

KNIPE WATER, a trout stream in co. Lanark, Scotland, joining the Avon near Strathavon.

KNIPTON, a par. in the hund. of Framland, co. Leicester, 7 miles S.W. of Grantham, its post town, and 10 N.E. of Melton Mowbray. The village, which is small, is situated in a vale on the banks of the river Devon. Immediately above the village is the Grantham Canal reservoir, covering an area of 90 acres. Here are kennels for 60 couple of foxhounds. The surface is hilly. The tithes were commuted for land and corn-rents under an Act of Enclosure in 1797. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £295. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure, with a square, pinnacled, and embattled tower. It has recently been thoroughly restored. The parochial charities produce about £25 per annum. There is a National school, erected at the expense of the rector in 1850. There is a chapel for the Baptists. The Duke of Rutland is lord of the manor.

KNITSLEY, or CONSIDE-CUM-KNITSLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Lanchester, W. div. of Chester ward, co. Durham, 7 miles N.E. of Wolsingham, and 11 N.W. of Durham. It is a station on the Lanchester Valley branch railway.

KNIVETON, a par. in the hund. of Wirksworth, co. Derby, 3½ miles N.E. of Ashborne, its railway station and post town. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the cotton mills. Lime-burning is carried on. The land is chiefly rich pasture. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £64. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient edifice, with a low spired tower. The parochial charities produce about £11 per annum, including the endowment of Hurd's school, &c. There is a National school.

KNOCK, a tnshp. in the par. of Long Marton, East ward, co. Westmoreland, 4 miles N. of Appleby. It was formerly owned by the Boyvilles and Rookbys, from whom it passed to the Tuftons. The village is very ancient, and hence arose the saying in this part of the country, "As old as Knock Cross." To the E. of the township rise Knock Pike and Dufton Fell.

KNOCK, a post-office vil. in the par. of Kilmurry-Clonderalaw, in the bar. of Clonderalaw, co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 22 miles S.W. of Ennis, and 160 from Dublin. It is situated on Clonderalaw Bay, and on the Kilrush and Killadysert road. It contains a police station, where petty sessions are held. The dispensary in the village is within the Kilrush Poor-law Union.

KNOCK, a hmlt. in co. Banff, Scotland, 6 miles S.E. of Cullen. It is a station on the Banffshire branch of the Great North of Scotland railway. It is situated under Knock Hill, a mass of granite 2,500 feet high, from the summit of which an extensive view is obtained. On its slopes plumbago, garnets, and various crystals are found.

KNOCK, a par. in the bars. of Costello and Clanmorris, co. Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 5 miles N.E. of Clare. The roads from Clanmorris to Ballaghdireen, and from Ballyhannis to Kiltamagh intersect the interior. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Tuam, val. with Kiltullagh, £624, in the patron. of the bishop. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Aghamore. There are several hedge-schools.

KNOCK, a vil. in the par. of Belfast, co. Antrim, Ireland, 2¾ miles from Belfast, by the Belfast and County Down railway, on which it is a station.

KNOCK, a par. in the bar. of Morgallion, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles S.S.E. of Nobber, its post town. It is 1½ mile in length, and the same in breadth. It is crossed by the road from Stackallan to Nobber. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Meath, united with Drakestown, in the patron. of the crown and bishop. Donagh Hua Kirvail is the reputed founder of a priory here in 1148.

KNOCK, a quoad sacra par. in the par. of Stornoway, E. side of Lewis, Western Islands, coast of Scotland. It is situated at Airds Point, between Loch Stornoway and Broad Bay. The village is considerable, and most of the inhabitants are employed in the herring and cod fisheries. The greater part of the surface is moorland and moss. The par. is in the presb. of Lewis, and in the patron. of the crown. The church is a small modern structure. The shore is indented by a large cavern worn by the fury of the waves.

KNOCK, an ancient castle in the south-eastern portion of the Isle of Skye, co. Inverness, Scotland, 3 miles N.E. of Armadale. It is now in ruins.

KNOCK, or CNOC, signifying a hill in Celtic, is applied as a prefix to many small places and mountains in Scotland and Ireland.

KNOCKADERRY, a vil. in the par. of Clonelty, bar. of Glenquin, co. Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles E.N.E. of Newcastle. It is situated on the road from Newcastle to Ballingarry. There is a dispensary, which is within the Newcastle Poor-law Union. Knockaderry House is in the vicinity. Fairs are held on the 28th May, 9th September, 29th October, and 19th December.

KNOCKADERRY, a demesne in co. Waterford, Ireland, 5 miles N.E. of Kilmacthomas.

KNOCKADOON, a headland in Youghal Bay, co. Cork, Ireland. It is a coastguard station.

KNOCKADUN, an islet in Lough Gur, co. Limerick, Ireland. It contains ruins of an old castle of the Desmonds.

KNOCKAINY, or ANEY, a par. in the bar. of Small-County, co. Limerick, Ireland, 3 miles from Banff. It is situated on the river Commogue, near Lough Gur. It is a large and populous parish. Near the village are remains of two ancient castles, and of an abbey founded in the reign of Henry II., and known as Monaster-na-Maig. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Cashel, Emly, Waterford, and Lismore, val. with five others, £500. From Knockainy Hill an extensive view is obtained.

KNOCKALISHEEN, a hmlt. in the bar. of Glenahiry, co. Waterford, Ireland, 5 miles S. of Clonmel.

KNOCKANDO, a par. in co. Elgin, Scotland. It contains the vil. of Archieston, and the post-office station of Knockando, the latter being 7 miles S.E. of Rothes. The size of the par. is 10 miles by 2, the surface being considerably diversified with hill, glen, moorland, and mountain. It is watered by the river Spey and the burns Aldarder, Aldyoulie, and Balintomb. Much injury was done to this district by the great floods of 1829. There are several mineral springs. The chief seats are Knockando House and West Elchies House. The par. is in the presb. of Aberlour and synod of Moray. The minister's stipend is £158. The parish church, erected in 1757, was repaired in 1832. The United Presbyterians, the Free Church, and Independents have each a place of worship. Throughout the parish there are six schools, two of which are parochial. The par. includes the ancient pars. of Knockando and Macallan, and vestiges of the church of the latter place are still visible. There are several mills and two distilleries.

KNOCKANE, a par. in the bar. of Dunkerron, co. Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 7 miles N.W. of Killarney, its post town. It is over 10 miles in length and breadth, and extends between the rivers Laune and Blackwater. By far the greater portion of the surface is mountainous, and comprises the range called the M'Gillycuddy's Reeks. The parish contains districts and objects of great celebrity, noticed under their proper heads, e.g., the Lakes of Killarney. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ardfert and Aghadoe, val. £241, in the patron. of the crown. The church was built by the late Board of First Fruits in 1813. Here are a Roman Catholic chapel and three hedge-schools. Whitfield is the seat of M'Gillycuddy of the Reeks. Dunloe is another seat. Sandstone, limestone, and slate prevail among the rocks.

KNOCKANURE, a par. in the bar. of Iraghticonnor, co. Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles N.E. of Listowel, its post town. There is a good deal of bog and waste land. The river Feale flows through the S., and the road from Listowel to Rathkeale traverses the interior. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ardfert and Aghadoe, val. with Listowel, £335. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Listowel. There are two hedge-schools. Riversdale is the chief seat.

KNOCKANURE, a demesne in co. Tipperary, Ireland, near Killenaule.

KNOCKAUNHANDAUN, a hmlt. in the bar. of Upperthird, co. Waterford, Ireland, 7 miles S. of Clonmel.

KNOCKAUNYEVEEN, a vil. in the par. of Kilmina, bar. of Burrishoole, co. Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 2 miles N. of Westport.

KNOCKAVILLY, a par. in the bars. of Kinalea and East Muskerry, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles N.E. of Bandon, its post town. It is 3½ miles long by 3 broad, and lies near the rivers Bandon and Bride. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cork, val. £511, in the patron. of the bishop. There are a Protestant Sunday and a day school, also a police station in the parish. Garryhankard is the principal seat. Clay slate is abundant.

KNOCKBAIN, a par. in cos. Ross and Cromarty, Scotland. It contains the vils. of Charleston and Munlochy, and was formed in 1750 by the union of the ancient pars. of Kilmuir, Wester, and Suddy. It is so named from the church having been erected on the bleak muir of Knockbain. It is 7 miles in length and 6 in breadth, and is divided into districts by an arm of the Moray Firth or Bay of Munlochy. The surface is smooth, and rises gradually from the coast to the summit of the Mullbuy. The soil in general is good. About 3,000 acres are under tillage, and there are extensive plantations. The par. is in the presb. of Chanonry and synod of Ross, in the patron. of the crown and the Marchioness of Stafford. The minister's stipend is £233. The parish church is a commodious structure, and was enlarged some forty years ago. There is a Free church, an Episcopalian chapel, and three non-parochial schools. A battle was fought here in the 13th century between the Macdonalds and the inhabitants of Inverness.

KNOCKBRACK, one of the highest peaks of the Commeragh range of mountains, co. Waterford, Ireland, about 6 miles W. of Kilmacthomas. It attains an altitude of 2,597 feet above the sea level.

KNOCKBREDA, a par. in the bars. of Upper and Lower Castlereagh, co. Down, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, containing Ballymacarret and the vil. of Newtownbreda. Belfast is its post town. The par. is 3½ miles long by 3 broad. It is situated on the river Lagan, near Belfast Lough. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Down, val. £434. The church was built by Lady Mornington in 1747. There are two Presbyterian meeting-houses, four Sunday and eight day schools. Belvoir is the seat of Sir R. Bateson, and Castle-Reagh was the ancient seat of the O'Nials. The ruins of the old church are very interesting, occupying an elevated site. Near it are a cromlech and Danish rath. Basalt and clay slate are the prevailing rocks.

KNOCKBRIDE, a par. in the bar. of Clankee, co. Cavan, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 3 miles N.W. of Ballieborough, its post town. It is 7½ miles long, and its greatest breadth is 4 miles. The surface is boggy, and includes several loughs. The parish is crossed by the road from Dublin to Clones. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Kilmore, val. £445, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits in 1825. There are two Roman Catholic chapels, a Presbyterian and a Methodist meeting-house, also several day schools within the parish. Killaliss is the principal residence.

KNOCKCOMMON, a par. in the bar. of Lower Duleek, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles S.E. of Slane, its post town. The surface lies along the S. bank of the river Boyne. The interior is crossed by the road from Slane to Dublin. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with Duleek, £232. There is a Roman Catholic chapel united to that of Donore. Newtown is the neighbouring residence.

KNOCKCROGHERY, a vil. in the par. of Killenvoy, bar. of Athlone, co. Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 5 miles S.E. of Roscommon. There is a police station in the village. The manufacture of a short tobacco-pipe is peculiar to this place. Fairs are held on the 22nd August and 25th October.

KNOCKDOLIAN, a lofty mountain in the S. div. of co. Ayr, Scotland, 4 miles N.E. of Ballantrae. Its summit is nearly 2,000 feet above the sea-level. At its base is Knockdolian Castle.

KNOCKENTIBER, a vil. in the par. of Kilmaurs, co. Ayr, Scotland, 2 miles N.W. of Kilmarnock. It is situated near the river Carmel, called also Kilmaurs Water.

KNOCKGARRA, a vil. in the par. of Kinvarradooras, in the bar. of Kiltartan, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 3 miles N.N.W. of Kinvarra.

KNOCKGRAFFON, a par. in the bar. of Middlethird, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles S. of Cashel. Cahir is its post town. The par. is 4 miles long, and its greatest breadth is 3 miles. It contains the vil. of New-Inn. The surface lies along the E. bank of the river Suir. It is crossed by the road from Cashel to Cahir. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cashel, val. with another, £616. The church was built by the parishioners in 1788. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Doggstown. There are seven day schools. The Moat is an object of great interest, crowning the summit of a hill, and near it are ruins said to be the remains of a seat of the kings of Munster, built in 1108.

KNOCKHOLT, a par. in the hund. of Ruxley, lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, co. Kent, 5 miles N.W. of Sevenoaks, its post town, and 9 S.E. of Bromley. The village is situated on an eminence, and has a group of trees called the Knockholt Beeches, which may be seen from Blackheath, Harrow, &c. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £120, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church is an ancient stone and flint building, with a tower containing a clock and two bells. It contains a painted window representing the Crucifixion. The register dates from 1548. The parochial charities produce about £10 per annum. There is a school for both sexes, endowed with £50 a year by the late Miss Thrale. The same lady was donor of £100, of which £25 per annum was to be given the incumbent. There is a place of worship for the Wesleyans.

KNOCKIN, a par. in the hund. of Lower Oswestry, co. Salop, 6 miles S.E. of Oswestry. It is situated on a branch of the river Severn, and includes the ext. par. place called Heath Farm. There are some remains of a strong castle founded here by the family of L'Estrange, who possessed the manor in the reign of Henry II. and Henry III. In the latter reign Madoc, a Welsh nobleman, headed an insurrection, and defeated Lord Strange at "Cnukyn," as this place was anciently called. The village, now a small agricultural place, was once a market town. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £328. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £330. The church is an ancient structure, dedicated to St. Mary. The principal residence is Knockin Hall, the seat of the Hon. Captain Bridgeman, R.N.

KNOCKINNY, a bar. in co. Fermanagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. It is bounded by Glenawley, Upper Lough Erne, and co. Cavan. Its length is 8 miles, and its breadth 5. It contains parts of the pars. of Galloon, Kinawley, and Tomregan. Part of Upper Lough Erne is comprised within the limits of this barony.

KNOCKLADE, a lofty mountain in co. Antrim, Ireland, 2 miles S. of Ballycastle. From its summit, which attains an altitude of 1,685 feet above the sea-level, a view is commanded, including the ruins of Bona Margy Abbey, the burial-place of the M'Donnels.

KNOCKLONG, or DOONEMORE, a par. in the bar. of Coshlea, co. Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles N.N.E. of Kilmallock. Bruff is its post town. It is a station on the Great Southern and Western railway. The par. is 3 miles long by 2 broad, and contains the vil. of Baheen. The surface consists principally of good soil, and is drained towards the N. by the stream Morning Star. It is crossed by the road from Tipperary to Kilmallock. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Emly, united with Knockaine. There are a Roman Catholic chapel and two hedge-schools. Castle Jane is the principal residence. There are remains of the castles belonging to the families of O'Hurley, Lowe, and Clangibbon. Fairs are held on the 23rd May and 1st October.

KNOCKMAHON, a vil. in the par. of Monksland, in the bar. of Decies-without-Drum, co. Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 1 mile E.N.E. of Bunmahon. It is situated near the coast, and gives name to, perhaps, the most extensive and prolific copper mines in Ireland. Between 7,000 and 8,000 tons of ore are annually shipped from this place, worth £7 to £8 per ton.

KNOCKMARK, a par. in the bar. of Lower Deece, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles W. of Dunshaughlin, its post town. The par. is 3 miles long, and its greatest breadth is 1½ mile. The soil is mostly good. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with two others, £291, in the patron. of the crown. The church was built by the late Board of First Fruits in 1819. There are two day schools. Warrenstown is the chief mansion.

KNOCKMELEDOWN, a range of barren mountains on the borders of cos. Tipperary and Waterford, Ireland, rising to the height of 2,609 feet above the sea-level at the highest point.

KNOCKMOURNE, a par. in the bars. of Barrymore, Condons, and Kinnatalloon, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 8 miles E. of Rathcormack. It is 4 miles long by 2½ broad, and contains Conna, its post town. The road from Lyons to Tallow traverses the parish. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Cloyne, val. £425, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built in 1815. There is a Roman Catholic chapel, also National and hedge schools. Building stone and limestone are abundant.

KNOCKMOY. See ABBEY KNOCKMOY, co. Galway, Ireland.

KNOCKMOYLE, a cluster of small loughs in co. Mayo, Ireland, about 8 miles N.W. of Crossmolina.

KNOCKMUILAN, or KNOCKWILLIAM, a vil. in the bar. of Knocktopher, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles S. of Thomastown.

KNOCKNACOPPUL, or KNOCKACAPPUL, a vil. in the par. of Killaha, in the bar. of Magonihy, co. Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 11 miles E. of Killarney. It contains a post office and a dispensary, which is within the Killarney Poor-law Union.

KNOCKNAFALLIA, a lofty mountain in co. Waterford, Ireland, 6 miles N.E. of Lismore. It is one of the loftiest summits of the Knockmeledown chain, attaining an altitude of 2,200 feet above the sea level.

KNOCKNAGAUL, a par. in the bar. of Pubblebrien, co. Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles S. of Limerick, its post town. It is 2½ miles long by 1 mile broad. The soil is good, and the road from Limerick to Fedamore crosses the parish. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Limerick, val. with Kilpeacon, £263, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is in ruins. Leamonfield is the chief seat in the parish.

KNOCKNAMOYLE, a hmlt. in the bar. of East Idrone, co. Carlow, Ireland, 5 miles E. of Borris.

KNOCKNAMULREE, a lofty mountain in the S. part. of co. Mayo, Ireland, 10 miles S. of Louisburgh. It attains an altitude of 2,688 feet above the sea level, and gives name to the bay.

KNOCKNINNY, a bar. in co. Fermanagh. See KNOCKINNY.

KNOCKRAPA, a hmlt. in the bar. of Barrymore, co. Cork, Ireland, 4 miles S. of Watergrassmill.

KNOCKRATH, a par. in the bars. of North and South Ballinacor, co. Wicklow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles N.W. of Rathdrum, its post town. The parish is of large extent. The surface is mountainous, and possesses much fine scenery. The living is united with that of Rathdrum. There is a Roman Catholic chapel. In Clara Vale are the remains of an old castle.

KNOCKSHOGGLEHOLM, a vil. in the par. of Coylton, co. Ayr, Scotland, 5 miles E. of Ayr. It is situated on Coylton Water, near the river Doon.

KNOCKSIMON, a hmlt. in the bar. of Tarbill, co. Westmeath, Ireland, 4 miles N.W. of Koinegad.

KNOCKTEMPLE, a par. in the bar. of Duhallow, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 7 miles N. of Kanturk. Charleville is its post town. It is 2 miles long by 1½ mile broad, and contains the vil. of Freemount. The road from Newmarket to Charleville crosses the parish, which is also intersected by the river Allua. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cloyne, val. with another, £193, in the patron. of the bishop. There are a Roman Catholic chapel and two day schools. Castle Ishen is the demesne of Sir J. Fitzgerald, Bart.

KNOCKTOPHER, a bar. in co. Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It is environed by Shillelogher, Gowran, Ida, Iverk, and Kells. Its greatest length is 12 miles, and its breadth 7 miles. It contains the pars. of Aghaviller, Derrynahinch, Jerpointchurch, Kilpeacon, Kilkeasy, Killahy, Knocktopher, Lismateige, and parts of Dunnamaggan, Ennisnag, Fiddown, Jerpoint-West, Lislerlin, Muckalee, Rossinan, and Stonecarthy.

KNOCKTOPHER, a par. and post town in the bar. of its own name, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 12 miles S. of Kilkenny, and 78 from Dublin. The par. is 3½ miles long by 2½ broad. The surface is traversed by the road from Stonyford to Waterford. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ossory, val. with others, £510, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits in 1826. There are a Roman Catholic chapel and several day schools. Knocktopher House is the seat of Sir R. Langrishe, Bart. The town is a poor place, containing a decayed market house. It was once a place of no small importance, and a quondam parliamentary borough. There are a police station and a dispensary, which latter is within the Callan Poor-law Union. The town and vicinity anciently belonged to the Ormondes, who built Knocktopher Castle, which was dismantled by Cromwell in 1649. A Carmelite friary was also founded by this family in 1356, which, at the Dissolution, was granted to the Barnewell and White families. Fairs were formerly held on Easter Tuesday and St. Bartholomew's Day.

KNODISHALL, or KNODISHALL-CUM-BUXLOW, a par. in the hund. of Blything, co. Suffolk, 3½ miles S.E. of Saxmundham, and 4½ N.W. of Aldborough. Leiston is its post town. The village, which is small and scattered, is situated near the coast. It contains the separate parish of Buxlow. The soil is generally a rich loam, but towards the coast it is of a lighter nature. The living is a rect. with the cur. of Buxlow annexed, in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £486. The church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, is an ancient structure, with a flint tower containing one bell. In the interior is a brass to J. Jenny and wives, bearing date 1460. The register dates from 1566. About 1 mile from the church is the small village of Coldfair Green.

KNOLLHOUSE, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Sparkenhoe, co. Leicester, 6 miles N.E. of Hinckley.

KNOLLHOUSE, a moor in co. Lancaster, 4 miles N.W. of Rochdale.

KNOLTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Overton, co. Flint, 5 miles E. of Chirk.

KNOOK, a par. in the hund. of Heytesbury, co. Wilts, 1 mile S.E. of Heytesbury, its post town, and 5 S.E. of Warminster. The parish is situated on the road from Bath to Salisbury. The village is small, but neatly built. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1792. About 2 miles N. of Heytesbury is Knook Castle, an earthwork, and near to it the Old Ditch, which extends from Westbury Leigh to Durnford, on the river Avon. On Knock Down are the sites of two vils. formerly connected by the Old Ditch. The living is a perpet. cur., usually held with that of Heytesbury, in the dioc. of Sarum. The church is dedicated to St. Margaret.

KNOSSINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Gartree, co. Leicester, 4 miles S.W. of Oakham, its railway station and post town, and 16 E. of Leicester. The village is small, and wholly agricultural. It is a meet for the Cottesmore hounds. The surface is very hilly, and the soil sandy. The land is chiefly in pasture. The lowlands are watered by a rivulet called the Gnash, which has its source in the parish. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £324. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a stone structure of considerable antiquity, with a modern tower containing two bells. The parochial charities produce about £176 per annum, of which £171 goes to Smith's hospital for four poor clergymen's widows. This institution had fallen into disuse, but was revived in 1802, under an order in Chancery, and a handsome building of brick erected at an expense of £1,096. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. There is a school supported by voluntary subscriptions.

KNOSTROP, a vil. in the tnshp. and borough of Leeds, West Riding co. York, 1½ mile S.E. of Leeds. It is situated on the river Aire.

KNOTTING, a par. in the hund. of Stodden, co. Bedford, 2 miles N. of Sharnbrook, its post town, 10 N. of Bedford, and 4½ S.E. of Higham Ferrers. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. The land is partly in common and wood. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £319 18*s*. The living is a rect.* united with that of Souldrop, in the dioc. of Ely, joint val. £275. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, is a small edifice with a square tower. The Duke of Bedford is lord of the manor.

KNOTTINGLEY, a parochial chplry. in the par. of Pontefract, West Riding co. York, 2 miles N.E. of Pontefract, and 13 from Leeds. It is a station on the Pontefract and Goole branch of the Lancashire and Yorkshire railway. The village, which is very considerable, is situated near the river Aire and the Calder canal. The principal trade is in malting and tanning; there are also several corn mills and factories. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of York, val. £129, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately. The church is dedicated to St. Botolph. There are places of worship for Dissenters, also National and Sunday schools.

KNOTT-LANES, formerly a district in the par. of Ashton-under-Lyne, hund. of Salford, co. Lancaster, 5 miles N.E. of Manchester. It contains the hmlts. of Woodpark, Knott-Lanes, Cross Bank, Alt-Edge, and Lees, and the vils. of Taunton, Waterloo, Hey, and Bardsley. This last-named place has greatly increased within the last twenty years, and is now a market town, with many good streets, which are well paved and lighted with gas. The rapid increase of this place is mainly owing to the extensive business done in the cotton manufactures, which afford employment to most of the inhabitants. It has a district parish church, and chapels for Wesleyans, Primitive and New Connexion Methodists, and several excellent schools. There are churches at Hey and Bardsley. The People's Hall was erected in 1850, in which balls, concerts, and public meetings are held. The Literary and Scientific associations also meet in this building. Near Bardsley House is an oak tree which at 2 feet from the ground measures over 16 feet in circumference, while its branches extend over an area of nearly 14,000 square yards.

KNOTTY ASH, a vil. within the borough of Liverpool, hund. of West Derby, co. Lancaster, 3 miles E. of Liverpool.

KNOTTY GREEN, a hmlt. in the par. of Beaconsfield, hund. of Barnham, co. Bucks, 6 miles from Slough.

KNOWBURY, a colliery vil. and ecclesiastical district in the hund. of Munslow, co. Salop, 4 miles E. of Ludlow, and 24 S.E. of Shrewsbury. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £100, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is a modern edifice dedicated to St. Paul.

KNOWE, a post-office vil. in the par. of Penninghame, co. Wigton, Scotland, 7 miles N. of Wigton, and 2 from Newton Stewart.

KNOWLE, a tythg. in the par. and hund. of Buckland Newton, Cerne div. of co. Dorset, 3 miles N.E. of Cerne-Abbas, and 2 N.E. of Buckland Newton. It is united with Brockhampton to form a township.

KNOWLE, a tythg. in the par. of Buckland Newton, co. Dorset, 3 miles N.E. of Cerne-Abbas.

KNOWLE, a tythg. in the par. of Bedminster, co. Somerset, 2 miles S.W. of Bristol.

KNOWLE, a tythg. in the par. of Chew Magna, co. Somerset, 5 miles S. of Bristol. It is joined with Knighton Sutton.

KNOWLE, a tythg. in the par. of Long Sutton, co. Somerset, 4 miles N.W. of Ilchester.

KNOWLE, a hmlt. in the par. of Keighley, wap. of East Staincliff, West Riding co. York, 3 miles from Keighley, and 35 W. of York.

KNOWLE, a hmlt. in the par. of Selworthy, co. Somerset, 3 miles W. of Minchead.

KNOWLE, a chplry. in the par. of Hampton-in-Arden, Solihull div. of the hund. of Hemlingford, co. Warwick, 10 miles from Birmingham, its post town, 2½ S.E. of Solihull, and 1½ mile from the Knowle station, on the Birmingham railway. The village stands on an eminence near the Birmingham and Warwick canal. The manor was formerly held by Queen Eleanor, and subsequently by Westminster Abbey. Petty sessions for the division are held here during the winter months, in conjunction with Solihull. The impropriation belongs to Leicester's Hospital, at Warwick. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £112. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is an ancient structure. It had once a chantry, founded by Walter Cook, a priest, in the reign of Richard II. In the interior are wall-paintings, sculptured stalls, and stone seats. There is an endowed school for both sexes, founded by the Hon. Algernon Greville; and one for the education and clothing of boys for three years, by the Hon. Mrs. Sarah Greville, in 1720. There are various benefactions for the poor, the principal of which is by Fulk Greville, Esq., in 1742. Colonel Unett is lord of the manor.

KNOWLE, a tythg. in the par. and hund. of Crediton, co. Devon, 2 miles N.W. of Crediton. The village is considerable. It was formerly the seat of Colonel Montague, whose collection of birds is now in the British Museum.

KNOWLE, GREAT and LITTLE, hmlts. in the par. of East Budleigh, co. Devon, 4 miles S.W. of Sidmouth.

KNOWL-END, a tnshp. in the par. of Audley, N. div. of the hund. of Pirehill, co. Stafford, 1 mile S.W. of Audley, and 4 N.W. of Newcastle-under-Lyme. It is situated on the summit of a rock, and contains the hmlt. of Shaley-Brook. There are remains of Heley Castle, formerly the seat of the lords Audley. There is a chapel for Wesleyans.

KNOWLE PARK, a demesne near Sevenoaks, co. Kent. The park, which is 6 miles in circumference, is shaded by oaks and beeches, and is well stocked with deer. The mansion, which is built in the form of a quadrangle, covers 5 acres, and is in various styles of architecture, having been commenced by the Marshalls, earls of Pembroke, continued by the Bourchiers, and completed by the Sackvilles, in the reign of James I. It comprises a lofty gatehouse, grand hall, state bedroom of James I., and an oak gallery of paintings by the best masters, including paintings by Correggio, Rembrandt, Teniers, and Titian, portraits by Holbein, Jarvis, Kneller, Lely, Reynolds, Mytens, and Vandyck; also copies of the cartoons by Mytens, and a classic statue of Demosthenes found in Campania. It has been the residence of some of the most distinguished historic personages, including the Marshalls and Bigods, of Cranmer, who resigned it to Henry VIII., of the Protector Somerset, of Dudley Duke of Northumberland, of Cardinal Pole, of Dudley Earl of Leicester, and in recent times of the dukes of Dorset. It is now the seat of the Dowager Countess of Plymouth.

KNOWLE ST. GILES, a par. in the hund. of South Petherton, co. Somerset, 3 miles S.W. of Ilminster. Chard is its post town. The village is small, and wholly agricultural. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £72, in the patron. of the Bishop of London. The church, dedicated to St. Giles, is a plain structure with a turret containing two bells. Earl Poulett is lord of the manor and chief landowner.

KNOWL HILL, a vil. and ecclesiastical district in the par. of Hurley, co. Berks, 4 miles S.W. of Maidenhead. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Oxford, and patron. of the Vicar of Hurley. There is also a small place of the same name in co. Surrey, about 4 miles E. of Guildford.

KNOWLS, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Fixby and par. of Halifax, West Riding co. York, 4 miles S.E. of Halifax, and 2 N. of Huddersfield.

KNOWLTON, a hund. in the East Shaston div. of co. Dorset, contains the pars. of Long Critchill, Gussage, All Saints, and Woodlands.

KNOWLTON, a hmlt. in the hund. of the same name, co. Dorset, 3 miles S.W. of Cranborne, and 36 N.E. of Dorchester.

KNOWLTON, a par. in the hund. of Eastry, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, 5 miles S.W. of Sandwich, 10 S.E. of Canterbury, and the same distance N.W. of Dover. Wingham is its post town. It is a very small parish, and the soil is chiefly chalk. There is no village. The manor formerly belonged to Sir Cloudesley Shovell, to whom it came by marriage with the widow of Sir John Harborough, whose two sons were drowned with Sir Cloudesley when his vessel was wrecked off the Scilly Isles. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £150. The church is a small edifice, dedicated to St. Clement. The principal residence is Knowlton Park, the seat of Admiral G. W. H. D'Aeth. It has an extensive and well wooded park, comprising an area of above 300 acres.

KNOWSLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Huyton, hund. of West Derby, co. Lancaster, 3 miles N.W. of Prescot, its post town, and 2½ N. of the Huyton railway station. The village is considerable. Nearly two-thirds of the parish are woodland and park ground surrounding Knowsley House, which, since the injury that Latham House sustained in the parliamentary war, has been the principal residence of the earls of Derby. The mansion is a spacious structure of stone with two circular towers, and contains a magnificent gallery of paintings by the first Italian and Flemish masters, also a fine collection of family portraits, including Thomas, the first earl, and father-in-law to Henry VII., whom he accompanied to the battle of Bosworth. It has undergone numerous additions since the visit of Henry VII. to his mother, the Countess of Derby, and was thoroughly restored in 1735 by William, the tenth earl. This noble mansion is open to visitors on certain days. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lancaster, val. £300. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a modern structure, with a tower crowned by a spire, and containing a clock and one bell. There are National and infant schools, wholly supported by the Earl of Derby.

KNOWSTONE, a par. in the hund. of South Molton, co. Devon, 9 miles S.E. of South Molton, and 13 N.W. of Tiverton. The village, which is small, is situated on rising ground. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The soil is clayey, and subsoil rock. The living is a vic. annexed to that of Molland. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient structure, with a square embattled tower containing three bells. The interior of the church contains an altar window, a plain Norman doorway, and several monuments. The parochial charities produce about £3 10s. per annum.

Sir Robert George Throckmorton, Bart., is lord of the manor.

KNOYLE, EAST, a par. in the hund. of Downton, co. Wilts, 2 miles S. of Hindon, its post town, 5 N. of Shaftesbury, and 18 S.W. of Salisbury. The parish is wholly agricultural. From the pureness and mildness of its atmosphere, it is esteemed one of the most healthy villages in the S. of England. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £910. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £851, in the patron. of the Bishop of Winchester. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient cruciform structure, with a square embattled tower containing six bells. The nave has been rebuilt. The register dates from 1538. Sir Christopher Wren's father was rector of this parish. The Congregationalists and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. There is a National school for both sexes. The Bishop of Winchester is lord of the manor.

KNOYLE, WEST, a par. in the hund. of Mere, co. Wilts, 4 miles W. of Hindon, its post town, 3 E. of Mere, and 6 N. of Shaftesbury. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. The land is chiefly arable, with some pasture, and about 150 acres of wood and copse. The parish is situated on the confines of the chalk downs. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £418. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Sarum, in the patron. of the Bishop of Salisbury. The church has a pinnacled tower containing five bells. There is a charity of £16 per annum for four poor widows who have not received parochial relief. There is a National school, with a library. Sir Hugh Hoare, of Stourhead, is lord of the manor, and owner of the land.

KNUCKLAS, a hmlt. in the par. of Irchester, co. Northampton, 2 miles S.W. of Higham Ferrers.

KNUCKLASS, or CNWCLAS, a municipal and parliamentary borough in the pars. of Beguildy and Heyop, co. Radnor, 2 miles N. of Knighton. It is a crown manor, and had formerly a castle of the Mortimers, built in 1242. Although but a small village, situated on the river Teme, which rises a few miles distant, at the foot of Fynnon-menyn, it has the privileges of a borough, and is governed by a bailiff, burgesses, and other officers. It is a contributory borough to Radnor, in returning one member to parliament. In the vicinity is Dol-y-Felin, an old seat of the Richardses. Vavasour Powell, the Nonconformist preacher, was born here. The surrounding country is hilly and barren, part being an extensive common.

KNUTSFORD, a par. and market town in the hund. of Bucklow, co. Chester, 25 miles N.E. of Chester, and 172 from London. This place, which is of great antiquity, is situated on the banks of a small stream, over which Canute the Dane is said to have passed with his army for the conquest of the northern parts of the kingdom in the reign of Ethelred; hence its name of Canute's or Cnut's ford. It is a station on a section of the Cheshire Midland railway. The town consists principally of two good streets, which are well paved, and lighted with gas. It contains a townhall, sessions-house, market-house, working man's library, bank, savings-bank, house of correction, and poorhouse. The Cheshire quarter sessions at Midsummer and Michaelmas are held in the town. Cotton, thread, worsted, and leather are manufactured. There is also a large iron foundry. The environs are adorned with villas, and near the town is a racecourse. The Trent and Mersey canal passes within 5 miles of the town, which is a polling place, and the place of election for the northern division of the shire. Constables and other officers are appointed at the court-leet of the lord of the manor, who also holds a court-baron. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Chester, val. £225, in the patron. of the lords of certain manors alternately. The parish church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is a brick and stone structure, erected in 1744. There are also two district churches at Cross Town and Toft, the livings of both which are perpet. curs.,* val. respectively £60 and £30. The Independents, Wesleyans, Unitarians, Baptists, and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. There are free grammar, parochial, and infant schools. Norbury Booths Hall is the principal residence. Market day is Saturday. Fairs are held on 23rd April, Whit-Tuesday, and 8th November.

KNUTSFORD, INFERIOR and SUPERIOR, tnshps. in the par. of Knutsford, co. Chester, 2 miles from Knutsford.

KNUTTON, a vil. and tnshp. in the par. of Wolstanton, N. div. of the hund. of Pirehill, co. Stafford, 1 mile N. of Newcastle-under-Lyme, its post town, and 3 miles S.W. of Tunstall. The village, which is considerable, is much scattered. The township includes Knutton Heath, lately an open common, and abounds with ironstone. There are extensive collieries and iron works, which give employment to the inhabitants. The Primitive Methodists have a meeting-house. The Newcastle races are run on the outskirts of Knutton Heath.

KNYPERSLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Biddulph, co. Stafford, 5 miles W. of Leek.

KOOMB, or NEAVE, an islet off the coast of co. Sutherland, Scotland.

KYLE, a district in the co. Ayr, Scotland. It contains the pars. of Ayr, Auchinleck, Coylton, Craigie, Dalmellington, Dalrymple, Dundonald, Galston, Mauchline, Monkton, Muirkirk, New Cumnock, Newton, Ochiltree, Old Cumnock, Riccarton, St. Quivox, Sorn, Stair, Symington, and Tarbolton. The whole of the district is in the presb. of Ayr.

KYLE, a par. in the bar. of Clandonagh, Queen's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles W.N.W. of Borris-in-Ossory. The par. is about 3½ miles in length, and the same in breadth. The surface, which is boggy, is traversed by the road from Dublin to Limerick. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Killaloe, val. with Roscrea, £466, in the patron. of the bishop. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Roscrea. There are two day schools. Kyle House and Kilmartin Lodge are the chief residences.

KYLE, a hmlt. and the seat of a post-office in the par. of Kilpatrick, bar. of East Shelmaliere, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles N.N.W. of Wexford. It is situated on the road from Wexford to Dublin. In the vicinity is Kyle House, with its model cottage gardens; and nearer to the banks of the Slaney river are ruins of Deeps Castle.

KYLE, a vil. in the par. of Ballaghkeen, co. Wexford, Ireland, 3 miles from Oulart, and 13 N.E. of Wexford.

KYLE, a vil. on Loch Alsh, co. Ross, Scotland. It is situated at the ferry opposite Kylehaken.

KYLEAKIN, a vil. in the par. of Strath, co. Inverness, Scotland, near Moil Castle. It is situated in the S.E. part of the Isle of Skye, at the new ferry over Loch Alsh. The village was founded by Lord Dundonald.

KYLEMORE, a river and lough in the western part of co. Galway, Ireland, 8 miles N.E. of Clifden. The river takes its rise in the lough, and falls into Ballinakill Bay, after flowing through a fine pass of 3 miles.

KYLES OF BUTE, a passage between cos. Argyle and Bute, with good anchorage.

KYLOE, a par. in the div. of Islandshire, co. Northumberland, formerly in Durham, 9 miles S.E. of Berwick, its post town, and 2½ from the Beal station on the North-Eastern line. It is situated near the coast, and contains the tnshps. of Beal, Berrington, Buckton, Fenwick, and Kyloe. Coal and limestone abound. The parish has much moor, cliff, and woodland. The inhabitants are principally engaged in agriculture, and live in small hamlets far apart from each other, attached to the different farmhouses. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £138, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church is a plain stone edifice, with a square embattled tower containing one bell. It was rebuilt in 1792, but the dedication is unknown. This is a meet for Lord Elcho's hounds. Kyloe House is the principal residence. From the hill on which the church stands is a view from Berwick Bay to Holy Island and the Farn Islands.

KYLYRUCK, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanfair Caereinion, co. Montgomery, 3 miles from Llanfair.

KYM, a feeder of the river Ouse rising on the borders of Beds.

KYME, SOUTH, a par. in the wap. of Ashwardhurn, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 9 miles N.E. of Sleaford, its post town, and 9 S.W. of Tattershall. It is situated on the Sleaford canal, and contains the tnshp. of North Kyme. A priory was founded here in the reign of Henry II., by Philip de Kyme. At the Dissolution it was valued at £138 4*s.* 9*d., and was given by Henry VIII. to Sir George Talbois, whose wife was mistress to the king. An Act was obtained in 1840 for the more effectual draining of the lands. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £99. The church, dedicated to All Saints, originally formed part of the ancient priory, and was larger than at present, part having been taken down in 1805. The register commences in 1541. There is a Church school. The Hon. C. H. Cust is lord of the manor and principal landowner. It anciently gave the title of baron to the Kyme family, who were barons by tenure and writ in the reign of Stephen, and had a seat here mentioned by Leland as a "goodly house and park," of which only the tower now remains.

KYMIN, a hill on the river Wye, in co. Monmouth, 2 miles E. of Monmouth. It commands a view over ten counties, and has a pavilion and naval temple.

KYNANCE COVE, on the W. coast of Cornwall, 1 mile N.W. of Lizards Point.

KYNASTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Kinnerley, co. Salop, 7 miles S.E. of Oswestry.

KYNASTONE, a tnshp. in the par. of Hentland, co. Hereford, 4 miles N.W. of Ross. It is situated on the bank of the river Wye.

KYO, a tnshp. in the par. of Lanchester, W. div. of Chester ward, co. Durham, 9 miles N.W. of Durham. It is situated on the Stanhope railway. The village is considerable.

KYPE, a tributary of the river Avon, rises in the par. of Lesmahagow, co. Lanark, Scotland.

KYRE, GREAT, or KYRE-WYARD, a par. in the hund. of Upper Doddingtree, co. Worcester, 4 miles S.E. of Tenbury, its post town, 3 N.E. of Bockleton, and 7 N.W. of Bromyard. The par. is small and wholly agricultural. The village stands on the road from Tenbury to Bromyard. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £170. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £170. The church is an ancient structure, dedicated to St. Mary. There are almshouses for eight widows from eight adjoining parishes, who each receive 2*s.* 6*d.* weekly, with coal and clothing.

KYRE, LITTLE, a hmlt. in the par. of Stoke Bliss, hund. of Upper Doddingtree, co. Worcester, 1 mile S.E. of Great Kyre, and 5 S.E. of Tenbury.

KYREWOOD, a hmlt. in the par. of Tenbury, upper div. of the hund. of Doddingtree, co. Worcester, 2 miles S. of Tenbury.

KYTES HARDWICK, a hmlt. in the par. of Leamington Hastings, co. Warwick, 5 miles S.W. of Rugby.

L.

LABACH, a feeder of the river Mague, in co. Limerick, Ireland. It rises in the bar. of Coshlea.

LABASHEEDA, a vil. in the par. of Killofin, in the bar. of Clonderalaw, co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 6 miles S.W. of Kildysert. It is situated on the road to Kilrush, and at the mouth of the Shannon, where the ferry crosses to Tarbert. There is a police station, and a Roman Catholic chapel in the neighbourhood. A considerable corn trade is carried on.

LABOURNE, a tythg. in the par. and hund. of Godalming, co. Surrey, 1 mile from the town of Godalming, and 4 S.W. of Guildford. It is situated in a hollow near the river Wye and the South-Western railway.

LACEBY, a par. in the wap. of Bradley, wap. of Haverstoe, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 4 miles S.W. of Great Grimsby, its railway station and post town. The village, which is within the limits of the borough of Great Grimsby, is chiefly agricultural. It is the kennelling place of the Laceby harriers. There are a flour mill and steam printing works. Two-thirds of the land is arable, the remainder pasture and woodland. The surface is varied with hill and dale, and the soil very fertile. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £530. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £530. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, has a square tower containing four bells. The interior of the church was restored and reseated with open benches in 1850. The chancel contains a monument to W. Laude, bearing date 1424. The register dates from 1535; there is also a register of the 12th century. Archbishop Whitgift was once rector of this parish. The charities produce £100 per annum, chiefly the endowment of a free school founded by Philip and Sarah Stanford in 1712. The school is open to children of the parishes of Laceby, Bradley, and Barnoldby-le-Beck. The inhabitants have the privilege of attending the Humberstone grammar school. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. A statute fair for hiring servants is held in May.

LACH DENNIS, a tnshp. in the par. of Great Budworth, hund. of Northwich, co. Chester, 3½ miles S.E. of Northwich. There is no village.

LACHLAN, a castle in co. Argyle, Scotland, 10 miles S.W. of Inverary. It is situated on the shore of Loch Fyne, and is the ancient seat of the Maclachlans.

LACK, a vil. in the par. of Magheraculmoney, in the bar. of Lurg, co. Fermanagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 5 miles E.N.E. of Kesh.

LACKAGH, a par. in the bar. of Offaly West, co. Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles W. of Kildare, its post town. It is 7½ miles long, and its greatest breadth is 2½. The surface comprises a considerable proportion of bog. The parish is crossed by the Grand Canal, and is touched on the W. by the river Barrow. The Dublin and Limerick road passes through the parish. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Kildare, val. with another, £265, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was rebuilt in 1835. There are two day schools. Mount Rice was built by the Rice family. There are ruins of a castle of the Fitzgeralds.

LACKAGH, a par. in the bar. of Clare, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 7 miles N.E. of Galway, its post town. It is 4½ miles long and the same broad in some places. The surface is flat, and the soil poor. Part of Turloughmore and the river Clare are within the limits. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Tuam, val. with Annaghdown, £323, in the patron. of the bishop. There are a Roman Catholic chapel and four private day schools. Deer-Park Lodge is the principal residence. In 1504 Knocktuadh, in this parish, was the scene of a battle between the Earl of Kildare and Mac William of Clanricarde and others, when the latter were defeated with much bloodshed.

LACKAN, a par. in the bar. of Tirawley, co. Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 5 miles N.N.W. of Killala, its post town. It is 3½ miles long, and its greatest breadth 2½. The surface is flat and uninteresting. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Killala, val. with others, £198, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is old. There are a Roman Catholic chapel, a National and a private day school. Castle Lackan is the principal mansion. Lackan Bay, which is sheltered on the E. by Kilcummin Head, is a coastguard station.

LACKAN, or LECKEN, a par. in the bar. of Corkaree, co. Westmeath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles W.N.W. of Multyfarnham. Mullingar is its post town. It is 3 miles long by 2 broad at the widest. The surface lies between loughs Derravaragh and Iron. The river Inny traces the N. boundary. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with Leyny, £67. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Multyfarnham. Here is a hedge-school. Wilson's Hospital, for the education of 160 Protestant boys, is a handsome modern structure.

LACKANALOOHA, a vil. in the par. of Mallow, in the bar. of Fermoy, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, not far from Mallow.

LACKEEN, a par. in the bars. of Orrery and Kilmore, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 7 miles S.W. of Charleville, its post town. The parish is of small extent. The living is a suspended rect. in the dioc. of Cloyne, in the patron. of the bishop. There are ruins of the old church.

LACKEN, a vil. in the par. of Kilbeg, in the bar. of Lower Talbotstown, co. Wicklow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland.

LACKENBY, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Wilton, par. of Kirk Leetham, North Riding of co. York, 4 miles N.W. of Guisbrough.

LACKFORD, a hund. in co. Suffolk, contains the pars. of Barton-Mills, Brandon, Cavenham, Downham-Santon, Elveden, Eriswell, Exning, Freckenham, Herringswell, Icklingham, Lakenheath, Mildenhall, Newmarket St. Mary, Tuddenham, Wangford, Worlington, and part of St. Cuthbert, comprising 79,800 acres.

LACKFORD, a par. in the hund. of Thingoe, co. Suffolk, 6 miles N.W. of Bury St. Edmund's, its post town. The village, which is small, is situated near the river Lark. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. In the neighbourhood are rabbit warrens. The soil is light and sandy, with subsoil clay. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £271. The church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, is a small thatched structure, with a tower containing one bell. The charities produce about £13 per annum. There are partly endowed day and Sunday schools.

LACKINGTON, WHITE, a par. in the hund. of Abdick and Bulstone, co. Somerset, 1½ mile N.E. of Ilminster, its post town. The parish, which is of small extent, is situated on the Ilchester road, and E. of the Chard canal. It comprises the hmlts. of Atherstone, Silvinch, Hurcote, and Clangers Hermitage. There are several quarries of stone, used for building and for burning into lime. The soil is fertile. The prebendal tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £288, and the vicarial for £220. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £230, in the patron. of the Bishop of Bath and Wells. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure, with a square embattled tower. There is a parochial school, supported by voluntary contributions. The charities produce £100 per annum, the bequest of Miss Gyllett.

LACOCK. See LAYCOCK, co. Wilts.

LACON, a tnshp. in the par. of Wem, hund. of North Bradford, co. Salop, 2½ miles N.E. of Wem.

LACY-GREEN, a chplry. in the par. of Prince's Risborough, hund. of Aylesbury, co. Bucks, 3 miles S.E. of Great Missenden.

LADBROOKE, a par. in the S. div. of the hund. of Knightlow, co. Warwick, 2 miles S. of Southam, its post town, and 1½ mile from the Southam Road and Harbury railway stations. The village, which is small, is situated on the road from Oxford to Coventry. The parish is within the jurisdiction of the county court of Southam. It contains the ext. par. places of Upper and Lower Hodnel, Upper and Lower Radbourn, and Watergall. The Oxford and Coventry and the Warwick and Knapton canals pass within 2 miles of the village. Limestone is quarried for building and for burning into lime. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £438 5*s*. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £441. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure, with a tower surmounted by a lofty spire, and containing four bells. The church has a very handsome silver-gilt communion service presented by Lady Alicia Dudley in 1638. The chancel contains several tombs of the Palmer family. The parochial charities produce about £42 per annum. William Palmer Morewood, Esq., is lord of the manor.

LADHILL GATE, a district in the tnshps. of Bilsdale and Hawnby, North Riding co. York, 5 miles N.W. of Helmsley.

LADHOPE, a quoad sacra par. in the par. of Melrose, co. Roxburgh, Scotland, 4 miles N.W. of Melrose. It contains the vils. of Buckholmside, Comeby-Bank, and Darlingshaugh. The principal river is the Gala Water. The living is in the presb. of Selkirk, and in the patron. of the male communicants. The church is a small modern structure. There are also a Free church and several schools.

LADOCK, or LASSICK, a par. in the E. div. of the hund. of Powder, co. Cornwall, 8 miles N.E. of Truro, its post town. It is situated in a valley on the turnpike road from Truro to St. Columb, by way of Tresillian. The par. includes the hmlt. of Bissick or Pessick. The manor formerly belonged to the Pitts. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. Iron ore of superior quality is found here, and is sent to Swansea to be smelted. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £700. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £767. The church, dedicated to St. Ladocka, is situated on the summit of a hill. It has a tower. There is a place of worship for Wesleyans. There is a National school for both sexes, with an endowment of £5. Nausaugh is the principal residence. Ladock is a meet for the Four Burrow hounds. A cattle fair is held on the 13th May.

LADY, a par. comprising the north-eastern part of the Isle of Sanday, one of the Orkney group, Scotland. It is bounded on all sides by the sea, except on its western, where it is bounded by the par. of Cross. Its size is about 9 square miles, one-fourth of which is pasture or under cultivation, and the rest either heath or waste. Its coast is deeply indented, and its bays are Otterswick and Stywick. At Start-point, to the extreme N.E., is a lighthouse. The par. is in the presb. of North Isles, and synod of Orkney. The minister's stipend is £158. At Sanday there are a United Presbyterian church, a Free church, and a parochial school. Here are many Picts' houses and barrows.

LADYBANK, a vil. in the par. of Collessie, co. Fife, Scotland, 5 miles W. of Cupar. It is a station on the Edinburgh and North British railway.

LADY ISLE, an islet in the Frith of Clyde, co. Ayr, Scotland, 5 miles N. of Ayr. There are beacons on it to warn ships off the half-tide rock which lies near it.

LADYKIRK, a par. in co. Berwick, Scotland, 4 miles N.E. of Coldstream. It includes the vils. of Ladykirk, Upsetlington, and Horndean. The surface is generally level and fertile. It comprises about 3,100 acres, 60 of which are under plantation, one-fourth in pasture, and the rest under cultivation. It extends about 3 miles along the margin of the river Tweed, where salmon fishing is carried on. A bridge has been lately thrown across the river by subscription. A ford existed here in Queen Elizabeth's reign, which was often used by invading armies. At Hollywell Haugh, where chicory grows wild, King Edward I. met the Scots, in 1291, to settle the succession to the crown of Scotland. The par. is in the presb. of Chirnside, and synod of Merse and Teviotdale, in the patron. of the crown. The minister's stipend is £170. There is an United Presbyterian place of worship at Horndean. The parish church was built in 1500, and was originally a cruciform structure in the Gothic style of architecture, but has been of late greatly disfigured by alterations and additions. Tradition ascribes its erection to James IV., in gratitude for his escape from the violence of the flood when crossing the ford with his army. He dedicated the edifice to "Our Lady," hence denominated Ladykirk, which name was subsequently extended to the whole parish previously designated Upsetlington. It was at this church that the treaty of Château Cambrensis was concluded, in the reign of Mary. At Chapel Park, near Upsetlington, are the remains of apparently an ecclesiastical edifice. A fair is held on the 5th April for the sale of linen cloth.

LADYKIRK, or NORTHKIRK, a par. in the island of Westray, one of the Orkney group, Scotland. It comprises the northern part of the isle. Its size is 6¼ miles by 3½. It contains the vil. of Northkirk, and forms a part of the united par. of Westray and Papa Westray.

LADYKIRK, an ancient par. in co. Ayr, Scotland, now joined to Monkstown.

LADYKIRK, a par. in the island of Stronsay, one of the Orkney group, Scotland. It comprises the S.W. portion of the island. Its size is 4 miles by 2½. It is united with the pars. of Eday and Stronsay.

LADYLANDS, a vil. in the par. of Kilbirnie, co. Ayr, Scotland, 9 miles N. of Irvine. It is a station on the Stirling and Ballock section of the Forth and Clyde railway. The principal residence is Ladylands House, the ancient seat of the Cochranes.

LADYLOAN, a quoad sacra par. in the pars. of Arbroath and St. Vigean's, co. Forfar, Scotland, 2 miles from Arbroath. The living is in the presb. of Arbroath, and in the patron. of the male communicants.

LADY-PLACE, a demesne in the par. of Hurley, hund. of Beynhurst, co. Berks, 3 miles S.W. of Great Marlow. It is situated at the ferry on the Thames, and is celebrated in history as the place where the planners of the Revolution met in 1688, and on this account it was visited by William III., George III., and Paoli. The mansion was erected by the Lovelaces (Lords Hurley) at the commencement of the 17th century, on the site of the old crypts of a Benedictine cell to Westminster Abbey. There are still remaining some portions of the ancient priory, including the refectory, and a saloon said to have been painted by Santa Rosa.

LADY ROCK, in the Sound of Mull, co. Argyle, coast of Scotland, near Duart Castle. It is famed in story as the place where Maclean of Duart put his wife to be drowned by the rising tide, but she was saved by the fishermen.

LADY'S BRIDGE, a hmlt. in the par. of Fordyce, co. Banff, Scotland, half a mile from Portsoy, and 3 miles W. of Banff. It is a station on the Banffshire branch of the Great North of Scotland railway.

LADYSBRIDGE, a vil. in the par. of Ightermurragh, bar. of Imokilly, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 1 mile S. of Castlemartyr.

LADY'S ISLAND, or ST. MARY'S, a par. in the bar. of Forth, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles S.E. of Killinick. Broadway is its post town. The parish is of small extent, but the soil is good. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Ferns, val. with St. Iberius, £47, in the patron. of the bishop. There are a Roman Catholic chapel and a parish school. On a peninsula running into Lady Island Lough stand some old church ruins. Here are also the remains of a castle, built in the 13th century by Rodolph de Lamport, and dismantled by Cromwell in 1649. Fairs are held on the 15th August, and 19th September.

LADY ST. MARY, a par. in the borough of Wareham [which see].

LADYTOWN, a par. in the bar. of Connell, co. Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles S.S.W. of Naas, its post town. The soil is mostly good. Part of the Grand canal passes through the southern part of the parish. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Kildare, val. with Great Connell, £105, in the patron. of the bishop. Ladytown House is the principal residence.

LADY YESTERS, a par. in the city of Edinburgh, Scotland. See EDINBURGH.

LAGAMHUILIN, or LAGAVULME, a vil. in the par. of Kildalton, co. Argyle, Scotland. It is situated on the S.E. side of the Isle of Islay, and has a small harbour, where stands the church and the old castle of the Macdonalds.

LAGAN, a river rising among the North Slieve-Croob mountains, in the bar. of Kinelearty, co. Down, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. It pursues its course in a W. and N.W. direction past Dromore, Magheralin, and Lisburn, and falls into Belfast Lough, after a course of about 35 miles. Near English Town it is joined by the Lagan canal, which opens the navigation between Belfast Lough and Lough Neagh.

LAGAN, a trout stream in the Isle of Islay, co. Argyle, Scotland, falling into Loch Indaal.

LAGAN, a river, rising in three head-streams, in cos. Monaghan and Cavan, prov. of Ulster, and co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It takes an easterly direction, and after a course of nearly 25 miles, falls into Dundalk Bay, on nearing which point it assumes the name of the Glyde.

LAGAN AULACHY, an ancient par. in co. Perth, Scotland, now joined to Dunkeld.

LAGGAN, a Highland par. in the co. Inverness, Scotland, 15 miles S.E. of Fort Augustus, and 11 from Kingussie. Its size is 22 miles by 22. The surface is mountainous, being broken by the spurs of three several ranges of hills: on its northern border are the Moadlia, or Monaghlea range, which attain a height of 3,000 feet; on its southern are the Grampians; and on its western border are the mountains flanking Loch Laggan. The rivers Spay and Spean, which traverse the parish, are fed by numerous springs rising among the hills. In this parish are lochs Laggan and Ericht, the former 8 miles by 1 mile, and the latter 16 by 1. In the neighbourhood limestone and slate are found. The mountains consist for the most part of gneiss. The par. is in the presb. of Abertarff and synod of Glenelg. The minister's stipend is £158. The parish church, built in 1842, is a commodious structure. There are a Free church and a Roman Catholic chapel. The ruins of the old church, said to have been dedicated to St. Kenneth, are still visible. The chief seats are Ardverikie, Cluny Castle, Glentrium House, and Glenshirra House. In this parish are the remains of a fortification, built on a rock 600 feet high. Mrs. Grant, who died in 1838, wrote her "Letters from the Mountains," and other works, whilst residing at the manse, between 1779 and 1803.

LAGGAN ULVA, a vil. on the western side of Mull, co. Argyle, Scotland. It is situated near Loch-na-keal, whence Iona is visited.

LAGHY, a post-office vil. in the par. of Drumhome, in the bar. of Tirhugh, co. Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 3 miles S.E. of Donegal. A fair for the sale of flax seed is held on the 29th April.

LAGNESS, a hmlt. in the par. of Pagham, hund. of Aldwick, rape of Chichester, co. Sussex, 4 miles S. of Chichester.

LAIGHWOOD, a demesne in co. Perth, Scotland, near Cluny. It is situated on the river Lunan, and belongs to the Duke of Athol. There are remains of Sinclair's Castle, and of a church.

LAINDON, or LANGDON-CLAY, a par. in the hund. of Barstable, co. Essex, 4 miles S. of Billericay, its post town, 6 N.E. of Orsett, and 8 S.E. of the Brentwood railway station. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Crouch. The par. contains the hmlt. of Basildon. The surface comprises a tract of flat marshy land, formerly clayey, but now very productive. From this circumstance the village derives its appellation of Langdon-Clay. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £800. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £779, in the patron. of the Bishop of London. The church, situated on high ground, is dedicated to St. Nicholas. It is an ancient edifice, with a wooden tower, surmounted by a small spire, and containing five bells. There is another church at Basildon; this last is an edifice with an embattled tower, surmounted by a spire, and serves as a chapel-of-ease to the mother church. There is a school for both sexes, endowed with £20 per annum.

LAINSTON, an ext. par. place in the Winchester div. of the hund. of Upper Buddlesgate, co. Hants, 3 miles N.W. of Winchester. This place comprises about 155 acres of freehold land, and was formerly a separate parish. There is a private lunatic asylum, situated in an ample demesne of 40 acres, and approached by three avenues of trees. The house was built in the reign of Charles II., and was once the seat of Lord Bayning. The living is a discharged rect. in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £34. There are remains of the ancient church, now a ruin. The inhabitants attend divine service in the church of Sparsholt.

LAIRG, a par. in co. Sutherland, Scotland. It contains a small village of its own name, 16 miles N.W.

of Dornoch. Its size is 30 miles by 12. Its surface is mountainous, Ben Clybric attaining a height of 3,200 feet above the level of the sea. The greater portion of the parish is in sheep pasture. It is traversed by the river Shin, and is varied by a loch of the same name, also by a number of small lakes. Granite, trap, and sandstone are the chief rocks. The par. is in the presb. of Dornoch, and synod of Sutherland and Caithness. The minister's stipend is £166. The parish church was erected in 1846. There are a Free church and a school in connection with it. J. Mackay was once minister of this parish, whose son Hugh fell at Assaye, and another, William, wrote the account of the Juno's shipwreck, referred to in "Don Juan." At Knock-a-chath are a number of tumuli, said to commemorate a battle between the Mackays and Sutherlands. The Duke of Sutherland is the chief heritor.

LAITH-KIRK, a chplry. in the tnshp. of Lunedale, and par. of Romald Kirk, North Riding co. York, 9 miles N.W. of Barnard Castle.

LAITHS, NEW, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Hartwith-cum-Winsley, par. of Kirkby Malzeard, West Riding co. York, 4 miles W. of Ripley. It is situated near the river Nidd.

LAKE, a hmlt. in the par. of Sourton, co. Devon, 4 miles S.W. of Okehampton.

LAKE, a vil. in the Isle of Wight, co. Hants, 6 miles S.E. of Newport. It is situated near Sandown Bay.

LAKE, a tnshp. in the par. of Westbury, co. Salop, 8 miles S.W. of Shrewsbury.

LAKE, a tythg. in the par. of Kingsbury Episcopi, co. Somerset, 2 miles N. of Petherton.

LAKE, a tythg. in the par. of Wilsford, hund. of Underditch, co. Wilts, 2 miles S.W. of Amesbury. It is situated on the river Avon. Lake House is a fine old mansion, built in 1578. There are several barrows, and traces of ancient earthworks.

LAKEFIELD, the name of several small places in Scotland and Ireland.

LAKE LOCK, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Stomley, and par. of Wakefield, West Riding co. York, 2 miles N.E. of Wakefield. It is situated near the river Aire.

LAKENHAM, a par. in the city of Norwich, co. Norfolk, 2 miles S.E. of Norwich, its post town. It is situated on the Brandon railway. There is a mohair factory. [See NORWICH.] The living is a vic. annexed to that of Trowse, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church is dedicated to St. Luke.

LAKENHEATH, a par. in the hund. of Lackford, co. Suffolk, 6 miles N.E. of Mildenhall, its post town, and 2 S. of Lakenheath railway station. The Little Ouse, which is navigable, bounds the parish on the N. The village, which is considerable, is situated on gently rising ground, in the midst of extensive rabbit warrens. The corn market which was formerly held here is discontinued. The soil, which is light and sandy, is in some parts tolerably fertile, but a very considerable portion is marsh and fen land. There are lime kilns and sand pits. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £136, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has been re-roofed, and has a new W. doorway added. It is an ancient structure, with a tower crowned with a leaden spire, and containing five bells. The interior of the church contains a brass, &c. The charities produce about £105, including an allotment of 154 acres of fen grounds set apart for the poor. There are two endowed free schools, one for thirty boys, the other for eleven. The Independents, Wesleyans, and Baptists have each a chapel. Undley Hall is the principal residence. A fair is held for cattle and toys on the first Thursday after Midsummer Day.

LAKEVIEW, the name of numerous private residences in Ireland.

LALEHAM, a par. in the hund. of Spelthorne, co. Middlesex, 2 miles N. of Chertsey, its post town, and 2 S. of Staines. The village, which is small, is situated at the ferry on the river Thames. It is mentioned in Domesday as Lelcham, and was held by the Earl of Mortaigne. The surface, which is flat and marshy, is intersected by a branch of the river Colne. The greater portion of the land is arable, and subject to occasional inundation. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of London, val. £110. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure, with a square tower of brick containing a clock and three bells. The parochial charities produce about £14 per annum. Laleham House, the seat of Sir B. Hartwell, Bart., and Laleham Cottage, of Earl Lucan, are the principal residences. In the grounds of the latter are two beautiful pillars of verde antique brought from Italy. On the common are traces of two ancient camps.

LALESTON, a par. in the hund. of Newcastle, co. Glamorgan, 2 miles W. of Bridgend, its post town, and 10 from Neath. The par. comprises the hmlts. of Upper and Lower Laleston, and was given by Richard de Granville to "Lalys," who built Neath Abbey. The village is considerable. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the collieries and ironworks. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Newcastle, in the dioc. of Llandaff. The church, dedicated to St. Illtyd, has an ancient tower, built by Lalys. The parochial charities produce about £3 per annum. Laleston House is the principal residence.

LALLYSCROSS, a vil. in the par. of Castlemagner, in the bar. of Duhallow, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, close to Kanturk.

LAMANCHA, a railway station in co. Peebles, Scotland, 7 miles from Peebles. It is situated on the Edinburgh, Peebles, and Innerleithen section of the North British line.

LAMARSH, a par. in the hund. of Hinckford, co. Essex, 2½ miles N.W. of Bures railway station, 5 S.E. of Sudbury, and 6 N.E. of Halstead. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Stour, and near the borders of Suffolk. It is entirely agricultural. The soil is a rich sandy loam, producing abundant crops. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £385. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £379. The church, dedicated to the Holy Innocents, is a small edifice, with a round tower, and of great antiquity. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum.

LAMBA, an islet in Yell Sound, North Shetland Isles, coast of Scotland, 5 miles N.E. of Northmaven.

LAMB-ABBEY, or LAMORBEY, a hmlt. and ecclesiastical district in the hund. of Blackheath, lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, co. Kent, 4 miles S.E. of Woolwich, and 11 E. of London. It is situated near the Thames, and anciently belonged to the Lamienbys and Sparrows. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £100. The principal residence is Lamorbey House, rebuilt in 1744.

LAMBAY, an island in the Irish Channel, off the coast of co. Dublin, Ireland, 2½ miles S.E. of Rush Point. It is 1½ mile in length by 1 broad, and consists chiefly of trap and porphyry rocks, with a cliffy coast. On the N. side of the island is Swallow Cove fishing harbour, and on the S., Talbot's Bay, with from 4 to 8 fathoms water. Here is an old tower, built by J. Chalenor, in the reign of Edward VI. Rabbits and puffins abound, and lobsters are caught off the coast. The island formerly belonged to the archbishops of Dublin, from whom it came to Lord Talbot de Malahide, of Lambay Lodge.

LAMBCOTE, a hmlt. in the par. of Eatington, co. Warwick, 5 miles S.W. of Kington.

LAMBCROFT, a hmlt. in the par. of Kelstern, hund. of Louth Eske, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 4 miles N.W. of Louth.

LAMBE, an islet in the Frith of Forth, co. Haddington, Scotland, 1 mile N.W. of North Berwick.

LAMBEG, a par. in the bars. of Upper Belfast, Upper Massereene, and Upper Castlereagh, cos. Antrim and Down, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 5 miles S. of Belfast. Lisburn is its post town. It is 2 miles long by 1 mile broad. The surface consists of a district lying along the banks of the river Lagan. It is traversed by the road from Lisburn to Belfast. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Connor, val. £138, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was rebuilt and enlarged in 1824. There are a Presbyterian meeting-house, and two day schools. Lambeg House is the chief seat. A Franciscan friary was founded here in the 15th century by MacDonnell. Its site is now occupied by the church. The village is about 1 mile from Lisburn. A considerable linen trade is carried on.

LAMBERHURST, a par. and post town partly in the hund. of Loxfield and Pelham, rape of Pevensey, co. Sussex, and partly in the hund. of Brenchley, lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, 7 miles S.E. of Tunbridge Wells, 4 E. of the Frant railway station, and 15 S.W. of Maidstone. The village, which is considerable, is situated on the road from London to Hastings. There are brick-kilns and a browery. The place was formerly noted for its iron smelting furnaces, at which the balustrades for the cathedral of St. Paul's were manufactured. A great portion of the land is in hops, and part in woodland. The surface is hilly, and the lowlands are watered by a rapid stream. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £401, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Rochester. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure, with a square embattled tower, surmounted by a low spire. Adjoining the S. aisle is the mortuary chapel of the Scotney family. There is a National school for both sexes. The Wesleyans and Baptists have places of worship. Bayham Abbey, Scotney Castle, and Lamberhurst Court Lodge are the principal residences. At Scotney Castle is a mineral spring similar to those of Tunbridge Wells.

LAMBETH, a par. and metropolitan borough in the E. div. of the hund. of Brixton, co. Surrey, 1½ mile S.W. of St. Paul's. The London and South-Western railway has its terminus at Waterloo Road, in connection with the branch line between London Bridge and Charing Cross, and likewise a station and goods depot at Nine Elms, near Vauxhall Bridge, not far from which is a steamboat pier, and another near Lambeth Palace. It is connected with the opposite shore by Waterloo, Westminster, Lambeth, and Vauxhall bridges, and by the new Hungerford railway and foot bridge, on the site of the old suspension bridge, which connects the branch line above referred to with the Charing Cross terminus. In Saxon documents it is called Lambhythe, or Lambehith, and is said in history to have been the place where Hardicanute died, and where Harold was crowned. It is mentioned in Domesday Book as Lanchei, at which time it belonged to the Earl of Mortaigne and the Princess Goda, who presented it to the see of Rochester. The bishops of this see built a palace here called "La Place," and subsequently exchanged the manor for other lands with Hubert Walter, Archbishop of Canterbury. This prelate, having obtained from Pope Urban IV. the grant of a fourth part of the offerings at Thomas-à-Becket's shrine, commenced the venerable pile of Lambeth Palace, which has been at various times enlarged and improved by his successors. The main feature of this building is the arched gateway, flanked by two square embattled towers of brick, and leading into the outer court. The great hall, 93 feet by 38, rebuilt by Archbishop Juxon after the Civil War, is now converted into the library, which contains upwards of 25,000 volumes of MSS. and rare books, chiefly collected by Archbishops Bancroft and Secker. Beyond the library is the chapel, which is by far the most ancient part of the building, dating from the middle of the 13th century. It is a remarkably fine specimen of early English architecture, with its triple lancet-shaped windows and E. window of five lights. The roof of the chapel is flat, and divided into compartments embellished with the arms of Archbishop Laud, who at his trial was called to answer for having repaired the painted windows, emblazoned with subjects from the Old and New Testament. These specimens of early art were destroyed by the parliamentary commissioners, but restored by Archbishop Howley. Underneath the chapel is a crypt with a groined roof. To the W. of the chapel is Archbishop Chicheley's Lollard's Tower, a lofty square embattled structure of stone (dating from 1434-45), with the post-room and prison, 13 feet by 12. The guard-room has been taken down and rebuilt for a banquet-hall; but the original oak roof has been carefully preserved. Adjoining it is Cardinal Pole's long gallery, 90 feet by 16, with portraits of Luther, Archbishops Arundell, Chicheley, Cranmer, Parker, &c., down to the last primate, also Bishops Patrick, Burnet, Hoadley, Berkeley, &c. From the first court a gateway on the right leads into the area in which are Archbishop Howley's additional buildings, erected at a cost of £55,000, and comprising the state apartments, dwelling rooms, and various offices requisite for the household establishment. In front of these are the garden and park of 13 acres, containing Cardinal Pole's fig-trees, &c., and intersected by a carriage road to the palace. Previous to the Reformation, several metropolitan councils were held within its walls, and in 1282 Archbishop Peckham convoked a synod here, at which all the bishops of the realm assisted, to consider the complaints preferred at Rome by the Bishop of Hereford against the government of the Church in England. In 1381 the insurgents under Wat Tyler, having murdered Archbishop Sudbury, entered the palace, burnt the books and furniture, and destroyed the registers and public papers. During the following century several of the sovereigns were entertained here by the archbishops, and Queen Mary entirely refurnished the palace for the reception of Cardinal Pole, whom she occasionally visited during his primacy. Queen Elizabeth was also a frequent guest of Archbishops Parker and Whitgift, and revived the use of the Lollard's Tower for ecclesiastical offenders. To it she committed the Roman Catholic Bishops Tunstall and Thirlby, Lord Henry Howard, brother of the Duke of Norfolk, the Earl of Southampton, the Earl of Essex, previous to his being sent to the Tower, and various other persons. In the reign of Charles I. the palace was assaulted by the mob at night, but was defended by Archbishop Laud, whose unpopularity had provoked the attack. After his impeachment the parliament issued an ordinance for removing the archiepiscopal arms from Lambeth Palace, and converted it into a prison for "malignants," including the Earls of Chesterfield and Derby, Sir Thomas Armstrong, Sir George Bunkley, and others. It was subsequently sold to Thomas Scott, and Matthew Hardy, the regicide; but on the Restoration reverted to its rightful owners, and again became the residence of the archbishops.—The village, originally detached, greatly improved upon the building of the palace, and became a market town. It is now united, in fact, with Southwark, and forms a portion of the metropolis, including the suburban districts of Kennington, where was once a royal palace, Stockwell, South Lambeth, and Vauxhall. Under the Reform Act it constitutes a new borough returning two members to parliament. The boundaries of the borough include, besides the par. of Lambeth, the pars. of Camberwell and Newington, together comprising 5,708 acres, and 45,252 houses, inhabited in 1861 by 298,032 persons. The returning officer is annually appointed by the sheriff for the county.—This parish, extending for a considerable distance along the bank of the river, is admirably situated for the carrying on of extensive works of every kind. There are lime, coal, and timber wharves, iron and other foundries, sawmills, extensive establishments for making steam-engines (including the celebrated firm of Maudesley and Co.), and almost every other kind of machinery, manufactories for axletrees, carriages, patent buoys, corks, boats, brushes, baskets, chairs, combs, glass, potteries, artificial stone works, patent shot factory, with towers 140 feet high; also ale and beer breweries, distilleries, chemical and vitriol works, and Beaufoy's extensive vinegar works, at South Lambeth, on the site of the once celebrated Cupar's Gardens; besides which are various other trades, employing the greater part of the inhabitants of Lambeth proper. The suburban districts of Kennington, Stockwell, and Vauxhall contain several good houses, and numerous pretty villas surrounded by gardens, and occupied by genteel families. The principal public buildings in Lambeth parish are the archbishop's palace, described above, the South-Western railway terminus, the Victoria Theatre, in the Waterloo Road, Astley's Amphitheatre, near Westminster Bridge, recently converted into a theatre, the New County Court house, sessions house, and station of the L division of metropolitan police, union workhouse, district post-office, two savings-banks, Bethlehem Hospital, Blind School, Female Orphan Asylum, rebuilt in 1804, Westminster Lying-in Hospital, Refuge for the Destitute, Davis's Infirmary for Children, besides gas and water works—the latter supplied from Thames Ditton, 10 miles distant, with reservoirs at Brixton Hill and Streatham. Vauxhall Gardens continued to be a place of fashionable amusement until recently, when it was sold by auction for £20,200, and a portion of the ground has been subsequently built over. Kennington Green, formerly the place of execution for the county of Surrey, and the scene of the great Chartist meeting on the 10th of April, 1848, has recently been converted into a public park.—The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £1,500, in the patron. of the Archbishop of Canterbury. The parish church, dedicated to St. Mary, adjoins the palace, and was rebuilt in the latter part of the 14th century. It is a spacious structure, having a square embattled tower of freestone, surmounted by an octagonal turret at one of the angles, and two mortuary chapels belonging to the Howard and Leigh families. It contains numerous interesting monuments. In addition to the parish church there are 18 district churches—viz. St. Mary the Less, Prince's-road; St. Paul's, Vauxhall; St. Peter's; Trinity; St. John's, Waterloo-road; All Saints; St. Thomas; St. Andrew's; St. Mark's, Kennington; Christ Church, Brixton-road; St. Michael's, Stockwell; St. Barnabas, South Kennington; St. Matthew's, Denmark Hill; St. Stephen's, South Lambeth; St. Matthew's, Brixton; St. John's, North Brixton; St. Luke's, Lower Norwood, and Tulse Hill—the livings of which are all perpet. curs., varying in val. from £766 to £50. There are also four chapels-of-ease—viz. Verulam chapel, Stockwell chapel, South Lambeth chapel, and St. James's chapel. Here, too, is St. George's Roman Catholic cathedral; also places of worship for Baptists, Wesleyans, Welsh Methodists, Independents, Swedenborgians, and several other Dissenting bodies. The public schools are numerous, including Archbishop Tenison's girls' school, which was rebuilt in 1817, and has an income from endowment of £369; St. Patrick's school; Lawrence's school, in the York-road, with an income from endowment of £105; St. John's school, in the Waterloo-road, rebuilt in the reign of George IV., at an expense of £2,200; Beaufoy's ragged school, built at a cost of £5,000; Eldon school, in the Wandsworth-road, instituted in 1830, in commemoration of Lord Chancellor Eldon; the Licensed Victuallers' school, and parochial schools for boys and girls, partly endowed; besides numerous district, National, and denominational schools attached to the several places of worship. The charitable foundations are numerous, comprising those mentioned above; also Caron's almshouses, with an income of £73 per annum, Coldharbour-lane almshouses for eight widows, and numerous charitable bequests for distribution among the poor. In the arrangements under the Poor-law Amendment Act, the parish of Lambeth forms a union of itself. It is also the head of a superintendent registry and new County Court districts. —There were until recently traces of ancient trenches, supposed by Maitland, in his History of London, to have been formed by Canute on his invasion of London, in 1026, in order to convey his fleet to the W. of London Bridge; but other antiquaries, with greater probability, refer these to an ancient canal formed for the temporary diversion of the course of the Thames during the erection of London Bridge. Of La Place, better known as Carlisle House, originally founded as a monastery by Archbishop Baldwin, only some ruins now remain. In Lambeth Marsh, below Westminster, Inigo Jones is said to have buried his money during the Civil War; and at Lambeth Walk was a mineral well, formerly celebrated for its medicinal qualities. On the site of the Nine Elms brewery formerly stood Turret House, where Tradescants formed his "physic" (botanical) garden.

LAMBHOLM, an island situated in the centre of Holm Sound, and belonging to the Orkney Group, Scotland. Its form is almost that of a circle, measuring about 3 miles round.

LAMBLEY, a par. in Tindale ward, co. Northumberland, 4½ miles S.W. of Haltwhistle, and 8½ from Alston. Hexham is its post town. It is a station on the Alston branch of the Newcastle and Carlisle railway. The parish is a small agricultural place situated on the South Tyne, and contains the joint tnshps. of Lambley and Asholme. The village consists of a few straggling farmhouses. The land is principally pasture and meadow, with a large tract of common. The surface is rugged and the scenery wild. The river Tyne is here crossed by the viaduct of the Alston and Haltwhistle branch line of railway. There was formerly a small Benedictine nunnery, founded in the reign of King John, and burnt by the Scots in 1296, who plundered and laid waste the neighbourhood. It was subsequently rebuilt, and was given to the Dudleys and Featherstonehaughs at the Dissolution, when its revenues were returned at £5 15*s.* 8*d.* The living is a don. cur. in the dioc. of Durham. The church is an ancient edifice situated on rising ground. It was repaired about twenty years since. Divine service is performed every alternate week. On Castle Hill, the site of an old fortress, are vestiges of a deep moat.

LAMBLEY, a par. in the S. div. of the wap. of Thurgarton, co. Nottingham, 6 miles N.E. of Nottingham, its post town, and 2 from the Burton-Joyce railway station. The village, which is irregularly built, is situated in a deep vale, sheltered by ranges of hills rising in the form of an amphitheatre. The inhabitants are employed in framework knitting and in agriculture. The surface is hilly and the surrounding scenery varied. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £600. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, has been recently restored. There are a free school for both sexes and a place of worship for Wesleyans. Samuel Matthews, Esq., is lord of the manor.

LAMBOURN, a hund. in co. Berks, contains the pars. of East Garston and Lambourn, comprising an area of 19,400 acres.

LAMBOURN. See CHIPPING LAMBOURN, co. Berks.

LAMBOURNE, a par. in the hund. of Ongar, co. Essex, 6 miles N.W. of Romford, its post town, and 4 S.E. of Epping. The village, though small, is of pleasing appearance, and is situated near the river Roding, and on the road to Ongar. The par. includes the hmlt. of Abridge. The land is chiefly in pasture, with about 300 acres of forest, and 24 of common. The soil is very rich but heavy. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £600. The living is a rect.* with the cur. of Abridge annexed, in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £476, in the patron. of Corpus Christi College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Mary and All Saints, has a tower crowned with a leaden spire. It is situated about the centre of the parish, and has a monument to Wynnyffe, Bishop of Lincoln, once rector of this parish. A chapel-of-ease was erected in 1833 in the village of Abridge. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. The parochial charities produce about £20 per annum. There is a National school. The lord of the manor has the privilege of sending twenty boys of this parish to the free school at Stapleford. Henry Spencer, Bishop of Norwich, who fought in the army of Pope Adrian against the Duke of Milan, and who aided to quell Wat Tyler's insurrection, once resided in this parish.

LAMBOURN, UPPER, a tythg. in the par. and hund. of Lambourn, co. Berks, 1½ mile N.W. of Chipping Lambourn.

LAMBRIGG, a tnshp. in the par. and ward of Kendal, co. Westmoreland, 6½ miles N.E. of Kendal. It is situated on the Lancashire and Carlisle railway and under Lambrigg Fell. The manor was held by the Burnesheads, Bellinghams, and Duchetts, whose mansion is now in ruins. A copper mine was formerly worked, but is now disused. Lambrigg Foot and Morsdale Hall are the principal residences. The Earl of Lonsdale is lord of the manor.

LAMBROOK, EAST, a chplry. in the par. of Kingsbury Episcopi, co. Somerset, 1 mile N. of South Petherton, and 6 S.E. of Langport. It is situated on the river Parrett. The living is a rect.,* val. £157, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Wells. The church is dedicated to St. James. There is a place of worship for Independents.

LAMBROOK, WEST and MIDDLE, tythgs. in the par. of Kingsbury Episcopi, hund. of Kingsbury, co. Somerset, 6 miles S. of Langport.

LAMBSTON, a par. in the hund. of Roose, co. Pembroke, 3 miles N.W. of Haverfordwest, its post town. The village, which is small, is situated near St. Bride's Bay. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £164, in the patron. of Pembroke College, Oxford. The church is dedicated to St. David. The tithes were commuted in 1839.

LAMBTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Chester-le-Street, N. div. of Easington ward, co. Durham, 2 miles N.E. of Chester-le-Street, 8 N.E. of Durham, and 2 N. of the Fence Houses station on the North-Eastern railway. It is situated on the river Wear, near the road from Durham to Newcastle, and gives title of viscount to the Earl of Durham. Lambton Castle, built on the site of Harraton Hall, is the seat of the present Earl of Durham, in whose family it has remained from time immemorial. The castle was built by Bononi, and is situated on the N. bank of the river Wear, which flows through its wooded park, abounding in hills and dales. The interior of the castle contains a figure of General Lambton, by Reynolds; also a stone group illustrative of the story of the fight with the "worm," or "dragon" of Worm Hill, slain by some hero of the Lambton family. A great portion of the land is in pasture. The soil is clayey. There are some brine springs, from which salt is made. The Earl of Durham is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

LAMEMER ISLE, in co. Haddington, Scotland, about 1 mile from Dunbar.

LAMER, or LAMBERLAW, a hill in co. Fife, Scotland, near Burntisland, where is Cromwell's Camp.

LAMERSIDE, a castle in co. Westmoreland, 3 miles S. of Kirkby Stephen. It was formerly called Dolorous Tower, and stands on the bank of the river Eden.

LAMERTON, or LAMBERTON, an ancient par. in co. Berwick, Scotland, now united with Mordington.

LAMERTON, a par. in the hund. of Lifton, co. Devon, 3 miles N.W. of Tavistock, its post town, and 10 S.E. of Launceston. The parish, which is very extensive, is situated under Brent Tor, and is watered by the river Lumber, from which it derives its name. The church formerly belonged to Tavistock Abbey. There are several mines of manganese, and slate is quarried. The land is chiefly in pasture. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £397. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £344. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient structure, with a lofty square embattled tower containing six bells, all of which were recast in 1845. The interior of the church contains a handsome font, transom window of 3,200 panes of glass, and several monuments of the Tremayne family, including one to Thomas Tremayne and his wife, with their eight sons and eight daughters; also monuments to two twin brothers, who resembled each other so exactly that they were only known apart by a private mark, and were both killed at Newhaven in 1561. A new district church has been erected at North Brentor. The parochial charities produce about £19 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes; also places of worship for the Wesleyans and Bryanites. Collacombe, the ancient mansion of the Tremayne family, is now a farmhouse.

LAMESLEY, a parochial chplry. in the par. of Chester-le-Street, middle div. of Chester ward, co. Durham, 1 miles S. of Gateshead, its post town, and 5 N. of Chester-le-Street. It is situated near the river Team, on Urpeth Burn, and includes the tnshps. of Lamesley, Kibblesworth, Hedley, and Ravensworth, with the hmlts. of Eighton Bank and Chowdean. There are extensive collieries, beds of ironstone, and several quarries for grindstones. The soil is clayey, but fertile. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £138. The church, which was rebuilt in 1759, is a stone structure, with a tower and turret containing one bell. The tower and turret were rebuilt in 1821. The interior of the church contains an organ, the gift of the present Lord Ravensworth, a carved pulpit, and a painted E. window in three compartments, with the Ravensworth arms. The charities produce £37 9*s.* 4*d.* per annum, bequeathed by the late Major-General Leonard Greenwell, besides which are other small charities, all of which are distributed to the poor at Christmas. The almshouse, for eight poor persons, is supported by the Ravensworth family. There are National and girls' schools, also an endowed school at Eighton Bank, all of which have Sunday-schools attached. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. The hamlet of Eighton Bank is situated about 2½ miles E. of the village. The church at Eighton Bank has a turret containing one bell. It is dedicated to St. Thomas, and was erected in 1853 by voluntary contributions. Ravensworth Castle, the seat of Lord Ravensworth, is partly in this parish. The present building was erected about 1808 on the site of an older one, of which the towers are left standing. Over the N. entrance is a statue of her Majesty Queen Victoria 7 feet in height. This entrance leads into the hall, 100 feet by 36, and 50 feet high, over which is the picture gallery, containing a collection of paintings. There is also a portrait of George IV. in the library. The other rooms are the dining-room, 50 feet long, saloon, library, museum, and conservatory. The grounds are richly wooded, and contain an oak 20 feet in diameter, and an ancient stone cross. Lord Ravensworth is lord of the manor.

LAMINGTON, a par. in the upper ward of co. Lanark, 37 miles from Edinburgh, and 5 from Abington. It is a railway station on the Caledonian line. Its length is about 9 miles, and its greatest breadth 4. The surface is hilly, rising in some parts to an altitude of 1,400 feet above sea level. Its area comprises about 11,280 acres, of which 2,280 are under tillage, and the remainder pasture. The river Clyde bounds it on the western and northern sides. The interior of the parish is drained by the Lamington Burn, Culter Water, and other streams. Porphyry and greywacke are the prevailing rocks. The par. is in the presb. of Biggar, and synod of Lothian and Tweeddale. The minister's stipend is £121. The church, an ancient structure, was repaired in 1828, at which period the "cutty stool" was removed, perhaps almost the last of any in Scotland. Here are the ruins of Lamington Castle. Sir William Wallace is said to have possessed a part, if not the whole, of this parish. The village was anciently a market town. There are a Druidical circle, and other ancient remains, at Arbory Hill, which is 600 feet high; also Roman camps at Wandell, Whitehill, and Hartside; Saxon camps at Woodend and Braehead; and a moat 20 yards in circumference at Cauldchapel. The present parish comprises the ancient parishes of Lamington, Hartside, and Wandell. Baillie of Lamington and Lord Douglas are the only landowners.

LAMLASH, a vil. in the par. of Kilbride, co. Bute, Scotland. It is situated near Lamlash Bay, in the Isle of Arran, and has off the coast Lamlash Island.

LAMMAS, a par. in the hund. of South Erpingham, co. Norfolk, 4 miles S.E. of Aylsham, 9 N.E. of Norwich, and 3 N.W. of Coltishall, its post town. The village, which is small, is situated on the E. bank of the navigable river Bure, which bounds the parish on the N. and W. It is wholly agricultural. The land is arable. The tithes of this parish, with those of Little Hautbois, which has been united to it, have been commuted for a rent-charge of £240. The living is a rect.* with the rect. of Little Hautbois annexed, in the dioc. of Norwich, val.

£211. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, has a low embattled tower. The chancel contains monuments to the Marsh and Chandler families, and a sculptured font. The church of Hautbois has long since been demolished. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. The Baptists have a place of worship, and there is a meeting-house for the Society of Friends, with a burial-ground adjoining.

LAMMERMOOR HILLS, a bare slaty ridge on the borders of the cos. Haddington and Berwick, Scotland, extending from St. Abb's Head to Soutra Hill. The highest summits are, Crib Law, 1,615 feet; Clints Hill, 1,544 feet; and Lammerlaw, 1,500 feet. The slopes of these hills are clothed with a stunted herbage and moss, affording good sheepwalks; and on one of the spurs, not far from the coast, is Fast Castle, the "Ravenswood" of Sir Walter Scott's "Bride of Lammermoor."

LAMONBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Skelton, Leath ward, co. Cumberland, 7½ miles N.W. of Penrith. There is a freestone quarry. The population of this township has greatly decreased.

LAMONT POINT, a headland on the E. side of Loch Tyne, co. Argyle, Scotland. Near it are the ruins of Lamont Castle, destroyed by the Duke of Argyll.

LAMORRAN, a par. in the W. div. of the hund. of Powder, co. Cornwall, 5 miles S.E. of Truro, its nearest money-order office, and 4 S.W. of Tregony. The village, which is small, is situated on Lamorran Creek, in Falmouth Harbour. It came through the Haleps, Molesworths, &c., to the Boscawens. The parish is bounded on the S. by the navigable river Fal. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £153. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £193. The church, dedicated to St. Moran, is situated on the bank of the river. It is a small ancient cruciform structure, restored in 1854. The tower contains three bells, and is apart from the church. It is of greater antiquity than the church, and its form hardly discernable through the foliage that overhangs it. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum.

LAMPETER-PONT-STEPHEN, or LLANBEDR, a par., municipal borough, post and market town, in the hund. of Moyddyn, co. Cardigan, 26 miles N.E. of Cardigan. It is a railway station on the Manchester and Milford and Vale of Towy and Aberystwith railways. The town is situated in a valley on the river Teifi, which is crossed at Stephen's Bridge, half a mile distant. It is a petty sessions town, polling place for the county elections, and fishing station, belonging to J. S. Harford, Esq., Blaire Castle, who is lord of the manor, and others. The principal attraction of Lampeter is St. David's College, founded by Bishop Burgess, in 1827, for 70 or more students. It is a quadrangular building, erected on the site of the ancient castle, of which no traces remain. It was designed by Cockerell, and cost £30,000. Lampeter is a contributory borough to Cardigan, with altered bounds under the Reform Act. It is nominally governed, under a charter of Edward II., by a portreeve, clerk, &c. Municipal meetings are held at the beginning of October. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £240, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a modern structure situated on an eminence. The interior contains monuments of Lloyds of Millfield. Archbishop Baldwin, attended by the historian Giraldus, preached the Crusade here in 1188. Situated on a hill called Alltgoch are the remains of a Druidical circle. There are other remains of great antiquity in the neighbourhood. Lampeter Poor-law Union includes 14 parishes. Population, including the college, 1,400. The college was incorporated by a charter in the reign of George IV., and in the year 1852 her Majesty granted an additional charter for conferring a B.D. degree on ordained members, and in 1863 an order in council was granted for an additional endowment, and in 1865 a supplemental charter was given by her Majesty for conferring B.A. degrees on resident students after a residence of 3½ years, and an examination by a board of three university examiners—two appointed by the vice-chancellors of Oxford and Cambridge respectively, and one by the principal. Fairs are held on the 11th January, Whit-Wednesday, 10th July, 27th August, 26th September, and 13th October. Market day is Saturday.

LAMPETER VELFREY, a par. in the hund. of Narberth, co. Pembroke, 3 miles E. of Narberth, its post town. The parish, which extends 6 miles by 3, is very fertile. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in the limestone quarries, which are extensively worked. In a quarry at Robeston many interesting fossils belonging to the Silurian strata are found. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £409, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is dedicated to St. David, and contains tombs of the Philippses of Lampeter House. At Blaengwyddno farm is the grange of a hospital, or yspythy, to Whitland Abbey.

LAMPHA, a hmlt. in the pars. of St. Bride Major and Ewenny, hund. of Ogmore, co. Glamorgan, 1 mile S.E. of Bridgend. It is situated on the Ewenny, a feeder of the river Ogmore, and near the line of the old Roman road Via Julia.

LAMPHEY, or LLAN FYDD, a par. in the hund. of Castlemartin, co. Pembroke, 2 miles S.E. of Pembroke, its post town. It is a station on the Pembroke and Tenby railway. The village, which is irregularly built, has the ruins of Bishop Gower's palace, erected in 1335. It was given by Henry VIII. to Devereux, Viscount Hereford. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £97, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, formerly part of the palace of the bishops of St. David's, is dedicated to St. Faith. The aforementioned ruins are enclosed within the garden of Lamphey Court, the modern mansion of C. Mathias, Esq., who holds the manor through the Owens. The ruins consist in part of a chapel, with an E. window, and a hall 76 feet by 20. There are also parapeted walls, gateway, tower, &c., all of which were formerly surrounded by defensive walls. The ruins are situated at the bottom of a valley.

LAMPLUGH, a par. in the ward of Allerdale-above-Derwent, co. Cumberland, 8 miles S. of Cockermouth, its post town, and 9 E. of Whitehaven. The par. extends 6 miles by 3, and comprises the tnshps. of Kelton, Murton, and Winder. Iron ore is procured here in large quantities. There are extensive quarries of limestone and freestone. The parish is bounded on the E. by Loweswater and Crummockwater. Two branches of the river Marron have their source here. The village is small, but neatly built. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £300. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £256. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient stone structure, with a turret containing two bells. The parochial charities produce about £13 per annum, chiefly the endowment of a school. The Rev. Walter Brooksbank is lord of the manor. Near the old hall is a mineral spring.

LAMPORT, a par. in the hund. of Orlingbury, co. Northampton, 8 miles N. of Northampton, its post town, and 8 S. of Market Harborough. It is a station on the Stamford and Blisworth branch of the London and North Western railway. The village, which is small, is situated on a hill, near the high road leading from Northampton to Market Harborough. The par. contains the hmlts. of Hanging-Houghton, and Faxton. It is a meet for the Pytchley hounds. The greater portion of the surface is rich grazing land. Stone is quarried for building purposes. The tithes were commuted for corn-rents under an Enclosure Act in 1794. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £900. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient edifice, with a tower containing a clock and a peal of bells. The parochial charities produce about £128 per annum, of which £56 goes to Sir C. Isham's school and almshouses. Sir Charles Isham, Bart., is lord of the manor, and chief landowner.

LAMPORT, a hmlt. in the par. of Stowe, co. Bucks, 2 miles N.W. of Buckingham.

LAMPTON, a vil. in the par. of Heston, co. Middlesex, 2 miles W. of Brentford. It is situated near Lampton Hills.

LAMYATT, a par. in the hund. of Whitstone, co. Somerset, 3 miles S. of Evercreech, its post town, and 2 N. of the Bruton railway station. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. The chief part of the land is in pasture. The soil consists of loam and clay. There are quarries of stone for building. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £200. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £266. The church, dedicated to SS. Mary and John, is an ancient stone structure, with a tower containing three bells. The register dates from 1613. There is a National school for both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is also held. In the neighbourhood is Creech Hill, a work of the Saxons. E. B. Napier, Esq., is lord of the manor.

LANARK, or, as it is sometimes called, Clydesdale, is a large and important county in the western part of the Lowlands, or S. div. of Scotland. It is bounded on the N. by the cos. Dumbarton and Stirling, on the S. by the co. Dumfries, on the E. by cos. Edinburgh, Linlithgow, and Peebles, and on the W. by cos. Ayr and Renfrew. Its extreme length from S.S.E. to N.N.W. is rather more than 50 miles, and its greatest breadth from E. to W. is 32 miles. Its area is 987 square miles, or 631,719 acres. The county, up to the time of James II., included the co. of Renfrew. For administrative purposes it is divided into Upper, Middle, and Lower wards. The Upper ward, although the most extensive of the three, is of the least value; it is for the most part hilly and moorish, and from the nature of the soil, and altitude of the surface, cannot be considered susceptible of much agricultural improvement. The Middle ward is everywhere diversified by frequent irregularities, and is nearly one-third moss-land; the greater portion of its arable land lies between 200 and 300 feet above sea-level. The banks of the Clyde in the district are chiefly occupied by orchards and gardens, for which Clydesdale has so long been celebrated. The Lower ward is the smallest, but the most populated and fertile; its surface in some parts is level, while in others it might be termed hilly, its highest point being at the ridge of Dechmont and Cathkin. The greatest elevations of this county, with their altitude above the sea, are—the Lowther hills, 2,450 feet; Tinto, 2,236; Culter Fell, 1,700; Welstoun Mount, 1,550; Leven Seat, 1,250; and Dickmount Hill, 700. The rivers are the Clyde, which flows in a winding course of more than 60 miles, dividing the county into nearly two equal parts; the Douglas water, the Mouse, the Aven, the Nethan, the Kelvin, the Calder, and the North Calder. The minor streams are the Elwin, the Cotten, the Little Clyde, the Avon, &c., besides several tributaries to the Clyde. The Forth and Clyde, and also the Monkland canals, traverse the county. There are several lakes, the chief being, Bishop's Loch, Crane Loch, Woodend Loch, White Loch, Lane Loch, &c. The climate of the county is variable; severe frosts of long duration are seldom experienced. The south-westerly and westerly winds prevail during the greater portion of the year, and in some parts of the county more rain falls than in any other locality of Scotland. In mineral productions the county is, perhaps, the richest in Scotland. Small quantities of gold and silver are occasionally met with. Lead is extensively worked, the annual produce amounting to between 600 and 700 tons per annum. Coal of various kinds abounds, the area of the coal-fields of the county being about 120 square miles. Limestone and ironstone are very plentiful. The district possesses greywacke, trap-rock, and Old Red sandstone. The commencement of improvement in cultivation in this part of Scotland was not apparent until near the latter end of last century, and notwithstanding many difficulties, the county is now in a high state of cultivation, much having been done in the reclamation of waste, and the fertilisation of naturally good lands. The inhabitants of the inland and upland districts breed and graze vast numbers of black cattle and sheep. Some of the leases run nineteen years. According to a recent return, the estimated gross produce is 209,324 bushels of wheat, 90,158 bushels of barley, 1,936,027 bushels of oats, 8,837 bushels of bere, 108,336 bushels of beans, 160,564 tons of turnips, and 34,872 tons of potatoes. The number of live stock amounted to 7,241 horses, 30,528 milch cows, 9,938 calves, 18,488 other bovine cattle, 127,916 sheep, and 8,891 swine. Previous to the beginning of the last century the county was not remarkable either for commerce or manufacture. At the time of the Union considerable trade was carried on in the towns and villages in collecting yarn for the English markets, and many branches of the linen manufacture had been brought to considerable perfection. The rapid rise of Glasgow led to the discontinuance of most of the small establishments of the county. Those which now exist are so many branches of the extensive establishments of Glasgow, to such an extent, indeed, as to render it almost unnecessary to treat of the subject under this head. The facilities of communication by railway, road, river, and canal, are very great. It is intersected by the Caledonian railway, and Edinburgh and Glasgow line, as well as by the rivers and canals already mentioned.—The burghs in the county sending members to parliament, are Glasgow, Lanark, Hamilton, Airdrie, and Rutherglen. Glasgow alone sends two members; Lanark, Hamilton, and Airdrie, with Linlithgow and Falkirk, send one member; and Rutherglen, Port Glasgow, Renfrew, Kilmarnock, and Dumbarton, unite in sending one. The burghs of barony are Strathaven, Biggar, and East Kilbride. Population of the county in 1851, 530,169; 1861, 631,566; having more than quadrupled since the commencement of the century, when it had only 147,692. There are in the county 49 entire, and 4 parts of quoad civilia pars., 10 quoad sacra pars., and 34 chapels-of-ease. One of the part quoad civilia pars. is in the presb. of Lochmaben, and synod of Dumfries; 9 of the quoad civilia pars. are in the presb. of Biggar, and synod of Lothian and Tweeddale; 11 of the quoad civilia pars. and 2 of the chapels-of-ease are in the presb. of Lanark, and synod of Glasgow and Ayr; 15 of the quoad civilia pars. and 8 of the chapels-of-ease are in the presb. of Hamilton, and synod of Glasgow and Ayr; and 14 of the quoad civilia pars., 3 of the part quoad civilia pars., the 10 quoad sacra pars., and 24 of the chapels-of-ease, are in the presb. of Glasgow, and synod of Glasgow and Ayr. The places of worship in the county are divided between the Established Church, Free Church, United Presbyterians, Reformed Presbyterians, Original Secession, Independents, Baptists, Episcopalians, Moravians, Unitarians, Evangelical Union, Campbellites, Mormonites, Glassites, Roman Catholics, &c.—The ancient inhabitants of the county were the Caledonian tribe called the Damnii. The Romans possessed themselves of the district, and have left a great many traces behind them in the shape of camps and roads. Throughout the great struggle for Scottish independence, the county was the theatre of many miseries and military excesses; and at a subsequent period the turbulences of the Douglases, with the intrigues of the first Lord Hamilton, involved the county in the various calamities consequent upon intestine warfare. Peace reigned from the time of James II. until the escape of Queen Mary from Lochleven Castle, the assembling of her army at Hamilton, and its defeat by the Regent Murray at Langside. The county subsequently became subject to a thirty years' civil commotion, stimulated by the persecution of the more zealous Presbyterians of this district by Charles I. The revolution of 1688, however, was the harbinger of a more tranquil future, and it has ever since advanced in wealth and every species of improvement.—The county contains many noteworthy family seats: Hamilton Palace, Bothwell Castle, Wishaw House, Douglas Castle, Core House, Lee Castle, Dalziel House, Airdrie House, Cleland House, Bonniton House, Carstairs House, besides the mansions of the county gentry, which are very numerous.—The sheriff ordinary court is held at Glasgow on Tuesdays, Wednesdays, and Fridays; the appeal court on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Thursdays during session; and the small-debt court on Mondays and Thursdays. Sheriff courts are held every Tuesday and Friday during session at Hamilton, Airdrie, and Lanark; and under the Sheriff Small Debt Act circuit courts are held at Biggar on the second Thursday of March, June, September, and December, and on the first Friday of April, August, and December at Douglas.

LANARK, a par. in the upper ward of the co. of Lanark, Scotland. It includes the royal burgh of Lanark, and the vils. of New Lanark, and Cartland. Its length N.W. is about 6 miles, and its greatest breadth is 5 miles. The area of the parish is about 9,000 acres, 7,000 of which are in tillage. The surface is hilly, and rises 600 feet above sea-level at New Lanark. The soil differs in various parts of the parish, being gravelly in some localities, and clayey in others, while on the moors it is a hard till. Here coal is worked. Old Red sandstone is the predominant rock. The river Clyde runs along the north-western and south-western boundaries of the parish, and the Mouse water intersects the parish. These rivers have several falls, and are remarkably picturesque here. Over the Clyde there are two bridges, and over the Mouse five. The Caledonian railway runs through the parish, and has a station at the town of Lanark. The par. is the seat of a presb. in the synod of Glasgow and Ayr, in the patron. of the crown. The minister's stipend is £333. The parish church, built in 1777, was repaired in 1834. There is a chapel-of-ease dedicated to St. Leonard, in the patron. of the heads of families; also a Free church, two United Presbyterian churches, besides Independent, Episcopalian, and Roman Catholic places of worship. There are a burgh grammar school, Mrs. Wilson's charity schools for 50 children, St. Leonard's school, a ragged, and other schools. The chief seats are Lee Castle, the residence of the Lockhart family, Bonniton House, Cleghorn House, Sunnyside Lodge, and Smyllum House. The old Roman road Watling Street intersects the parish, and there is a Roman camp, 600 yards by 420, at Cleghorn, and another near Carstairs. Near the town, at an altitude of 200 feet, are the ruins of a castle known as Quaw Castle or Castledykes. Sir William Wallace resided here, and at Bonniton House are preserved a portrait of the hero, and a very curious chair on which he is said to have sat. Sir William Lockhart, the statesman and general of the Commonwealth period, was educated at Lanark school, as were also William Smellie, author of the treatise on midwifery, and General Roy. Judge Lee and William Lithgow were natives. The curious stone called the "Lee Penny" (which is said to have suggested to Sir Walter Scott his celebrated novel of the "Talisman") is still preserved at Lee House.

LANARK, a royal burgh, market, and post town, the capital of the county and parish to which it gives name, situated on the main road from Stirling to Carlisle, and a railway station on the Caledonian line, is 32 miles S.W. of Edinburgh, 25 S.E. of Glasgow, and 15 S.E. of Hamilton. It occupies an elevated position in a healthy spot, about half a mile from the river Clyde, and is a favourite place of resort for strangers during the summer months. It was the Roman Colania, on Watling Street, and the spot where Kenneth II. held a council in 978. It was burnt in 1244, and was the seat of Sir William Wallace when he killed William De Heselrig, the English sheriff of Lanarkshire, in 1297. Bruce finally recovered Lanark from the English in 1310. Here, on the 12th January, 1682, the Covenanters affixed their declaration on the market-cross against Charles II. The town is principally composed of one line of streets, running from E. to W., and bearing the respective names of Bloom Gate, High-street, and West Port. Besides these there are several smaller streets diverging, besides lanes and closes. It possesses some handsome buildings and good shops, and is well supplied both with gas and water. The county buildings, comprising the county offices and gaol, are fine structures. The Clydesdale Hotel is an ornament to the town, and behind it are the assembly rooms, erected in 1827 on the site of an ancient Franciscan monastery. The town possesses besides the parish church one quoad sacra parish church, a Free church, two United Presbyterian churches, an Episcopalian and a Roman Catholic chapel. In a niche over the eastern door of the parish church is placed a colossal statue of Sir William Wallace, executed and presented to the town by Forrest, a self-taught genius. The remains of the old parish church are situated a quarter of a mile eastward of the town. It has been deserted almost 90 years, but is much reverenced as the place where Wallace first saw his subsequently murdered wife. The general occupation of the inhabitants is handloom weaving for the Glasgow manufacturers, but lace embroidering, shoemaking, and handicrafts are also carried on. The town possesses good hotel accommodation, branch offices of the City of Glasgow bank, Commercial bank, and Royal bank, also a savings-bank, insurance agencies, mechanics' institute, and several benevolent and religious institutions. The Lanarkshire Advertiser, a monthly paper, is published here. The town is a royal and parliamentary burgh, and unites with Airdrie, Hamilton, Falkirk, and Linlithgow in returning one member to parliament. Its first charter, granted by Robert I., was dated in 1310, but its present charter (now lost) was granted by Charles I. on the 20th February, 1632. It is governed by a provost, two bailies, dean of guild, town clerk, a treasurer, and twelve councillors. The annual value of real property in 1860-1 amounted to £8,429, and the corporation revenue in 1859-60 was £1,366. The town gives the title of earl to the Hamiltons, and for more than two centuries it had the keeping of the weights and measures for Scotland. A burgh court is held by the magistrates for the town, and sheriff courts, commissary courts, and justice of peace courts, are held by the county authorities for the upper ward of the county. Market days are Tuesday and Saturday. Fairs are held on the last Wednesday of May (old style) for black cattle, last Wednesday of July, for horses and lambs, the Friday after Falkirk tryst in October, for horses and black cattle. Races take place about 2 miles from the town on the day after Whitsunday fair.

LANARK LOWER or UNDER WARD contains the pars. of Glasgow, Cadder, Carmunnock, and Rutherglen, with parts of Cathcart and Govan.

LANARK MIDDLE WARD contains Avondale, Blantyre, Bothwell, Cambuslang, Cambusnethan, Dalserf, Dalziel, Glasford, Hamilton, East Kilbride, Maxwelltown, New and Old Monkland, Shotts, and Stonehouse.

LANARK UPPER WARD contains Biggar, Carluke, Carmichael, Carnwath, Carstairs, Covington, Crawford, Crawfordjohn, Culter, Dolphinton, Douglas, Dunsyre, Lanark, Lesmahagow, Libberton, Pettinain, Symington, Walston, Wundell, Wiston, and a portion of Moffat.

LANARK, NEW, a large manufacturing vil. in the par. and co. of Lanark, Scotland. It is situated 1 mile S. of Lanark, on the right bank of the Clyde. It was founded by David Dale, in 1784, who erected the first of the present long range of cotton spinning mills, and constructed a subterranean aqueduct 300 feet long, through solid rock, for the purpose of diverting the waters of the Clyde, and converting them into a power for the moving of machinery. Mr. Dale was succeeded by his son-in-law, the visionary philanthropist Robert Owen, to whom the town is indebted for its educational establishments. In 1827 he ceased to have any connection with the village, and the factories passed into other hands. The "Institution," as it is called, is a large school in connection with the factories, which in various ways employ the whole of the inhabitants.

LANCANT, a chplry. in the par. of Tidenham, co Gloucester, 2 miles N.E. of Chepstow, its post town. It is situated on a bend of the river Wye, opposite the grounds of Piercefield. There is no village, only a few detached houses. From various points a view is obtained of the windings of the river between Tintern Abbey and Chepstow. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect. of Wollastone, in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol. The chapel-of-ease is dedicated to St. James. The tithes were commuted in 1810.

LANCASHIRE, a maritime shire and county palatine, in the north-western part of England, extending between the rivers Mersey and Duddon. It is bounde on the N. by Cumberland and Westmoreland, N.E. and E. by Yorkshire, S. by Cheshire, and W. by the Irish Sea. It is divided into two parts by Morecambe Bay, of which the northern contains the district of Furness. Its total length is 87 miles, and breadth nearly 45. It comprises an area of 1,219,221 acres, or 1,905 square miles; of which 80,000 acres are shore. Lancashire is in size the sixth county in England, and is now the most populous shire in the empire, its population being only exceeded by London. According to the census of 1861 it contains a population of 2,429,440, being a considerable increase to the population of 2,031,236 in 1851. Since the commencement of the present century it has more than trebled. This county was, at the dawn of English history, inhabited by a people called the Brigantes, the most powerful of all the tribes possessing the island. These people were subsequently subdued by Agricola, and Lancashire included in the province of Maxima Cæsariensis. For some time after the invasion of the Saxons this county retained its independence as a portion of the British state of Cumbria. In the 7th century part was reduced by the Angles under Egfrid, the son of Oswis, and added to the kingdom of Northumbria, but the whole county was not permanently brought into subjection before the reign of Edward the Elder, in 921. It was invaded by the Scots under Robert Bruce in 1323, who proceeded as far as Preston. It was here that the Earl of Lincoln landed with numerous German and Irish adherents to support the cause of Lambert Simnel, in the reign of Henry VII. When the "Pilgrimage of Graa" occurred in the reign of Henry VIII. the people of Lancashire revolted, but were subdued by the earls of Shrewsbury and Derby. In the Civil War it played a prominent part. Preston and Lancaster were alternately occupied by the royalists and parliamentarians. In 1644 Lathom House was besieged; and in 1648 the royalists under the Duke of Hamilton were defeated by Cromwell on Ribbleton Moor. In the rebellion of 1715 the followers of the Pretender were forced to surrender at Preston. In 1745 this county was occupied by the forces of the Young Pretender.—Lancashire forms two electoral divisions, viz. North Lancashire and South Lancashire, each returning two members to parliament. North Lancashire contains the hundreds of Lonsdale, Amounderness, Leyland, and Blackburn; and South Lancashire the hundreds of Salford and West Derby. It is in the northern circuit, and assizes are held at Lancaster for North Lancashire, and at Liverpool for South Lancashire. The county palatine of Lancaster is attached to the Duchy of Lancaster, which, by Act of Parliament in the first year of Edward IV., was vested in the said king and his heirs, to hold as a separate inheritance, but annexed to the crown, in which it is still vested. A court of chancery is held at Lancaster for the county palatine. Bankruptcy courts are held at Liverpool and Manchester. The number of townships in Lancashire is about 500, and these still serve as the chief civil territorial divisions, having separate rates for their poor and highways. It comprises 69 parishes. No county in the empire possesses larger and more flourishing cities. Of these the chief are, Liverpool, Manchester, Salford, Oldham, Preston, Blackburn, Wigan, Lancaster, Ashton-under-Lyne, Rochdale, Bolton, Accrington, Bury, Clitheroe, Warrington, &c.; there are also 29 market towns, and above 900 villages and hamlets. Lancashire is governed by a lord-lieutenant, high sheriff, and 350 magistrates.—As regards the geographical features of the county, its northern part, called Furness, detached from the main portion, forms an integral part of the Cumbrian mountains. This part is again divided into two districts, called the Upper Furness, or Furness Fells, and Lower Furness. The upper is distinguished by mountains rising to an elevation of 2,000 and 3,000 feet, watered by streams or occupied by lakes. Towards the coast the country presents a flat and swampy aspect—the Lower Furness. In the chief portion of the county the northern and eastern parts are traversed by branches from the central high lands running into Derbyshire. These, however, are not equal in elevation to the Cumbrian group, but form high waste moorlands. In the southern and western parts these elevations decrease and leave a broad flat surface running down to the sea. This flatness borders the sea from the mouth of the river Wyre to that of the Lune, and continues as far as Morecambe Bay. With this exception, and that of Low Furness, Lancashire assumes almost a mountainous character. Its chief heights are, Old Man, in Coniston Fells, 2,577 feet; Pendle Hill, near Clitheroe, 1,803 feet; Bleasdale Forest, 1,709 feet; Boulworth Hill, 1,689 feet; Whittle Hill, 1,614 feet; Rivington Moor, 1,545 feet; Lee Pike; and Langridge Fell. The coast, with few exceptions, is low throughout, bordered by broad sands. Its outline is regular, excepting the two bays of Liverpool and Morecambe, and the estuary of the Ribble. The islands along the coast are off the southern extremity of Furness; these are Walney Island, Foulney, Piel of Fouldrey, Sheep and Roe Islands, and Old Barrow Ramsey. They are all small and unimportant, excepting that of Walney, which is 8 miles long, and never exceeds 1 mile in width. It stands upon a bed of peat, and is so low as to have been nearly inundated. It contains two hamlets, and at its southern point a lighthouse.—The rivers that irrigate Lancashire generally flow from N. to S. The Lune, or Loyne, rising in Westmoreland, enters Lancashire near Kirkby Lonsdale, receiving as its tributaries the Greta and the Wenning, and after passing Lancaster empties itself into Lancaster Bay. The Wyre, rising in the Yorkshire moorlands, and after a course of 28 miles, empties itself in Lancaster Bay. The Ribble rises in the Yorkshire mountains, and, after dividing the counties of York and Lancaster, enters Lancashire, receiving on its course the Hodder, Calder, and Derwent, till it finally discharges itself in the Irish Sea. The Mersey rises near Huddersfield, and flowing through Yorkshire, proceeds along the border of Lancashire and Cheshire till it reaches Stockport, when it is joined by the Goyt, and is called the Mersey. Its tributaries are the Irwell, Irk, and the Medlock, and it empties itself in Liverpool Bay. There are also several other small rivers in the county, as the Winster, Duddon, Leven, Douglas, and Alt. The two chief lakes are in Furness—the Windermere and Coniston Water. The former, though on the borders of Westmoreland, is included in Lancashire. It is about 11 miles long, and varies in breadth from 1 to half a mile. It is the largest lake in England, and its scenery remarkably beautiful. Its waters are relieved by the Leven. Coniston, or, as it is sometimes called, Thurston Water, is nearly 6 miles long and half a mile broad. Its waters are discharged by the Leven. Coniston Fells are at its northern extremity. There are other shallow lakes, as Marton Mere, White Otter, and Barton Mere, but of little importance. The chief promontories are South End, Rossal Point, and Birkenhead.—Communications through the county are well afforded by the Sankey Canal, extending from St. Helens, near Prescot, into the Mersey; the Duke of Bridgewater's canal, commencing in Manchester and from thence flowing into Cheshire; the Leeds and Liverpool canal, the largest in the kingdom, entering Lancashire near Colne, and passing by Blackburn, Chorley, Wigan, and Ormskirk, to Liverpool; the Lancaster canal, beginning in Westmoreland at Kendal, and running direct to Lancaster, from whence, after a short course, it unites with the Leeds and Liverpool canal; and the Ashton-under-Lyne, Rochdale, Manchester, Bolton, and Bury canals. These canals are a portion of that inland navigation connecting the Irish Sea with the German Ocean. Nor are the facilities offered by this water communication the only means of transit in the county. Perhaps in no part of the United Kingdom is the railway system more completely carried out than in Lancashire. The entire S. of this county is traversed with a network of lines, and communication is easily held by rail with all the important towns. The main northern line to Scotland, in connection with the London and North-Western railway, enters Lancashire at Warrington passing Wigan, Preston, and Lancaster, and quitting the county at Burton. Manchester is a centre from whence all lines radiate. The Manchester and Liverpool line runs to Liverpool; another line joins Manchester with Preston. The Manchester and Huddersfield line and the Manchester and Yorkshire connect Manchester with the towns in Yorkshire. The North-Western railway unites Lancashire with London. There are also other smaller lines, such as that from Manchester to Altringham, Liverpool to Southport, Liverpool to Preston, Preston to Blackpool, and the Whitehaven and Furness junction railway, running along Furness. There are numerous coach roads, of which the chief are—the Carlisle and Manchester road, passing Chorley, Preston, Lancaster, into Westmoreland; the Liverpool road to Manchester; the London and Liverpool road; the Manchester road to Halifax and Leeds; and various other smaller roads, too numerous to mention.—The climate of Lancashire is mild and moist, being preserved from the cold easterly winds by the high hills running along its eastern boundary. It is, however, very subject to rain, by the clouds from the Atlantic being arrested on their progress. Owing to the moisture arising from this cause, Lancashire is an excellent grazing county. The land is well cultivated. Oats are the favourite crop, but wheat is sown along the shore. Potatoes are much cultivated. Meadows and pastures are much commoner however than arable fields. Sheep are not nearly so numerous as cattle; the black-faced Cheviot and Leicester are the chief breeds. The oxen are some of the best in England. There is also a good breed of strong horses for farming and laborious purposes.—The chief strata overspreading the county is the New Red sandstone, in which is a deposit of rock-salt. This formation abounds in the valley of the Mersey, and extands inland as far as Manchester. Near the coast it is covered with moss and peat. These peat mosses contain quantities of large timber trees, the remains of ancient forests. The coal-field, which crops out from under the red marl, is the great source of the prosperity attending the manufactures in this county. This field lies between the Ribble and the Mersey. The line which bounds it extends from Colne to Upholland, near Wigan, and from thence to Ormskirk, and between Newton and Warrington. A small coal-field E. of Lancaster occupies a portion of the county and extends into Yorkshire. The coal pits are most numerous about Prescot, Newton, Wigan, Bolton, Oldham, Ashton-under-Lyne, and in the vicinity of Blackburn and Burnley. Those in the northern coal-field are mostly in the neighbourhood of Hornby. The millstone grit forms those hills which bound the eastern side of the county. North of the Lune is the carboniferous or mountain limestone. Of the mineral productions of Lancashire the chief is coal, which is of various kinds; also lead, copper and ironstone, but these are obtained only in small quantities. The mountains of Furness furnish blue slate. Good freestone is quarried near Lancaster, and brick and pipe-clay are obtained in various parts.—The chief manufacture in the county is that of cotton, which is principally carried on in Manchester and its neighbourhood; but this source of industry in 1861 received a severe check from the scarcity of the raw material caused by the American civil war. There are also manufactures of woollen, worsted, stuffs, carpets, silk ribbons, beer-engines and machinery, shawls, hosiery, shipbuilding, soap, candles, leather, &c.—The ecclesiastical distribution of the county has undergone several changes. After the conversion of the Northumbrian Saxons to Christianity it was included in the diocese and province of York. Upon the supremacy of the West Saxons the southern part of it was joined to the diocese of Lichfield and the province of Canterbury. In 1541 these disjoined portions were re-united in the new diocese of Chester, formed by Henry VIII. and continued so to 1847. At that time, by an Act of Parliament which came into operation some years ago, the whole of the county, excepting the deanery of Furness and Cartmel, added to Carlisle, was formed into the diocese of Manchester, in the province of York. The parishes in this county are most extensive; that of Whalley contains 108,140 acres; Lancaster, 66,100; Oldham, 58,620; Blackburn, 45,620; and many others little inferior in extent. There are numerous dependent chapelries, and many new churches have been erected. The Independents and other Dissenters form a good portion of the manufacturing towns. Wesleyan Methodists are remarkably numerous. There is also a considerable mass of Roman Catholics. Lancashire has, in the colleges at Manchester and Liverpool, complete university institutions, representing the so-called University of London. The medical schools are held in good repute. Colleges are here of the Roman Catholics and other sects. This shire contains upwards of 50 public grammar and collegiate schools, besides private schools of a like class.—By the Poor-law Commissioners Lancashire is divided into 29 poor-law unions. These unions contain 475 parishes, with an area of 1,105,107 acres. Quarter sessions are held at Lancaster, and by successive adjournments at Salford, Preston, and Kirkdale. By the Reform Act this county was divided into two parts for parliamentary purposes. The election for the northern division takes place at Lancaster, and for the southern at Newton. Formerly 14 members were returned to parliament, viz. 2 for the county, and 2 each for the boroughs of Lancaster, Clitheroe, Liverpool, Newton, Preston, and Wigan. The Reform Act disinfranchised Newton, and reduced Clitheroe to 1 member, but created 4 new boroughs—Manchester, Bolton, Blackburn, and Oldham, each returning 2 members; and 5, Ashton-under-Lyne, Bury, Rochdale, Salford, and Warrington, each returning 1 member, so that the whole number returned to parliament is 26.—The history of Lancaster as a county palatine is curious. At an early date it was distinguished as an honour, or kind of superior feudal lordship. In the reign of Henry III. the honour was changed to an earldom in favour of Edmund, second son of that king. Edward III. erected the earldom into a duchy in favour of Henry Plantagenet, and afterwards of John of Gaunt, for whom the county was made a county palatine. Henry IV., by an Act of Parliament, caused that the title and revenues should remain to him and his heirs for ever, and the duchy has now for ages been annexed to the crown. The county palatine and the duchy of Lancaster, with regard to extent, are quite distinct. The duchy has a separate chancery court, with a chancellor, attorney-general, and other officers, having an equity jurisdiction within the limits of the duchy.—Lancashire contains many interesting objects of antiquity, including several Roman roads. Six of these radiate from Manchester; one runs to Blackrod, another to Ribchester, the ancient Coccium, two others to Cheshire, one to Stockport, and another to Stretford, supposed to be the Fines Flaviæ et Maximæ mentioned by Richard of Cirencester. There are others also too numerous to mention. All traces of the station at Mancunium, now Manchester, have disappeared. There are but few castellated remains now left. The chief are the keeps of Lancaster and Dalton castles, the ruins of the castle on the Island of Piel of Fouldrey, and Hornby castle, those of the castles of Furness, Gleaston, Thurland, Greenhough, Hoghton, Turton, and Belfield. There are remains of old abbeys at Furness, Cockesand, and Whalley; of priories at Burscough and Upper Holland; of churches at Cartmel and Middleton. Among the chief seats are Knowsley Park, Earl of Derby; Holker, Earl of Burlington; Lathom, Lord Skelmersdale; Atherton, Lord Lifford; Heaton, Earl of Wilton; Worsley, Earl of Ellesmere; Croxteth, Earl of Sefton.

LANCASTER, a par., market town, municipal and parliamentary borough, and county town of Lancashire, exercising separate jurisdiction, but locally situated in the hunds. of Lonsdale South of the Sands and Amounderness, 15 miles S.W. of Kirby Lonsdale, 60 N.W. of Manchester, and 240 N.N.W. of London by road, or 230 by the London and North-Western railway, on which it is a first-class station. It is situated about 6 miles from Lancaster Bay, on the river Lune and Lancaster canal.

The par. is very extensive, including, besides the county town, the chplries. of Admarsh, Caton, Glasson, Gressingham, Littledale, Overton, Poulton-le-Sands, Quernmoore, Skerton, Stalmine, Wyersdale, and 13 other townships.—The town, which is situated in the north-western angle of the county, is built on an eminence rising abruptly from the left bank of the Lune. It occupies the site of a Roman station, as the suffix to its name indicates, probably Ad Alaunam of Richard of Cirencester, or Longovici. It is supposed to have been dismantled after the departure of the Romans, but was restored by the Anglo-Saxon kings of Northumbria, who made it their capital. It is mentioned in the Domesday Survey as Loncastre, and at that time formed part of the crown manor of Halton. In 1094 the Anglo-Norman baron, Roger de Poitou, built the castle, and enlarged the town, which received a charter from King John. In the reign of Edward III. it was made a county palatine, and the manor, with the duchy of Lancaster, conferred on John of Gaunt, the king's son, a dignity still retained by the royal family. In 1322 it was plundered by the Scottish army under Bruce, and part of the castle destroyed, but it was immediately restored, and the gateway tower was then added. During the fear that prevailed in England regarding the Spanish Armada, the castle was used as a fortress, and has ever since been employed as the county prison. In the wars of the Roses the town was greatly reduced, and again suffered considerably during the parliamentary war. In 1698 a great part of the town was destroyed by fire, in behalf of the Pretender, and in 1745 was much agitated by the temporary success of the Pretender.—The municipal borough, which was first chartered by King John, when Earl of Morton, is divided into three wards. It is governed, under the Municipal Corporations' Act, by a mayor, who is returning officer, 6 aldermen, and 18 councillors, with the style of "Mayor, bailiffs, and commonalty of the town of Lancaster." Its income is about £3,000, chiefly arising from the rents of the townlands. The population of the municipal borough in 1851 was 14,604, and of the parliamentary, 16,168; by the census of 1861 the population of the municipal was 14,487, and of the parliamentary borough, 16,005, showing a small decrease in the decennial period. The bounds of the parliamentary borough were extended by the Reform Act so as to include, besides the "old borough," parts of the townships of Bulk and Skerton. It first exercised the elective franchise in the 23rd of Edward I., and continued to return members till the 1st of Edward II., when it intermitted until the reign of Edward VI., since which time it has regularly returned two members to parliament.—The general appearance of the town is picturesque. The castle, crowning the summit of the hill on which the town is built, stands out with its stately towers in bold relief, and is the chief object of attraction. It has been nearly wholly rebuilt, and is used as a county gaol and court-house. The keep is antique and very strong; its gateway, with its two projecting towers, dates back to the time of Edward III. The southern bank of the river Lune is spanned by a bridge of five arches. The chief buildings in the town are—the townhall, situated in the market-place, a stone building surmounted by a small clock tower, and entered through a portico supported by pillars; the custom-house, on St. George's quay, a neat building with a portico supported by four Ionic columns; the county lunatic asylum, on Lancaster Moor, a building of the Doric order; the barracks; the cemetery, on Lancaster Moor; the dispensary, music hall, assembly rooms, Odd Fellows' hall, Ripley's hospital, grammar school, banks, theatre, &c.—The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £1,709. The parish church of St. Mary, situated on the N.E. side of the Castle hill, is in the later style of English architecture, with a lofty tower containing a clock and eight bells. It was originally built by Roger de Poitou. The interior comprises a nave, two aisles, chancel, and gallery, at the W. end; pillars and pointed arches divide the aisles from the nave. In the chancel are some specimens of oak carvings; also three windows in stained glass, representing the Crucifixion and Ascension in the centre window, divided into ten compartments, and the other two "Moses striking the Rock," and "Feed My Lambs." There are likewise other stained-glass windows, representing "Adoration of the Magi," "Doubting of St. Thomas," and incidents in the life of John the Baptist. The church possesses a number of monuments and brasses, of which the most important are those dedicated to William Stratford, LL.D., Thomas Bowes, and Sir Samuel Eyre. In Chapel-street is St. John's church, a simple stone building: the living is a perpet. cur.* In Moor-lane stands St. Anne's chapel, a plain building: its living is a perpet. cur.* St. Thomas's church, in Penny-street, is a structure possessing a spire containing six bells: it comprises a nave, aisles, and chancel, and a stained-glass window to the memory of the late incumbent: the living is a perpet. cur.* On Lancaster Moor is a neat edifice called Christ Church, with two small spires. There are in Lancaster also places of worship for the Independents, Wesleyans, various orders of Methodists, Quakers, and Roman Catholics. The Roman Catholic church is a new building, dedicated to St. Peter, with a very lofty spire. This town is well furnished with schools. The Royal Grammar school, at the top of Nelson-street, in the Tudor style, is a very excellent establishment; St. Mary's National school, for boys, St. Leonard's Gate, has an endowment by which 30 boys are clothed and educated here gratis; and the St. Mary's National school for girls, which educates 80 girls and 140 infants: in Edward-street is St. Anne's school, containing 130 boys; in Marton-street is St. Thomas's National school; and in Aldcliffe-street is the Lancasterian school for boys and girls. There are also schools for the children of Roman Catholics, Quakers, and Independents. Of the charities there is a very large building in course of construction to be called Ripley's hospital, endowed by Mrs. Ripley, for the purpose of educating and maintaining boys and girls, to the number of 300, within a radius of 15 miles of Lancaster. The almshouses are, Gardyner's, founded in 1485, for 4 old men; Penny's, founded in 1715, for 12 poor persons; and Gillison's, founded in 1781, for eight poor unmarried women; and the union poorhouse.—Independent of its general retail trade, Lancaster possesses a considerable manufacturing trade. There are cotton and silk mills, iron foundries, corn mills, large marble works, and considerable manufacturing establishments for furniture, also an iron shipbuilding company. A good deal of commerce is carried on by the coasting and foreign trade. Owing to the great amount of sand that accumulates in the channel of the Lune, navigation is impossible to vessels of large burthen. To remedy this, in 1787 a dock was constructed at Glasson, 5 miles down the river, enabling vessels to discharge their cargoes into lighters to be brought to St. George's quay. The Lancaster canal, which is conveyed over the river Lune by an aqueduct of five semicircular arches, each 70 feet span, communicates with the mining districts, thus supplying the neighbourhood with coal and other commodities. Here are held the assizes for the northern division of the county, also the borough court of pleas, court of pleas for the county, and the consistory court of the archdeaconry of Richmond. The county court and insolvent debtors' court are held monthly. The Poor-law guardians meet every Saturday. Lancaster Poor-law Union contains 19 townships and parishes. No traces exist of the leper hospital founded by King John, or the Black friary founded in Henry III.'s reign. Of the old castle, the chief specimen of antiquity the town boasts of, there remain the great keep, 90 feet high; King John's Gate; John of Gaunt's Tower, now a record office, and other towers. In the parish churchyard is an old runic cross. Dr. Taylor, Professor Owen, and Dr. Whewell were natives of the town. The principal seats in the neighbourhood are—Drummond Hall, Halton Hall, and Quernmore. This town is the head-quarters of the militia. There are two newspapers published every Saturday morning—the Lancaster Gazette and Lan- caster Guardian. Markets are held every Wednesday and Saturday, the latter being the most important. Fairs for horses, cattle, cheese, &c., are held on the 1st May, 5th July, and 10th October, the latter of which is the chief cheese fair in the county.

LANCASTER, DUCHY OF, a lib. in co. Gloucester, contains the pars. of Bulley, Huntley, Longhope, Minsterworth, Tibberton, and part of Westbury-on-Severn, comprising about 8,660 acres.

LANCASTER, DUCHY OF, a lib. to the W. of the city of London, co. Middlesex, comprising that portion of the metropolis known as St. Clement Danes, St. Mary-le-Strand, and the Savoy, which occupies the site of the palace of the earls and dukes of Lancaster.

LANCHESTER, a par. in the W. div. of Chester ward, co. Durham, 7 miles N.W. of Durham, its post town, 9 S.W. of Wolsingham, and the same distant W. of Chester-le-Street. It is a station on the Lanchester Valley section of the North-Eastern railway. The village is situated on the river Wear, and on the high road from Wolsingham to Newcastle-upon-Tyne. It is an extensive par., comprising the chplries. of Collierley, Ebchester, Esh, Medomsley, Satley, and Benfieldside, and 14 tnshps. It is a polling-place for the N. div. of the co. Lanchester was formerly of greater importance than at present. Here are the remains of a Roman station, the wall of which, in some places, is still 12 feet high; there is also a subterranean chamber, the descent to which is by stone steps. Coins of Antonine, inscriptions, altars, and other relics, especially a plate of solid gold with an inscription to the god Mars, have been found among the ruins. The Roman way Watling Street is on the eastern extremity of these ruins. Petty sessions are held fortnightly at the police station, and the board of guardians meet every other Friday at the union poorhouse. There are some extensive collieries and quarries in the neighbourhood. The soil is light but very fertile. The subsoil of the adjacent hills is rock. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1773. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £300, in the patron. of the Bishop of Ripon. The church, which was made collegiate in 1283 by Bishop Beck, is dedicated to All Saints; it is a stone structure with a square embattled tower containing a clock and six bells. Over the entrance of the vestry room are some Scripture figures representing the Virgin surrounded by angels. The E. window is in three compartments. There are mural tablets to the families of Hutchinson, Greenwell, Thompson, Claverings, and an effigy of Dean Austell bearing date 1461. In addition to the parish church there are six district churches at Collierley, Ebchester, Esh, Medomsley, Benfieldside, and Satley, the livings of all which are perpet. curs. varying in val. from £300 to £150. The parochial charities produce about £308 per annum, of which £240 go to Russell's almshouses and school and £14 to another school. The parochial school for both sexes was erected in 1824 by voluntary contributions. There is a chapel-of-ease at Burnope, in which a Sunday-school is held. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel. Greencroft Hall, Ford Hall, Coalpike Hall, and Woodlands Hall are the chief residences. The Ecclesiastical Commissioners are lords of the manor.

LANCING, a par. in the hund. of Brightford, rape of Bramber, co. Sussex, 2 miles W. of Shoreham, its post town, and 2 N.E. of Worthing. It is a station on the South Coast railway. The parish, which is small, is bounded on the E. by the river Adur and Shoreham Harbour, and on the S. by the English Channel. Above half the land is arable, the remainder nearly evenly divided between pasture and seabeach. The soil is chiefly a rich loam alternating with sand, except in that part of the parish occupied by the downs, which are chalk. The surface is well wooded, and from the high grounds are extensive views, embracing the seacoast from Beachy Head to Selsey Bill, with the Isle of Wight and a broad expanse of the Channel in the distance. On the road to New Shoreham is a suspension bridge over the river Adur. In that portion of the parish called South Lancing a terrace of houses has been erected facing the sea, with a lawn sloping down to the beach. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £767 14*s.* and the vicarial for £176. There is also a rent-charge of £61 8*s.* 6*d., payable to the Rector of West Grinstead. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £151, in the patron. of the Bishop of London. The church has a tower containing three bells, and has recently been restored and re-seated. There is a National school. A public school, termed St. Nicholas College, was founded in 1848 by the Rev. N. Woodard. Lancing House, the seat of Sir J. M. Lloyd, Bart., is surrounded by a demesne tastefully laid out. On Lancing Down, in this parish, have recently been discovered tesselated pavements, several small altars, lavatories, and numerous Roman coins.

LANDBEACH, a par. in the hund. of Northstow, co. Cambridge, 5 miles N.E. of Cambridge, its post town, and 1½ mile from the Waterbeach railway station. It is a small agricultural parish situated on the line of the Ely railway. The main road from Cambridge to Ely passes through a portion of the parish. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1807. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £633, in the patron. of Corpus Christi College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is built of rubble and stone. It has a square embattled tower, surmounted by a spire. The parochial charities produce about £6 per annum, with some almshouses. There is a National school, and place of worship for Baptists.

LANDCROSS, a par. in the hund. of Shebbear, co. Devon, 2 miles S.E. of Bideford, its nearest railway station and post town, and 4 N.E. of Great Torrington. It is a small village situated on a peninsula formed by the river Torridge and the high road from Bideford to Torrington. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. Stone is quarried for building purposes. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £63. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £81. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is an ancient stone structure, with a spired tower containing one bell. General Monk, afterwards Duke of Albemarle, was baptised in this church. There is a place of worship for the Wesleyans. The trustees of the late Lord Rolle are lords of the manor and principal landowners.

LANDEWEDNACK, a par. in the hund. of Kerrier, co. Cornwall, 10½ miles S.E. of Helston, its post town. It is situated on the Channel, and within its limits is the Lizard Point, the most southerly point of land in Great Britain, from which ships leaving the Channel date their departure, and near which are two lighthouses. This parish formerly belonged to the Earl of Mortaigne and the Hawkinses. A short distance from the Lizard, and partly in this parish, is the famed Kynance Cove, enclosed by high masses of rock of gigantic elevation, and pierced with caverns. These rocks are outwardly of a dark green colour, but internally most beautifully variegated, having veins from light green to purple, white, red and scarlet. The rock called the "Devil's bellows" has obtained this appellation from the roar caused by the rushing of the sea into its deep chasms as the tide rises. There are two stone quarries, from which serpentine of exquisite beauty and susceptible of high polish is obtained. This stone is chiefly used for slabs, mantelpieces, vases, and other articles. There are also brick and tile kilns. During the summer season this place is much frequented by tourists. At Landewednack Cove the pilchard fishery is carried on. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £253 11*s.* The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £253. The church, dedicated to St. Lanty, is a stone structure, with a square embattled tower crowned with pinnacles and containing three bells, each dedicated to a saint. The interior of the church contains an ancient granite font, old register chest, and several monuments. There is a National school for both sexes. The Wesleyans and Association Methodists have each a place of worship. Thomas Henry Hawkins, Esq., is lord of the manor.

LANDFORD, a par. in the hund. of Frustfield, co. Wilts, 10 miles S.E. of Salisbury, its post town, and 6 S.W. of the Dean railway station. The parish, which is of small extent, is situated on a branch of the river Test, and on the road from Salisbury to Southampton. It is wholly agricultural. A third of the parish is unenclosed common, the remainder good arable, pasture, and meadow. A stream which has its rise in this parish flows into the Southampton Water. The substratum is rich in iron ore, but no mines have been opened. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £220. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £139. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, was recently erected. There is a parochial school. The manor-house once belonged to Bishop Davenant.

LANDGUARD-FORT, in the par. of Felixstow, hund. of Colneis, co. Suffolk, 12 miles S.E. of Ipswich, and 1½ mile from Harwich. There is a chapel for the garrison. See HARWICH.

LANDICAN, a tnshp. in the par. of Woodchurch, hund. of Wirrall, co. Chester, 3 miles S.W. of Birkenhead, and 6 N. of Great Neston.

LANDKEY, a par. in the hund. of South Molton, co. Devon, 2½ miles S.E. of Barnstaple, its post town. The village, which is small, is situated near the river Taw. The par. includes the hmlt. of Hanaford, or Herford, where was formerly a chapel-of-ease. The inhabitants are chiefly agricultural. The soil is loamy, and subsoil limestone. The living is a perpet. cur. with that of Swimbridge annexed, in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £374, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is an ancient stone structure, with a tower containing six bells. It contains a monument to one of the Acland family. The Wesleyans have a chapel. The parochial charities produce about £47 per annum, of which £5 goes to a school. The trustees of the late Lord Rolle and the Duke of Bedford are lords of the manor.

LANDMOTH-WITH-CATTO, a tnshp. in the par. of Leake, wap. of Allertonshire, North Riding co. York, 4½ miles S.E. of Northallerton, its post town and railway station. It contains Cotcliffe Wood.

LANDORE, a railway station on the South Wales section of the Great Western railway, 2 miles from Swansea.

LANDPORT, a district in the par. of Portsea, co. Hants, adjoins Portsmouth, of which it is a populous suburb. Here is the terminus of the South-Western and South Coast railways. It includes the districts known as Halfway Houses and Mile End, at which latter place stands the church. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £300, in the patron. of the Vicar of Portsea. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a modern structure built in 1827, at the cost of £12,000. It has an E. window, 23 feet by 15. There are several places of worship belonging to the different denominations of Protestant Dissenters, and schools for boys and girls.

LANDRAKE, a par. in the S. div. of the hund. of East, co. Cornwall, 3½ miles N.E. of St. German's, its post town, and 4 N.W. of Saltash. The village is chiefly agricultural. The parish is bounded on the E. by the river Lynher, here crossed by a bridge. The living is a vic.* with that of St. Erney annexed, in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £282. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient structure with a lofty turreted tower. In the chancel is a monument to the Courtenay family. There is a chapel-of-ease at Erney. The charities produce about £100 per annum, including the endowment of a school, founded in 1703 by Sir Robert Jeffrey, and the income of the five almshouses. There are Sunday-schools and a chapel for Wesleyans. The Earl of Mount Edgcumbe is lord of the manor. Cattle fairs are held on the first Wednesdays in February and September, and cattle and pleasure fairs on St. Peter's Day and the 29th June.

LAND'S END, in co. Cornwall, the most western point of England, situated in W. long. 5° 11'. It was the Penwith of the Britons, and Bolerium or Antivestæum Promontorium of Ptolemy. The coast, which is broken and desolated, is visited by numbers of woodcocks in October and November.

LANDULPH, or LANDILIP, a par. in the S. div. of the hund. of East, co. Cornwall, 5 miles N. of Saltash, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the western bank of the river Tamar, and is wholly agricultural. A considerable portion of marsh-land has recently been reclaimed. The Beer Alston lead and silver mines extend into this parish, which includes the small port of Cargreen. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £328. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £340. The church, dedicated to St. Dilpe, is situated by the side of the river. It is an ancient structure with a lofty embattled tower. The church contains a monument to Theodore Palæologus, a descendant of the last Christian emperors of Constantinople, who died in 1636, and was interred here. The Wesleyans have a chapel. The parochial charities produce about £24 per annum. There is a National school. Near the village is a mineral spring formerly in much repute.

LANDWADE, a par. in the hund. of Staploe, co. Cambridge, 3 miles N.W. of Newmarket, its post town. It is a small parish adjoining that of Burwell. There is no village, only a few farmhouses. Here is an old moated seat of the Cottons of Madingley, who inherited it through the Hastings, in which family the manor has been since the reign of Edward III. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic.* of Exning, in the dioc. of Ely. The church is a cruciform structure dedicated to St. Nicholas. It contains six marble monuments to the Cotton family.

LANEAST, a par. in the hund. of East and Lesnewth, co. Cornwall, 7 miles W. of Launceston, its post town. It is situated on the river Inny. The parish is bounded on the N. by Trenegios and Tresmere, on the E. by Egloskerry and Trewen, on the S. by Altarnum, and on the W. by St. Clether. Laneast was formerly held by Launceston Priory. In the neighbourhood is a small lead mine called Wheal-Baron. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £113. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £85. The church, dedicated to St. Satiovla, St. Wilvola, or St. Galwell, is an ancient stone structure with a lofty tower containing five bells. The interior of the church contains a carved screen, open oak seats, and remains of an ancient painted window. There is a National school. In a meadow near the church is a well called the "Wishing Well." The Wesleyans have a chapel at Tregeare. At Neptune, in this parish, John Couch Adams was born, the discoverer of the planet Neptune.

LANE BRIDGE, a vil. in the par. of Whalley, co. Lancaster, 2 miles from Burnley, and 21 N. of Manchester. It is situated near the junction of the rivers Barn and Calder, on the Lancashire and Yorkshire railway. Most of the inhabitants are engaged in the neighbouring cotton-spinning and printing mills, and in the collieries. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £150, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately. The church is a modern edifice dedicated to St. Paul. There are several Dissenting places of worship and schools.

LANE DELPH, a hmlt. in the par. and borough of Stoke-on-Trent, co. Stafford, 2 miles N.W. of Lane End, and 13 N. of Stafford.

LANE END, a tnshp. and parochial chplry. in the par. of Stoke-upon-Trent, N. div. of the hund. of Pirohill, co. Stafford, 4 miles S.E. of Newcastle-under-Lyme. It includes its market and post town, Longton, which is a station on the Silverdale and Longton branch of the North Staffordshire railway. The Trent and Mersey canal passes about 2 miles to the westward. This township is situated at the southern extremity of the district called "the Potteries," and on the road from Newcastle to Uttoxeter. It is a place of recent growth, having risen to opulence and importance in consequence of the flourishing state of the earthenware and china manufacture established here since the commencement of the present century. It abounds in brown limestone, coal, and ironstone, with manganese, coloured marl, and china-clay: of this last the first "stone-china" table service was manufactured by Mr. Turner. There are extensive collieries in both the townships of Lane End and Longton [which see]. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £160, in the patron. of certain trustees, appointed under an Act of Parliament obtained in 1792. The church is a brick structure with a tower, built about 1760, and subsequently enlarged. There is also a new church at Longton. The Baptists, Independents, Wesleyans, and New Connexion Methodists, have places of worship. There are National schools partly endowed.

LANE-END, a district par. in the hund. of Desborough, co. Buckingham, 4 miles N. of Great Marlow. This parish has been recently formed for ecclesiastical purposes out of Great Marlow, West Wycombe, Fingest, and Hambleden. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Oxford. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, was erected in 1832, at the cost of £3,000. There are National and Sunday schools.

LANE END, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Bistree, par. of Mold, co. Flint, 3 miles from Mold.

LANE-ENDS, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Widness, co. Lancaster, 5 miles S.E. of Prescot.

LANEHAM, a par. in the South Clay div. of the wap. of Bassetlaw, and lib. of Southwell, co. Nottingham, 6½ miles N.E. of Tuxford, its post town, 8 S.E. of East Retford, and 3 N.E. of the Tuxford railway station. The village, which is small, and of irregular form, is situated on the river Trent. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in agriculture. The surface is flat, with considerable portions of marsh. The soil is clay, but the land in good cultivation. The tithes have been commuted for land and money payments. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £120, pats. the Dean and Chapter of York. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient edifice with a tower containing four bells. The parochial charities produce about £13 per annum. Robert Glossop, Esq., holds the manor under the Archbishop of York.

LANEHEAD, a hmlt. in the par. of Ashton-under-Lyne, co. Lancaster, near Ashton.

LANE-HEAD, a hmlt. in the par. of Hutton-Magna, wap. of Gilling-West, North Riding co. York, 7 miles N. of Richmond.

LANERCOST, or ABBEY-LANERCOST, a par. in the ward of Eskdale, co. Cumberland, 2½ miles N.E. of Brampton, its post town, and 14 from Carlisle. The par., which is very extensive, being 10 miles in length from E. to W., and 9 from N. to S., is situated on the river Irthing, and is intersected by the Kingwater and several streams, also by the Carlisle and Newcastle railway. It contains the tnshps. of Askerton, Burtholme, Kingwater, and Waterhead, with Gilsland Spa. About two-thirds of the land is in pasture, the remainder arable and woodland. The vales of Kingwater and Irthing produce rich crops of grain. The soil in the lowlands is a rich loam, alternated with sand, and resting on a substratum of limestone. The village, which is of considerable antiquity, is identified as the site of the Roman station Amboglana, where was posted the Cohors Prima Ælia Dacorum. At Harehill a fragment of the Roman wall is yet standing, about 5 yards in length and 10 feet high, and on the site of the encampment several votive altars, dedicated to Jupiter Optimus Maximus, Mars, and other Roman deities, have been found. In 1169 Robert de Vallibus, Lord of Gillesland, founded the abbey of Lanercost for a prior and monks of the order of St. Augustine, and dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene. It was frequently visited by Edward I., and was partly burnt in 1296. In 1311 Robert Bruce encamped here for three days with his whole army. At the Dissolution the revenue of the priory was returned at £79 19*s., and the site granted to Thomas Lord Dacre, a descendant of the original founder. The remains of the priory, now covered in ivy, form a ruin on the N. bank of the river Irthing. They consist chiefly of the conventual church of which the nave has been appropriated as the parish church, part of the cloisters, refectory, and other conventual buildings. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1802. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £93. The church, which consists of the W. end portion of the ruined priory, is dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene, whose statue stands in a niche above the gateway. The tower, chancel, and transept, all of which are roofless, are covered with ivy. There are ancient tombs of the Dacres and Howards. There is also a district church at Gilsland, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £30. There are parochial schools situated at Kircumbeck, Midgeholme, Crowsgate, and the Island. The Dissenters have a meeting-house at Nickies Hill. The Earl of Carlisle is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

LANES, a hmlt. in the par. of Peniston, West Riding co. York, 2 miles W. of Peniston. It is situated near the Sheffield line of railway. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the woollen manufacture, and in the neighbouring fulling mills.

LANESBOROUGH, a post and market vil. in the par. of Rathcline, cos. Longford and Leinster, Ireland, 8 miles S.W. of Longford and 82 from Dublin. It is situated on the left bank of the river Shannon, near Lough Ree. It was founded by Sir George Lane in 1678, and sent two representatives to the Irish parliament before the Union. The river is crossed by a bridge of nine arches. There are a police station and a dispensary, the latter within the Poor-law Union of Longford. The proprietors of the town are the Whites of Rathcline. The Butlers of Belvedere take title of earl and viscount from this place. A fair is held on the 12th February.

LANGAR, a par. in the N. div. of the wap. of Bingham, co. Nottingham, 4 miles S.E. of Bingham, its post town, and 5 S.W. of the Elton railway station. The parish, which is wholly agricultural, is situated near the river Smite and the Grantham canal, and within a short distance of the borders of Leicestershire. It gives title of earl to the Howes, who inherited it through the Scropes. The par. includes the hmlt. of Barnstone. Wiverton Hall, the ruined seat of the Chaworths, is now a farmhouse. Langar Hall was the seat of the late Admiral Lord Howe. The soil is fertile and the scenery picturesque. The tithes were commuted for land on the enclosure of the parish. The living is a rect.* with the cur. of Barnstone annexed, in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £208. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is a large cruciform edifice, with a square tower richly ornamented and containing four bells. The interior of the church contains monuments of the Scropes, &c. There is a chapel-of-ease at Barnstone. The parochial charities produce about £15 per annum. There is a National school recently erected. Francis Wright, Esq., is lord of the manor.

LANGBANK, a railway station on the Glasgow, Paisley, and Greenock branch of the Caledonian line, 15¾ miles from Glasgow and 4 from Port Glasgow.

LANGBAR, a tnshp. in the par. of Ilkley, wap. of Claro, West Riding co. York, 8 miles E. of Skipton. It is situated on the river Wharfe, and is united with Nesfield to form a tnshp. There is a place of worship for Wesleyans.

LANGBAURGH, a hmlt. in the par. of Ayton, lib. of West Langbaurgh, North Riding co. York, 3 miles N.E. of Stokesley.

LANGBAURGH, EAST, a lib. in the North Riding co. York, contains the pars. of Brotton, Danby, Easington, Egton, Glaisdale, Guisborough, Hinderwell, Kirk-Latham, Lofthouse, Lythe, Marske, Skelton, Upleatham, Westerdale, and parts of Ormsby and Whitby, comprising an area of 116,330 acres.

LANGBAURGH, WEST, a lib. as above, contains the pars. of West Acklam, Appleton, Ayton, Carlton, Crathorne, Hilton, Ingleby, Arncliffe and Greenhow, Kildale, Kirby-in-Cleveland, Kirk-Leavington, Marton, Middlesborough, Newton-in-Cleveland, Seamer, Stainton, Stokesley, Whorlton, Yarm, and part of Ormsby comprising an area of 79,240 acres.

LANGCLIFFE, a tnshp. in the par. of Giggleswick, W. div. of the wap. of Staincliffe, West Riding co. York, 1 mile N.E. of Settle, its post town, and 16 miles S.E. of Skipton. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Ribble. This tnshp. includes the hmlt. of Winskill. Many interesting fossils have been found here. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the paper and cotton mills. The Catterick Toss waterfall is in this neighbourhood. The land is chiefly in pasture. The soil is sandy, with subsoil limestone. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £60. The church, dedicated to St. John the Evangelist, is a newly erected stone edifice containing two bells. There is a National school for both sexes in which a Sunday-school is also held. The Methodists have a place of worship. Langcliffe Hall is the principal residence.

LANGDALE, a tnshp. in the par. of Orton, East ward, co. Westmoreland, 3 miles S.E. of Orton. It is situated on the river Lune, and gave the title of baron to the Bickersteths of Langdale House. This township comprises a large mountainous district extending to the borders of Yorkshire. It was given by Henry II. to Walton Priory, and after the Dissolution was sold to the Wharton family.

LANGDALES, a chplry. in the par. of Grasmere, ward of Kendal, co. Westmoreland, 4 miles N.W. of Ambleside, its post town, and 6 N. of Hawkshead. This chplry. comprises Great and Little Langdale, two valleys separated by Lingmire and bounded by Loughrigg Fell, 1,050 feet, and Great Landale Pike, or Harrison Stickle, the loftiest point of which is 2,400 feet above sea-level. Within this chapelry is Elter Water and several smaller lakes. The river Brathay here forms the beautiful cascades of Skelwith and Colwith forces. In the vicinity of the above lake is the Elter Water gunpowder mill. There are quarries of excellent blue slate, much of which is sent to London; also a copper mine. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £143, in the patron. of the Rector of Grasmere. The church was erected in 1858. Another church once stood at a place now called Chapel-Mire, in Little Langdale. On a hill called Wrynose are three shire stones in juxtaposition, marking the point at which the counties of Cumberland, Westmoreland, and Lancaster meet. From Wall End a grand view is obtained of the Lake district.

LANGDON, a tythg. in the par. of Beaminster, co. Dorset, 1 mile E. of Beaminster. The village is considerable.

LANGDON, a hmlt. in Teesdale Forest, co. Durham, 3 miles S.W. of St. John's Weardale. It is situated on Lough Beck, which runs to the river Tees.

LANGDON, EAST, a par. in the hund. of Cornilo, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, 3½ miles N. of Dover, its post town. The village, which is inconsiderable, is situated in the southern part of the parish. A portion of the land is in hop grounds. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £126. The church, dedicated to St. Augustine, is a small ancient structure. A fair for toys and pedlery is held on old May-day.

LANGDON HILLS, a par. in the hund. of Barstable, co. Essex, 2½ miles from Stanford-le-Hope railway station, 4 N.E. of Orsett, and 6 S. of Billericay. Hornden-on-the-Hill is its post town. It is a small agricultural village situated on one of the loftiest hills in the country, and commanding a most extensive view over the valley of the river Thames. The parish of West Lee, about a mile distant, was, after the destruction of its church, united with this parish. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £245, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's. The church, which is situated on the W. side of the hill, is dedicated to All Saints. It is an ancient edifice recently enlarged, and has a small chapel on the N. side of the chancel. There is a parochial school.

LANGDON, WEST, a par. in the hund. of Bewsborough, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, 4 miles N. of Dover, its post town. It is a small village consisting of a few straggling houses. It derives its name from the length on which it is situated. The land is chiefly arable. The rectorial tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £32 9*s.* 6*d.* The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £47, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, formerly dedicated to St. Mary, is in ruins. There are also picturesque ruins of an ancient abbey for White Canons, founded in 1192 by William de Auberville. It is stated to have been the first religious house dissolved by Henry VIII. Its revenue was estimated at £56 6*s.*, and the site given to the Masters family.

LANGENHOE, a par. in the hund. of Winstree, co. Essex, 6 miles S.E. of Colchester, its post town. The parish is bounded on the E. by the navigable river Colne. The village, which is small, is situated on the borders of the marshes, and is of ancient date. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. A great portion of the land is moory. The soil is a strong loam. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £480. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £446. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, has a stone tower. The E. window of the chancel is decorated with numerous armorial bearings. The charities produce about £4 per annum, which goes to St. Mark's school. There is a National school.

LANGFIELD, a tnshp. in the par. of Halifax, wap. of Morley, West Riding co. York, 9 miles W. of Halifax. It is situated in the vale of Todmorden, on the Rochford canal and Manchester and Leeds railway. It contains part of the town of Todmorden, and the hmlts. of Stoodley and Mankinholes. On a hill in the hamlet of Stoodley is a column to the Duke of Wellington, erected in 1814. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in the woollen manufacture. The land is chiefly moorland or common, belonging to the freeholders, who depasture it in lots proportioned to the extent of their freeholds. On the moors are two capacious reservoirs for the supply of the canal and the various mills in the neighbourhood. There is a place of worship for Wesleyans. A sheep fair is held at Lamberts on the 11th September.

LANGFORD, a par. in the hund. of Biggleswade, co. Bedford, 2 miles S. of Biggleswade, its post town, and 4 N.E. of Shefford. It is a small agricultural village situated on the river Ivel. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £240, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is a stone structure with a tower. The church contains the brass of a priest bearing date 1540. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. The Wesleyans and Baptists have each a chapel. Thomas Alexander Rainsford, Esq., is lord of the manor.

LANGFORD, a par. partly in the hund. of Farringdon, co. Berks, and partly in that of Bampton, co. Oxford, 4 miles E. of Lechlade, its post town, and 12 from the Farringdon Road railway station. It contains the chplry. of Little Farringdon, and the hmlts. of Grafton and Radcot, in Oxfordshire, to which county the whole parish is attached for electoral purposes. The village is small, and wholly agricultural. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under Enclosure Acts obtained in 1808 and 1810. The living is a vic.* with the cur. of Little Farringdon annexed, val. £350, in the dioc. of Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient edifice with a Saxon tower. The interior of the church has a brass of William Pirmes bearing date 1609. There is a chapel-of-ease at Little Farringdon. The parochial charities produce about £18 per annum. The Independents and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel.

LANGFORD, a par. in the hund. of Thurstable, co. Essex, 1½ mile N.W. of Maldon, its post town, and 4½ miles S.E. of Witham. It is a station on the Maldon branch of the Great Eastern railway. It is a small village situated at the confluence of the rivers Blackwater and Chelmer. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £270. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £290. The church, dedicated to St. Giles, has a wooden spired belfry containing three bells. Langford Grove is the principal residence. It is a modern brick building, situated in a well-wooded park. There is a National school.

LANGFORD, a par. in the hund. of South Greenhoe, co. Norfolk, 8 miles N.E. of Brandon, its post town, and 10 S. of Swaffham. It is a small agricultural village situated on the river Swissey. The land is chiefly arable, with some heath and woodland. The soil consists of light loam, chalk, and gravel. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £120. The living is a rect.* annexed to that of Igborough, in the dioc. of Norwich, joint val. £238. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient stone edifice. The interior contains a decorated Norman archway, and tombs of the Garrards, Methwolds, &c. The Hon. F. Baring is lord of the manor.

LANGFORD, a par. in the N. div. of the wap. of Newark, co. Nottingham, 3½ miles N.E. of Newark, its post town and railway station. It is a small agricultural village situated on an eminence overlooking the river Trent, which bounds the parish on the W. It is supposed to have been formerly a Roman settlement on the ancient Fosse Way. There are brick kilns. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the vic. of North Holme, in the dioc. of Lincoln. The church, dedicated to St. Bartholomew, is a small plain edifice with a tower containing two bells. Lord Middleton is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

LANGFORD, a hmlt. partly in the par. of Barrington, hund. of Brent, and partly in that of Churchill, hund. of Winterstoke, co. Somerset, 6 miles N.E. of Axbridge. It is situated on the road from Bristol to Axbridge. The hamlet is divided into Upper and Lower Langford, in which latter the village is situated.

LANGFORD BUDVILLE, a par. in the hund. of Milverton, co. Somerset, 2 miles N.W. of Wellington, its railway station and post town, and 4½ from Wiveliscombe. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Sone and near the Western canal. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in agriculture. The soil consists of sand and clay, resting on a subsoil of sandstone and limestone. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the vic.* of Milverton, in the dioc. of Bath and Wells. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient stone structure with a square tower containing five bells. It contains a monument to W. Bacon, ancestor of the celebrated sculptor. The register dates from 1538. There is a National school, in which a Sunday-school is also held. Bindon lunatic asylum is partly in this parish and partly in that of Milverton. E. A. Sandford, Esq., is lord of the manor.

LANGFORD, LITTLE, a par. in the hund. of Branch and Dole, co. Wilts, 5 miles N.W. of Wilton, and 9 N.W. of Salisbury. Heytesbury is its post town. It is an inconsiderable village situated on the river Wiley, and near the high road to Bath. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £145. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £145. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is an ancient cruciform structure with a S. porch, over which is some ancient sculpture. The Earl of Pembroke is lord of the manor.

LANGFORD STEEPLE, or GREAT LANGFORD, a par. in the hund. of Branch and Dole, co. Wilts, 5 miles N.W. of Wilton. The par. includes the tythg. of Hanging Langford. The village, which is considerable, is situated on the navigable river Wiley and the road to Bath. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £720. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £600, in the patron. of Corpus Christi College, Oxford. The church is an ancient structure dedicated to All Saints. The parochial charities produce about £3. On a hill called Yarnborough Castle are traces of a British camp.

LANGHALE, an ancient par. in the hund. of Loddon, co. Norfolk, 6 miles N.W. of Bungay. It is now united with Kirstead.

LANGHAM, a par. in the Colchester div. of the hund. of Lexden, co. Essex, 5 miles E. of Neyland and 3 N. of the Ardleigh railway station. Dedham is its post town. It is a small, straggling village of ancient date, situated on the navigable river Stour, and near the borders of Suffolk. The land is chiefly arable, with some moor and woodland. The tithes been commuted for a rent-charge of £629 4s. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £528, in the patron. of the Duchy of Lancaster. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a small ancient edifice with a tower containing five bells. The Baptists have a chapel. There is a national school. Langham Hall is the principal residence.

LANGHAM, a par. in the hund. of Blackbourn, co. Suffolk, 3 miles S.E. of Ixworth, its post town, and 4 N. of the Elmswell railway station. It is a small village, and the land is chiefly arable. The inhabitants are wholly engaged in agriculture. Langham Hall is a fine old seat. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £252. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £221, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is situated within the grounds of the Hall. The nave is separated from the chancel by a carved screen. The parochial charities produce about £27 per annum, besides 10 acres of land let out in small allotments. Henry Wilson, Esq., is lord of the manor. There is a National school.

LANGHAM, a par. in the soke of Oakham, co. Rutland, 2 miles N.W. of Oakham, its post town, and 8 N.W. of Melton-Mowbray. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. It gives name to the Langhams of Cottesbrooke. Here is a meet for the Cottesmore hounds. The Oakham and Milton canal passes through the parish. About two-thirds of the land is in pasture, the remainder arable and waste. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic.* of Oakham, in the dioc. of Peterborough. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is an ancient structure, with a spired tower containing six bells. The Independents and Wesleyans have places of worship. The parochial charities produce about £54 per annum. Simon de Langham, Archbishop of Canterbury, was a native of this place. A free school was erected here at the expense of the Earl of Gainsborough, in 1841, and is principally supported by his lordship. There is a national school for boys. The Earl of Gainsborough is lord of the manor.

LANGHAM, GREAT, a par. in the hund. of Holt, co. Norfolk, 7 miles N.W. of Holt, its post town, 5 miles N.E. of Walsingham, and 3 N.E. of Blakeney. The par. is of small extent, and is situated near the coast. Langham was formerly divided into the two parishes of Langham Magna and Langham Parva. The land is chiefly arable, with about 100 acres of woodland. The surface is undulating, and the lower grounds are watered by a tributary of the river Stiffkey. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1815. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £146, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, has a lofty embattled tower. The register dates from 1695. The charities produce about £1 per annum. Here is a National school for both sexes, erected in 1850. There are now no remains of the church of Little Langham.

LANGHAM ROW, a hmlt. in the par. of Mumby, Marsh div. of the hund. of Calceworth, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 4 miles E. of Alford. It is a small agricultural place.

LANGHO. See BILLINGTON LANGHO, co. Lancaster.

LANGHOLM, a par. containing a post town of its own name, in the district of Eskdale, co. Dumfries, Scotland, 25 miles N.E. of Dumfries. It is 8 miles long, and its greatest breadth is about 6½ miles. The parish is hilly and fertile, and chiefly consists of sheep farms. The river Esk, which intersects it, is swelled by the Tarras water, Ewes water, and Wauchope water. There are three mineral springs in the neighbourhood. Here greywacke slate is worked, and lead is found in parts of the district. The par. is the seat of a presb. in the synod of Dumfries. The minister's stipend is £289. The church, erected in 1846, is a substantial edifice. The other places of worship are, one Free church two United, and three Presbyterian churches. There is an endowed school, a parochial, and seven other schools. This parish and the adjoining ones of Canonbie, Ewes, Westerkirk, and Eskdalemuir, are known as the "five kirks of Eskdale." The present par. comprehends the ancient pars. of Wauchope and Staplegordon. Langholm Castle, now in ruins, was formerly the property of the Armstrongs, the border freebooters. It was on "Langholm Holm" that, when going to meet King James V., Johnnie Armstrong and his "gallant company" of thirty-six men "ran their horse and brak their spears." Wauchope Castle, the foundation of which only remains, was the first seat of the Lindsay family in Scotland. Coins of the reign of Nero, Vespasian, Otho, and Domitian have been discovered in the district. The following are among the natives who have distinguished themselves: Admiral Sir Thos. Pasley, under Earl Howe, in the sea fight of the 1st June, 1794; Wm. J. Meikle (1734-89), translator of "Camoens' Lusiad"; Thomas Telford, the engineer; Sir Pulteney Malcolm, the admiral; General Sir John Malcolm; and Dr. David Irvine, who wrote the "Life of George Buchanan." The town of Langholm is situated on the river Esk, and the ancient Watling Street, near the Border. It is a railway station on the North British line, being connected to the main line by a branch from the Riddings station. The town is built on the Edinburgh and Carlisle road, and is composed generally of good stone houses, roofed with slate. A stone bridge of three arches connects the ancient or eastern portion with New Langholm, the latter having been founded in 1778. In the market place of the old town stands the townhall, gaol, and county police station, ornamented with a neat spire and clock, near which is a statue of Admiral Sir Pulteney Malcolm, and in the neighbourhood of Langholm Hill an obelisk has been erected in honour of his brother, General Sir John Malcolm. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the weaving of checks and plaids, and the manufacture of woollen yarn. The Eskdale Advertiser is published here once a month. There are offices of the National, the Western, and the British Linen Company's banks; a savings-bank, insurance agencies, two distilleries, a brewery, dyehouse, tannery, and several good inns, also friendly, farming, and other societies, together with a subscription library. By a charter dated the 7th April, 1643, the town was made a burgh of barony. The government is vested in a baron bailie appointed by the Duke of Buccleuch, who is superior. Sheriffs, small-debt, and justice of peace courts are held at stated periods. The Duke of Buccleuch is the chief landowner. The market day is Wednesday; the fairs are held on the 16th April, the last Tuesday in May (old style), the 26th July (for lambs), 18th September, and in November; also two hiring days—one in May, the other in November.

LANGLANDS, a hmlt. in the par. of Marton, North Riding co. York, 3 miles W. of Guisbrough.

LANGLANDS, a hmlt. in the par. of Ireby, ward of Allerdale-below-Derwent, co. Cumberland, 16 miles S.W. of Carlisle. It is situated near the river Ellen.

LANGLANDS BAY, on the coast of co. Glamorgan, 1 mile W. of Mumbles Head.

LANGLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Lanchester, W. div. of Chester ward, co. Durham, 4 miles W. of Durham. It is watered by the river Browney, a tributary of the Wear, and has an old ruined hall, formerly belonging to the family of Scroope, of Bolton.

LANGLEY, a par. in the hund. of Clavering, co. Essex, 6 miles S.W. of Saffron-Walden, and 4 N.W. of Newport. Bishop's-Stortford is its post town. The parish, which belongs to the Tuffnells, is wholly agricultural. About half the land is arable, the remainder pasture and woodland. The impropriate tithes, belonging to the hospitals of Christ Church, Bethlehem, and St. Thomas, London, have been commuted for a rent-charge of £152, and the vicarial for £153. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic.* of Clavering, in the dioc. of Rochester. The church, dedicated to St. John the Evangelist, is a very ancient edifice. The Baptists have a chapel. The parochial charities produce about £8 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes.

LANGLEY, a par. in the hund. of Eyhorne, lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, 4½ miles S.E. of Maidstone, its post town, and 1½ mile N. of Sutton Valence. The village is small, and situated on the road from Maidstone to the S. The land is partly in hops. The parish is well wooded, and there is a small tract of heath. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £390. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a modern structure, with a tower surmounted by a spire, and containing three bells. There is a National school, also a place of worship for Wesleyans. The Earl of Romney is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

LANGLEY, a par. in the hund. of Loddon, co. Norfolk, 1 mile N. of Loddon, its post town, and 10 miles S.E. of Norwich. The village, which is small, and irregularly built, is situated near the navigable river Yare. It was formerly a market town, and had at the Grange a Premonstratensian canonry, founded in 1198 by Robert Fitz Roger. The establishment flourished till the Dissolution, when its revenue was returned at £128 19*s.* 9*d.* The site was given to the Berneys, and there are still considerable remains of the conventual buildings. The great tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £400. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £45. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, has a square embattled tower, containing four bells. The church was thoroughly restored at great expense, in 1803, by the Dowager Lady Beauchamp, and the windows were all embellished with richly stained glass, by the late Sir T. B. Proctor and his lady. The register dates from 1695. There is a National school for both sexes. Langley Hall, the principal residence, erected in 1740, contains a picture gallery and many curious works of art. The park in which the above mansion is situated comprises about 800 acres. Sir W. B. Proctor, Bart., is lord of the manor.

LANGLEY, a tnshp. and district par. in the par. of Halesowen, hund. of Brimstree, co. Worcester, formerly in Salop, 5 miles W. of Birmingham, its post town, and 3 from Dudley. It was made an ecclesiastical district in 1845, and is now a district parish. There are extensive collieries, alkali works, &c. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £150, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately. The church is dedicated to the Holy Trinity. A temporary church was licensed by the Bishop of Worcester for Divine service at Round's Green in 1853. The Independents and New Connexion Methodists have each a chapel. There is a Sunday-school. Patrick Allan Fraser, Esq., is the lord of the manor.

LANGLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Claverdon, Henley div. of the hund. of Barlichway, co. Warwick, 4 miles S.E. of Henley-in-Arden. It is situated on the Alne.

LANGLEY, a tythg. in the par. of Kington St. Michael, N. div. of the hund. of Damerham, co. Wilts, 2 miles N. of Chippenham. The village, which is considerable, is situated near the Great Western railway.

LANGLEY, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Snape, North Riding of co. York, 2 miles S. of Bedale.

LANGLEY, a tythg. in the par. of Wiveliscombe, hund. of West Kingsbury, co. Somerset, 2 miles from Wiveliscombe, and 15 S.W. of Bridgwater.

LANGLEY, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Acton-Burnell, hund. of Condover, co. Salop, 1 mile E. of Acton-Burnell, and 5½ miles W. of Much-Wenlock. There is a small chapel in which Divine service is performed twice a year. Sir Edward Joseph Smythe, Bart., is lord of the manor. The land is tithe free.

LANGLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Shipton-under-Wychwood, hund. of Chadlington, co. Oxford, 5 miles N.W. of Witney, and 5 N.E. of Burford. It is situated in Wychwood Forest. There are still remaining parts of the walls of a palace belonging to King John. Near the hamlet is a quarry of marble which is susceptible of a high polish.

LANGLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Hitchin, co. Herts, 5 miles S.E. of Hitchin.

LANGLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Winchcombe, co. Gloucester, 1 mile W. of Winchcombe. It is situated under Langley Hill.

LANGLEY, a tythg. in the par. of Eling, co. Hants, 4 miles W. of Southampton.

LANGLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Fawley, co. Hants, 6 miles S. of Southampton.

LANGLEY, ABBOT'S. See ABBOT'S LANGLEY, co. Herts.

LANGLEY AND SWINEHEAD, a hund. in co. Gloucester, in two divs., Upper and Lower. The latter contains the pars. of Littleton-on-Severn, Olveston, Rockhampton, and parts of Almondsbury and Alveston, comprising an area of 11,780 acres. The former contains the pars. of Bitton, Doynton, Frampton-Cotterell, Winterbourne, and part of Alveston, comprising an area of 17,010 acres.

LANGLEY-BURRELL, a par. in the hund. of Chippenham, co. Wilts, 1½ mile N.E. of Chippenham, its post town, and 11½ miles N. of Devizes. The village, which is irregularly built, is situated on the river Avon, and near the line of the Great Western railway. It is wholly agricultural. The parish is crossed by a causeway more than 3 miles in length, supported on 60 arches, and carried over the river Avon. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £386. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient structure, with a tower containing four bells. There is also a district church, dedicated to St. Paul, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £200, in the patron. of the bishop. There is a free school, supported by the Rev. R. Ashe.

LANGLEY-BURY, a seat in co. Herts, 3 miles N.W. of Watford. It was built by Chief Justice Raymond, Lord Langley, and occupies a site near the river Gade.

LANGLEY CASTLE, in co. Northumberland, 6 miles S.W. of Hexham. It was once a strong fortress, with walls 8 feet thick and towers 66 feet high, but is now in ruins.

LANGLEY COMMON, in co. Berks, 3 miles N.W. of Wokingham.

LANGLEYDALE-WITH-SHOTTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Staindrop, ward of Darlington, co. Durham, 5 miles N. of Barnard Castle. It is situated on the river Gaunless. Extensive smelting works are established here. Near the village is an ancient tower, formerly an outpost belonging to Raby Castle. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. There is a village school, supported by the Duke of Bedford.

LANGLEY, KING'S, a par. and post town in the hund. of Dacorum, co. Herts, 3 miles S. of Hemel-Hempstead, and 19 S.W. of Hertford. It is a station on the London and Birmingham section of the North-Western railway. It is situated on the river Gade and the Grand Junction canal, and contains Chipperfield and King's Langley. The manor belongs to the Earl of Essex, through the Morisons. It was given by Edward I. to the Dominican priory founded here in the 13th century, by Roger Lucy, son of Robert Helle, an English baron; and was restored as a nunnery by Queen Mary, but was totally suppressed in the first year of Elizabeth's reign. At a farm in this parish are the remains of Henry III.'s palace, in which Edmund De Langley, son of Edward III., was born, and in which Richard II. kept his Christmas festivities. There is an extensive paper manufactory, affording employment to about 50 persons. The appropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £600, and the vicarial for £220. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £460, in the patron. of the Archbishop of Canterbury. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a stone and flint edifice, with a square embattled tower, surmounted by a short spire. The interior of the church is adorned with painted windows, and contains the tomb of Edmund de Langley, fifth son of Edward III., removed from the priory at the Dissolution; also a brass to J. Carter and wives, bearing date 1528. Piers Gaveston was buried in it. The parochial charities produce about £49 per annum. King's Langley House is the principal residence. While excavating for the canal, a human skeleton, and several jaw-bones of gigantic size, were found here, in 1820; and near the same spot, two years afterwards, an ancient sword and spear.

LANGLEY, KIRK, a par. in the hund. of Morleston, co. Derby, 4½ miles N.W. of Derby, its post town. The par. includes the tnshp. of Langley Meynell. The village is considerable, but wholly agricultural. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £318. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, was much damaged by a violent tempest in 1545. The parochial charities produce about £14 per annum, of which £12 goes to Bayley's school. Langley Hall is the principal residence.

LANGLEY-MARISH, a par. in the hund. of Stoke, co. Bucks, 3 miles N.E. of Windsor, and 18 from London. It is a station on the Great Western railway, which passes through the parish a short distance N. of the church. Colnbrook, which is partly in this parish, is its post town. Langley-Marish was formerly held by the Kederminsters. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the vic.* of Wyrardisbury, in the dioc. of Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an interesting structure, partly built in the reign of Edward I. Sir John Kederminster erected a private chapel railed off from the church in 1613; he also formed the S. porch into a library, with a good collection of books relating to Scripture. The charities produce about £243 per annum, of which £52 go to Kederminster's and £59 to Seymour's almshouses. There are National and infant schools. The Independents, Particular Baptists, and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. Courts leet and baron are held every year. Robert Harvey, Esq., is lord of the manor.

LANGLEY, MEYNELL, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirk Langley, hund. of Morleston, co. Derby, 5 miles N.W. of Derby.

LANGLEY MILL, a railway station on the Erewash Valley branch of the Midland railway.

LANGLEY PRIORY, an ext. par. place in the hund. of West Goscote, co. Leicester, 2 miles S.W. of Castle Donington. It is situated in a pleasant spot, and has at Langley Hall some traces of a Benedictine priory founded in the reign of Henry II. by William Pantulf, and Burgia his wife. At the Dissolution the site was given to the Grays. The revenue was then estimated at £34 6*s.* 2*d.* There is no village.

LANGLEY WOOD, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Downton, co. Wilts, 7 miles S.E. of Salisbury.

LANGLOAN, a vil in the par. of Old Monkland, co. Lanark, Scotland.

LANGMERE, a hmlt. in the par. of Dickleburgh, co. Norfolk, 4 miles N.E. of Diss.

LANGNESS, a headland at the southern extremity of the Isle of Man. It lies between Castletown and Derby Haven, and has a beacon to direct ships.

LANGNEWTON, an ancient par. in co. Roxburgh, Scotland, now joined to Ancrum.

LANGOE, a wap. in two divs., in parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln. The first div. contains the pars. of Billinghay, Kirkby Green, Timberland, and part of South Kyme, comprising an area of 20,990 acres. The second div. contains the pars. of Blankney, Dunston, Metheringham, Nocton, Potter-Hanworth, Scopwick, and Washingborough, comprising an area of 33,080 acres.

LANGPORT, a hund. in the lathe of Shepway, co. Kent, contains the pars. of Hope and Lydd, forming part of Romney Marsh.

LANGPORT-EASTOVER, a par., market town, and municipal borough in the hund. of Pitney, co. Somerset, 4½ miles W.S.W. of Somerton, 10 S.E. of Bridgwater, and 130 from London. It is a station on the Yeovil branch railway from Durston. It is situated on the great Western road, and on the river Parret. This town, which is of great antiquity, is called Lanport in Domesday Survey, at which time it was a royal burgh, containing thirty-four resident burgesses, and had a revenue of £79 10*s.* 7*d., a very large sum in those days. It was anciently moated round, and returned members of parliament in the reign of Edward I. In the civil war of Charles I., being considered a commanding station, it was alternately held by the royalists and parliamentary forces. It is now an insignificant town, containing, in 1861, 1,141 inhabitants. The main street is very narrow, but the upper part being on a hill commands extensive views. Since the commencement of the present century the general appearance of the whole has been much improved by the erection of many new houses. The principal building is the guildhall, erected in 1733, in which the county courts and petty sessions are held. There are also a bank, a literary institution, and public reading-rooms. The ancient bridge, a singular and interesting structure, was removed about twenty-two years ago, when a new one of three arches was substituted—the Parret Navigation Company having about that time come into existence, whereby, under an Act of Parliament, the river, hitherto navigable only to Langport, was opened up for 9 miles further. It was first chartered by James I., and under the Towns Act is at present governed by a portreeve and twelve burgesses, assisted by a recorder, town-clerk, and sergeant-at-mace. The corporation has right of common over two considerable tracts of rich meadow land, which, from the circumstance of its being depastured in common by the cattle of all the adjoining parishes, is denominated common moor. The manor belongs to the corporation, which has the royalty of the river. A very considerable general trade is done, and many boats are constantly engaged on the river, carrying coal, iron, timber, salt, bricks, &c., between this town and Bridgwater. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £15, and the vicarial for £70. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Huish-Episcopi, in the dioc. of Bath and Wells. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure, with a tower containing five bells, and having two side chapels attached. The E. window is remarkably handsome, containing, amongst other representations in ancient stained glass, those of the twelve apostles. A memorial window has been recently placed in the N. transept by Vincent Stuckey, Esq., of Hill House, to the memory of his grandparents. The register dates from 1715. The Independents and Baptists have places of worship. The parochial charities produce about £81 per annum. The free grammar school, founded in 1675 by Thomas Gillett, has an income from endowment of £70 per annum, and is a commodious building recently erected by the trustees, with a house for the master. The "Hanging Chapel," which stands on an arch across the street, is used as a museum founded by the Quekett family. Langport is the head of a Poor-law Union, embracing 29 parishes; the poor-law guardians meet here every Tuesday, but the poorhouse is in the parish of High Ham. It is also the seat of new County Court and superintendent registry districts. Tuesday is market day. A commodious pig market has recently been arranged by the corporation. Fairs are held for cattle, &c., on the Monday before Lent, the second Wednesday in August, last Monday but one in September, and the last Monday in November.

LANGPORT-WESTOVER, a hmlt. in the pars. of Curry-Rivell and Huish-Episcopi, co. Somerset, forming a suburb of Langport-Eastover.

LANGRICK-FERRY, an ext. par. place in the soke of Horncastle, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 2 miles from Tattershall.

LANGRICK-VILLE, a parochial chplry. and tnshp., in the soke of Horncastle, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 5 miles N.W. of Boston, its post town. It is a station on the Great Northern railway. The village, which is small, is situated opposite the hamlet of Langrick-Ferry. It was formed into a township by Act of Parliament in 1812, about which time a considerable part of the land was drained, including Wildmore and the eastern and western fens. The tnshp. includes the hmlts. of Popping Syke and Silt Pits. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £91, in the patron. of certain trustees. The church is a red brick building, with a small belfry at the W. end.

LANGRIDGE, a par. in the hund. of Bath-Forum, co. Somerset, 4 miles N.W. of Bath, its railway station and post town. It is a small agricultural village situated under Lansdown Hill, on which stands a monument to Sir Bevill Granville, who was killed in the battle fought here in 1643. The soil is rocky and the surface diversified with hill and dale. The lower grounds are watered by a rivulet, and the higher well wooded. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £112. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £111. The church, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene, is an ancient stone structure, with a square tower containing one bell. The interior of the church contains two Norman arches and two brasses, one bearing date 1427. There is a parochial school for both sexes, also a Sunday-school. Whilst rebuilding the rectory-house a silver-mounted battle-axe and several stone coffins were discovered.

LANGRIGG, a tnshp. in the par. of Bromfield, ward of Allerdale-below-Derwent, co. Cumberland, 3 miles E. of Aspatria, and 6½ S.W. of Wigton. Bricks and tiles are manufactured here. Langrigg Hall is the principal residence.

LANGRISH, a tythg. in the par. of East Meon, co. Hants, 3 miles W. of Petersfield.

LANGSETT, a tnshp. in the par. of Penistone, wap. of Staincross, West Riding co. York, 5 miles S.W. of Penistone, its post town, and 12 S.E. of Huddersfield. The township adjoins the county of Chester on the W. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Dun or Don, which has its chief sources in this township, and the Manchester and Sheffield road. A few collieries exist in this neighbourhood. Brickmaking is carried on. There is a large portion of moorland, affording only rough pasture. Sir L. M. S. Pilkington is lord of the manor. An Act was obtained in 1820 for enclosing the common, which has only been partially accomplished.

LANGSIDE, a vil. in the par. of Cathcart, co. Renfrew, Scotland, 2 miles S. of Glasgow. It was the scene of the victory gained by the Regent Murray, in 1568, over Mary Queen of Scots, before her flight into England.

LANGSTON, a harbour and coastguard station between Portsea and Hayling islands, on the coast of Hants, 4 miles E. of Portsmouth, of which it is a subport. The harbour has five fathoms water, but is obstructed by a bar at the entrance.

LANGSTONE-WITH-TREVAN, a tnshp. in the par. of Llangarren, co. Hereford, 4 miles S.W. of Ross.

LANGTHORNE, a tnshp. in the par. of Bedale, wap. of Hallikeld, North Riding co. York, 3¼ miles N.W. of Bedale. There is a large brick and tile factory belonging to the Duke of Leeds, who is proprietor of most of the district.

LANGTHORPE, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirby-on-the-Moor, wap. of Hallikeld, North Riding co. York, 1 mile N.W. of Boroughbridge. It is situated on the river Ouse, which separates it from Boroughbridge. There are extensive flour mills, also mills for crushing bones, and oil mills. There is a nail manufactory.

LANGTHWAITE, a hmlt. in the par. of Arkengarth Dale, North Riding co. York, 3 miles N.W. of Reeth.

LANGTHWAITE, a vil. in the par. of Crosthwaite, co. Cumberland, 6 miles S.E. of Cockermouth. It is situated on Crummock Water, in the midst of lake scenery.

LANGTHWAITE-WITH-TILTS, a tnshp. in the par. of Doncaster, N. div. of the wap. of Strafforth, West Riding co. York, 4 miles N. of Doncaster. There is no village, only a few farmhouses.

LANGTOFT, a par. in the wap. of Ness, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 2 miles N.W. of Market Deeping, its post town, and 5 S. of Bourn. The village, which is small, is situated near the navigable Car Dyke, and Great Northern railway. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The surface is generally flat, and the soil a rich loam. The lands have been much improved by drainage. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1801. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £300. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is a stone structure with a square embattled tower surmounted by a spire, and containing five bells. The church has recently been thoroughly restored and re-pewed. The charities produce about £20 per annum. The free school is partly supported by a small endowment and partly by voluntary contributions. The Wesleyans have a small chapel. Lord Aveland is lord of the manor.

LANGTOFT, a par. in the wap. of Dickering, East Riding co. York, 6 miles N. of Driffield, its post town, and 10 W. of Bridlington. It contains the hmlt. of Cotton. The village is considerable. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1801. The living is a vic.* with the perpet. cur. of Cotton annexed, in the dioc. of York, val. £354, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a stone edifice with a square tower containing two bells. There is a chapel-of-ease at Cotton. A National school was erected here in 1846 for children of both sexes. It is supported by voluntary contributions. There are places of worship for Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists. Peter de Langtoft, a canon of the priory of Bridlington, and poet and historian of the 14th century, was a native of this place. Sir John Gibbons is lord of the manor.

LANGTON, a par. in the wap. of Buckrose, East Riding co. York, 3 miles S. of Malton, its railway station and post town. The village, which is small, is situated near the river Derwent, on the Wolds. The par. contains the tnshp. of Kennythorpe. The soil in the valleys is clayey, but in the uplands it is of a lighter quality. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of York, val. £460, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, was almost entirely rebuilt in 1822, at a cost of £600. It has a tower containing two bells, and a fine E. window. The interior contains monuments of the Norcliffe family, and an ancient font. The charities produce about £5 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, built in 1841. The Wesleyan Methodists have a place of worship. A short distance from the village is a triangular-shaped camp, supposed to be British. The Hall is a stone building surrounded by well-wooded grounds. Major-General Norcliffe is lord of the manor. A pleasure fair is held on Whit-Monday.

LANGTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Gainford, S.W. div. of Darlington ward, co. Durham, 2 miles N. of Gainford, and 7 S.E. of Barnard Castle. It is situated on a branch of the river Tees. The principal residence is Langton Grange, a seat of the Duke of Cleveland.

LANGTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Appleby, East ward, co. Westmoreland, 1 mile E. of Appleby. Here was formerly a chapel, burnt by the Scots in 1328.

LANGTON, a par. in the Merse district of the co. Berwick, Scotland. It is situated nearly in the centre of the co., and contains the vil. of Gavinton, which is 2 miles from Dunse, and half a mile S. of the site of the old vil. of Langton, which has entirely disappeared. Its form is triangular, and its area comprises 7,200 acres. Its surface is for the most part hilly sheepwalks, attaining at Langton Edge a height of 900 feet. It is watered by the Langton burn and the Blackadder water and their tributaries. The par. is in the presb. of Dunse, and synod of Merse and Teviotdale. The minister's stipend is £215. The church, built in 1798, is situated at Gavinton. There is a Free church. The village of Langton was burnt by the English in 1558, and the present village of Gavinton obtained its name from David Gavin, the late proprietor of the estate of Langton, which includes nearly the whole parish. It now belongs to the Marquis of Breadalbane, a descendant of Mr. Gavin. Formerly the proprietor of Langton occupied a castle in Langton Wood, but for the last century the family have resided at Langton House. In a small chapel in Langton Wood, between the years 1670 and 1689, the Presbyterians used to assemble for worship, in which secluded spot Veitch and other eminent divines preached. It was afterwards occupied by the Episcopalians, but now no trace of it remains. At Raeclugh there are two Saxon camps, and at Cramestone Hill urns have been found.

LANGTON-BY-SPILSBY, a par. in the hund. of Hill, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 4 miles N.W. of Spilsby, its post town, and 6 W. of the Willoughby railway station. The village, which is small, is situated in a valley on the river Steeping. The manor has been for eight centuries in the family of the Langtons, whose mansion was destroyed by fire in the reign of Henry VI., but has been twice rebuilt since that period. Near the village are three barrows, called the Spellow-hills. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in agriculture. The land is exceedingly fertile, and a soft kind of limestone called calc is found. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £340. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £277. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a modern edifice, with an octagonal tower containing six bells. The parochial charities produce about £20 per annum. A National school was erected for both sexes in 1849. Langton Cottage and Langton Grange are the principal residences. In the vicinity are traces of a Roman road.

LANGTON-BY-WRAGBY, a par. in the E. div. of the wap. of Wraggoe, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 1 mile S.E. of Wragby, its post town, and 6 miles N. of the Bardney railway station. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £331 12*s.* 6*d.* The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £319. The church, dedicated to St. Giles, was rebuilt in 1766, with the exception of its tower. The register dates from 1653. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. Earl Manvers is lord of the manor.

LANGTON CHURCH. See CHURCH LANGTON, co. Leicester.

LANGTON, EAST, a tnshp. in the par. of Church Langton, hund. of Gartree, co. Leicester, 4 miles N. of Harborough. The village is small, and wholly agricultural. On the enclosure of the common in 1792, 20 acres of land were assigned for the repair of the highways. Thomas Staveley, the antiquary, was born here.

LANGTON, GREAT, or LANGTON-UPON-SWALE, a par. in the wap. of East Gilling, North Riding co. York, 6 miles N.W. of Northallerton, its post town. The village, which is small, is situated on the banks of the river Swale, which becomes flooded during heavy rains. The par. includes the tnshp. of Little Langton. The old rectory-house and 2 acres of glebe are said to have been washed away by the river. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £310. The church is a small stone structure without aisles or tower, standing in a lonely spot about a mile from the village. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. There is a National school.

LANGTON-GREEN, a hmlt. in the par. of Tonbridge, lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, 2 miles W. of Tonbridge-Wells.

LANGTON HERRING, a par. in the hund. of Uggscombe, Dorchester div. of the co. Dorset, 5 miles N.W. of Weymouth, its post town, and 3 S.E. of Abbotsbury. The village, which is small, is situated on the Channel, near a remarkable tongue of land called the Chesil Bank, and is a coastguard station. It suffered much from an inundation of the sea in November, 1824. The inhabitants are principally employed in fishing. There is a singular sheet of water called the Blackwater, which is covered with a number of aquatic birds of every kind, including about 100 swans, the property of the Earl of Ilchester. The surface of the parish is hilly, and the soil clayey, except in those parts covered by beds of shells. Limestone and granite are quarried. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £126. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient edifice, with a low square tower. It has recently been enlarged. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. William Sparks, Esq., is lord of the manor.

LANGTON, LITTLE, a tnshp. in the par. of Great Langton, hund. of East Gilling, North Riding co. York, 5 miles N.W. of Northallerton, and 10 from Richmond. Langton Hall is in this township.

LANGTON-LONG-BLANDFORD, a par. in the hund. of Pimperne, co. Dorset, 1 mile S.E. of Blandford-Forum, its post town. It is a small agricultural village situated on the river Stour. The par. contains the hmlt. of Thornton and Littleton. The surface is hilly, and the soil chiefly chalk. Here was formerly a lepers' hospital, now converted into a farmhouse. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £379. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure, with an ivy-covered tower. It formerly had a chantry in honour of SS. Mary and Thomas. Langton House, the principal residence, is situated near the river. J. J. Farquharson, Esq., is lord of the manor.

LANGTON-MATRAVERS, a par. in the hund. of Rowbarrow, co. Dorset, 3 miles S.E. of Corfe Castle, its post town, and 2 W. of Swanage. It is situated near the coast of the British Channel, which bounds the parish on the S. The par. contains the hmlt. of Acton. The village stands on the road from Wareham to Swanage. Stone is quarried to a considerable extent, and sent to all parts of the kingdom. The higher lands command views of the Channel and the Isle of Wight. The land is nearly evenly divided between arable and pasture. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £380. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £351. The church, dedicated to St. George, was almost entirely rebuilt in 1838, at an expense of £900. It formerly had a chantry to Wilcheswode priory. There is a National school. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. About half a mile S. of the village, at Spyway, is a remarkable oblong tumulus.

LANGTON-NEAR-HORNCASTLE, a par. in the S. div. of the wap. of Gartree, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 2 miles S.W. of Horncastle, its post town, and 7 N.E. of Kirkstead railway station. The parish is chiefly within the duchy of Lancaster. The village, which is small, is chiefly agricultural. At a short distance from the church, on the moor, is a curious tower 60 feet high, with a brick spiral staircase, erected by Lord Treasurer Cromwell. The river Witham, which communicates with the Horncastle canal, passes one end of the parish. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1767. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £184, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, is a modern structure, with a turret. There is also a district church, dedicated to St. Andrew, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £110, in the patron. of the bishop. This church is a stone edifice, with accommodation for 200 persons: the seats are all free. The charities produce about £17 per annum, chiefly the income of West's almshouses, founded in 1691, and endowed with 27 acres of land. There is a National school for both sexes. A chapel was erected in 1834, for the Primitive Methodists. The manor belongs to the crown.

LANGTON, THORP, a chplry. in the par. of Church Langton, hund. of Gartree, co. Leicester, 4 miles N.E. of Market-Harborough. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the rect.* of Church Langton, in the dioc. of Peterborough. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is an ancient structure, with a square pinnacled and spired tower containing three bells. The lords of the manor are the freeholders. An allotment of 13 acres was assigned for repair of the highways under an Enclosure Act obtained in 1792.

LANGTON, TUR, a chplry. in the par. of Church Langton, hund. of Gartree, co. Leicester, 5 miles N.W. of Market-Harborough. The village is small, and wholly agricultural. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect.* of Church Langton. The church is an ancient edifice, dedicated to St. Andrew.

LANGTON, WEST, a chplry. in the par. of Church Langton, co. Leicester, 4 miles N.W. of Market-Harborough. It is a small tnshp. in the par. of Church Langton. The land is chiefly in pasture. There is no village. The only object of interest is Langton Hall, situated in the midst of extensive parks and pleasure-grounds. Walter de Langton, lord treasurer of Edward I., was born here in 1296.

LANGTON WOODHOUSE, an ext. par. place in the W. div. of the hund. of Wraggoe, parts of Lindsey, co Lincoln, 2 miles S. of Wragby.

LANGTREE, a par. in the hund. of Shebbear, co. Devon, 4 miles S.W. of Great Torrington, its post town, and 8 S. of Bideford. The village, which is considerable, is wholly agricultural. The soil is clayey, but in some parts rich, producing good crops of wheat and barley. The prevailing timber is oak and pine. The road from Torrington to Holsworthy and Launceston passes through the parish. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £510. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £348. The church, dedication unknown, is an ancient stone structure, with a tower containing five bells. There was formerly a chapel-of-ease at Cross-Hill. The parochial charities produce about £55 per annum. There is a parochial school for both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is also held. The Baptists and Bible Christians have each a chapel. The trustees of the late Lord Rolle are lords of the manor.

LANGTREE, a hund. in co. Oxford, contains the pars. of Checkendon, Crowmarsh-Gifford, Goring, Ipsden, Maple-Durham, Mongewell, Newnham-Murren, North Stoke, and Whitchurch, comprising an area of 21,820 acres.

LANGTREE-WITH-STANDISH, a tnshp. in the par. of Standish, hund. of Leyland, co. Lancaster, 4 miles N.W. of Wigan. It is situated near the line of railway to Preston, and now forms one township with Standish, which see.

LANGWALL, a river in co. Caithness, Scotland, falling into the North Sea at Berridale.

LANGWATHBY, or LONGWATHBY, a par. in the ward of Leath, co. Cumberland, 4 miles N.E. of Penrith, its post town, and about 5 from the railway station on the London and North-Western line. It is situated on the river Eden, which is here crossed by a bridge of three arches, built in 1686. The main road between Penrith and Newcastle passes through the village, which is a small agricultural place. The soil consists of loam and gravel. About half the land is meadow and pasture, the remainder arable. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the vic.* of Edenhall, in the dioc. of Carlisle. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a small stone structure rebuilt in 1718, and repaired in 1835. The charities produce about £3 per annum. The Duke of Devonshire is lord of the manor.

LANGWHANG, a muir on the borders of cos. Edinburgh and Lanark, Scotland, between Carnwath and Causewayend.

LANGWITH, a tnshp. in the par. of Cuckney Norton, Hatfield div. of the wap. of Bassetlaw, co. Nottingham, 5 miles S. of Worksop and 6 N. of Mansfield. The village, which is considerable, is situated near the source of the river Poulter. Some of the inhabitants are engaged in the neighbouring cotton and stuff mills. Langwith Lodge is the principal residence, and was the occasional seat of Earl Bathurst.

LANGWITH, a tnshp. in the par. of Wheldrake, wap. of Ouse and Derwent, East Riding co. York, 2½ miles N.E. of Wheldrake, and 5 S.E. of York. There is no village, only a few farmhouses.

LANGWITH, UPPER, a par. in the hund. of Scarsdale, co. Derby, 6 miles N.W. of Mansfield, its post town, and 9 S.E. of Chesterfield. It is a small irregularly built village, and is wholly agricultural. The surface is undulating and well wooded. The prevailing timber is oak, ash, and elm. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £195. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £204. The church, dedicated to St. Helen, is a small ancient structure with a low tower. The charities consist of Mrs. Vaughan's annuity of £3, distributed to the poor in September, and other endowments of the Devonshire family. The Duke of Devonshire is lord of the manor and chief landowner.

LANGWORTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Barlings, hund. of Lawress, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 1 mile N. of Barlings and 5 miles N.E. of Lincoln. It is a station on the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire railway. The Burton hounds meet here.

LANHYDROCK, a par. in the hund. of Pyder, co. Cornwall, 2 miles S.E. of Bodmin, its post town. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Fowey, and near the turnpike road from Bodmin to Truro. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The principal residence is Lanhydrock House, built in the early part of the 17th century. It is an embattled structure of granite forming three sides of a quadrangle approached under an archway and an avenue of trees nearly a mile in length. It was garrisoned for the parliament in the Civil War, and surrendered to Sir Richard Granville in 1644. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Exeter. The church, dedicated to St. Hydrock, is a small stone structure with an embattled tower. There is an ancient cross in the churchyard. There are two National schools. The Hon. Mrs. Agar is lady of the manor.

LANIVET, a par. in the hund. of Pyder, co. Cornwall, 2 miles S.W. of Bodmin, its post town. It is a large agricultural parish, situated on the turnpike road from Bodmin to Truro, and contains the hmlts. of Bodwanick, Lamorick, Tremore, and St. Lawrence. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in mining. The soil is various, with subsoil slate and dunstone. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £667. The church is an ancient structure, with a tower containing six bells. The interior of the church contains a font, two crosses, and tombs to the Courtenays. In the churchyard is an ancient Maltese cross. The charities produce about £151 per annum, chiefly arising from the nunnery lands. This sum is applied in aid of the poor-rates. There is a National school for both sexes. The Bible Christians and Wesleyans have each a place of worship. The principal residence is St. Benet's, built out of the ruins of a nunnery, recently restored with the exception of the tower, which remains in a ruined state. The nunnery is of unknown foundation, but supposed to have been subordinate to some foreign house. William Michell, Esq., M.P., and the Rev. William Phillips Flamank are lords of the manor.

LANLIVERY, a par. in the E. div. of the hund. of Powder, co. Cornwall, 2 miles S.W. of Lostwithiel, its post town, and 6 from Bodmin. The parish, which is of large extent, is intersected by the river Fowey, and includes Restormel Castle, formerly the court of the dukes of Cornwall, but now the property of Earl Mount Edgcumbe. The village is wholly agricultural. Granite is extensively quarried for the docks at Plymouth and Portsmouth. The rectorial tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £372 10*s.*, and the vicarial for £304 10*s.* The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £228. The church, dedicated to St. Brevita is an ancient granite structure with a square pinnacled tower. The parochial charities produce about £12 per annum. There is a free school for both sexes. The Wesleyans have two places of worship.

LANNARTH, a vil. in the par. of Redruth, hund. of Penwith, co. Cornwall, 8 miles W. of Truro. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £150, in the patron. of the crown and bishop. The church is called Christ Church.

LANREATH, a par. in the hund. of West, co. Cornwall, 6 miles S. of Lostwithiel, its post town, 6 N.W. of West Looe, and 10 W. of Liskeard. It is situated on a branch of the river Fowey called Herod's Foot, and contains the lakes of Ball and Trebant. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. Lime is burnt. On Bury Down is a Roman causeway called the Giant's Hedge, and an encampment know as Bury Down Beacon; also several barrows in which coins and bones were discovered in 1855. Petty sessions for the hundred of West are held at Trecan Gate in this parish every first Wednesday in the month. The soil is clay upon a subsoil of killas. Some of the land is fertile, but the greater portion of inferior quality. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £500. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £504. The church, dedicated to St. Marnarch, is a stone structure with a peal of six bells. It contains a curious Norman font, and a carved screen with a portrait in oil of Richard II. The register dates from 1555. There is a National school for both sexes, and a Sunday-school held at the rector's schools. The Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, and Calvinists have each a place of worship. There are several lords of the manor. Cattle fairs are held in the third week after Shrove Tuesday, 2nd May, and 18th November.

LANRICK, a castle in co. Perth, Scotland, 4 miles W. of Callandar. It is situated on Loch Vennacher, and was formerly the seat of the McGregors.

LANSALLOES, a par. in the hund. of West, co. Cornwall, 6 miles S.W. of West Looe, its post town. It is situated on the coast near Lantivet Bay, and contains the tnshp. of Polperro, and the hmlts. of Crumplehorn and Ternewan. It was held by the Earl of Mortaigne, from whom it passed to the Bolighs, Kelliows, Speccots, Longs, &c. The soil is chiefly loam upon a subsoil of slate. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £500. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £500. The church, dedicated to St. Alwy, is situated on a hill, and was selected as a station for the trigonometrical survey. There is also an episcopal chapel, erected in 1839. The charities produce about £1 per annum. The Wesleyans have two chapels. Francis Howell, Esq., is lord of the manor.

LANSDOWN HILL, near Prior Park, co. Somerset, 2 miles S.E. of Bath. It rises to the height of 800 feet, and commands a view of 40 miles. On its summit are remains of a Saxon camp, also Beckford's Tower, and a column to Sir Bevill Granville, who fell in a battle fought here in 1643, in which Waller was defeated. On its slopes are a range of houses, St. Stephen's church, and a cemetery. The Petty family take from this place the title of marquis.

LANTEAGUE, a vil. in the par. of Crunwear, co. Pembroke, 5 miles S.E. of Narberth.

LANTEGLOS-BY-CAMELFORD, a par. in the hund. of Lesnewth, co. Cornwall, 12 miles from Bodmin. It is situated on the western bank of the river Camel, and includes the small town and borough of Camelford, and the hamlet of Helston. The surface is very hilly, and the soil shallow and slaty, except by the banks of the river, where there is much good meadow land. There is a large slate quarry called North Delabole or Bowithick. The living is a rect.* with that of Advent annexed, in the dioc. of Exeter, joint val. £474. The church, dedicated to SS. Lanty and Advent, is an ancient structure with a lofty tower. The parochial charities produce about £92 per annum, of which £20 go to the support of a school, and the remainder in aid of the poor-rates. There is a National school with a small endowment. The Wesleyans have two places of worship—one in the town of Camelford, the other at Helston. At Castle Gough are remains of ancient earthworks.

LANTEGLOS-BY-FOWEY, a par. in the hund. of West, co. Cornwall, 2 miles E. of Fowey, its post town. It is situated on the river Fowey, which separates it from the town of Fowey on the opposite bank. The par. contains the hmlts. of Bodinnoe and Highway, also the fishing village of Polruan, signifying a "Roman pool," which had anciently a market and fair. The manor was formerly held by the Fitzwilliams, Mohuns, and Pitts of Barton Manorhouse, which was garrisoned for the parliament, but was taken for Charles I. in 1644. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. Lime is burnt. The soil is clayey on a subsoil of slate. The surface is very irregular, rising into hills of precipitous elevation, and the lower grounds are watered by numerous streams. In this parish is the rich copper mine of Wheal Howel. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £315, and the vicarial for £225. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £196. The church, dedicated to St. Lanty, is an ancient stone structure, with a tower containing six bells. The interior of the church contains a font and brasses to the Mohun family. The parochial charities produce about £2 10*s.* per annum. There are two National schools for both sexes, also a Sunday-school held at the church. The Wesleyans and Independents have each a chapel. On a hill behind the church are the ruins of an ancient chapel called St. Saviour's, which serves as a landmark to mariners. Near the village are the remains of a castle, also traces of another castle on the Fowey. In connection with these castles at the mouth of the Fowey a chain was suspended across the river, forming a blockade in time of war. Lady Grenville is lady of the manor. Charles I. is said to have narrowly escaped being shot here whilst inspecting the harbour.

LANTERNAM. See LLANVIHANGEL-LLANTARNAM, co. Monmouth.

LANTHONY PRIORY, co. Gloucester, near Gloucester. It was founded in 1187 by Milo de Gloucester as a cell to Llanthony Abbey, in co. Monmouth.

LANTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirk-Newton, W. div. of Glendale ward, co. Northumberland, 4½ miles N.W. of Wooler. It is situated on the N. bank of the river Glen. Lanton Tower stands on elevated ground, and can be seen many miles distant.

LANTON. a vil. in the par. of Jedburgh, co. Roxburgh, Scotland, 2 miles W. of Jedburgh.

LANTWIT-JUXTA-NEATH, or LOWER LANTWIT, a par. in the hund. of Neath, co. Glamorgan, 1 mile E. of Neath, its post town, and 7 miles from Swansea. It is situated on the river Neath, and is crossed by the Neath canal. The par. contains the hmlts. of Clyne and Resolven. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in mining and in the collieries. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect.* of Neath, in the dioc. of Llandaff. The charities produce about £2, the endowment of Griffiths' almshouses.

LANTWIT MAJOR, or LLAN-ILLTYD-FAWR, a par. and decayed borough in the hund. of Cowbridge, co. Glamorgan, 4 miles S.W. of Cowbridge, its post town, and 8 from Bridgend. The town, which is of ancient date, is situated near the Bristol Channel, and was once a borough. The par. contains the vils. of Boverton, occupying the site of the Roman Bovium, on the Via Julia, Sigginston, Frampton, Ham, Llech-Mawr, and Pwll-Elech. It was formerly known as Caer Wrgon of the Britons. At Hill Head are the remains of a celebrated college founded in 448 by St. Germanus, under Illtyd, the inventor of the Welsh plough. It was made a cell to Tewkesbury Abbey by Robert Fitzhamon in 1111, and at the Dissolution its revenues were given by Henry VIII. to the see of Gloucester. Among the numerous scholars of the above college were, Gildas the historian, Taliesin the chief of bards, Paulinus, St. David, &c. Its 7 halls and 400 houses are said to have been inhabited by 2,000 scholars. The townhall, built by Gilbert de Clare, yet remains; it is approached by a flight of steps, and has a bell gable with an inscription. There is also a castellated house of great antiquity, called Ilio Castle. The living is a vic. united with the rect. of Llyswarney, in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £347, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Gloucester. The church, dedicated to St. Illtyd, is one of the most ancient in Wales. It was built by the Nevilles prior to the reign of Henry VI., and is 98 feet in length. The interior of the church contains a rood screen, several ancient monuments, also an effigy of John Hopkins, whose height reached 7 feet 6 inches. Adjoining is the old church, which is apparently the more modern of the two, being of the 15th century. It contains several ancient monuments and mural paintings. At the W. end of the church are the remains of the Lady Chapel, 70 feet in length. In the churchyard are a stone pyramid of 9 feet, also the stump of St. Illtyd's Cross, 6¼ feet in height. The charities produce about £4 per annum. The Independents, Baptists, and Calvinist Methodists have each a place of worship. Roman coins have been found. A fair is held on the 22nd June for lambs.

LAOGHAL, a loch in co. Sutherland, Scotland, 3 miles S.E. of Kirkboll. It is 3 miles in length by 1 mile broad, and is situated at the head of the river Borgie, between the hills Ben Laoghal and Stomine.

LAPAL, a tnshp. in the par. of Halesowen, hund. of Brimstree, co. Worcester, formerly in Salop, 2 miles from Halesowen, and 7 S.W. of Birmingham. It is situated near the river Stour and the Dudley canal. Some of the inhabitants are engaged in the hardware trade.

LAPFORD, a par. in the hund. of North Tawton, co. Devon, 9 miles N.W. of Crediton, its post town, and 5 S.E. of Chulmleigh. It is a station on the Great Western railway. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Taw, and is wholly agricultural. The soil is poor, resting on a subsoil of clay slate. Serges were formerly manufactured to a considerable extent, but in 1820 the factory was taken down. Bury Barton House, late the seat of Admiral Bury, is now a farmhouse. Stone is quarried. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £600. The church, dedicated to St. Thomas-à-Becket, is a stone edifice with a square tower containing six bells. It contains a carved oak screen. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. The Independents and Bible Christians have each a chapel. An annual fair is held on the second Monday in July for cattle and sheep.

LAPLEY, a par. in the W. div. of the hund. of Cuttlestone, co. Stafford, 3½ miles S.W. of Penkridge, its post town and railway station, and 3 N. of Brewood. The parish, which is wholly agricultural, is situated near the Liverpool and Birmingham canal and railway. It contains the chplry. of Wheaton Aston. Here was formerly a Black priory, founded in Edward the Confessor's time by Aylmer, as a cell to St. Remigius, at Rheims. It was subsequently given by Henry I. to Tong College, and in the reign of Edward IV. to Sir Richard Manners. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £300, and the vicarial or £200. The living is a vic.* with the cur. of Wheaton Aston annexed, in the dioc. of Lichfield, joint val. £124. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has been thoroughly restored. It is a stone edifice with a tower containing five bells. The parochial charities produce about £25 12*s.* per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. Captain Frederick Hay Swinfen is lord of the manor.

LAPPOCK, a rock near Lady Isle, co. Ayr, Scotland, 1½ mile S.W. of Irvine.

LAPWORTH, a par. in the Warwick div. of the hund. of Kington, co. Warwick, 3 miles N. of Henley-in-Arden, and 6 from the Kingswood railway station. It is situated on the Birmingham and Stratford canal, and near the Birmingham and Oxford railway. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. It is a meet for the North Warwickshire hounds. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £350. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £428, in the patron. of Merton College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure with a tower and spire. The charities produce about £412 per annum. The Independents have a place of worship. The free school for both sexes is a new building situated near the church. P. Wykeham Martin, Esq., and George Miller, Esq., are lords of the manor.

LAQUES, a vil. in the par. of Llanstephan, co. Carmarthen, 2 miles E. of Laugharne. It is situated at the mouth of the rivers Taf and Towey.

LARACOR, a par. in the bar. of Lower Moyfenrath, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, containing Summerhill, its post town. It is 5 miles long by 2½ broad, and extends along the right bank of the river Boyne. The road from Trim to Dublin passes through the parish. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Meath, val. £337, in the patron. of the crown. The church is old. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Agher. Here are four day schools. Dean Swift held the living for some time, and it was here that Esther Johnson, Swift's "Stella," lived. Dangan Castle, now a ruin, was the birthplace of Wellington.

LARAGH, a vil. in the par. of Derrylossary, in the bar. of North Ballinacor, co. Wicklow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 6 miles N.W. of Rathdrum. It is situated under the Laragh Mountain, near Glendalough. About 1 mile E. of the village is Laragh House.

LARAGHBRYAN, a par. in the bar. of North Salt, co. Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, containing Maynooth, its post town. It is 5 miles long by 3¼ broad. The surface, which is flat, is traversed by the Royal canal. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Dublin. The Duke of Leinster built the church. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Leixlip. There are four day schools. Carton is the demesne of the Duke of Leinster.

LARAH, a par. in the bars. of Tullygarvey and Upper Loughtee, co. Cavan, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, containing Stradone, its post town. Its surface comprises a considerable amount of bog and lake. The road from Cavan to Cootehill passes through the parish. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Kilmore, val. £769, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built by the late Board of First Fruits in 1832. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Cleffernah. There are two public, eleven private, and two Sunday schools. Stradone House and Ravenswood are the chief residences. Limestone is very abundant. In the vicinity are several Danish raths and a cairn.

LARBERT, a par. in co. Stirling, Scotland. It is a railway station on the Scottish Central line, and situated 8 miles S.E. of Stirling, and 27 from Edinburgh. It comprises the vils. of Larbert, Kinnaird, Stenhousemuir, and West Carron. Its size is about 2¾ square miles. About 200 acres are plantation, and the remainder arable. Here both coal and ironstone are extensively worked. The rivers are the Carron, which runs along the southern border of the parish, and the Pow, a stream on its north side. The par. (united to Dunipace) is in the presb. of Stirling, and synod of Perth and Stirling, in the patron. of the crown. The minister's stipend is £322. The parish church is a modern structure in the Elizabethan style of architecture. Here is a Free church. There are six schools, one of which is endowed. Here are the Carron Works, one of the largest iron foundries in Europe, employing nearly 2,000 hands; it is carried on by a chartered company, and was projected by Dr. Roebuck, of Sheffield, in 1760. The chief seats are Glenbervie, Larbert House, Carron Hall, and Kinnaird—the latter once the residence and property of Bruce, the Abyssinian traveller, who was born, died, and buried in this parish. Near this place the great Roman road passes, and about a quarter of a mile to the W. the foundation of a bridge is visible when the river Carron is low. Here both Roman millstones and pottery have been discovered, and Danish forts are seen. The famous Falkirk cattle tryst is held on a moor in this parish in October, when 20,000 to 30,000 head of cattle, and near 100,000 sheep change hands.

LARBRICK, a hmlt. in the par. of Kirkham, hund. of Amounderness, co. Lancaster, 5 miles N. of Kirkham, and 4 N.E. of Poulton. The hamlet, which is considerable, is situated on the river Wyre, and is in conjunction with Little Ecclestone. There is a chalybeate spring.

LARDIEF. See KINLOCH, co. Perth, Scotland.

LARGO, a par. in the St. Andrew's district of the co. Fife, Scotland. It is a railway station on the Anstruther branch of the Edinburgh, Perth, and Dundee line, and is situated 6 miles S. of Cupar. It comprises the vils. of Upper Largo or Kirkton, Lower Largo, New Gilston, and Woodside. Largo Bay, which is 5 miles broad, on the Frith of Forth, is one of its boundaries. The coast, which is low and sandy, extends for about 3 miles. The length of the par. is 6 miles, and its average breadth is 3 miles. The surface is much diversified by hills and valleys, and at Largo-law it attains a height of 950 feet above sea-level. Of 6,820 acres, about 6,000 are under tillage, and the rest either pasture or under wood. An inferior description of coal is worked here, also sandstone of excellent quality. The par. is in the presb. of St. Andrew's, and synod of Fife. The minister's stipend is £269. A part of the parish church was built in 1623, and the rest in 1817. Here is a Free church, an United Presbyterian church, and a Baptist chapel, also four schools. The hospital was erected by means of an endowment bequeathed in 1659 by John Wood, a native of the place, who provided that any man "of the name of Wood" should have free admission, to whatever part of Great Britain he might belong. In 1482 the barony of Largo was conferred by James III. upon Sir Andrew Wood, a native of this place. Lower Largo has been rendered famous from the fact of its being the birthplace of Alexander Selkirk, the original of Robinson Crusoe. The house in which he was born still stands. Sir John Leslie, the natural philosopher, was also a native. The vils. of Upper and Lower Largo stand about three-quarters of a mile from each other. Lower Largo formerly carried on a good trade both with Norway and Holland, but the harbour has recently been much neglected. The weaving of linen goods and flax-spinning occupy some of the inhabitants. There is an ancient tower in the vicinity of Largo House said to be the remains of a castle formerly inhabited by Sir Andrew Wood. In front of Largo House is a curious runic stone. On the W. bank of the Keil are the ruins of the ancient castle of Balcruive, the seat of the Crawfords. Lundin House is a modern structure, but has a tower belonging to the ancient castle of Lundin in its centre. Near it stands an ancient Danish pillar cross. Roman antiquities have been discovered in the vicinity. The National Bank has a branch office in the village. A market for corn is held weekly.

LARGS, a par. in the Cunningham district of the co. Ayr, Scotland. It comprises the post town of Largs and the vil. of Fairley. The size of the par. is 9 miles by 4. Its surface is hilly, being broken by a ridge which cuts it off from the country behind, from which circumstance originated the proverbial expression "Out of the world, and into Largs." About 8,598 acres of the parish are heath and moorland, 5,500 in pasture, 1,145 under tillage, 3,300 in meadow, and 600 in woodlands. The Noddle and Gogo are the principal streams. There are extensive sandstone quarries. The par. is in the presb. of Greenock, and synod of Glasgow and Ayr. The minister's stipend is £297. The parish church is a modern and commodious structure, and has tombs of the Montgomerys of Skelmorley. There are also two Free churches, an United Presbyterian church, and two chapels-of-ease, besides an Episcopalian chapel dedicated to St. Columba, to which saint the ancient church was dedicated. There are seven schools, one of which is endowed. The lordship of Largs was once possessed by John Baliol, the competitor for the crown of Scotland. It was on the plain of Largs that the celebrated battle was fought between Haco of Norway, and Alexander III. of Scotland, on the 2nd October, 1263. Margaret's-Law was in 1772 discovered to be an immense artificial accumulation of stones, and containing in its centre several stone coffins, urns, and human remains, supposed to have been there since the battle of Largs. Here is the castle of Fairley, once the property of the Fairley family, erected in 1521; Skelmorley Castle, part of which was built in 1502, and recently repaired; and Knock Castle, built about the commencement of the 16th century, and of late repaired. The more modern structures are Brisbane House and Kelburn House. The fisheries on the coast are of considerable value.—The town of Largs is situated on the Frith of Clyde, 30 miles S.W. of Glasgow, and 14 S. of Greenock. It is considered a very healthy spot, and possesses a fine beach, with good bathing. It enjoys convenient and expeditious communication with Glasgow and other large towns on the Clyde by means of steamboats, and during the season it is enlivened by a great number of visitors. In front of the town is a good quay, constructed in 1834. The parish church, with its tower and spire, is a great ornament to the town. The City of Glasgow Bank and the Western Bank have each a branch here, and there are several insurance agencies and a gas company. A suite of baths was erected here by public subscription in 1816. The inhabitants are employed in fishing and weaving, but a large proportion of them depend upon visitors. The town is chiefly under the control of the county authorities. There is a justice of peace court for small debts held here on the first Monday of each month. Thursday is market day. Fairs are held on the first Tuesday of February; on St. Columba's or Colm's Day (the Tuesday after the 12th June); on the third Tuesday of July, and the fourth Tuesday of October. The St. Columba's fair was formerly a scene of bustle and active traffic. It was attended by the people from the Highlands, who resorted hither to exchange their produce for that of the Lowland trader, but has recently much declined.

LARIA, or LAIRA GREEN, an ext. par. place in the par. of Egg-Buckland, co. Devon, 2 miles from Plymouth. It is situated on the South Devon railway, at the bridge over the Catwater.

LARKE, a river rising near Rushbrook, in co. Suffolk, and joining the Ouse near Ely, in Cambridgeshire.

LARKFIELD, a hund. in the lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, contains the pars. of Addington, Allington, Aylesford, Birling, Burham, Ditton, Leybourne, East Malling, West Malling, Offham, Ryarsh, Snodland, Trottersclife, and Wouldham, comprising an area of 22,410 acres.

LARKFIELD, a hmlt. in the hund. of Larkfield, co. Kent, 4 miles N.W. of Maidstone. There are also several private seats of this name in various parts of Ireland.

LARKHALL, a vil. in the pars. of Dalserf and Hamilton, co. Lanark, Scotland. It is 3½ miles S.E. of Hamilton. The village was commenced in 1776, but did not increase much until about 1796. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the neighbouring collieries, or in handloom-weaving for Glasgow houses. The chapel, erected in 1835, has recently been endowed by the Duke of Hamilton, and erected into a quoad sacra church. Here the United Presbyterians have a church. There are three schools. In the village the City of Glasgow Bank has a branch, and there is a savings-bank and a benefit society.

LARKHAM, a hmlt. on the coast in co. Lancaster, 5 miles N.W. of Poulton-le-Fylde.

LARK-STOKE, a hmlt. in the par. of Ilmington, upper div. of the hund. of Kiftsgate, co. Gloucester, 4 miles N.E. of Chipping Campden. There is no village.

LARKTON, or LARTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Malpas, higher div. of the hund. of Broxton, co. Chester, 3 miles N.E. of Malpas, and 8 N.W. of Whitchurch.

LARLING, or LARLINGFORD, a par. in the hund. of Shropham, co. Norfolk, 8 miles N.E. of Thetford, its post town, and 1 mile from the Harling Road station on the Great Eastern railway. It is a small village situated near the Norwich and Brandon railway, and was formerly the halting-place of all the Norwich coaches. The lower grounds are watered by a stream which divides this parish from that of Snetterton. The surface is undulating, and the soil light, alternated with sand. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £209. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £174. The church, dedicated to St. Ethelbert, is an ancient structure with a square flint tower. It is situated in a large field a quarter of a mile N. of the village. The interior of the church contains several monuments, and a highly enriched Norman arch forming the S. porch. The charities produce about £13 per annum. The Wesleyans have a place of worship.

LARNE, a par., post and market town, in the bar. of Upper Glenarm, co. Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 10 miles S.E. of Glenarm, and 18 N.E. of Antrim. It is the terminus of the Belfast, Carrickfergus, and Larne branch of the Belfast and Northern Counties railway. The par. is 2 miles long, and its average breadth is 1½ mile. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Connor. The church is an old building. There are Presbyterian and Wesleyan meeting-houses, and a Roman Catholic chapel united to that of Carrickfergus. The town is a seaport lying partly within the par. of Inver. It is situated at the head of Lough Larne. It consists of an old and a new town. The latter has one principal and well-edificed street. The trade has become inconsiderable since the rise of Belfast, to which it is a subport. There is some traffic in the linen trade. Here are police and coast-guard stations. The principal buildings are, the poor-house, fever hospital, gas works, bank, libraries, &c. Petty sessions are held once a fortnight. Numerous visitors resort to this town during the summer. The town was anciently called Inver, and it was here that Edward Bruce landed in 1315. On the peninsula called the Curran stand the ruins of Olderfleet Castle, founded by the Bissett family, and subsequently granted to the MacDonnell and Chichester families. It gives name to a Poor-law Union containing 11 electoral divisions in the county of Antrim. Fairs are held on the 31st July and 1st December.

LARNE, a sea lough inside of Island Magee Point, co. Antrim, Ireland. It is about 6 miles in length by 1 mile broad, and has a small but safe harbour at its mouth. Here is the Farres lighthouse, which is 47 feet high, with a fixed light visible for 9 miles.

LARTINGTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Romald-Kirk, wap. of West Gilling, North Riding co. York, 4 miles from Romald-Kirk, and 2 N.W. of Barnard Castle. It is a station on the Barnard Castle and Lancashire Union railway. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Tees. It had formerly a chantry founded about the 15th century by the Fitzhughs. Near the village is Lartington Hall, with a Roman Catholic chapel attached, in which is the celebrated painting of a crucifix by Le Brun. There is an endowed school.

LARTON, a hmlt. in the par. of West Kirby, lower div. of the hund. of Wirrall, co. Chester, 6 miles W. of Birkenhead. It is situated near the mouth of the river Dee, and with Newton forms a township.

LASBOROUGH, a par. in the hund. of Longtree, co. Gloucester, 5 N.W. of Tetbury. Wootton-under-Edge is its post town. The parish, which is of small extent, is situated in a valley near the Bath and Cheltenham road. The soils consist of brash and oolite. The land is chiefly arable and the remainder in sheep walks. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £150. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a small stone structure containing one bell. R. S. Holford, Esq., is lord of the manor.

LASCELLES HALL, a vil. in the tnshp. of Lepton, par. of Kirk-Heaton, West Riding co. York, 3 miles E. of Huddersfield. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the cloth trade.

LASHAM, or LASSHAM, a par. in the hund. of Upper Bermondspit, Basingstoke div. of co. Hants, 4 miles N.W. of Alton, its railway station and post town, and 7 S.E. of Basingstoke. The village is small, and the inhabitants are chiefly employed in agriculture. The land is chiefly arable and woodland; the prevailing timber oak and beech. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £350. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £324. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The parochial charities produce about £6 10*s.* per annum. F. J. Ellis Jervoise, Esq., is lord of the manor.

LASKILL-PASTURE, a tnshp. in the par. of Helmsley, wap. of Ryedale, North Riding co. York, 7 miles N. of Helmsley, and 13 N.W. of the Thirsk railway station. The township, which is small, is situated on the river Rye. In the year 1855 some ruins were discovered near Laskill Bridge, supposed to have been the remains of an abbey. The Society of Friends have a place of worship. The soil consists of clay and gravel, with subsoil freestone, gravel, and clay. Lord Feversham is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

LASSINGTON, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Dudstone, co. Gloucester, 3 miles N.W. of Gloucester, its post town. The parish, which is of small extent, is bounded on the N. and E. by the river Leadon. The Hereford and Gloucester canal here crosses a branch of the river Severn, and joins the main branch at Gloucester. In the neighbourhood both rivers are crossed by the same bridge, and near it is a large oak tree called "Lassington Oak." The village consists of a few farm-houses. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £119. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £120, in the patron. of Sir J. W. Guise and the bishop alternately. The church, dedicated to St. Oswald, is an ancient structure, with a small turret at the W. end. The charities produce about £5 per annum. Sir J. W. Guise is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The fossils called Astroites, or starstones, are found on a hill in this neighbourhood.

LASSWADE, a par. in the co. of Edinburgh, Scotland. It comprises the vils. of Lasswade, Loanhead, Roslin, and Rosewell. The size of the par. is about 8 miles by 3. Its surface consists of a fertile plain situated under the Pentland hills, which occupy the N.W. extremity of the parish. Here are abundant supplies of sandstone, limestone, and coal, the last being principally worked in the neighbourhood of Rosewell and Loanhead. The river North Esk runs through the whole length of the parish, and on its banks is a continuous succession of seats; the principal are Dryden, Rosebank, Goston, Auchindinny, Mavisbank, Springfield, Polton, Elden, and Glenesk. The ruins of Roslin Castle and its chapel stand on a rock overhanging the glen of the Esk. Hawthornden, the classical habitation of the poet Drummond, the friend of Shakspeare and Jonson, and now the property of Sir James Walker Drummond, is situated on the S. bank of the Esk, on the edge of a cliff, beneath which are three artificial caves, said to have afforded shelter to the Scots in turbulent times. Melville Castle, built at the latter end of last century, is the seat of Viscount Melville. The par. is in the presb. of Dalkeith, and synod of Lothian and Tweeddale. The minister's stipend is £180. The parish church, which stands on an eminence, is a commodious structure, erected in 1793. There is a chapel-of-ease at Roslin (under the patronage of the male communicants), and also a Free church. At Loanhead is a Free Church preaching station, and a Reformed Presbyterian church. There are two United Presbyterian churches, one at Bridgend, and the other at Lasswade. There are twelve non-parochial schools throughout the parish. The present par. of Lasswade includes the ancient par. of Lasswade, and the greater portion of the ancient pars. of Pentland and Melville. The ancient church, the burial-place of the Melville family, is now in ruins, and contains the ashes of the first viscount of that title, distinguished during the ministry of Mr. Pitt. On Roslin Moor a battle was fought in 1302, in which the Scots, under Comyn, then guardian of the kingdom, and Simon Fraser, attacked and defeated three divisions of English on the same day. The parish contains carpet, damask, paper, gunpowder, and other manufactories. The village of Lasswade is 6 miles from Edinburgh, and 2 from Dalkeith. The neighbourhood is much frequented by visitors from Edinburgh and other places during the summer months. The par. is intersected by the Peebles railway, which has stations at Roslin and Hawthornden. Coaches run between this place and Edinburgh. Some of Sir Walter Scott's happiest years were here spent. Near Mavisbank House is a supposed Roman station. Urns and antique weapons have been found in the neighbourhood.

LASTINGHAM, a par. in the wap. of Ryedale, North Riding co. York, 7 miles N.W. of Pickering, its post town and railway station, and 4 N.E. of Kirby-Moorside. The par., which is wholly agricultural, is situated on the river Severn, and contains the tnshps. of Appleton-le-Moors, Farndale East Side, Hutton-le-Hole, Rosedale West Side, and Spaunton. It was given by King Ethelbald to Bishop Cedd, who founded a monastery here, which, after the Conquest, was removed to York. A great portion of the land is in moor, and about 800 acres of heath. The soil is sandy and loamy. The village is considerable, but wholly agricultural. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of York, val. £280, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient stone structure with a tower. Underneath the choir is a vaulted crypt, with massive cylindrical columns and sculptured arches; it is entered through a trap-door. The church contains a font of great antiquity and an altarpiece representing Christ in the garden of Gethsemane, by John Jackson, R.A., a native of this parish. Besides the parish church there are chapels-of-ease at Farndale East Side, and Farndale High Quarter. The charities produce about £15 10*s.* per annum, of which £10 is a bequest for education. There is a National school for both sexes. The Wesleyans have a chapel, in which a Sunday-school is also held. H. B. Darley, Esq., is lord of the manor.

LATCHFORD, a chplry. in the par. of Grappenhall, hund. of Bucklow, co. Chester, 1 mile S.E. of Warrington, its post town. It is a station on the London and North-Western railway. The chapelry is situated on the S. side of the river Mersey, here crossed by a stone bridge connecting this township with the borough of Warrington. The Irwell and Mersey canals and the North-Western railway pass near to this township. The village, which is inconsiderable, was formerly a market town. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in cotton spinning, curled hair manufacturing, tanning, tool making, and various other trades. The soil consists of clay and sand. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Chester, val. £111. The church, dedicated to St. James, is a stone structure, with a square tower containing one bell. The charities produce about £1 10*s.* per annum. There are two infant schools for both sexes, also a Sunday-school. The Primitive Methodists have a place of worship.

LATCHFORD, a hmlt. in the par. of Great Haseley, hund. of Ewelme, co. Oxford, 4 miles S.W. of Thame, and 2½ W. of Tetsworth.

LATCHINGDON, a par. in the hund. of Dengie, co. Essex, 5 miles S.E. of Maldon, its post town, and 6 N.W. of Burnham. It is situated between the rivers Blackwater and Crouch, and is bounded on the N. by Latchingdon Creek. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in agriculture. The soil is a strong clay. Latchingdon and Snoreham jointly form a village. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £900. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £710, in the patron. of the Archbishop of Canterbury. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, was consecrated in 1857. The old church still remains, though not in use. The register dates from 1725. The parochial charities produce about £13 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. Charles H. Pulley, Esq., is lord of the manor.

LATHAM. a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Gomersall, par. of Birstall, West Riding co. York, 7 miles N.E. of Huddersfield, and 4 N.W. of Dewsbury. The inhabitants are engaged in the woollen manufacture, and in the collieries.

LATHBURY, a par. in the hund. of Newport, co. Bucks, 1 mile N. of Newport Pagnell, its post town, and 5 miles from Wolverhampton. It is a small agricultural village, situated on the river Ouse, near the Linford canal. The surface is undulating, and the soil of a gravelly nature. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £68, in the patron. of Christ Church, Oxford. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has some Norman arches; and in the chancel is a tesselated pavement of black and white marble, the gift of Margaret, daughter of Sir H. Andrewes, Bart. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. Viscount Hood is lord of the manor. Dr. Chelsum, who wrote against Gibbon, once held the living. The Manor House stands on the site of an ancient monastery.

LATHEREDGE, a hmlt. in the par. of Horsley, co. Gloucester, 3 miles S.W. of Minchinhampton.

LATHERON, a par. at the southern extremity of the co. Caithness, Scotland. It contains the post-office stations and vils. of Berriedale, Lybster, Latheron, Dalbeath, and Swiney. It extends 27 miles N. from the Burn of the Ord, along the sea-coast, and measures from 15 to 16 miles in breadth. The surface is a succession of hill and valley, and the boundary line with the county of Sutherland is very mountainous. The principal mountains are Morven, Scarabine, and Maiden-pass, the former being 1,221 feet above sea-level. The greater portion of the parish is pastoral, or waste, and about 9,000 imperial acres under tillage. The principal rivers are Dunbeath, Langwell, and Berriedale. The coast is bold and rocky, but indented with several inlets, which serve as harbours for fishing-vessels. There are several caves (some from 300 to 400 feet long) by the sea-side, in which a great number of seals are killed. Many of the inhabitants are employed in fishing on the coast, where herrings, cod, salmon, turbot, and lobsters, are taken. The par. is in the presb. of Caithness, and synod of Sutherland and Caithness. The minister's stipend is £253. The parish church, erected in 1734, and enlarged in 1822, is a commodious structure. At Berriedale is a government church, together with a Free church. There are Free churches respectively at Bruan, Latheron, and Lybster, and at the last-named place there is also a chapel-of-ease. There are about eighteen non-parochial schools. In the neighbourhood is a Druid circle and fort. Along the cliffs from Ord to Clyth are several castles (chiefly in ruins), viz. Dunbeath, Berriedale, Latheron, Forsa, Swiney, &c., the first-mentioned being still inhabited.

LATHOM, a tnshp. in the par. of Ormskirk, hund. of West Derby, co. Lancaster, 3 miles N.E. of Ormskirk, its post town. It is situated on the river Douglas and on the Leeds canal, and contains the hmlt. of Newbrough, or Newburgh. The village, which is considerable, was once a market town. There are some extensive collieries and stone quarries. The manor formerly belonged to the Lathoms and Stanleys, ancestors of the earls of Derby. Thomas, the first earl, here entertained Henry VII. in his baronial mansion of Lathom House, then in its full splendour. This noble castle, which had eighteen towers, and was surrounded by a fosse 8 yards in breadth, subsequently became famous in history for the successful defence made by Charlotte Countess of Derby, for three months, against the parliamentary forces under General Fairfax. In the following year, 1647, it was again besieged by General Egerton, at the head of 4,000 Parliamentarians, and was finally surrendered for want of ammunition, when, after being plundered, it was dismantled by order of Parliament, and the fortifications demolished. On the Restoration, Lathom House again became the residence of the earls of Derby till 1730, when it was conveyed, by marriage with Henrietta, daughter and heiress of William Earl of Derby, to John the third Earl of Ashburnham, by whom it was sold; and was subsequently purchased by Sir Thomas Bootle, Knt., whose niece marrying Richard Wilbraham, Esq., ancestor of the present Lord Skelmersdale, conveyed it to that family. The present mansion was rebuilt by Leoni on the old site, and though not equal to its predecessor in magnificence or strength, is a stately building, with a frontage of 156 feet, and contains numerous apartments, and a domestic chapel, which has recently been improved, at a cost of £1,200. The park, which is nearly 5 miles in circumference, is tastefully embellished. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Chester, val. £60, in the patron. of the Vicar of Ormskirk. The church is dedicated to St. John. In the western part of this extensive township a new church was erected by the late Earl of Derby, and consecrated in 1851. It is dedicated to St. James. There are National schools at Lathom and at Newburgh in this tnshp.; the former is supported by Lord Skelmersdale, and the latter by an endowment, bequeathed by the Rev. Thomas Crane, in 1714, and now producing about £50 per annum. There are also schools at Westhead, a small village not far from the church. At Lathom Park is an ancient almshouse, consisting of several tenements, with a chapel.

LATIMER, or EASTMANSTED-LATIMER, a chplry. in the par. of Chesham, hund. of Burnham, co. Bucks, 3 miles S.E. of Chesham, and 4 from Amersham, its post town. It is situated on the river Chess, and was formerly the seat of the Latimers, Nevilles, Grevilles, and Sandys. There are two waterfalls. The living is a don. rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £125. The church, which has recently been restored, is dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene. Latimer House is the principal residence, and has lately been restored in the Tudor style. The Hon. Charles Compton Cavendish is lord of the manor.

LATTERAGH, a par. in the bar. of Upper Ormond, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles S. of Toomyvard. Nenagh is its post town. It is 3 miles long by 2½ broad at the widest. The surface is elevated, and rises near the centre of the par. to the height of 1,257 feet above sea-level. The soil is of various qualities. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Killaloe, val £122, in the patron. of the bishop. Here are two private day schools. Latteragh House is the principal seat. It is the alleged site of a monastery, a great seat of learning, presided over by St. Odran, who died in the middle of the 6th century.

LATTIN, a par. in the bar. of Clanwilliam, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles W. of Tipperary, its post town. The par. is a little over 2 miles long by 2 broad. The soil is mostly good. The road from Emly to Tipperary crosses the interior. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Emly, joined with Cordangan, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is in ruins. The Roman Catholic Chapel is united to those of Cullen and Thronell. There are two hedge-schools. Mooresfoot is the chief seat.

LATTON, or LACTON, a par. in the hund. of Harlow, co. Essex, 1½ mile S.W. of Harlow, its post town, 7½ miles of Bishop Stortford, and 1 mile from the Burnt-mill railway station. The village, which is of ancient date, is situated near the river Stort. Here was formerly a priory of Black Canons, founded in the 13th century, and dedicated to St. John the Baptist. Some remains of the conventual buildings have been converted into a barn. At the Dissolution the site was given to the Parker family. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £355. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £477. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is a small structure, with a square tower containing three bells. In the interior of the church are three brasses, one of Chief Baron Arderne, bearing date 1465. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. There is a small National school, supported by the vicar.

LATTON, a par. in the hund. of Highworth, co. Wilts, 1½ mile N.W. of Cricklade, its post town. The village, which is small, is situated on the Thames and Severn canal, near the Roman way Ermine Street. A Roman pavement was discovered in 1670. On the Cirencester road is a stone cross of great antiquity. The tithes were commuted for land and corn-rents under an Enclosure Act in 1801. The living is a vic.* with that of Elsey annexed, in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, joint val. £380. The church is dedicated to St. John the Baptist, and has a square tower, containing five bells. It has been recently restored. There is a National school for both sexes, supported by the Earl of St. Germans, who is lord of the manor.

LAUDER, a par. in the Merse district of co. Berwick, Scotland. It contains the post town and royal burgh of its own name. The size of the par. is 9 miles by 5. The surface is for the most part hilly, affording excellent sheepwalks. About 25,000 imperial acres of the parish are pastoral or waste, 12,100 in tillage, and 650 in woodland. Copper, granite, and slate are found. The parish is intersected by the Kelso and Edinburgh road, and by the streams Leader-water, Blythe, Whaplaw, and Earnslench. The par. is the seat of a presb. in the synod of Merse and Teviotdale. The minister's stipend is £272. The church, built in 1673, is a cruciform structure. There are also an United Presbyterian church, a Free church, and two or three schools. The ancient church stood near Thirlestane Castle, and it was at this church, in July, 1482, that the Scottish nobles met before they hung Cochrane—James III.'s favourite—on Lauder Bridge, and afterwards seized the king. Thirlestane Castle, the seat of the Earl of Lauder, is a massive structure partly modern and partly ancient. The original castle was a strong tower built by Edward I., and called Lauder Fort. The grounds around it are most charming. In the vicinity numerous fragments of warlike weapons have been found. On Lauder Moor there are tumuli, and Pictish camps or rings on Tollers' Hill.—The town of Lauder is a royal burgh, 25 miles S.E. of Edinburgh, 17 N.W. of Kelso, and 5 E.N.E. of Stow railway station on the North British line. It is situated in the vale of Leader, and consists principally of a line of houses on each side of the thoroughfare, with an additional street about the centre. The houses are plain, and of irregular construction. The only buildings worthy of note are the parish church and townhouse, an ancient cross having once stood in front of the latter. The trade is chiefly of a local and domestic nature. The Bank of Scotland and City of Glasgow Bank have each a branch in the town, and there are insurance agency offices, libraries, newsrooms, a freemasons' lodge, agricultural and horticultural societies. The town is supplied with gas and water. The charter constituting Lauder a royal burgh was renewed by James IV. in 1502, and the government vested in 2 bailies and 16 councillors, chosen annually among the freemen of the burgh. By the Reform Act it is joined with Haddington, Dunbar, North Berwick, and Jedburgh, in returning one member to parliament. The corporation revenue in 1859-60 was £391; the annual value of real property in 1860-61 was £2,202. Justice of peace courts are held when required. Sheriffs' small-debt courts are held on the third Wednesday of February, the fourth Wednesday of July, and the third Wednesday of October. Lauderdale, or the Vale of the Leader, gives the title of earl to the Maitlands. Sir John Maitland, who was lord chancellor of Scotland in the reign of James VI., was a native of this place. The first of the Scottish martyrs after the Restoration—the Rev. James Guthrie—was for a short period minister of this parish. The Earl of Lauderdale is principal landowner.

LAUGHARNE, or TAL-LLACHARN, a par., post and market town, in the hund. of Derllys, co. Carmarthen, 9 miles S.W. of Carmarthen. It is situated at the confluence of the rivers Corran and Taf, in Carmarthen Bay. The river Taf is here crossed by a ferry. Laugharne was anciently called Aber-Cowen, or Aber-Corran, but assumed its present name from the castle having been taken in 1644 by General Laugharne. The town as a seaport is of little importance, having only a small export trade, but is much frequented as a cheap watering-place. The houses are well built, and have a remarkable clean appearance. It is nominally governed, under a charter of John, by a portreeve, recorder, aldermen, &c. Petty sessions are held here. Near to the bay of Carmarthen, at the S. end of the town, are the ruins of the castle mentioned above, and dismantled by order of Cromwell. The ruins of Roche's Castle are distant about 1 mile. The port of Laugharne is considered a creek to Llanelly. The living is a vic.* with the rect. of Llansadwrnen annexed, in the dioc. of St. David's, joint val. £411, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Winton. The church, dedicated to St. Martin, is an ancient cruciform structure. The interior contains tombs of the Laugharnes and Judge Powell of Broadway. The parochial charities produce about £94 per annum, which goes towards the school of industry. The Baptists, Independents, Calvinistic and Wesleyan Methodists, have each a place of worship. Josiah Tucker, D.D., the political writer, was born in this parish. Market day is Friday. Fairs are held on the 6th May and 28th September.

LAUGHTERTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Kettlethorpe, hund. of Well, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 8 miles N.W. of Lincoln.

LAUGHTON, a par. in the wap. of Aveland, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 1 mile S.E. of Falkingham, its post town. It is a small village consisting of three farmhouses, and is joined to Falkingham. The living is a vic. annexed to the rect. of Falkingham, in the dioc. of Lincoln. There is no church.

LAUGHTON, a par. in the hund. of Gartree, co. Leicester, 5½ miles N.W. of Harborough, its post town, and 3 N. of the Theddingworth railway station. It is a small agricultural parish situated on the Grand Union canal. The land is chiefly in pasture. The tithes have been commuted for land and a rent-charge. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £247. The church, dedicated to St. Luke, is a small ancient structure with an open turret containing one bell. The charities consist in £17 per annum, realised from 12 acres of poor's land, also the interest of £6, the bequest of Thomas Hefford and William Cave. There is a free school. The Independents have a chapel.

LAUGHTON, a par. in the wap. of Corringham, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 7 miles N.E. of Gainsborough, its post town, and 2 from the Blyton railway station. It is situated near the river Trent, and contains the hmlt. of Wildsworth. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. A portion of the land consists of sandy common, and the remainder is a stiff clay, producing good wheat crops. The living is a vic.* with the cur. of Wildsworth annexed, in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £258. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has a square tower containing a clock and three bells. The interior of the church contains the brass of a knight bearing date 1400. The parochial charities produce about £19 per annum, which goes to the free school, founded in 1556 by Dr. Dallison, and rebuilt in 1841 at the expense of Lady Gordon. H. C. Meynell Ingram, Esq., is lord of the manor.

LAUGHTON, a par. in the hund. of Shiplake, rape of Pevensey, co. Sussex, 6 miles N.E. of Lewes, and 7 N.W. of Hailsham. Hurst Green is its post town. The village, which is small, is situated near the South Coast railway, on the road from Lewes to Hastings. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in agriculture. The parish has been for ages the property of the Pelham family, whose ancestral seat is Laughton Place, built in 1534 by Sir William Pelham, and surrounded by a moat. There are quarries of Sussex marble, which is susceptible of a very high polish. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £645, and the vicarial for £255. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £224. The church (dedication unknown) has a square embattled tower, and contains monuments of the Pelham family. The register dates from 1650. There is a parochial school for both sexes, also a police station. Laughton Lodge is the principal residence. The Earl of Chichester is lord of the manor.

LAUGHTON-EN-LE-MORTHEN, a par. partly within the lib. of St. Peter's, East Riding, and partly in the S. div. of the wap. of Strafforth, West Riding co. York, 7 miles S.E. of Rotherham, its post town, and 5 from Kiveton-Park station on the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire line of railway. The village, which is situated on rising ground, is considerable, but irregular in form. It suffered greatly during the wars between the houses of York and Lancaster. The par. contains the hmlts. of Carr, Slade-Newton, Shroapham, Brookhouse, and St. John's. There is a Roman encampment in the neighbourhood. The soil is various in quality, but in general fertile. The surface is well wooded and highly picturesque. Laughton Hall, the ancient seat of the Butler family, is a fine old mansion. The tithes were commuted for annual money payments under an Enclosure Act in 1769. The living is a vic.* annexed to the perpet. cur. of St. John's, in the dioc. of York, val. £376, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a stately structure, with a curious doorway of great antiquity. It has a square embattled tower surmounted by a lofty spire, which may be seen from a distance of 60 miles. The parochial charities produce about £11 per annum. There is an endowed school for both sexes, with a Sunday-school adjoining. There are places of worship for Wesleyans and Independents. A. F. B. St. Leger, Esq., is lord of the manor.

LAUNCELLS, a par. in the hund. of Stratton, co. Cornwall, 1¼ mile S.E. of Stratton, its post town. It is situated on the Bude canal, and contains the hmlts. of Grimscott, Prestacott, Cross, Butspur, and Hersham.

Here was a cell to Hartland Abbey, which at the Dissolution came to the Chamonds of Launcells House, now extinct. The village is very irregularly built, and is entirely agricultural. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £280, and the vicarial for £220. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £181. The church, dedicated to St. Swithin, is an ancient stone structure with a lofty embattled and pinnacled tower containing six bells. The interior contains some carved sittings, and the altar tomb of Sir John Chamond, with a recumbent effigy. The charities produce about £2 per annum, which goes to Orchard's almshouses, built for four poor persons. There is a National school for both sexes at Grimscott.

LAUNCESTON, or LAUNSTON, a par., market town, municipal and parliamentary borough, in the N. div. of the hund. of East, co. Cornwall, 13 miles from Tavistock, 20 N.E. of Bodmin, and 213 S.W. by W. of London. It is situated on the high road to Truro and Falmouth, at the head of the Bude canal, close to the rivers Kensey and Tamar, over which latter is an iron bridge. It was anciently called Dunneheved, or the "Swelling Hill," and is mentioned in Domesday Book as a town before the Norman Conquest. On a hill, partly formed by nature and partly artificial, are the ruins of a castle, rebuilt by William Earl of Mortaigne, which became the seat of the dukes of Cornwall, and was alternately occupied by the royalists and parliamentarians in the civil war of Charles I. The principal portion now remaining, and recently occupied as the county gaol, is the round keep, 18 feet in diameter, and 32 high, crowning the summit of the hill, and enclosed by three or four walls about 6 feet apart and 12 thick, overgrown with ivy and evergreens. The castle grounds have been laid out at the expense of the dukes of Northumberland, constables of the castle under the Prince of Wales, to whom the manor belongs, and on whom it confers the title of viscount.—The town, which was anciently surrounded by a wall with three gateways, was first chartered by Richard, Earl of Cornwall, brother to Henry III. It sent two members to parliament from the reign of Edward I., and was incorporated by Queen Mary in 1555, with the style of "mayor and commonalty of the borough of Dunneheved, otherwise Launceston." At the passing of the Reform Act the ancient boundaries of the parliamentary borough were extended, so as to include the disfranchised borough of Newport, with the adjoining parishes of St. Thomas, South. Petherwin, Lawhiton, and St. Stephen's, which last includes Newport. The consolidated borough of Launceston-with-Newport now returns one member to the imperial parliament, elected by the freeholders and £10 householders, but the Duke of Northumberland has some influence. The limits of the parliamentary borough are considerably more extensive than the municipal, the former comprising an area of 13,463 acres, with a population, in 1861, of 5,140, while the municipal comprises only 1,635 acres, with a population of 2,790. The municipal borough is governed by a mayor, who is returning officer, four aldermen, and twelve councillors, town clerk, &c., and has a revenue of about £574.—The town, in 1861, consisted of 542 inhabited houses principally built in one long street, with the hamlet of St. Thomas Street at one end. It contains the mayoralty rooms, recently built at the expense of the Duke of Northumberland, in place of the old guildhall, which has been demolished to the great improvement of the town, public assembly rooms, a mechanics' institute, four banks, a savings-bank, union poorhouse, and town gaol, which last is known as Southgate, and is the only one of the three gate towers by which the town was formerly entered now standing. Two large markets have been lately built, one for meat and provisions, the other for corn and light goods, the latter occupying the site of the old guildhall.—No particular trade or manufacture is carried on, but the town presents a respectable and business-like appearance, much business being done in agricultural produce and general trade for supply of the surrounding district. The want of the facility of railway communication has recently much diminished the importance of the town, and the population, in the decennial period 1851—1861, declined by 607, being above one-fifth of the whole. It is an assize and petty sessions town and a polling-place for the county elections. Launceston gives name to a Poor-law Union embracing nineteen parishes in Cornwall and two in Devonshire; it is also the seat of a new County Court and superintendent registry districts, comprising the same.—The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £116. The church, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene, whose recumbent figure occupies a niche in the outer wall at the E. end, is a structure of the middle of the sixteenth century, built of square blocks of granite, each block being carved with figures, and having at the W. end a tower built of different materials, and apparently of earlier date. A gratulatory dedication in Latin runs round the outside, each letter of the inscription, surrounded by an heraldic shield, being carved on a separate stone. The church has a timber ceiling, and is otherwise rich in ornamental carved work; it contains several interesting monuments of the Piper and Wise families. The church of St. Thomas the Apostle, in the adjoining parish, occupies the site, and is partly built of the materials, of the ancient priory of St. Austin, which is said to have had communication by a subterranean passage with the castle of Launceston. In this church are a very ancient font and remains of some ancient fresco paintings. The Wesleyans, Reformed Wesleyans, Independents, and Bible Christians have places of worship. The parochial charities produce about £105 per annum, including £26, the endowment of Queen Elizabeth's free grammar school, now not used, and £20 belonging to St. Leonard's Hospital, originally founded for lepers before the reign of Richard II. There are National and Sunday schools. —In the vicinity of this ancient town are many interesting antiquities, including the Norman gateway of the old priory, which now forms the entrance to the White Hart hotel, situated in Broad Street; the ruins of the castle above mentioned; and Roman or British entrenchments, where Roman coins and some coins of leather have been found.—Saturday is market day. Fairs are held on the 26th January, first Thursday in March, 25th March, third Thursday in April, Whit-Monday, 6th July, and 17th November.

LAUNCESTON-TARRANT. See TARRANT, LAUNCESTON, co. Dorset.

LAUNDE, an ext. par. place in the hund. of East Goscote, co. Leicester, 6 miles N.W. of Uppingham. Here are the remains of the chapel and burial-ground of an Austin priory founded in the reign of Henry I. by Richard Bassett, and given by Henry VIII. to his favourite, Thomas Cromwell. Its revenue at the Dissolution was valued at £510 16*s.* 5*d.* Launde is a meet for the Cottesmore hounds. Stilton cheese is made here.

LAUND, NEW and OLD BOOTH, tnshps. in the par. of Whalley, co. Lancaster, 3 miles N. of Burnley. They are situated near the Leeds canal and river Henburn.

LAUNDITCH, a hund. in co. Norfolk, contains the pars. of Beeston, Beetley, East Bilney, Bittering-Parva, Brisley, Colkirk, Dunham (Great and Little), North Elmham, Great and Little Fransham, Gateley, Gressenhall, Hoe, Horningtoft, Kempston, East and West Lexham, Litcham, Lougham, Mileham, Oxwick, Pattesley, Rougham, Scarning, Stanfield, Swanton-Morley, Tittleshall, Weasenham, Wellingham, Wendling, Whissonsett, Worthing, and part of East Dereham, comprising an area of 59,930 acres.

LAUNE, or LANE, a small river flowing from Laune Lough, or Lower Lake of Killarney, in which it takes its rise, to the sea at Dingle Bay, co. Kerry, Ireland.

LAUNTON, a par. in the hund. of Ploughley, co. Oxford, 1½ mile E. of Bicester, its post town, and 13 miles N.E. of Oxford. It is a station on the London and North-Western railway. The village is small. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture.

The greater portion of the parish is in pasture. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £618, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a very antique tower. The pews were removed in 1844, and the church refitted with open oak sittings. There are National and infant schools. The Independents have a place of worship. The Dean and Chapter of Westminster are lords of the manor.

LAURENCEKIRK, a par. in the How district of co. Kincardine, Scotland. It measures 4 miles in length, and is 3 broad. The land is chiefly arable, with about 300 acres of wood, pastoral, or waste. The rivulet Leuthar and numerous brooks intersect the parish. The surface is flat in the centre, but hilly both towards the northern and southern boundaries. Weaving is carried on by the inhabitants. The parish is intersected by the Aberdeen railway, and by the road from Forfar to Aberdeen. The par. is in the presb. of Fordoun, and synod of Angus and Mearns, in the patron. of St. Mary's College, St. Andrew's. The minister's stipend is £241. The parish church is a modern and commodious structure. It was erected in 1828 in place of one built in 1626, and which was dedicated to St. Lawrence. The ancient name of the parish, however, was Conveth. The other places of worship are, Episcopalian and Independent chapels, and a Free church. There are parochial and other schools, and one or two libraries. Dr. Beattie (1735—1803), the poet and philosopher, and his nephew, James Beattie, professor of natural history in Aberdeen University, were natives of this place. The parish school was kept by Thomas Ruddiman, the grammarian. The town of Laurencekirk is a railway station on the Aberdeen line, and is 10 miles N. of Montrose, and 7 W. of Bervie. It consists of a main street nearly a mile in length, with another parallel to it, and two or three short ones branching from the principal streets. It is well lighted with gas. The town is greatly indebted for the consequence it enjoys at the present day to Lord Gardenstone, a judge of the Court of Session, who, about 1762, purchased the estate of Johnstone, and built several houses. In 1779 he procured for this place the privileges of a burgh of barony, with the right of holding a weekly market. It is governed by a bailie and four councillors, who are chosen every three years, and regulate the police, &c. The manufacture of fancy work-boxes, wooden snuff-boxes, and also of linen, form the chief employments of the inhabitants. In the town are branches of the Aberdeen and County bank, the North of Scotland bank, and the Montrose savings-bank; also a farmers' club, and a horticultural society. A sheriff's small-debt court is held here on the first Mondays in February, June, and October. Market day is Monday. Fairs are held on the third Wednesday in January (old style), the last Tuesday in April, 26th May, Thursday after third Tuesday of July (old style), Thursday after second Tuesday of August (old style), Monday before the last Wednesday of September, first Thursday in November, and 22nd November.

LAURENCETOWN, a post-office vil. in the par. of Clonfert, in the bar. of Longford, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 3 miles N.W. of Eyrecourt. It is situated on the road from Aughrim to Banagher, and contains a Roman Catholic chapel, a Methodist meeting-house, and chief police station. Petty sessions are held at intervals. The neighbouring seats are Bellevue, Gortnamona, and Bellamore. Fairs are held on the 8th May, 22nd August, and 15th December.

LAURENCETOWN, a railway station on the Banbridge and Scarva branch of the Banbridge Junction railway, Ireland.

LAURENS, ST., a par. in the Isle of Jersey, Channel Islands, 3 miles N.W. of St. Helier. It is situated near St. Aubin's Bay, and is well cultivated.

LAURIESTON, a vil. in the par. of Balmaghie, co. Kirkcudbright, Scotland, 5 miles N.W. of Castle Douglas.

LAURIESTON, a vil. in the par. of St. Cyrus, co. Kincardine, Scotland, 4 miles S.E. of Laurencekirk. In the grounds of Laurieston House are the remains of the Stratons' old castle, taken by the English in 1336.

LAURISTON CASTLE, in co. Edinburgh, Scotland, 3 miles W. of Edinburgh.

LAVAN SANDS, in Beaumaris Bay, co. Cardigan. They extend for above 5 miles along the coast from Bangor towards the N.E., and are 4 miles over at the Aber ferry to Anglesey, being dry at low water.

LAVANT, EAST, a par. in the hund. of Aldwick, rape of Chichester, co. Sussex, 2½ miles N.W. of Chichester, its post town and railway station. It is situated on the river Lavant, which rises in Charlton forest, and contains the tythgs. of East and West Lavant. It is called Loventone in Domesday Book, at which time the manor was held by Osberne, Bishop of Exeter, and afterwards passed through various hands until it was purchased in the latter part of the last century by the Duke of Richmond, in whose family it remains. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £410. The church is a stone structure, in the Norman style of architecture. It is dedicated to St. Mary. The register commences in 1653. There is a privilege belonging to this parish of sending four children to the free school, and four women to the almshouses, founded by the Countess of Derby, at Boxgrove. There are National schools for boys and girls, and an infant school.

LAVANT, MID, a par. in the hund. of Westbourne, rape of Chichester, co. Sussex, 2¾ miles N.W. of Chichester, its post town. The parish, which is of small extent, is situated on the road from London to Chichester viâ Midhurst. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £52. The church has a finely-sculptured monument, in white marble, to Lady Mary May.

LAVENDON, a par. in the hund. of Newport, co. Bucks, 3 miles N.E. of Olney, its post town, and 9½ from Bedford. The village, which is situated near the river Ouse, is wholly agricultural. Lavendon was formerly a market town, by grant to Paulinus Peyore in 1248. An abbey of Premonstratensian canons was founded here in the reign of Henry II. by John de Bidun, and dedicated to St. John the Baptist; its revenue at the Dissolution was returned at £79 13*s.* 8*d.* The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1801. The living is a rect.* with the cur. of Cold Brafield annexed, in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £284. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The charities produce about £13 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes.

LAVENHAM, or LANHAM, a par. and small town in the hund. of Babergh, co. Suffolk, 7 miles N.E. of Sudbury, its post town, 10 N.W. of Hadleigh, and 19 N.W. of Ipswich. It is situated on a branch of the river Brett, and near the Great Eastern railway. It was given by the Conqueror to Robert Malet, and was subsequently held by the De Veres, earls of Oxford, who once resided here. It is a polling and petty session town, and had, until recently, a market. It was formerly of more importance than at present, and was governed by six capital burgesses, styled headboroughs, elected for the last time in 1775. The town still consists of several streets, but the houses have a mean appearance, showing the decline of trade. There is a horse-hair seating manufactory, and some of the inhabitants are employed in wool-combing, and in plaiting straw for bonnets. Courts leet and baron are occasionally held by the lord of the manor. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £658, in the patron. of Caius College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is a stone and flint structure, with a lofty tower containing eight bells. It was rebuilt in the reign of Henry VI. The roof of the church is richly carved, and contains the arms of the De Veres, and of the family of Spring, wealthy clothiers, at whose expense this edifice was erected. There are curious monuments of alabaster and marble to Allaine Disler, and the Rev. E. Copinger; also three brasses of the Spring family, one bearing date 1486, besides several other monuments of ancient date. The register dates from 1558. The charities produce about £450 per annum. The almshouses, for forty aged persons, were rebuilt in 1836. There is a grammar school for five free scholars; also National schools. There are places of worship for the Independents and Wesleyans. George Richard Pye, Esq., is lord of the manor. Fairs are held on Shrove Tuesday for horses and cattle, and on 3rd and 11th October for butter and cheese.

LAVER, HIGH, a par. in the hund. of Ongar, co. Essex, 4 miles N.W. of Chipping Ongar, its post town, and 6 S.E. of Harlow. It is a small agricultural village, and is a meet for the Essex hounds. The soil is generally a strong clay, forming excellent corn and grazing lands. The surface is level, and watered by a copious brook. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £630. The church is dedicated to All Saints, and has a tile roof, and a red brick tower crowned by a wooden spire, and containing three bells. The interior of the church contains a brass of G. Copte, bearing date 1500. In the churchyard is the tomb of John Locke, the great patriot and philosopher, enclosed within iron rails; and on the wall of the church is his epitaph, in Latin, composed by himself.

LAVER, LITTLE, a par. in the hund. of Ongar, co. Essex, 4 miles from Ongar, its post town, and 1 mile E. of High Laver. The village is inconsiderable, and wholly agricultural. The land is chiefly arable, with about 20 acres of woodland. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £261. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a small brick edifice with a central tower, surmounted by a small spire of wood, and containing three bells. There is a National school.

LAVER-MAGDALEN, a par. in the hund. of Ongar, co. Essex, 5¼ miles N.W. of Chipping-Ongar, its post town. The parish, which is of small extent, is situated on the south-western extremity of the district, and is celebrated for the salubrity of the air. The village is small, and wholly agricultural. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £281. The church, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalen, is a small ancient structure.

LAVERNOCK, or LARNOCK, a par. in the hund. of Dinas Powis, co. Glamorgan, 5 miles S. of Cardiff. It is situated at the mouth of the Severn, and opposite Flatholm, in the Bristol Channel. It contains the hmlt. of Cosmaston, and the headland called Lavernock Point. The subsoil is lias rock, in which traces of lead have been found. There is no village, only a few farmhouses. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Penarth, in the dioc. of Llandaff.

LAVERN WATER rises near Neilston, in co. Renfrew, Scotland, and joins the river White Cart near Crookston Castle.

LAVEROCK, or LEVERET LAW, an ancient par. in co. Berwick, Scotland. It has recently been decided to belong to the parish of Coldingham.

LAVERSDALE, a tnshp. in the par. of Irthington, ward of Eskdale, co. Cumberland, 3 miles N.W. of Brampton. The village, which is considerable, is situated on the river Irthing, a tributary of the Eden, and near Watch Cross on the Wall, a spot planted with fir-trees.

LAVERSTOCK, a par. in the hund. of Alderbury, co. Wilts, 1 mile N.E. of Salisbury, its post town. The par., which is situated on a branch of the river Avon, contains the tythg. of Ford. It formerly belonged to the good Duke Humphrey. The village is small, and wholly agricultural. The land is fertile and the scenery picturesque, including the adjacent city of Salisbury, with its venerable cathedral. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £680. The living is a rect. not in charge, annexed to the commonalty of the vicars-choral of Salisbury. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is a modern structure with a turret containing two bells. It is built of flint, with stone dressings, and cost £2,350. The interior of the church is neatly fitted up, and has richly-painted S. and E. windows. A portion of the old church still remains standing in the churchyard, containing monuments of the Bathurst family and other tablets. There is a National school for both sexes. Laverstock House, formerly the seat of the Dyke family, is now converted into a private lunatic asylum. It is fitted up with every accommodation for above 100 patients. The Hill is a mansion situated in a commanding position. John Henry Campbell Wyndham, Esq., is lord of the manor.

LAVERSTOKE, a par. in the hund. of Overton, Kingsclere div. of the co. Hants, 2 miles N.E. of Whitchurch, its post town, and 5 N.W. of Andover Road railway station. It is situated near the South-Western railway. The village, which is small, is situated in the valley of the Test, a rivulet rising within 2 miles of the parish, with trout of excellent quality. The paper for the Bank of England notes has been manufactured here since 1719. The soil is chiefly clay, on a substratum of chalk. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £180. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a small edifice situated in the park. It contains several tablets of the Portal family. There is a free school, supported by Melville Portal, Esq., the lord of the manor, who resides at Laverstoke House, rebuilt at the commencement of the present century, under the supervision of Bonone. It is situated on gently rising ground.

LAVERTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Buckland, co. Gloucester, 5 miles N.E. of Winchcomb.

LAVERTON, a par. in the hund. of Frome, co. Somerset, 8½ miles S. of Bath, its post town, and 4 N. of the Frome railway station. The village, which is small, is situated about 1 mile off the turnpike road from Frome to Bath. The land is chiefly in pasture, and the low grounds are watered by a brook which flows into the river Frome. The soil in parts is a strong clay, and in others a light red loam resting on clay. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £277, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is a small ancient stone edifice dedicated to St. Mary. The register dates from the middle of the 16th century. There is a National school for both sexes. The manor is the property of the duchy of Cornwall.

LAVERTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirkby-Malzeard, wap. of Claro, West Riding co. York, 5 miles N.W. of Ripon. It is situated on a branch of the river Ure. The village consists of a number of scattered houses. There is a school, built in 1832.

LAVEY, a par. in the bar. of Upper Loughtee, co. Cavan, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 2 miles S. of Stradone, its post town. The par. is 6 miles long by 3 broad. The surface is rather hilly, with bog and pasture. Lochs Lavey, Beaghy, Corfad, and Cultragh are in this parish. The road from Dublin to Enniskillen traverses the interior. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Kilmore, val. £460, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built in 1822 by a gift from the late Board of First Fruits. There are two Roman Catholic chapels (united), and several day schools.

LAVINGTON, or LENTON, a par. in the wap. of Beltisloe, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 8 miles S.E. of Grantham, its post town, 4 S.W. of Folkingham, and 6 N.E. of the Corby railway station. The village, which is small, is situated on a branch of the river Glen. It is irregular in form and wholly agricultural. The par. includes the tnshp. of Osgodby, and the hmlts. of Hanby and Keisby. Osgodby Hall, once the residence of Sir W. Armyne, is now a farmhouse. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £514. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient edifice with a tower surmounted by a lofty spire, and containing three bells. There is a free school endowed with £10 per annum, bequeathed by Mrs. Parnham in 1721. Lord Aveland is lord of the manors of Lenton, Hanby, and Osgodby, and the Earl of Dysart of Keisby.

LAVINGTON, EAST, or MARKET, a par. and small market town in the hund. of Swanborough, co. Wilts, 6 miles S. of Devizes, its post town and nearest railway station. It is situated in a valley at the foot of the chalk hills which form the northern boundary of Salisbury Plain. The town consists chiefly of one long street. The houses are irregularly built, but commodious. The trade is chiefly in corn and malt. A court baron for the manor is held twice a year. The Dean and Canons of Christ Church, Oxford, are appropriators of the great tithes. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £300, in the patron. of Christ Church, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient edifice conspicuously situated on an eminence W. of the town, from which circumstance the latter is popularly called Steeple-Lavington. The charities consist of bequests by the Sainsbury family, for the benefit of the poor. The Baptists and Independents have each a chapel. There is a National school. Dr. Thomas Tanner, Bishop of St. Asaph, and author of the "Notitia Monastica," was born in this parish in 1674, his father being vicar at that time.

LAVINGTON, WEST, or BISHOP'S, a par. in the hund. of Potterne, co. Wilts, 1 mile S.W. of Market Lavington, its post town, and 6 miles S.W. of Devizes. It is situated on the Ridgeway, and contains the tythgs. of Fiddington and Littleton Pannell. It was anciently the seat of the Danvers, Dauntsey, and Montague families, and was subsequently sold to the late Duke of Marlborough. The village, which is considerable, is situated on the road from Devizes to Salisbury. It suffered greatly from a destructive fire in 1689. A considerable portion of the parish is laid out in market-gardens, for supply of the Bath and Salisbury markets. Limestone is quarried for burning into lime. At Fiddington, in this parish, is a private lunatic asylum. The appropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £1,325, and the vicarial for £360. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £313, in the patron. of the Bishop of Salisbury. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has a square embattled tower. The interior of the church contains tombs of the Beckets of Littleton, also a brass of one of the Danvers family, bearing date 1530. The charities consist of Dauntsey's school and almshouses for ten aged persons, of which the Mercers' Company are trustees. There is a parochial school with a small endowment, also a girls' school. Lord Churchhill is lord of the manor. On the downs are traces of Roman and British camps, tumuli, &c.

LAWERS, a vil. in the pars. of Kenmore and Weem, co. Perth, Scotland, 7 miles S.W. of Taymouth. It is situated under Ben Lawers, and has a mission church built by the Marquis of Breadalbane in 1833.

LAWERS, a demesne in Strathearn, co. Perth, Scotland, 5 miles W. of Crieff. It was late the seat of Lord Balgray.

LAWERSTON, or LAURIESTON, a vil. in the par. of Falkirk, co. Stirling, Scotland, 2 miles from Falkirk. The village was founded by Sir Laurence Dundas, of Carronhill, and is chiefly inhabited by weavers. The Linlithgow and Stirling hounds are kennelled here.

LAWFORD, a par. in the hund. of Tendring, co. Essex, 2 miles W. of Manningtree, its post town, and 7 N.E. of Colchester. It is situated on the River Stour, near the Great Eastern Railway. The village is of ancient date, and was formerly held by Harold II. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £720. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £640, in the patron. of St. John's College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure with a stone tower containing three bells. It has a fine chancel and a stained window, inserted in 1853, by Thomas Nunn, Esq., banker, of Lawford House. The charities produce about £67 per annum, part of which goes to Leach's school, and the rest is distributed to the poor. The principal residences are Lawford Hall and Dale Hill. From the height on which the church stands, a commanding view may be had over the valley of the Stour.

LAWFORD CHURCH. See CHURCH LAWFORD, co. Warwick.

LAWFORD, LITTLE. See LAWFORD PARVA, co. Warwick.

LAWFORD, LONG, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Newbold-upon-Avon, hund. of Knightlow, co. Warwick, 3 miles W. of Rugby, its post town. The village, which is small, is chiefly agricultural. The tnshp. is intersected by the London and North-Western, Midland and Rugby, and Leamington lines of railway. There are some extensive lime works. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic.* of Newbold-on-Avon, in the dioc. of Worcester. The chapel-of-ease was erected in 1839 by the late John Caldecott, Esq. There are places of worship for Wesleyan and Primitive Methodists. J. W. Boughton, Esq., is lord of the manor.

LAWFORD PARVA, or LITTLE LAWFORD, a tnshp. in the par. of Newbold-on-Avon, hund. of Knightlow, co. Warwick, 3½ miles W. of Rugby. It formerly belonged to the Boughtons, but after the death of Sir Theodosius Boughton, who was poisoned by Captain Donellan in 1780, the estate was sold. There is no village.

LAWHADON. See LLAWHADEN, co. Pembroke, and the like for other Welsh places beginning with L.

LAWHITTON, a par. in the N. div. of the hund. of East, co. Cornwall, 2½ miles S.E. of Launceston, its post town. It is included within the parliamentary boundaries of that borough. The parish is situated on the river Tamer, and is connected with Devonshire on the N. by Poulston, and on the S. by Greston Bridges. The village, which is considerable, was formerly a market town under the Bishop of Exeter, who had a palace here. There are no traces left of the episcopal palace. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £360. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £437, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient stone structure with a tower containing four bells. There is a National school.

LAWKLAND, a tnshp. in the par. of Clapham, W. div. of the wap. of Staincliff and Ewcross, West Riding co. York, 3½ miles N.W. of Settle. It is situated near the river Ribble, and contains the hmlts. of Eldroth and Feizor. Lawkland Hall is the principal residence. Eldroth chapel, formerly a chapel-of-ease, is now used as a school-room. The charities consist of an endowment of £6 per annum for education. The Roman Catholics have a chapel.

LAW-LEE, a tythg. in the par. of Winterborne Whitchurch, co. Dorset, 5 miles S.W. of Blandford.

LAWLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Wellington, co. Salop, 2 miles S.E. of Wellington. At Lawley Bank is a station on the Wellington and Severn Junction branch of the Great Western railway. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the coal and sandstone pits, situated under Lawley Hill.

LAWLING, a chplry. in the par. of Latchingdon, hund. of Dengie, co. Essex, 5 miles N.W. of Burnham.

LAWRENCE HILL, a railway station on the Bristol and South Wales Union branch of the Great Western railway, near Bristol.

LAWRENCE, ST., a par. in the Isle of Thanet, lathe of Saint Augustine, co. Kent, 1 mile W. of Ramsgate, its post town, and 5 miles from Margate. The village, which is situated on an eminence, commands a view of the town of Ramsgate and the shipping in the Channel. The par. comprises 22 hmlts. and is a coastguard station. It is bounded on the S. by Pegwell Bay, celebrated for shrimps, and much resorted to by visitors from Ramsgate and Margate. In 1826 Ramsgate was separated from this parish by Act of Parliament, and constituted a distinct parish. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £162, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church of St. Lawrence is a very ancient structure, particularly the tower, which is of Saxon architecture. It was one of the chapels belonging to Minster, but was made parochial in 1275. It contains tombs of the Spracklings of Ellington, Manstons, &c.; also the tablet erected by William IV. to the memory of Admiral Fox, who is buried here, as is also Lady Augusta Murray. Joy, a man of extraordinary strength, was born here in 1675; he could lift a ton, or pull against the strength of a horse. The parochial charities produce about £60 per annum. Southwood House, Nether Court House, and Lawrence House, are the principal residences.

LAWRENCE, ST., a par. in the lib. or East Medina, Isle of Wight, co. Hants, 8 miles S.E. of Newport. Ventnor is its post town. The village, which is very small, is situated in the tract called Undercliff, where is a fountain of pure water springing up under a dome by the roadside. The chief part of the soil is fertile, and well cultivated. The parish consists of a narrow strip of land about 1½ mile in length, stretching along the sea-coast. There are about 20 acres of plantation, chiefly of juniper trees. The great tithes belong to the Earl of Yarborough, and the vicarial have been commuted for a rent-charge of £84. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £106. The church is an ancient structure built on a rock 40 feet by 12, and is the smallest in the island. A short distance from the church are the remains of an ancient chantry. There is a National school supported by subscription.

LAWRENCE, ST., a par. in the hund. of Dewisland, co. Pembroke, 7 miles N.W. of Haverfordwest, its post town. The parish, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Cleddau. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £80.

LAWRENCE, ST., a chplry. in the par. of Preston, hund. of Amounderness, co. Lancaster, 5 miles N.W. of Preston.

LAWRENCE, ST., a par. in the bar. of Clanwilliam, and City of Limerick, which see.

LAWRENCE, ST. NEWLAND, a par. in the hund. of Dengie, co. Essex, 8 miles S.E. of Maldon, its post town, and 3 S.W. of Bradwell-near-the-Sea. The village, which is inconsiderable, is situated near the navigable river Blackwater. The surface is hilly, and the soil is clayey. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £550. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £557, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church of St. Lawrence is a small structure situated on a hill. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum.

LAWRENNY, a par. in the hund. of Narberth, co. Pembroke, 4 miles N.E. of Pembroke, its post town. It is situated near Milford-Haven, where are excellent oyster-beds. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the coal and culm trade. The land is good, with subsoil limestone. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £168. The church is an ancient structure, dedicated to St. Caradoc. The parochial charities produce about £30 per annum. Lawrenny Hall is the principal residence.

LAWRESS, a wap. in the parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, contains the pars. of Aisthorpe, Barlings, Brattleby, Broxholme, Burton, Buslingthorpe, North and South Carlton, Dunholm, Faldingworth, Fiskerton, Friesthorpe, Greetwell, St. Margaret, St. Mary Magdalene, Nettleham, St. Paul, Repham, Riseholme, Saxelby, Scampton, Scothern, Snarford, Sudbrooke, West Thorpe, Welton, Cherry-Willingham, and part of Torksey, comprising an area of 46,570 acres.

LAWSHALL, a par. in the hund. of Babergh, co. Suffolk, 6½ miles S.E. of Bury St. Edmund's, its post town, and 9½ N. of Sudbury. In this parish is an extensive horse-hair manufactory, employing a large number of the inhabitants. The land is partly in common. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £700. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £428. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has recently been thoroughly restored and beautified, at an expense of £6,000. It has some stained-glass windows. The parochial charities produce about £22 per annum. There are National and Sunday schools, built in 1826, at the expense of a lady. There is a place of worship for Baptists. Near the source of the river Bret are remains of a Roman station, supposed to have been Cambretonium.

LAWTON, a vil. in the par. of Kingsland, co. Hereford, 3 miles W. of Leominster.

LAWTON, a hmlt. on the coast of co. Forfar, Scotland, 4 miles N. of Arbroath.

LAWTON CHURCH. See CHURCH LAWTON, co. Chester.

LAWTON WITH LITTLE SUTTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Diddlebury, co. Salop, 5 miles N. of Ludlow. It is situated on the river Corve.

LAXEY, a vil. in the par. of Kirk-Lonan, Isle of Man, 7 miles N.E. of Douglas. It is watered by the Laxey river, which rises in Snafell, the summit of which is 2,004 feet above the sea-level. The village is situated near the sea-coast, and contains the parish church, with King Orry's grave. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the lead, copper, and slate mines. There is also a paper mill and bleach works. The lead mines are particularly rich in silver, yielding above 100 ozs. per ton, or near 60,000 ozs. annually. In the vicinity is a Druid circle, called the Cloven Stones.

LAXFIELD, a par in the hund. of Hoxne, co. Suffolk, 6 miles N.E. of Framlingham, its post town, and 4 from Stradbroke. It is situated near the river Blythe, and is wholly agricultural. The village, which is considerable, was formerly a market town, held under the Wingfields, and partly by Eye Priory and Leiston Abbey. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £617 10*s., and the vicarial for £220. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £220. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has a lofty pinnacled tower containing a clock and six bells. The chancel was rebuilt by Lord Huntingfield in 1827. The interior of the church contains a ribbed roof; also several windows of great beauty, and an ancient font. The register dates from 1579. The charities produce about £100 per annum, including the rent of the town lands, which is applied to the repairs of the church and relief of the poor. There is a free school, founded in 1718 by John Smith, which has an income from endowment of £200 per annum; also National and Sunday schools. There is a house called the Guildhall, for the poor. The Baptists have a chapel. John Crabtree is lord of the manor. Two fairs are held annually for cattle and sheep on the 12th May and 25th October.

LAXFORD, a salmon-stream, rising in Laxford Stack, co. Sutherland, Scotland, 3 miles N.W. of Laxford Loch, which is 5 miles in length by 1½ mile broad.

LAXTON, a par. in the hund. of Corby, co. Northampton, 7 miles N.E. of Rockingham, its post town, and 7 N.W. of Oundle. It is a small agricultural village, situated near the river Welland. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Peterborough. The church is dedicated to All Saints. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. There is a small free school, supported by Lord Carbery, who resides at Laxton Hall, the principal residence.

LAXTON, or LEXINGTON, a par. in the South Clay div. of the wap. of Bassetlaw, co. Nottingham, 3 miles S.W. of Tuxford, its post town, and 5 N.W. of the Carlton railway station. The parish, which is of large extent, is wholly agricultural. It contains the hmlt. of Moorhouse, and gave the title of baron to the Suttons. About two-thirds of the land are arable, the remainder open fields and common, with a small proportion of woodland and plantations. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £387 16*s.*, and the vicarial for £225 2*s.* 6*d.* The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £182. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is a spacious ancient structure, with a lofty tower containing five bells. The interior of the church contains several dilapidated monuments of the Roos, Hastings, and Grey families; also three effigies of crusaders in full armour. It once had a chantry, now used as a school-room. There is a chapel-of-ease at Moorhouse, in this parish, also a place of worship for Independents. Bishop Chappell, who died in 1649, was a native of this parish. The parochial charities produce about £37 per annum, a portion of which is applied to the education of ten poor boys. There is a free school for both sexes. Earl Manvers is lord of the manor.

LAXTON, a chplry. in the par. of Howden, wap. of Howdenshire, East Riding co. York, 4 miles S.E. of Howden, its post town. The village, which is small, is situated near the river Humber. Th inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The soils consist of sand and clay. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc of York, val. £70. The church is a brick edifice, with a square tower. There is a place of worship for the Wesleyans. Philip Saltmarsh, Esq., J.P., is lord of the manor, and principal landowner.

LAYCOCK, or LACOCK, a par. in the hund. of Chippenham, co. Wilts, 3 miles S. of Chippenham, its post town, and 4 N. of Melksham. It is situated on the river Avon, near the Wilts and Berks canal. The village, which is considerable, was formerly a market town under the Longspécs. Here are the remains of an Austin nunnery, founded in 1232 by Ela, Countess of Salisbury, and now converted into a private residence. The site was given to the Skerringtons at the Dissolution, at which time its revenues were estimated at £203 12*s.* 3*d.* There was a very ancient stone cross, which stood near the centre of the village. On the river are the remains of Bewly Priory cell. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £341 10*s.* 6*d., and the vicarial for £325. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £244. The church, dedicated to St. Cyriack, is an ancient structure with a spired tower containing six bells. In the interior are several monuments, including those of the Baynards, and Montagues of Lackham House, Bishop Johnson, &c., also a brass bearing date 1501. Mann, an ambassador to Spain, was a native of this place. The charities produce about £3 per annum. There are National and Sunday schools for both sexes, also a place of worship for the Independents. The principal residences are Notton House, Notton Lodge, Lacham House, Bowden House, and Lacock Abbey—which last, being built on the site of the above-mentioned nunnery, still retains the old cloisters, chapter-house, kitchen, and treasury for records, where is preserved Henry III.'s Magna Charta of 1225, sent to the Countess of Salisbury, who at that time held the shrievalty of the county of Wilts. The charter is 15 inches by 10½, with the seal still attached. Here are also preserved the bell and many other relics of the old nunnery. W. H. Fox Talbot, Esq., is lord of the manor.

LAYCOCK, a hmlt. in the par. of Keighley, West Riding co. York, 2 miles W. of Keighley.

LAYD, or NEWTOWN GLENS, a par. in the bar. of Lower Glenarm, co. Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, containing Cushendall, its post town. It is 7 miles long by 4 broad. The surface is mountainous. The soil is good. The coast is indented by Red Bay. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Connor, val. £185, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built by means of a gift from the late Board of First Fruits in 1831. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Ardclinis. There are a Presbyterian meeting-house, four Sunday, and five day schools. The ruins of the old church stand near the present building. There are several Danish forts, and the ruins of Red Bay Castle.

LAYD, GRANGE OF, a lib. in the bar. of Lower Glenarm, co. Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 5 miles W. of Cushendall. It forms part of the parish of Layd.

LAYER-BRETON, a par. in the hund. of Winstree, co. Essex, 6 miles S.W. of Colchester, its post town. The village is situated on the river Roman. The parish is of small extent, and entirely agricultural. The land is chiefly arable, except about 40 acres of heath. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £288. The dedication of the church is unknown. The register dates from 1575. There is a Friends' meeting-house, and the Independents have a chapel on the heath, founded in 1798, and rebuilt in 1860. There is a National school, established by the late Rev. R. W. Sutton.

LAYER-DE-LA-HAY, a par. in the hund. of Winstree, co. Essex, 4 miles S. of Colchester, its post town and railway station. The village, which is small and wholly agricultural, is situated on the road leading from Maldon to Colchester, and near Layer Cross. The parish derives the latter part of its name from the Hay family, its ancient possessors. The soil is in general light, but wet, producing good crops of turnips. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £680. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £110. The church, dedication unknown, has a stone tower containing five bells. There is a National school, also a place of worship for Independents.

LAYER-MARNEY, a par. in the hund. of Winstree, co. Essex, 5 miles S.E. of Kelvedon, its post town and nearest station on the Great Eastern railway, and 7 S.W. of Colchester. It is a small agricultural village. Here are the ruins of Layer-Marney Hall, consisting of the gateway, with its octagonal towers, erected in 1520 by Henry Lord Marney. The land is chiefly arable, with about 100 acres of wood and plantation. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £466. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £341. The church, dedicated to St. Mary the Virgin, has a brick tower containing three bells. The church has a chantry chapel containing a marble monument, representing the figure of a knight in armour, to William Marney, bearing date 1414; also tombs of the Corsellises, who possessed the manor after the Marneys, Tryons, and Tukes. There is a National school. This parish, during Edward the Confessor's time, belonged to the Bishop of London. The principal residence is Layer-Marney Tower, the seat of Quinton Dick, Esq., M.P., who is lord of the manor.

LAYHAM, a par. in the hund. of Cosford, co. Suffolk, 1½ mile S.E. of Hadleigh, its railway station and post town. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Bret. The par. consists of two manors, named Overbury and Netherbury Halls. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in agriculture. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £800. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £800, in the patron. of St. John's College, Cambridge. The church is dedicated to St. Andrew. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum. J. Robinson, Esq., of Hadleigh Hall, is lord of both manors.

LAYMORE, a tythg. in the par. of Crewkerne, co. Somerset, 2 miles from Crewkerne, and 20 S.E. of Bridgwater. It is situated in a valley near the river Parrett, and includes parts of Black-Down, Horn, Ash, and Greenham.

LAYSTERS, a par. in the hund. of Wolphy, co. Hereford, 5 miles N.E. of Leominster, its post town, and 4½ S.W. of Tenbury. The village, which is small and wholly agricultural, is situated near the road from Leominster to Tenbury. Here was formerly a moated seat of the priors of Sheen, in Surrey. The land is partly in hop-grounds. The soil is chiefly a tenacious clay, resting on a substratum of coarse limestone. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £335. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient stone structure with a tower. The whole of the edifice has been recently restored. The parochial charities produce about £16 10*s.* per annum. There is a parochial school. Near the church is a tumulus.

LAYSTHORPE, or LAISTHORPE, a tnshp. in the par. of Stonegrave, wap. of Ryedale, North Riding co. York, 4 miles S.E. of Helmsley. It is a joint township with East Newton.

LAYSTON, a par. in the hund. of Edwinstree, co. Herts, three-quarters of a mile N.E. of Buntingford, its post town, and 10 miles N. of Ware. It is mentioned in Domesday Book under the name of Ichetone. The ancient village of Layston, once a market town, has entirely disappeared. The workhouse for the union of Buntingford is in this parish. The living is a vic. annexed to the perpet. cur. of Buntingford, in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £149. The church, which is situated about half a mile E. of the town of Buntingford, in a secluded spot, has a square tower crowned with a spire and containing five bells. In the interior of the church are several monuments. The register dates from 1600. The Rev. John Henry Butt is lord of the manor.

LAYTHAM, or LATHAM, a tnshp. in the par. of Aughton, Holme-Beacon div. of the wap. of Harthill, East Riding co. York, 8 miles N. of Howden. The village, which is inconsiderable, is wholly agricultural. The soil is loam and clay.

LAYTON, EAST, a tnshp. in the par. of Stanwick St. John, wap. of West Gilling, North Riding co. York,

2 miles S. of Stanwick, and 5 N. of Richmond, its post town. There is a chapel-of-ease. Edward R. Kemp, Esq., is lord of the manor. East Layton Hall is the principal residence.

LAYTON, WEST, a tnshp. in the par. of Hutton-Magna, wap. of Gilling West, North Riding co. York, 1 mile W. of Richmond, and 5 miles S.E. of Greta-Bridge. The village consists of a few scattered houses.

LAYTON-WITH-WARBRICK, a tnshp. in the par. of Bispham, co. Lancaster, 2 miles S.W. of Poulton-le-Fylde. It is situated near the coast, and contains the vil. of Blackpool, which is much resorted to in the season as a bathing-place. Two schools are supported by subscription.

LAYTOWN, a railway station on the Dublin and Drogheda line, Ireland, 5 miles from Drogheda.

LAZENBY, an ext. par. place in the wap. of Allertonshire, North Riding co. York, 3¼ miles from Redcar, and the same distance from Cleveland.

LAZENBY, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Wilton, and par. of Kirk Leetham, North Riding co. York, 3 miles N.W. of Guisborough.

LAZONBY, a par. in Leath ward, co. Cumberland, 7 miles N.E. of Penrith, its post town, and 1 mile from Kirkoswald. The village is situated on a hill by the W. bank of the river Eden. The par., which is of large extent, contains the tnshp. of Lazonby and the chplry. of Plumpton Wall, on the Peterill. The great Roman road passes from N. to S., and another intersects the parish in a direction towards Salkeld Gate. Urns have been found on the Fells, containing bones and ashes. There are traces of a moated castle at Castle Rigg farm. In the township of Plumpton Wall are the ruins of a Roman station, supposed to be Bremetenracum, or Old Penrith. Near the centre of the parish there is a great portion of moorland, irregularly studded with patches of fir-trees. Freestone is abundant, and is extensively worked. To the N. of the parish is an oak forest called Barren-Wood, where is a very lofty rock in which is an artificial cave called Sampson's Cave, or the Giant's Chamber. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £551, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, has a turret containing two bells. There is also a district church at Plumpton Wall, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £49. There are two schools, endowed with the interest of £200, bequeathed by the late Thomas Hall, Esq., of Brakenbank. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. Lazonby Hall is a modern mansion situated on rising ground, about a mile distant from the village. Sir George Musgrave, Bart., is lord of the manor.

LEA, a tnshp. in the par. of Backford, Higher div. of the hund. of Wirrall, co. Chester, 3½ miles N.W. of Chester, and near the Mollington railway station.

LEA, a tnshp. in the par. of Wybunbury, hund. of Nantwich, co. Chester, 4½ miles S.E. of Nantwich. It is situated near the Grand Junction railway. Lea Hall is now converted into a farmhouse.

LEA, a par. partly in the hund. of Greytree, co. Hereford, 11½ miles N.W. of Gloucester, its post town, and 4½ S.E. of Ross. The village, which is small, is situated on the Ross and Gloucester road, and on the Hereford, Ross, and Gloucester railway. The inhabitants are principally engaged in agriculture. A part of this parish was formerly in Gloucester. The soil is sand and marl on subsoil rock. Building stone is found in various parts of the parish. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £68; in the patron. of the Vicar of Linton. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is an ancient red sandstone edifice, with a spired tower containing three bells. It has recently been thoroughly restored. The charities produce about £6 per annum. There is a parochial school.

LEA, a tythng. in the par. of Almondsbury, lower div. of the hund. of Thornbury, co. Gloucester, 4 miles S.W. of Thornbury.

LEA, a tnshp. in the par. of Preston, hund. of Amounderness, co. Lancaster, 4 miles N.W. of Preston. It is a station on the Preston and Wyre railway. There is an endowed free school with £75 per annum. The Roman Catholics have a chapel. It is joined with Ashton, Ingol, and Cottam.

LEA, a par. in the wap. of Corringham, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 2¼ miles S.E. of Gainsborough, its post town. It is a railway station on the Great Northern line. The village, which is small, is situated near the river Trent, and is entirely agricultural. In the neighbourhood are traces of Hevening or Heyning Nunnery, founded in 1180 by Reyner Evermere. Gypsum is found under the marl. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £392 8*s.* 10*d.* The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £150. The church, dedicated to St. Helen, is an ancient structure, with a tower containing a chime-clock and four bells. The church has been recently restored. It contains several very ancient monuments, among which is one to John de Braose. The register dates from 1572. There is a small school. Lea Hall is the principal residence, the seat of the Rev. Sir Charles John Anderson, the lord of the manor.

LEA, a par. in the hund. of Malmesbury, co. Wilts, 2 miles S.E. of Malmesbury, its post town. It is a small agricultural par., containing the hmlt. of Cleaverton. There is a large corn-mill in the neighbourhood, worked by a small stream flowing into the Avon. The land is chiefly pasture. The soil is a sandy loam, alternating with clay. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £30, and the vicarial for £188 9*s.* The living is a vic. annexed to the rect.* of Garsden, in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol. The church, dedicated to St. Giles, is an ancient edifice, with a square tower containing five bells. It is supposed to have been erected before the Conquest, and was restored in 1840. There is a free school for both sexes. The parochial charities produce about £6 per annum. There is a chapel for the Independents. The Earl of Pembroke is lord of the manor.

LEA, a tnshp. in the par. of Pontesbury, co. Salop, 5 miles S.W. of Shrewsbury.

LEA, a river rising near Houghton Regis, in co. Beds, and after a course of about 45 miles, in which it is joined by the Beane, Maran, Ash, and Stort, falls into the Thames at Blackwall. It was a favourite stream of Isaac Walton's, and supplies the East London Waterworks, besides contributing a little to the New River, below Amwell.

LEA, or LEY, a par. in the bar. of Portnahinch, Queen's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, containing Ballybrittas, its post town, and part of the town of Portarlington. The par. is 7 miles long by 5 broad at the widest part. The surface lies along the Grand canal and the river Barrow. It is crossed by the roads from Dublin to Limerick, and from Dublin to Birr. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Kildare, val. £238, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built in 1809 by private contributions. There are two Roman Catholic chapels, a Methodist meeting-house, and several day schools. Lansdowne House is the principal residence. There are two or three ruined churches, and several raths. The principal building of antiquity is Lea Castle, which was founded in 1260 by the De Vesey family, but was demolished by Bruce in 1315. It was subsequently restored, and came into the hands of the Fitzgeralds.

LEA BAILEY, a tythg. in the par. of Newland, hund. of St. Briavel's, co. Gloucester, 3 miles S.E. of Monmouth, and 5 from Ross. It is situated near the river Wye.

LEA-BRIDGE, a hmlt. on the borders of Middlesex and Essex, 5¾ miles N.E. of London. It is a station on the Great Eastern railway. The river Lea is here crossed by a bridge.

LEACH, a tnshp. in the par. of St. Mary, Chester, lower div. of the hund. of Broxton, co. Chester, 2 miles S.W. of Chester. It is joined with Marlston.

LEACH, a river, rising near Northleach, co. Gloucester, and joins the Thames at Lechlade.

LEACH-MARTIN, EAST, or BOUTHROP, a par. in the hund. of Brightwells Barrow, co. Gloucester, 4 miles N.W. of Lechlade, its post town, and 5 N.E. of Fairford. It is situated on the river Leach, and contains the hmlt. of Fyfield. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £150, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is a small edifice, with a tower containing four bells. The charities produce about £2 per annum. There is a National school.

LEACH-TURVILLE, EAST, a par. in the hund. of Brightwells Barrow, co. Gloucester, 5 miles N.W. of Lechlade, its post town, and 5 N.E. of Fairford. It is situated on the river Leach, and the old Roman highway called Icknield Street passes through the parish. The village is considerable, but chiefly agricultural. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £66, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Gloucester. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient structure. The Primitive Methodists have a chapel. There is a National school. The charities produce about £1 per annum.

LEACROFT, a tnshp. in the par. of Cannock, E. div. of the hund. of Cuttlestone, co. Stafford, 1 mile S.E. of Cannock, and 5 miles S.E. of Penkridge. Edge tools are manufactured here for the surrounding district. Some of the inhabitants are engaged in the neighbouring collieries.

LEADBROOK, MAJOR and MINOR, tnshps. in the par. of Northop, hund. of Coleshill, co. Flint, 2 miles S. of Flint, its post town, and 5 from Holywell. The inhabitants are principally employed in the lead mines and fisheries.

LEADBURN, a railway station on the Edinburgh and Innerleithen section of the North British railway, 1½ mile from Pennycuick.

LEADENHAM, or LONG LEADENHAM, a par. in the wap. of Loveden, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 12 miles N. of Grantham, its post town, and 6½ N.E. of the Hougham station on the Great Northern railway. The village is situated on the road from Lincoln to Grantham, near the Roman way Ermine Street. At a short distance from the village is a barrow, also a spring called St. Ann's well. The soil consists of loam and stiff clay. The air is dry and healthy. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment, under an Enclosure Act in 1778. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £700. The church, dedicated to St. Swithin, has a tower crowned by a crocketed spire and pinnacles. The church was repaired in 1830. It contains an E. window, three ancient piscinæ, and several monuments. The register dates from 1560. The parochial charities produce about £119 per annum, of which £95 go towards the support of the workhouse and schools. Leadenham House, the principal residence, is situated in the midst of its extensive pleasure grounds. General John Reeve is lord of the manor and principal landowner. Nun's Close is supposed to have been the site of a convent. A statute fair for hiring servants is held in May, and the feast on the first Sunday after the 2nd July.

LEADER, a river rising under Crib Law, co. Berwick, Scotland. It gives name to Lauder-Dale, and joins the Tweed near Melrose, in co. Roxburgh.

LEADHALL, a tnshp. in the par. of Ryther, Upper div. of the wap. of Barkstone-Ash, West Riding co. York, 6 miles N.W. of Selby, and 5 S.W. of Tadcaster. In the village is an ancient chapel-of-ease.

LEADHILLS, a vil. in the par. of Crawford, co. Lanark, Scotland, 20 miles S.W. of Lanark. It is situated on a ridge of barren mountains 1,300 feet above sea-level, and is chiefly inhabited by miners. The lead mines, which were first opened in 1513 by M. Templeton, yield a large proportion of silver, and are at present worked by the Scots Mining Company.

LEADON, a vil. and tnshp. in the par. of Bishop's Frome, hund. of Radlow, co. Hereford, 5 miles S.E. of Bromyard.

LEADON, HIGH, a hmlt. in the par. of Rudford, lower div. of the hund. of Dudstone, co. Gloucester, 4 miles N.W. of Gloucester, and 5 S.E. of Newent. It is a small agricultural place.

LEADWELL, a hmlt. in the par. of Sandford, co. Oxford, 3 miles S.W. of Deddington. Here was formerly a chapel. There are some excellent sandpits.

LEA END, a district in the par. of Alvechurch, co. Worcester, 7 miles S.W. of Birmingham. It is situated near the line of the North-Western railway.

LEAFIELD, a chplry. in the par. of Shipton-under-Wychwood, hund. of Chadlington, co. Oxford, 4½ miles N.W. of Witney, its post town, and 9 S. of Chipping Norton. The village, which is small, is situated in Wychwood Forest. The chplry. is wholly agricultural, and contains Pratley's Lodge. Here are several acres of allotment ground. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £55, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was founded in the reign of Elizabeth by Sir Henry Upton. It is dedicated to St. Michael, and has been enlarged. There is a National school, built in 1839. On the opening of a barrow in 1828, some ancient coins were dug up.

LEAGRAM, a tnshp. in the par. of Whalley, lower div. of the hund. of Blackburn, co. Lancaster, 7 miles N.W. of Clitheroe. It is joined to Little Bowland.

LEAGRAVE, the source of the river Lea, near Lea Marsh, in co. Beds, 3 miles N.W. of Luton.

LEA HALL, a hmlt. in the par. of Bradborne, hund. of Wirksworth, co. Derby, 4 miles N.E. of Wirksworth, and 5 from Ashbourn. It is situated near the bridge at the Cromford canal.

LEAKE, a par. in the wap. of Skirbeck, parts of Holland, co. Lincoln, 8 miles N.E. of Boston, its post town. It is a station on the East Lincolnshire railway. The parish, which is of large extent and wholly agricultural, is situated near the coast. The population has doubled since the commencement of the present century, chiefly owing to the enclosure of a considerable tract of land in the East Fen. A wide drain for carrying off the water from the fens has been made available for navigation to Boston. The land, which has recently been much improved by drainage, produces good corn crops. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under a private Act in 1810. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £230, in the patron. of the governors of Oakham and Uppingham grammar schools and hospitals. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a square tower containing five bells. It contains the effigy of a knight. There are two proprietary episcopal chapels in the fens. The charities produce about £150 per annum. A British and Foreign school was erected in 1856, aided by a government grant of £360. The Wesleyans have two places of worship, and the Primitive Methodists one. In the adjoining parish of Wrangle is a school, endowed for the instruction of children of both parishes. The Rev. Jacob Conington, a former vicar, bequeathed in 1718, 40 acres of land, now let for £100 a year, to his successor, on condition that morning service be performed every Wednesday and Friday, and on all holy-days throughout the year. There are traces of two religious houses.

LEAKE, a par. in the wap. of Allertonshire, North Riding co. York, 7 miles N.E. of Thirsk its post town, and 5¼ S.E. of Northallerton railway station. It contains the tnshps. of Leake, Borrowby, Gueldable, Crosby, Landmoth-with-Catto, Knayton-with-Brawith, and Nether Silton. This was a considerable town prior to its being ravaged by the Conqueror, but is now a small village. The ancient mansion of the Danby family, in which there are some interesting paintings on the panels, is now a farmhouse. The living is a vic. with the perpet. cur. of Nether Silton annexed, in the dioc. of York, val. £280, in the patron. of the Bishop of Ripon. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient stone structure, with a tower containing three bells. On the front of the tower is a sun-dial rudely carved. The parochial charities produce about £15 per annum. In the churchyard several stone coffins have been dug up, supposed to have contained the remains of Saxon or Danish warriors.

LEAKE, EAST, a par. in the hund. of Rushcliffe, co. Nottingham, 5 miles N.W. of Loughborough, its post town, and 4 S.E. of the Kegworth railway station. It is a polling-place for the southern division of the county. It is a large and thriving village, situated on a branch of the river Soar. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in frame-work knitting, and in the manufacture of cotton stockings. Limestone is quarried for burning into lime. The tithes were commuted for land and money payments under an Enclosure Act in 1798. The living is a rect.* with that of West Leake annexed, in the dioc. of Lincoln, joint val. £719. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure, with a spired tower containing four bells. The parochial charities produce about £80 per annum, of which £49 go to Blay's free school, founded in 1731. The Baptists and Wesleyan Methodists have each a chapel with Sunday-schools attached. There are also a girl's school and several Sunday-schools. Statute fairs are held for the hiring of servants at Candlemas and Martinmas.

LEAKE, WEST, a par. in the hund. of Rushcliffe, co. Nottingham, 6 miles N.W. of Loughborough, its post town, and 2 S.E. of the Kegworth railway station. The village, which is small, is situated on a brook falling into the river Soar. The land is nearly evenly divided between arable and pasture. The soil consists of light earth alternated with stiff clay. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £130. The living is a rect. united to that of East Leake, in the dioc. of Lincoln. The church, dedicated to St. Helen, is a very ancient edifice, with an open composite turret containing two bells. The interior of the church contains several effigies. There are two Sunday-schools for both sexes, also a dame school. The Methodists and Baptists have each a place of worship. There are remains of an old seat.

LEA LANE, a vil. in the par. of Colton, co. Stafford, 2 miles N. of Rugeley.

LEALHOLME BRIDGE, a hmlt. in the par. of Glaisdale, North Riding co. York, 9 miles W. of Whitby. It is situated on the river Eske.

LEA MARSTON, a par. in the Atherstone div. of the hund. of Hemlingford, co. Warwick, 4 miles N. of Coleshill, its post town, and 10 from Birmingham. It is a small agricultural parish, situated on the river Tame, and near the Fazeley canal, and Birmingham and Derby railway. It contains the hmlt. of Marston, and has a good light soil. A portion of the land is in meadow. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1775. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £110. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, has a square tower. The interior contains several monuments of the Adderley family. The church, which is situated in the park, is partly hidden from view by the trees that surround it. Hams Hall is a stone mansion, situated in a park; it is the seat of the Right Hon. Charles B. Adderley, M.P., who is lord of the manor, and principal landowner. There are National schools for both sexes.

LEAMINGTON. See LAMMINGTOUNE, co. Lanark.

LEAMINGTON-HASTINGS, a par. in the southern div. of the hund. of Knightlow, co. Warwick, 6 miles S.W. of Rugby, 4 N.E. of Southam, its post town, and 1½ mile from the Budingbury station on the Rugby and Leamington branch of the London and North-Western railway. The parish, which is wholly agricultural, is situated on the W. bank of the river Leam, which, rising near Nethercote, takes a circuitous course of 24 miles to the W., past Maston and Leamington Priors, and joins the river Avon near Warwick. The par. includes the hmlts. of Broadwell Hill, and Kytes Hardwick. It was held by the Hastaings family for several centuries, and came through the Trevors to Sir T. Wheler, Bart., of Leamington-Hastings House. The parish is within the jurisdiction of the Rugby county court. The Warwick and Napton canal passes to the S. of the parish. The soil is fertile on a substratum of blue lias. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £695. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure, with a square tower containing five bells. There was anciently a chapel-of-ease at Bradwell in this parish. The parochial charities produce about £293 per annum, of which £168 go to Davis's almshouses, £25 to Lady Wheler's, and £30 to the National school. The Rev. H. W. Sitwell is lord of the manor.

LEAMINGTON PRIORS, or ROYAL LEAMINGTON SPA, a par., market town, and inland watering-place, in the Kenilworth div. of the hund. of Knightlow, co. Warwick, 2 miles S.E. of Warwick, and 91 N.W. of London by road, or 97¾ by the London and North-Western railway, and 105½ by the Great Western railway. The goods station of the North-Western railway is situated in the adjoining parish of Milverton, where is also a station on the Leamington and Coventry line. Previous to the commencement of the present century it was a small agricultural village, but is now a flourishing town. In the Saxon times it formed part of the demesnes of the powerful Danish Earl, Thurkil, or Turchil, of Warwick, and after the Norman Conquest came to Roger de Montgomery, Earl of Shrewsbury. In 1160 it was given to Kenilworth Priory, from which circumstance it derives the adjunct Priors, which distinguishes it from Leamington-Hastings. At the dissolution of monasteries, in 1539, it was seized by Henry VIII., and retained by the crown till the reign of Elizabeth, who conferred it on Ambrose Dudley, Earl of Warwick; but he dying without issue in 1567, it again became crown property, and was given with Warwick Castle, by James I., to Sir Fulke Greville, afterwards created Lord Brooke; since which time the estates have been possessed by various proprietors. Its mineral waters were noticed by Sir William Dugdale, in his history of the county, and were analysed, but very imperfectly, as early as 1688. Towards the close of the 18th century Drs. Kerr and Lambe called attention to the valuable medicinal qualities of this spa. But it was not till long after this time that the place rose into importance. In 1811 the parish contained only 60 houses, and 543 inhabitants. Its growth has since been very rapid, as is shown by the following census returns —in 1821, 2,183 persons; in 1831, 7,209; in 1841, 12,864; in 1851, 15,692; and in 1861, 17,958, exclusive of that part of the town situated in the parish of Milverton, which contains nearly 2,000 more.—The town, which consists of spacious well-paved streets, terraces, squares, crescents, and parades, stands in a fine country, in an open vale sheltered by wooded hills. It is separated into two parts, called the Old and New Town, by the river Leam, which joins the Avon about a mile below the town, and is here crossed by a stone bridge. The soil on which it is built is dry and absorbent, with New Red sandstone subsoil, through which the waters of the twelve springs percolate. These springs are saline, sulphureous, and chalybeate, containing nearly the same ingredients, but varying in proportion. The analysis, as made by Dr. Loudon, shows the proportion of salts in an imperial pint of each:—

	Sulphureous spring.	Chalybeate and saline spring.	Old spring.
Oxygen	·025	·025	·075
Azote	·425	·565	·587
Carbonic acid	3·156	2·162	2·103
Sulphuretted hydrogen	1·144	..	..
Sulphate of soda	28·065	30·610	40·398
Cloride of sodium	25·605	42·922	20·561
Chloride of calcium	15·777	17·987	20·561
Chloride of magnesium	9·695	10·813	3·266
Silica	..	0·972	..
Peroxide of iron	a trace	0·262	..
Total of salt in grains	79·142	103·575	105·095

And in some instances traces of iodine and bromine. The ordinary season for using the waters is from May to October, when the town is thronged with visitors of all classes, including many of the aristocracy and gentry, and persons from the Continent and America, who esteem this as the best spa in England. The hotels and lodging-houses are numerous, and built on a scale suited to the requirements of the visitors. The principal are, the Regent Royal Hotel, on the Lower Parade, erected in 1819, at the cost of £25,000, and recently refitted and enlarged—it has attached to it a mews affording accommodation for over 100 horses and carriages; the Clarendon Hotel, situated at the top of Lansdown Place, in the most fashionable part of the town, and resorted to principally by the aristocracy; the Bath Family and Commercial Hotel, with extensive billiard-rooms, bowling-green, and quoit-ground; besides numerous other hotels on a more moderate scale. The most conspicuous buildings in the town are the bath-houses and pump-rooms. These establishments have hot, cold, vapour, and shower baths and pump-rooms. The old well, or spring, noticed by Camden, has a pump-room over it, standing to the W. of the church in Bath-street. The Royal Spa, built at the cost of near £25,000, stands near the extremity of the Lower Parade, on the N. side of the river Leam: it is a massive structure of stone about 160 feet in length, ornamented in front with a colonnade of Doric columns, and containing a lofty pump-room and 15 baths, consisting of all kinds, besides two reserved for the use of the Leamington hospital. The Victoria Baths, situated in Victoria-terrace, have a frontage of 112 feet facing the river Leam, and are adorned with a colonnade running the whole length of the building. Wood's Baths, situated in Bath-street, consist of warm and cold mineral water baths, also vapour and hot-air baths. Hudson's Baths, in High-street, are warm, sulphur, and warm and cold saline baths. Oldham's open-air swimming-baths, near Leam-terrace, are not saline, but are fitted up with every convenience for the enjoyment of the healthful recreation of swimming. The other public buildings are the Warneford Hospital and General Bathing Institution, founded in 1832, mainly through the munificence of Dr. Warneford, who contributed £2,625 for that purpose; the townhall, and police station, in High-street, built in 1831, where the town commissioners meet on the first and third Tuesday in each month, and the county magistrates hold petty sessions every Wednesday. The Proprietary College, in Binswood-crescent, is a spacious and substantial brick edifice in the Tudor collegiate style of architecture, erected in 1847; it has a front 155 feet long, and contains a great hall 90 feet long by 31 high, besides numerous class-rooms and offices. It is in connection with the Church of England, and trains pupils for the army and navy. There are a literary and scientific institution; a free public library and reading-room, established in 1857; two assembly rooms; a theatre, in Clement-street, built in 1849; music-hall, in Bath-street; female penitentiary; Young Girls' Daily Home, in Queen-street, instituted in 1854; military stores and armoury, with houses for the commander and quartermaster, in Radford-road; spacious tennis and racket courts, opened in 1847; temperance hall, in Warwick-street, where public meetings, concerts, and assemblies are held; museum; and public gardens, with a Corinthian temple containing the bust of Dr. Jephson. These last are situated near the bottom of the Lower Parade, and are laid out with gravel walks fringed with flowers and shrubs, and adorned with a large artificial lake. Here, during the summer season, a band of music performs daily; also archery fêtes, galas, and horticultural exhibitions are held. At a short distance from the town, in the Tachbrook-road, is an extensive garden open to the public, known as the Arboretum and Pinetum, stocked with exotic trees, chiefly of the coniferous kind. On the Whitnash-road is the town cemetery, with a little chapel. The shops are numerous and well supplied, doing a good retail business; but there are no manufactures, excepting the iron foundries where the celebrated Leamington kitcheners are made, and an extensive brewery. The cleansing, lighting, paving, and police of the town are entrusted to a local board of health, established by Act of Parliament in 1852. In the immediate vicinity are villa residences, the numbers of which are increasing every year.—The town supports two weekly newspapers, the Leamington Advertiser and the Royal Leamington Spa Courier—the former published on Thursday, the latter on Saturday.—The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £255. The parish church of All Saints is a stone structure with a tower surmounted by a spire and containing six bells. Besides the parish church there are several new district churches—that of St. Mary is a brick edifice faced with Roman cement, standing in the Radford-road; Trinity proprietary chapel, in Beauchamp-square, is a cruciform structure of stone erected in 1847; Christ Church is also a proprietary church situated in Beauchamp-square; St. Luke's Episcopal chapel is a modern edifice situated in Augusta-place; Milverton Episcopal chapel, situated on Milverton Hill, is also proprietary. The Roman Catholics have a little church in George-street, built after the model of the Ionic temple of Hissus. There are also places of worship belonging to the several denominations of Protestant Dissenters, including Independent, Baptist, Congregational, Wesleyan, Primitive Methodists, Lady Huntingdon's Connexion, and Plymouth Brethren. The schools are numerous and well supported, comprising several National, parochial, British, infant, industrial, Catholic, Independent, Wesleyan, and a school for the indigent blind. The charities and benevolent institutions are very numerous, comprising almshouses, visiting societies, clothing funds, penitentiaries, &c.—A customary market for provisions is held on Wednesday. The ladies of Leamington contribute £52 10s. to the sweepstakes at Warwick races, and the gentlemen subscribe for a cup of the same value to be run for.

LEAMSIDE, a railway station on the North-Eastern line, where the Leamside junction branches off.

LEANANE, a stream rising in Lough Gartan, co. Donegal, Ireland, and falling into Lough Swilly near Rathmelton.

LEA-NEWBOLD, a tnshp. in the par. of St. Oswald, lower div. of the hund. of Broxton, co. Chester, 6 miles S.E. of Chester. The township is of small extent, and is situated on a branch of the river Dee. The Marquis of Westminster is lord of the manor.

LEAP, a tythg. in the par. of Exbury, hund. of Bishop's Waltham, co. Hants, 8 miles S. of Southampton. It is a small fishing village situated on the Solent, nearly opposite Cowes, in the Isle of Wight.

LEAP, a vil. in the par. of Aghancon, bar. of Ballybritt, King's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 6 miles S.E. of Birr. Leap Castle is an interesting building.

LEAP, a vil. in the bar. of Carbery-East, co. Cork, Ireland, 3 miles W. of Roscarbery.

LEAR, a river rising near Davidstown, co. Kildare, Ireland. It joins the Barrow near Holymount.

LEARCHILD, a tnshp. in the par. of Edlingham, N. div. of Coquetdale ward, co. Northumberland, 5 miles N.E. of Rothbury, and 7 S.W. of Alnwick. There is no village, only a few farmhouses.

LEARMOUNT, a par. in the bar. of Tirkeeran, co. Londonderry, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. Derry is its post town. It is 7 miles long by 3 broad. The surface is very mountainous, the principal summit being Sawel, in the S., which attains an altitude of 2,236 feet. The road from Dungiven to Strabane crosses the parish, and the river Faughan intersects it, upon which stands the village. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Derry, val. £85, in the patron. of the bishop and the Skinners' Company of London. The church was built in 1831, chiefly by means of a gift from the late Board of First Fruits. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Lower Cumber. There are a Sunday-school and three day schools. Learmount House is the seat of J. B. Beresford, Esq.

LEARMOUTH, OLD AND NEW, a hmlt. in the ward of East Glendale, co. Northumberland, 10 miles N.W. of Wooler. It was anciently a market town, but is now an insignificant hamlet. Lord Elcho's hounds meet here.

LEASINGHAM, a par. in the wap. of Flaxwell, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 2 miles N. of Sleaford, its post town. The par., which is of small extent, is situated near the canal, and contains the tnshps. of North and South Leasingham, with the hmlt. of Roxholm. The tithes of South Leasingham have been commuted for a rent-charge of £640. The living is a rect.* with that of North Leasingham united, in the dioc. of Lincoln, joint val. £924. The church, situated in South Leasingham, has a lofty spired tower containing four bells. The church of North Leasingham, formerly a distinct parish, was dedicated to St. John, and has been in ruins many years. There is a National school for both sexes. The Reformed Methodists have a place of worship.

LEASOWE CASTLE, a demesne in co. Chester, 4 miles N.W. of Birkenhead. It is situated between the rivers Dee and Mersey, and is the property of the Hon. Sir E. Cust. On the coast is a lighthouse 118 feet above the sea, in N. lat. 53° 25′ and W. long. 3° 7′.

LEASOWES, a demesne in the par. of Halesowen, co. Worcester, 7 miles S.W. of Birmingham. It is situated near the river Stour, and the grounds were laid out by the poet Shenstone, whose seat it was.

LEATH, a ward in co. Cumberland, contains the pars. of Addingham, Ainstable, Alston, Castle Sowerby, Croglin, Dacre, Edenhall, Greystoke, Hesket-in-the-Forest, Hutton-in-the-Forest, Kirkland, Kirk-Oswald, Lazonby, Langwathby, Melmerby, Newton-Rigny, Ousby, Penrith, Renwick, Great Salkeld, Skelton, and part of St. Mary, comprising an area of 217,430 acres.

LEATHAN, a loch in the Isle of Skye, co. Inverness, Scotland, near Portree.

LEATHERHEAD, or LETHERHED, a par. and post town in the second div. of the hund. of Copthorne, co. Surrey, 4 miles S.W. of Epsom, 5 N. of Dorking, and 12½ N.E. of Guildford. It is a station on the London and South-Western railway. It is situated on the river Mole, which is here crossed by a bridge of fourteen arches. A portion of the parish consists of an extensive common, which has recently been enclosed. There are brick and tile kilns, and a good trade is done in malting, brewing, tanning, &c. The town formerly had a market, is well paved, and lighted with gas. It contains several commercial inns, posting-houses, and a mechanics' institute. In the vicinity are numerous seats, with parks and plantations, occupying the steep slopes which bound the valley of the Mole on either side. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Winchester, valued in the king's books at £14 6*s.* 0½*d.*, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Rochester. The church, dedicated to SS. Mary and Nicholas, formerly belonged to Leeds Priory, in Kent. It is an ancient cruciform structure built about 1346, and since restored. It has a square tower containing a clock and eight bells. The transepts are separated from the nave by carved screens. The interior contains an E. window, ancient piscina, stone seats, and several monuments. The register dates from 1626. The Independents have a place of worship. There is a National school built in 1839, and endowed with £30 per annum. The parochial charities produce about £105 per annum, exclusive of the school endowment. The old inn near the bridge is supposed to be the "woning" of "Elynor Rumming," the famous ale-wife of the poet Skelton. Leatherhead House was the seat of the Gores and of Judge Jeffries. The principal residences are Gibbon's Grove, Randalls, and Thorncroft. A fair is held on 11th October, in a field to the N. of the town, chiefly for the sale of horses and pigs.

LEATHLEY, a par. in the upper div. of the wap. of Claro, West Riding co. York, 3 miles N.E. of Otley, its post town, and the same distance from the Arthington station on the North-Eastern railway. The par., which is wholly agricultural, is situated on the river Wharfe, and contains the tnshp. of Castley. The soil is light and rich, with subsoil clay. The village is small. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £302, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is an ancient edifice, with a tower containing a clock and four bells. The interior of the church contains several mural monuments. The parochial charities produce about £35 per annum. There are a free school, and almshouses founded by Mrs. Anne Hitch in 1769. There is a National school for both sexes. The Methodists have a place of worship. Leathley Hall is the principal residence. Francis H. Fawkes, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

LEATON, a tnshp. in the par. of St. Mary Shrewsbury, hund. of Pimhill, co. Salop, 4 miles N.W. of Shrewsbury. It is a station on the Shrewsbury and Chester section of the Great Western railway. The township is situated near the bank of the river Severn.

LEATON, a tnshp. in the par. of Wrockwardine, hund. of South Bradford, co. Salop, 2 miles W. of Wellington. It is situated near the river Tern and the Shrewsbury canal. Many of the inhabitants are engaged in the coal and ironstone mines.

LEAVELAND, a par. in the hund. of Faversham, lathe of Scray, co. Kent, 4 miles S.W. of Faversham, its post town, and 8 N. of Ashford. The village, which is small, is situated near the Ashford and Faversham road. The land is partly in hops. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Badlesmere, in the dioc. of Canterbury. The church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, is a small structure with a wooden turret. Lord Sondes is lord of the manor and chief landowner. A fair is held in Whitsun week.

LEAVEN, a river rising under Bolton Head, in Cleveland, North Riding co. York, and joining the Tees below Yarm.

LEAVENHEATH, a vil. in the par. of Stoke, hund. of Babergh, co. Suffolk, 2 miles N.W. of Nayland, and 7 from Colchester. It is situated in the valley of the Stour. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ely, and in the patron. of the vicar. The church is a modern edifice.

LEAVENING, a tnshp. in the par. of Acklam, wap. of Buckrose, East Riding co. York, 6 miles S. of New Malton, and 14 from York. The village, which is considerable, is situated at the western foot of the Wolds, and is chiefly agricultural. The soil is fertile, and a large portion of the land in market gardens. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment, under an Enclosure Act in 1804. A stone building has recently been erected, which is used as a school and chapel-of-ease. There are places of worship for Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists. Lord Middleton is lord of the manor.

LEAVESDEN, a hmlt. in the par. of Watford, hund. of Cashio, or lib. of St. Alban's, co. Herts, 2 miles N. of Watford, its post town, and 19 from London. It is situated near the river Colne and Grand Junction canal. The North-Western railway here passes through a tunnel, 1 mile 170 yards in length, and has a station at Watford. The soil is fertile, on subsoil clay and chalk. Some of the inhabitants are engaged in the working of straw plait, and in the silk mills. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £116, in the patron. of the Vicar of Watford. The church is modern. Grove Park, the principal residence, is a seat of the Earl of Clarendon. It contains a choice collection of pictures.

LEAVINGTON, KIRK, a par. in the W. div. of the lib. of Langbaurgh, North Riding co. York, 2 miles S.E. of Yarm, and 6 S.W. of Stokesley. It is situated on the river Leaven, which rises under Bolton Head, in Cleveland, and joins the Tees below Yarm. The par. contains the tnshps. of Castle-Leavington, Pickton, and Low Worsall. The village is considerable, but chiefly agricultural. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, val. £100, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to St. Martin, is a small ancient structure. The charities produce about £8 per annum. There is a National school.

LEBBERSTON a tnshp. in the par. of Filey, wap. of Pickering Lythe, North Riding co. York, 3 miles N.W. of Filey, and 4 S.E. of Scarborough. It is situated near the coast, on the river Filey. There are a few small charities.

LECALE, UPPER AND LOWER, a bar. in co.

Down, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. It is 9 miles long, and its greatest breadth is 8. It is environed by part of Lough Strangford, the Irish Sea, and the baronies of Upper Iveagh and Dufferin. It contains the pars. of Ardglass, Ballee, Ballycalter, Ballykinter, Bright, Down, Dunsfort, Inch, Kilclief, Rathmullen, Saul, Tyrella, and part of Kilmegan. This barony was anciently the territory of the Macgenises.

LECCAUN, a vil. in the par. of Fiddown, bar. of Iverk, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, not far from Pilltown.

LECHLADE, or LEACHLADE, a par., post and market town, in the hund. of Brightwells-Barrow, co. Gloucester, 12 miles from the Farringdon Road railway station, and 22 S.E. of Cheltenham. It is situated on the Thames and Severn canal, and at the confluence of the rivers Leach and Thames, which latter here becomes navigable. It contains the hmlt. of Lemhill Farm, and was held at the time of the Domesday Survey by Henry de Ferrars, whose wife, Isabel, founded a priory here for Black Canons. It subsequently passed to the Mortimers, Richard Earl of Cornwall, the Talbots, Despencers, Queen Catherine of Arragon, &c., and came through the Wheates to G. Milward, Esq., of Lechlade House, the present proprietor. The town stands on the margin of the Thames, and on the road from Cirencester to London, near St. John's Bridge. It consists principally of two long and wide streets crossing at right angles, and contains a savings-bank. It formerly had a brisk carrying trade on the Thames, but this has recently been diverted into other channels. The inhabitants are now principally engaged in agriculture and in dairy farming. The pastures in the vicinity are luxuriantly rich. There is a mineral spring. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £710. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £597, in the patron. of Emmanuel College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, was built about the middle of the 15th century. It has a spired tower remarkable for its symmetrical beauty, containing five bells. The interior of the church, which was entirely restored in 1829, contains a stone pulpit and two brasses, one bearing date 1440. The parochial charities produce about £93 16*s.* 7*d.* There is a National school. The Independents and Baptists have each a place of worship. A court-leet is held once in three years, when a constable and tithing men are appointed by George Milward, Esq., the lord of the manor. In a meadow near St. John's Bridge, which had formerly a chapel or hospital attached, were discovered, towards the end of the last century, the remains of a Roman bath, consisting of brick pillars and a mosaic pavement. Thomas Coxeter, the antiquary, was born here in 1689. Market day is Friday. A fair is held on the 9th September for cattle and toys.

LECHMORE HEATH, in the hund. of Cashio, co. Herts, 3 miles E. of Watford.

LECK, a chplry. and tnshp. in the par. of Tunstall, hund. of Lonsdale South of the Sands, co. Lancaster, 14 miles N.W. of Lancaster, and 2 S.E. of Kirkby Lonsdale, its post town. It is situated near the junction of the rivers Greta and Lune, on the Leck rivulet, which rises in Leck Pike. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £80, in the patron. of the Vicar of Tunstall. The church contains one bell. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum, besides allotment lands, and £1,000, bequeathed by the late R. H. Welch, Esq., for the benefit of six poor scholars of Leck school.

LECK, a par. in the bar. of Raphoe, co. Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, half a mile E. of Letterkenny, its post town. It is 4½ miles long, and its average breadth is 2 miles. The surface is mountainous, and lies to the S. of the head of Lough Swilly. The parish is crossed by the roads from Letterkenny to Lifford and Londonderry. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Derry, in the patron. of the crown. There are a church, two Sunday, and three day schools. Rockhill and Swillyview are the principal residences.

LECKARROW, a vil. in the pars. of St. John and Killenvoy, in the bar. of Athlone, co. Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 8 miles S.E. of Roscommon, on the road from thence to Athlone. It is a petty sessions town. Fairs are held on the 17th March, 27th June, 27th September, and 20th December.

LECKBY, a hmlt. in the par. of Cundall, wap. of Hallikeld, North Riding co. York, 4 miles N.E. of Boroughbridge. It is situated near the river Swale. It is joined with Cundall to form a tnshp.

LECKEN, a vil. in the par. of Rahara, in the bar. of Athlone, co. Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 7 miles S. of Roscommon. Lecken House is the principal residence.

LECKFORD, a par. in the hund. of Upper Thorngate, co. Hants, 2 miles N.E. of Stockbridge, its post town, and 5½ S. of Andover. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Test and Andover canal. A fishing club is established here, supported by the Earl of Craven and other gentlemen. The land is chiefly arable, with some excellent pasturage for sheep. There are several chalk pits in this parish. The great tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £400, and the vicarial for £142 10*s.* The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £142, in the patron. of the Prebendary of Leckford in the Cathedral of Winchester. The church is an ancient edifice, with a tower containing three bells. There is also a district church, the living of which is a sinecure rect., val. £400, in the patron. of St. John's College, Oxford. The Primitive Methodists have a place of worship. William Longman, Esq., and Arthur Eden, Esq., are lords of the manor.

LECKHAMPSTEAD, a chplry. in the par. of Chieveley, hund. of Faircross, co. Berks, 7 miles N. of Newbury, its post town, and 3 N. of Chieveley. The village is considerable, but chiefly agricultural. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic.* of Chieveley, in the dioc. of Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. James, is a modern edifice, in which is a circular font encircled by a scroll of foliage. The Marquis of Downshire is the sole owner.

LECKHAMPSTEAD, or LEKEHAMPSTEAD, a par. in the hund. and co. of Buckingham, 3½ miles N.E. of Buckingham, its post town. The village, which is small, is situated on a branch of the river Ouse, and near the Buckingham canal, which communicates with the Grand Junction at Cosgrove. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in the manufacture of straw plait and lace. There is a chalybeate spring. The surface is undulating and well wooded. The land is chiefly meadow and pasture. The low lands are watered by a brook which rises in Whittlebury Forest. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £517. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £423. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. In the interior is an octagonal font, ornamented with representations of the crucifixion, &c. The charities produce about £11 per annum, which goes to Smith's school. There are National and infant schools. Henry William Beauclerk, Esq., is lord of the manor.

LECKHAMPTON, a par. in the hund. of Cheltenham, co. Gloucester, 2 miles S.W. of Cheltenham, its post town. In this parish is the Devil's Chimney, a peak of the Cotswold hills. The village, which is considerable, was formerly a market town under the Despencers, and came through the Giffards and Norwoods to the Fryes. There is a tramway for the conveyance of stone in connection with the branch railway from Cheltenham to Gloucester. The soil is clayey, and subsoil gravel and limestone. Stone is quarried for building purposes, and for burning into lime. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1778. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £356. The parish church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient structure, with a spired tower containing six bells. The interior of the church contains several monuments and mural tablets, and a brass of W. Norwood, bearing date 1598. There is also a district church, consecrated in May, 1840, the living of which is a perpet. cur. This church, dedicated to SS. Philip and James, is situated near Cheltenham Park. There is a National school for both sexes. Leckhampton Court, the principal residence, is an ancient mansion built in the reign of Henry VII., but since modernised. The Rev. Charles Brandon Trye, M.A., is lord of the manor.

LECKONFIELD, a par. in the Hunsley-Beacon div. of the wap. of Harthill, East Riding co. York, 3 miles N. of Beverley, its post town, and 1 mile from the Arram station on the North-Eastern railway. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. The par. includes the hmlt. of Arram. The stately castle of the Percy family, earls of Northumberland, which formerly stood here, was taken down in 1600 to supply materials for repair of their castle at Wressel. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the vic.* of Scarborough, in the dioc. of York. The church, dedicated to St. Catherine, has a brick tower containing two bells. There is a school for both sexes, also a Sunday-school. Lord Leconfield is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

LECKPATRICK, a par. in the bar. of Lower Strabane, co. Tyrone, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, containing the vil. of Ballymagorry and part of its post town Strabane. It is 5½ miles long by 2½ broad. The river Foyle and the Strabane canal pass along the W. side of the parish. The surface is hilly, but the soil generally good. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Derry, val. £727, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built in 1817 by aid of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. There are two Roman Catholic chapels, five Sunday, and several daily schools, also a Presbyterian meeting-house. Green Lodge, Farmhill, and Hollyhill, are the principal residences.

LECKWITH, or LLECHWYDD, a par. in the hund. of Dinas Powis, co. Glamorgan, 2 miles S.W. of Cardigan. Cardiff is its post town. It is a small village situated on the river Ely. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The living is a rect.* with Llandough and Cogan annexed, in the dioc. of Llandaff, joint val. £182. The church is a small ancient structure.

LECROFT, a par., partly in the co. of Perth, and partly in the co. of Stirling, Scotland, 2 miles S.E. of Donne. It is situated on the river Forth, where the river Teith joins. It contains part of the parish of the Bridge of Allan. The par. is celebrated for the beauty of its scenery, and measures about 3 miles by 2. The surface, for the most part, consists of good carse land, and is well cultivated. The par. is in the presb. of Dunblane, and synod of Perth and Stirling. The minister's stipend is £148. The church is a Gothic structure. In the vicinity of the mansion of Keir are a chain of forts or caers. The parish enjoys ready access to the Scottish Central railway through the Bridge of Allan station. Stirling of Keir is the chief heritor.

LEDAN, a river rising under Snowdon, co. Carnarvon, and joins the Conway at Waterloo Bridge.

LEDBURN, a hmlt. in the par. of Mentmore, hund. of Cottesloe, co. Bucks, 2 miles S.W. of Leighton-Buzzard. It is situated near the North-Western railway and Grand Junction canal. The land is partly in common.

LEDBURY, a par., market town, and nominal borough, in the hund. of Radlow, co. Hereford, 14 miles E. by S. of Hereford, and 120 W.N.W. of London by road. It is a station on the West Midland railway. This place, which is situated in the eastern part of the county, at the southern extremity of the Malvern hills, derives its name from the river Leadon, or Loddon, which intersects the parish, which is of large extent, containing above 8,000 acres. It comprises the tnshps. of Parkhold and Wellington Heath, as well as the extinct borough of Ledbury, which, in the reign of Edward I., returned members to parliament. The parish is further divided into five parts, distinguished as the Borough, Leadon and Haffield, Mitchell and Netherton, Wall Hills, and Wellington Heath; these four last divisions constitute the foreign of the manor for which the courts leet and baron are held. The manor was given by Edwin the Saxon to the bishops of Hereford, who had a palace here, and in the reign of Stephen, Bishop Bohun obtained a grant for holding fairs and a weekly market. The charter having become obsolete, was renewed by Queen Elizabeth in 1584, at which time Ledbury was celebrated for its silk and broadcloth manufactures, but these are now extinct. It is a polling-place for the county elections, a petty sessions town, and nominal borough, the constables being elected annually at the courts leet and baron, held by the Earl Somers and others.—The town stands on a declivity near the foot of Dog Hill, and on the main road from Hereford to Tewkesbury. It is intersected by the Gloucester and Hereford canal, and consists mainly of two streets running N. and S., crossed by several smaller streets. Many of the houses are very ancient, built of brick and timber, with projecting stories, but those which are of recent erection are constructed of red brick. It contains a timbered market-house, with projecting front, and built upon sixteen oaken pillars; two banks; savings-bank; a literary institution; St. Catherine's Hospital, founded in the thirteenth century by Bishop Foliot, and rebuilt in 1822 from designs by Smirke; the union workhouse, a new building, capable of containing 150 persons; police station, with magistrate's rooms attached, in New Street; a dispensary, founded in 1824. The county court is held at the magistrates' office, and the excise office at the Feathers Hotel. The streets are lighted with gas and partially paved.—In 1851 the town contained a population of 3,027, which had increased in 1861 to 3,263. The trade is chiefly connected with agriculture, consisting of malting, tanning, perry and cider making, and hop growing, which last is considerably on the increase. Some few persons are engaged in the manufacture of ropes, lines, sacking, and gloves, but these sources of industry have recently much declined. There were formerly extensive limestone and grey marble quarries at Dog Hill, and in the vicinity extensive cider orchards.—The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £651, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, or, according to others, to St. Peter, is a commodious edifice, built in the Norman, early English, and perpendicular styles of architecture, almost covered with ivy. It was made collegiate in 1401 by Bishop Trevenant, and has a detached bell tower, surmounted by a spire 60 feet high, which has been twice struck by lightning, but not injured. The tower contains a peal of eight bells, and a clock which chimes the 149th Psalm. Adjoining the N. side of the church is St. Catherine's chapel, in the decorated style, so named after Catherine Audley, the hermit. The interior of the church contains the remnant of a carved screen, stalls, several brasses, an altar-piece after Reubens, four stained-glass windows, and numerous monuments, including effigies of a lady and E. Skynner, monuments of the Biddulphs, and one to Anne Elter, who had seventeen children. There is also a district church at Wellington Heath, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £100. The new church has a belfry and one bell. The Independents, Baptists, and Wesleyans have each a place of worship. There are two endowed schools: Hall's school, with an endowment of £30, and King Edward VI.'s grammar school, which has an income from endowment of £3 11*s.* 3*d.*, with school-house attached, situated in Church Lane. The schoolhouse, with its income, has been transferred by an order of the Charity Commissioners to the education of an equal number of boys and girls at the National schools. There are besides National and infant schools. The charities produce about £1,797 per annum, including the school endowments, and £1,687, the magnificent endowment of St. Catherine's Hospital, mentioned above, which provides for 24 poor persons, nominated by the senior canon of Hereford, who is obliged to reside in a house adjoining the hospital for three months in the year. Service is performed in the chapel three times a week.—The principal residences in the vicinity are Eastnor Castle, the seat of Earl Somers, Newhouse Castle, and Upper Hall. At Wall Hill, Haffield, and Vineyard, are traces of ancient camps.—Ledbury is the head of a Poor-law Union embracing twenty-one parishes in Herefordshire and one in Worcestershire. It is also the seat of superintendent registry and new County Court districts. Tuesday is market day. Fairs are held on the first Tuesday in February, the Tuesday before Easter, the 12th May, 22nd June, 2nd October, and the last Tuesday but one in December.

LEDDON, a river rising under Seagar Hill, in co. Hereford; it joins the Severn near Gloucester.

LEDNOCK, a stream rising in Glenlednock, co. Perth, Scotland; it joins the Earn at Comrie.

LEDSHAM, a tnshp. in the par. of Neston, Higher div. of the hund. of Wirrall, co. Chester, 6 miles N.W. of Chester. It is a station on the Manchester, Chester, and Liverpool line of railway. The village is small and scattered. There is a chapel for Independents.

LEDSHAM, a par. in the Upper div. of the wap. of Barkstone-Ash, West Riding co. York, 3½ miles from Milford, its post town and junction station on the North-Eastern railway, and 6 N. of Pontefract. It is a small agricultural parish situated 2 miles N. of the river Aire, and 1 mile W. of the great N. road from London to Glasgow. It contains the vils. of Fairburn and Ledstone. Limestone of excellent quality is quarried for building purposes, and for burning into lime. The surface is boldly undulating and well wooded. The soil is in general fertile, and in parts luxuriantly rich. The substratum abounds with coal and limestone, which are extensively worked. The village is situated in a vale near the source of a rivulet which flows through it. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of York, val. £400. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure, with a tower containing a clock and three bells. The interior contains a monument to Lady Elizabeth Hastings and her two sisters. The charities produce about £549 per annum, of which £375 belongs to Lady Hastings' boys and girls schools, and £152 to Sir J. Lewis's hospital. This latter charity was founded in 1670 for five aged bachelors and five spinsters. The building was repaired in 1816. There is a place of worship for the Primitive Methodists at Newton. The Rev. Charles Wheler is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

LEDSTONE, a tnshp. in the pars. of Ledsham and Kippax, Upper div. of the wap. of Barkstone-Ash, West Riding co. York, 4 miles W. of the Milford Junction station on the Leeds and Selby railway, and 6 N. of Pontefract. The York and North Midland railway passes through the township. It is a small agricultural village, situated about 1 mile N. of the river Aire, and half a mile W. of the old N. road. The surface is varied and the land extremely fertile. Ledstone Hall is situated in the midst of a wooded park enclosed within a stone wall. It was formerly the seat of the Witham family, and afterwards of Thomas Wentworth, Earl of Strafford. Kippax Park is another seat. The Rev. Charles Wheler is lord of the manor and chief landowner.

LEDWELL, a hmlt. in the par. of Sandford, hund. of Wootton, co. Oxford, 5 miles N.E. of Great Enstone, and 6 N.W. of Woodstock. It is situated near the river Dorme. A fine sand adapted for the manufacture of glass is obtained. There was formerly a chapel-of-ease, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene.

LEDWYCHE, a river rising under Titterstoneclee, in co. Salop, and joining the Teme near Tenbury. On its bank is a hamlet of the same name, about 1 mile E. of Ludlow.

LEE, a par. in the hund. of Aylesbury, co. Bucks, 2½ miles S.E. of Wendover, and 5 N.W. of Amersham. Tring is its post town. It is a small agricultural parish. The land is partly in common, the remainder arable and meadow. The soil consists of wet clay and chalk. The surface is level, but considerably elevated. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £50. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, was formerly a chapel-of-ease to the rect.* of Weston Turville. The interior contains four ancient tablets.

LEE, a chplry. in the par. of Ilfracombe, co. Devon, 2 miles from Ilfracombe. The village is situated on Lee Bay. The living is a cur. annexed with Ilfracombe.

LEE, a tythg. in the par. of Romsey, hund. of King's Sombourne, co. Hants, 2 miles from Romsey, and 7 N.W. of Southampton. It is situated near the river Test and Andover canal.

LEE, a par. in the hund. of Blackheath, lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, co. Kent, 6 miles S.E. of London, its post town, and 1 mile from the Blackheath station on the North Kent railway. The parish formerly consisted only of a few detached houses, but now contains many residences, chiefly inhabited by London merchants. Very great additions have recently been made to the village, which is connected with Blackheath Park by one continuous line of villas called Lee Park. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £407. The population in 1861 was 4,750. The parish, which occupies a remarkably healthy spot, is within the jurisdiction of the Central Criminal Court and metropolitan police. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of London, val. £464, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The parish church, dedicated to St. Margaret, is a modern construction, completed in 1841 at the cost of £8,000. It is situated near the old one, and has a lofty spire. The windows are of stained glass, and the central E. window is a copy of the "Five Sisters" in York Minster. In the old churchyard are several monuments, including those of Edmund Halley, the astronomer, William Parsons, the comedian, and Lady Dacre. There is also a district church in Lee Park, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £300. The Merchant Taylors' almshouses, thirty in number, are built of white brick ornamented with stone; adjoining these are the almshouses of Christopher Thomas Boone, founded in 1682, with an income from endowment of £71 per annum. There are National and infant schools for both sexes. The parish has the privilege of sending one boy to the free grammar school at Lewisham. The Wesleyans and Baptists have places of worship. In the village are a mechanics' institute and a police station. The Blackheath proprietary grammar school, in connection with the London University, is situated in this parish, as is also the Lee Park proprietary grammar school, built after the model of the Propyleum at Athens. There are several old mansions, as Lee Manor House, Lee House, Lee Villa, Lee Grove, Lee Place, &c. Purchas wrote the greater part of his "Pilgrim" here.

LEE, a tnshp. in the par. of Bishop's Castle, co. Salop, 2 miles E. of Bishop's Castle. It is joined to Oakley.

LEE, a tnshp. in the par. of Ellesmere, co. Salop, 1 mile S. of Ellesmere.

LEE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Allerton, and par. of Bradford, West Riding co. York, 3 miles N.W. of Bradford. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the collieries and factories.

LEE, or ST. JOHN LEE, a par. in the S. div. of Tindale ward, co. Northumberland, 1 mile N.E. of Hexham. It is situated near the river Tyne, and the line of the Newcastle and Carlisle railway. The par., which is of large extent, contains Acomb, Wall, and eight other tnshps. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the collieries and lead mines. The village is built on an eminence on the N. bank of the Tyne. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, val £300. The church, dedicated to St. John of Beverley, is an ancient structure. It was anciently noted for an annual procession made to it by the monks of Hexham. There are chapels-of-ease at Bingfield and Wall. The charities consist of an endowment of £12 bequeathed by Mary Vernol in 1771 for a school. The principal residence is Lee Hall. Near the church are remains of St. John's hermitage and oratory, which the Scots plundered in 1138.

LEE, two rivers of this name in Ireland: one, the ancient Luvius, rises in Gougane Barra Lake, in co. Cork, and after a course of 50 miles, in which it passes through Lough Allua, falls into Cork Harbour, near Queenstown. The other rises under the Stack mountains, in co. Kerry, and falls into Tralee Bay.

LEE, a loch in co. Forfar, Scotland. See LOCHLEE.

LEEBOTWOOD, a par. in the hund. of Condover, co. Salop, 9 miles S. of Shrewsbury, its post town, and 4 N.E. of Church Stretton. It is a station on the Shrewsbury and Hereford railway. The village, which is small, is situated on the ancient Watling Street. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in the linen trade, and in a woollen dye mill. There are brick and tile kilns, also collieries and limestone quarries. The lower grounds are intersected by a brook called the Rae, which receives the waters of several minor streams. A considerable portion of the land is rough pasture. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £105. The living is a perpet. cur. united with the perpet. cur. of Longnor, in the dioc. of Lichfield. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, formerly belonged to Haughmond Abbey. It is an ancient stone edifice with a square tower. The charities consist of a share in the bequest left by Sir Richard Corbett in 1764 to the parish of Longnor.

LEE BRIDGE, a vil. in the par. of Halifax, wap. of Morley, West Riding co. York, 3 miles from Halifax. It is situated near the river Calder and Rochdale canal. Part of the inhabitants are engaged in the coal and iron mines.

LEE-BROCKHURST, a par. in the Whitworth div. of the hund. of North Bradford, co. Salop, 3 miles S.E. of Wem, its post town, and 9½ S. of Whitchurch. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Roden, and on the road from Shrewsbury to Whitchurch. Sandstone of suitable quality for building is quarried. The living is a perpet cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £60. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient structure, with a turret containing two bells. There is a parochial school. Viscount Hill is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

LEE CASTLE, on the Clyde, in co. Lanark, Scotland. It is the seat of the Lockhart family, and contains the famous "Lee Penny" brought over by L. Locard, the Crusader, and referred to by Sir W. Scott, in the "Talisman."

LEECE, a vil. in the par. of Aldingham, co. Lancashire. 3 miles S.E. of Dalton.

LEE CHAPEL, an ext. par. place, in the hund. of Barstable, co. Essex, 4 miles S. of Billericay.

LEE-COMMON, a hmlt. in the par. of Wendover, co. Bucks, 3 miles S.E. of Wendover.

LEE COURT, or THE PRIORY, a demesne in co. Kent, 4 miles E. of Canterbury. It is situated on the banks of the Stour, and was rebuilt by Wyatt in the pointed style. The picture gallery contains the celebrated portrait of Anne of Cleves, by Holbein, which deceived Henry VIII. into marrying her, also his portrait of the same king, with others by Vandyck and Lely; also Murillo's "Virgin and Child," C. Dolci's "Herodias," besides several landscapes by Poussin and Lorraine.

LEEDS, a parliamentary and municipal borough, tnshp., par., and union in the West Riding co. York. The origin of the name, variously spelt Loidis, Ledes, &c., is unknown, but dates at least from the Conquest, soon after which a castle was built here by Albert de Lacy, on what is at present known as Mill Hill. The town is situated at the junction of the river Aire with a canal called the Leeds and Liverpool canal, by which is afforded a direct communication by water across the country from the port of Hull on the E. to Liverpool on the W. Leeds is locally in the wap. of Skyrack, and lib. of the honour of Pontefract, in the archdeac. of Craven, and dioc. of Ripon, and gives name to a rural deanery. It was incorporated as a municipal borough by Charles I. in 1626; a second charter was granted by Charles II. in 1661, and a third by James II. in 1684. It is divided into 12 wards, and the town-council consists of a mayor, 16 aldermen, and 48 councillors. It was not created a parliamentary borough until the passing of the Reform Bill in 1832, though during the Civil War it sent a representative to Cromwell's parliament. It now returns two members, the limits of the borough being identical with those of the parish, and the mayor being the returning-officer.—This place is the chief seat of the woollen manufactures of England, and, as it possesses advantageous railway communication with every important town in the kingdom, it is both prosperous and populous, and yearly increasing in extent. The production of woollen goods has been the chief business here for centuries, as appears by a passage in Lord Clarendon's "History of the Great Rebellion." Speaking of Leeds, Bradford, and Halifax, he calls them "three very populous and rich towns, depending wholly upon clothiers." All kinds of cloth are manufactured here—shawls, blankets, Scotch cambletts, and every description of cloth, from the coarsest to the most superfine. Every improvement that science and experience could suggest has been eagerly adopted, and no expense has been spared in the laudable desire to attain perfection, the satisfactory result of which is that first-class Yorkshire cloths are now considered equal to those of the West of England, which latter so long carried off the palm of superiority in the markets of the world. Mixed —i.e. coloured—cloths are generally sold first in an unfinished state, and have afterwards to be dressed before they pass into the hands of the retail dealers. Iron, leather, and flax are also very important branches of trade in Leeds, but especially iron.—Of late years the town has been greatly improved by the erection of handsome structures, built with a due regard to the principles of architecture, on the site of old and dilapidated buildings: and, as it becomes every day more important for the owners of large manufactories to be possessed of central positions with regard to the railways and cloth-halls, for the carrying on of their business, there can be little doubt that the town will annually exhibit a great improvement in this respect. Still the cloth-halls themselves, as might indeed be expected from the dates of their erection, are exceedingly plain in their appearance. The Mixed Cloth Hall was built in 1758. It is of brick, quadrangular, 382 feet long by 198 feet in width, enclosing an open area. The White Cloth Hall was built in 1775, and is on the same plan and of nearly the same extent as the other. The markets are held on Tuesdays and Saturdays in the forenoon, and last about an hour. On the site of the old castle (which stood a siege by Stephen in 1139, saw Richard II. confined within its walls, and was taken by Fairfax from Charles I.) is a stone edifice, in the Grecian style, called Commercial Buildings. It contains a news-room 70 feet long; the other portions are devoted to business purposes as offices. Among other buildings worthy of notice may be mentioned the stock exchange, the county court, the Leeds and Yorkshire Insurance Company's offices, and the offices of the Leeds Mercury—all of these are in Albion Street. But the chief ornaments of the town are the new townhall, in Park-lane, and the new corn exchange; the former is everything that can be desired in a building intended for the due administration of justice, while the latter is singularly adapted to meet all the requirements of commerce. The increase in the population of Yorkshire rendering it desirable that assizes should be held in some other place as well as in the county town, Leeds, after a long struggle with Wakefield, obtained the preference of her Majesty's government, and the judges opened their commission here first in the summer of 1864. On that occasion the bench, the bar, suitors, jurors, and gentlemen of the public press were alike unanimous in praise of the noble building in which they met; and although subsequently on a division in the upper house of parliament, it appeared that the claims of Wakefield were considered by that august assembly to be superior to those of Leeds, it is unlikely, after the large and public-spirited outlay made by the latter town, that the assizes will again be removed from her. Upon the site formerly known as the Vicar's Croft has been erected an iron structure, used as a covered market. It is in the Gothic style, and about 300 feet long by 130 wide; the shops, 81 in number, form a double row round the exterior, one half facing into the surrounding streets, and the others opening inside; the whole is enclosed with 17 pairs of folding-gates, and altogether it is the most unique structure of its kind. In Call-lane is the new corn-exchange, of dressed stone, cased internally with coloured bricks: the building has the appearance of a Roman amphitheatre, covered in with an iron roof, having an elliptical dome 190 feet in length by 136 in width. It cost upwards of £30,000. Leeds possesses many public schools, some of which are richly endowed from the liberality of former ages, while others are supported by the voluntary subscriptions of living benefactors, who are to be found among all classes of the citizens. The free grammar school, on St. John's Hill, Woodhouse Moor, is an elegant stone building in the early decorated style of architecture, erected in 1859 from designs by E. M. Barry. It consists of two large schoolrooms, with class-rooms, library, and a residence for the head-master, capable of affording accommodation to boarders. St. John's charity school, founded rather more than a century ago, has an endowment of £400 a year. Situate in Beckett-street are the moral and industrial training schools, erected at a cost of £16,000; the building is rather plain, but occupies an elevated and commanding site, having a bold front 276 feet in length. In addition to these principal places of education there are numerous schools in connection with the churches, chapels, and mechanics' institutions, British, National, and denominational, which afford, even to the poorest classes of the community, the power of educating their children. For the relief of suffering humanity there are various charitable institutions, where the blind and deaf are cared for, the diseased comfortably nursed, and the wants of the honest poor rendered less severe. The general infirmary, supported by annual subscriptions and voluntary donations, is an extensive building, situated close to the Mixed Cloth Hall: it was commenced in 1767. There is also a house of recovery for fever patients, which was founded in 1803, when the building was erected in Vicar-lane, but the situation being found inconvenient, and the accommodation insufficient, about twenty years ago a new structure, better adapted for the charitable purpose contemplated by its founders, was built in a salubrious locality at Burmantofts, at a cost of about £7,000. This also is dependent on the bounty of annual subscribers and occasional donors.—In the number of her places of worship, as compared with her population, and in their beauty and aptitude for the great purpose for which they were erected, Leeds is now without a rival in the United Kingdom. The several sects of the Independents, Wesleyans, Baptists, Unitarians, and Presbyterians have each buildings more or less handsome in appearance, and commodious in their internal arrangements. There are meeting-houses belonging to the Society of Friends; and the Roman Catholics are not unprovided with structures in which Divine worship may be performed in "the beauty of holiness." But the grand old buildings of the Established Church deserve a more particular enumeration, and a brief account of the present work of church extension cannot be otherwise than interesting. The old parish church, which was dedicated to St. Peter, and was a massive Gothic structure of great antiquity, situate in Kirkgate, was taken down in 1838, and on the site was erected a large building, cruciform in shape, in the pointed style of the 15th century, capable of containing 3,000. Its cost, £30,000, was raised by voluntary subscription. The living is a vic., val. £1,100, in the patron. of 25 trustees. The church contains some monuments and brasses. St. John the Evangelist's Church stands in the street to which it has given its name. It was built in the middle of the 17th century, and contains the tomb of its founder, John Harrison, who was a great benefactor to the town. The living is a vic.,* val. £600, in the patron. of the vicar, mayor, and three members of the corporation. St. Paul's Church is in Park-square. It was built in 1791, at a cost of £10,000. The living is a perpet. cur., val. £130, in the patron. of the vicar. Trinity Church is in Boar-lane. The living is a perpet. cur.,* val. £300. The vicar, the recorder, and the incumbent of St. John's are the patrons. St. Philip's Church, in Wellington-street, and All Saints' Church, in Pontefract-lane, are both perpet. curs., in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately—the former val. £150 and the latter £300. Christ Church, in Meadow-lane; St. Mary, Quarry Hill; St. Luke, North-street; St. James, York-street; and St. Thomas, Melbourne-street, are all in the patron. of the incumbent of the parish church. They are but poorly endowed at present, but there are good grounds for expecting that ere long none of the existing livings in Leeds will be of less value than £300 a year. In addition to the above may be mentioned St. George's Church, Mount Pleasant, in the patron. of five trustees; St. Andrew's, in St. Andrew's-road, also in the patron. of five trustees; St. Mark's, in St. Mark's-street, Woodhouse, in the same patron. as the parish church; St. Saviour's, East-street, in the patron. of trustees; and St. Matthew's, Camp-road, to which the crown and the bishop of the diocese alternately present. Steps are being taken to provide increased church accommodation for the rapidly-increasing population. There are three public cemeteries, each containing an area of about 10 acres. One, near Woodhouse Moor, is the property of a company of shareholders, and has been open for interment for about thirty years. The others were formed ten years later at the expense of the corporation of the town—one at Hunslet and the other at Burmanstofts; and the way in which they were originally laid out and are now kept up is very creditable to the gentlemen who compose the committee of management.

LEEDS, a par. in the hund. of Eyhorne, lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, 5 miles E. of Maidstone, its post town, and 7 N.W. of Headcorn. Part of the land is in hops. The village, which is small, is situated on a branch of the river Medway, and was originally called Ledian, or Ledes. It came from Bishop Odo to the Crevecœurs—one of whom, Robert de Crepits Corde, founded a priory of Black Canons here in 1119. The abbey church is said to have been equal in magnitude and beauty to a cathedral, and the monastic buildings were of corresponding size and grandeur, but no remains now exist. The revenue of the priory at the Dissolution was £362 7*s.* 7*d.* The manor subsequently passed to the St. Legers, Colepepers, and Fairfaxes, of whom was General Fairfax. The living is a perpet. cur. with that of Broomfield annexed, in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £163, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is an ancient structure with a remarkably low square tower containing a peal of ten bells. The interior of the church contains a piscina, stone seats, and monuments of the Mereditbs, who succeeded the St. Legers in the abbey. The register dates from 1575. There is a school for both sexes. The Independents have a place of worship. Leeds Castle, one of the most stately structures in the kingdom, was the seat of the above-mentioned families. It was originally built by the Crevecœurs, much enlarged by William of Wykeham and Henry VIII., and has recently been extensively repaired. This noble structure is entirely of stone, and in many styles of architecture, having been built at different periods. The two courts are surrounded by a moat, with three round towers, gateway, drawbridge, &c. It includes a grand hall, and a suite of state apartments containing a portrait of General Fairfax. During the reign of Henry VI. Archbishop Chichele presided here at the trial of the Duchess of Gloucester, in 1440. Richard II. and Henry IV. resided here, and George III. visited it in 1778. Joan of Navarre, second queen of Henry IV., was confined in this castle for conspiracy against the life of her stepson. It is now the seat of Charles Wykeham Martin, Esq., who is lord of the manor.

LEEDS, NEW, a vil. in the par. of Bradford, West Riding co. York, 2 miles from Bradford. It is a modern place situated near the source of the river Aire, and is a suburb of Bradford. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £100, in the patron. of the vicar.

LEEDS, NEW, a vil. in the par. of Strichen, co. Aberdeen, Scotland, 4 miles N. of Deer.

LEEFAIR, a hmlt. in the par. of West Ardsley, West Riding co. York, 5 miles N.W. of Wakefield.

LEEGATE, a railway station on the Maryport and Carlisle railway, 4 miles from Wigton.

LEEGRAVE, or LIGHTGRAVE, a hmlt. in the par. of Luton, hund. of Flitt, co. Bedford, 2 miles N.W. of Luton. It is situated near Leegrave Marsh.

LEEK, a par. and market town in the N. div. of the hund. of Totmonslow, co. Stafford, 10 miles S.W. of Buxton, and 13½ S.E. of Macclesfield. The Churnet Valley section of the North Staffordshire railway has a station at Leek, and a branch line from Leek to Stoke is now in the course of construction. There is also a branch of the Trent and Mersey canal to Leek.—The town, which is situated on an eminence above the river Churnet, contains several well-built and spacious streets, which are well paved and lighted with gas. It contains a town-hall, erected in 1806 at the cost of £900, a literary and mechanics' institute, established in 1837, a savings-bank, recently erected, a penny bank, self-supporting dispensary, a police station, in Mill-street, and several friendly and other societies. The population in 1851 was 8,877, which had increased in 1861 to 10,045; in the same period the number of inhabited houses had risen from 1,759 to 2,219, showing a considerable increase in the wealth and prosperity of the town. The principal source of employment in the town is the silk manufacture in its several branches, such as sewing silk, twist, buttons, ribbons, handkerchiefs, shawls, sarcenet, mohair galloons, and broad silk. Several large establishments for twisting and doubling silk have likewise been recently erected. —A county court is held in the town monthly, and petty sessions at the court-house, West-street, every alternate Wednesday. The court-leet for the town is held in October, when the town officers for regulating the markets, &c., are appointed. Leek is the head of a Poor-law Union embracing 19 pars. and tnshps. The union workhouse is situated on the London road. There are gasworks near Leek railway station, and waterworks on the Buxton road. From the churchyard, where stands a dilapidated ancient cross, is an extensive view towards the hills in the N. and W.; one of which, called the "Cloud," is celebrated for a remarkable phenomenon connected with the summer solstice, at which time the sun, after sinking below the summit of the mountain, appears again on the northern side before finally setting, presenting the appearance of a double sunset on the same evening. At a short distance from the town are the remains of a Cistercian abbey, which at the time of the Dissolution had a revenue of £243 3*s.* 6*d.* —The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £170. The church of St. Edward the Confessor is an ancient Gothic edifice with a square tower surmounted by eight pinnacles, and containing a clock and eight bells. In addition to the parish church there are five district churches —viz. St. Luke's, erected in the town in 1846, and four churches in other parts of the parish—Endon, or Endover, Meerbrook, Onecote-cum-Bradnop, and Rushton; the livings of which are all perpet. curs., varying in val. from £170 to £120. There is also a school church at Compton, where service is regularly performed by a curate of St. Luke's church. The Wesleyans have three places of worship, and the Independents, Primitive Methodists, Methodists' New Connexion, and Roman Catholics have each one. The grammar school was founded by the Earl of Macclesfield in 1723. There are besides National schools in connection with the parish church and the district church of St. Luke's, also infant schools belonging to the Independents and Wesleyans, and a Roman Catholic school for both sexes. The parochial charities produce about £200 per annum, exclusive of the endowment of the almshouses founded in 1676 by Elizabeth Ash for eight widows, who receive a weekly allowance of 3*s.* 4*d.*, and a bequest by John Rothwell of £10 yearly, to pay six poor persons of Leek 7*d.* each weekly, and the remainder to the vicar for four sermons yearly. This last, with several other minor charities, was commuted for 18 acres of land, set apart for this purpose at the enclosure of the parish in 1805.—The principal residences in the vicinity are Highfield, Ashcombe Park, Barford Hall, Ashenhurst, Ballhaye, Hare Gate, and Westwood Hall. The Earl of Macclesfield is lord of the manor. Roman and British antiquities have been found here.—Wednesday and Saturday are market days, the latter chiefly for butchers' meat and vegetables. A cattle market is held every alternate Wednesday from 28th July to Christmas. There are nine fairs held in the course of the year, chiefly for cattle, and three cheese fairs. A statute fair for hiring servants is also held on the 13th November, and the feast on the Sunday next to 18th October. The principal pleasure fair is held on the 18th May.

LEEK FRITH, a tnshp. in the par. of Leek, N. div. of the hund. of Totmonslow, co. Stafford, 5 miles N. of Leek. It includes the chplry. of Meerbrook. The village is considerable. The charities produce £10 per annum, the produce of a bequest by John Stoddard for education.

LEEK-WOOTTON, a par. in the Kenilworth div. of the hund. of Knightlow, co. Warwick, 2 miles N. of Warwick, its post town, 4 N.W. of Leamington, and 1½ mile S. of the Kenilworth railway station. The village, which is small, is situated near the river Avon, and on the road leading from Warwick to Coventry. The hmlt. of Hill Wootton is included in this par. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The soils consist of loam, gravel, and clay. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £400. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a structure of stone, built in 1792, with a square embattled tower containing a clock and five bells. A new chancel was added in 1843, in which are several marble tablets. The E. window is of great beauty. The register dates from 1583. The parochial charities consist in a share with Bidford, besides £18 per annum, the endowment of Winter's school for both sexes. Woodcote, about a quarter of a mile from the village, is the principal residence. Lord Clarendon is lord of the manor.

LEEMAILING, a tnshp. in the par. of Bellingham, N.W. div. of Tindale ward, co. Northumberland, 1 mile N.W. of Bellingham. The township is situated on the North Tyne river. Hesleyside, the seat of the Charltons, is a white freestone mansion, with a domestic chapel attached. It is surrounded by extensive and well-wooded grounds, in which the river Tyne spreads into a lake, abounding with trout. Stone is quarried for exportation to a large extent. The chief part of the township is in heath. Lee Hall is situated near the river.

LEEMING, a hmlt. and chplry. in the par. of Burneston, wap. of Hallikeld, North Riding co. York, 1¾ mile N.E. of Bedale, its post town, and 1 S. of the Leeming Bar railway station. The village, which is small, is situated on the Roman way Ermine Street, called here Leeming Lane. It is joined to the vil. of Exelby. The petty sessions for the division are held at the Oak-tree inn. The land is nearly evenly divided between arable and pasture. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £120, in the patron. of the Vicar of Burneston. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is an edifice built of red brick, containing one bell. There is a National school. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have places of worship.

LEEMING, LITTLE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Aiskew, and par. of Bedale, North Riding co. York, 1 mile N.E. of Bedale. It is situated on a branch of the river Swale.

LEENANE, a vil. in the par. of Ross, co. Galway, Ireland, near Killeries Harbour.

LEES. See LEIGHS, co. Essex.

LEES, a tnshp. in the par. of Dalbury, hund. of Appletree, co. Derby, 5½ miles N.W. of Derby, and 6 N.E. of Burton-on-Trent. It is a joint township with Dalbury. It is situated on a branch of the river Dove.

LEES, a hmlt. in the district of Knott Lane, par. of Ashton-under-Lyne, co. Lancaster, 8½ miles N.E. of Manchester, and 2 from Ashton-under-Lyne, its post town. It is a station on the Oldham and Delph branch of the Manchester and Leeds railway. The village is situated on the road from Oldham to Huddersfield. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the neighbouring factories, which are numerous and extensive. A short distance from the village is a chalybeate spring, called Lea Spa. It is joined with Crossbank to form a chapelry. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £150. The church, dedicated to St. John, is a stone structure, erected in 1742. There are National schools. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. Fairs are held in the spring and autumn.

LEESE, a tnshp. in the par. of Sandbach, hund. of Northwich, co. Chester, 3 miles N.E. of Middlewich. It is situated near the river Dane.

LEESFIELD, a vil. and ecclesiastical district in the par. of Ashton-under-Lyne, co. Lancaster, 2 miles from Ashton-under-Lyne, and 6 E. of Manchester. It is a modern place, situated near the river Tame and the Huddersfield canal. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the cotton-mills. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £140, in the patron. of the crown and bishop. The church is a modern edifice.

LEESTHORPE, a hmlt. in the par. of Pickwell, hund. of Gartree, co. Leicester, 4 miles S.E. of Melton Mowbray.

LEESWOOD, a hmlt. in the par. of Mold, co. Flint, 2 miles S.E. of Mold. It comprises Llong, and Pontblyddyn, formerly a seat of the Wynnes.

LEET, a river of co. Berwick, Scotland. It rises near Whitsome, and, after a course of 10 miles, joins the Tweed at Coldstream.

LEE TOWN, a vil. in the par. of Errol, co. Perth, Scotland, 6 miles E. of Perth.

LEE-WARD, a tnshp. in the par. of Rothbury, W. div. of the ward of Coquetdale, co. Northumberland, 3 miles S.E. of Rothbury. The soil is sandy, upon a subsoil of gravel. A large portion of the township is unenclosed moorland. The village consists of a few farmhouses. The Duke of Northumberland is lord of the manor. There is a school with an annuity of £5.

LEE WHITE, a hmlt. in the par. of Batley, West Riding co. York, 2 miles N.E. of Dewsbury. Some of the inhabitants are employed in the woollen and carpet manufactures.

LEFTWICH, a tnshp. in the par. of Davenham, hund. of Northwich, co. Chester, 2 miles S. of Northwich. It contains the Northwich union poorhouse. The village, which is considerable, is situated near the river Dane and the Grand Junction railway.

LEGBOURNE, a par. in the Marsh div. of the hund. of Calceworth, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 3 miles S.E. of Louth, its post town, and 10 from Alford. It is a station on the East Lincolnshire railway. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. The soil is clayey, producing good crops of wheat and beans. The surface is level, but well wooded. The tithes were commuted for land and money payments under an Enclosure Act in 1780. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £300. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has a square tower containing three bells. The register dates from 1711. The Wesleyans, Primitive and Free Methodists, have each a place of worship. The Abbey is a modern mansion, situated on the site of a Cistercian nunnery founded prior to the reign of King John by Robert Fitz-Gilbert. John Lewis Fychte, Esq., is lord of the manor.

LEGERWOOD, a par. in the co. Berwick, Scotland, 4 miles S.E. of Lauder, and the same distance N.E. of its post town, Earlston. It extends 3 miles in length by 2½ broad. The surface is hilly, and at Boon Hill attains a height of 1,090 feet above sea-level. It is well cultivated, and is adapted in general both for crops and pasture. The chief streams are the Leader water and the Blythe water, or Boon-dreigh. The par. is in the presb. of Lauder, and synod of Merse and Teviotdale. The minister's stipend is £228. The church is an ancient structure. At Morriston, Crosbie, and Whitslade, there are peel-houses. Birkhillside, situated on the Leader, is the only mansion here.

LEGNASHINNA, the source of the Shannon, under Tiltinbane Mountain, co. Cavan, Ireland, 5 miles S.W. of Upper Lough Macnean.

LEGSBY, a par. in the W. div. of the hund. of Wraggoe, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 3½ miles S.E. of Market-Rasen, its post town, 4 N. of Wragby, and 3 E. of the Wickenby railway station. The par., which is chiefly agricultural, contains the hmlts. of Bleasby and Collow. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £156. The church, dedicated to St. Thomas the Apostle, is a plain structure, without tower or steeple. The charities consist of £15 per annum bequeathed by Sir J. Nelthorpe in 1669 for an afternoon sermon. The Wesleyans and Reformed Wesleyans have each a chapel. Sir John Nelthorpe, Bart., is lord of the manor.

LEHERN, an extensive bog of 10,000 acres in the bar. of Dunmore, co. Galway, Ireland.

LEHINCH, a vil. on the bay of Liscanor, in the bar. of Corcomroe, co. Clare, Ireland, 3 miles W. of Ennistimon. It is frequented in summer by visitors for sea-bathing.

LEICESTER, an inland co. of England, bounded on the N. by Nottinghamshire, on the N.E. by Lincolnshire, on the E. by Rutlandshire, on the S.E. by Northamptonshire, on the S.W. by Warwickshire, and on the N.W. by Derbyshire. Its greatest length, from near Normanton on the N.E. to the neighbourhood of Lutterworth in the S.E., is about 44 miles; and its greatest breadth, from Ashby-de-la-Zouch to Rockingham, 40 miles. Its shape is irregular, approximating to the rhomboidal. The circumference measures 165 miles, while the area contains 806 square miles, or 514,164 acres. It is included between 52° 24′ and 52° 59′ N. lat., and between 0° 39′ and 1° 37′ W. long. In Domesday Book the county is mentioned as Ledecestrescire, a name of Saxon origin. At the time of the Roman invasion, this region was occupied by the Coritani, and, when conquered by the former people, was included in their province of Flavia Cæsariensis; and the following stations were founded by them:—Ratæ, at Leicester; Vermometum, near Willoughby; Benonæ, at High Cross, on the Warwickshire border; Tripontium, at Catthorpe, near Lutterworth; and Manduessedum, at Mancetter. Remains of their camps have been discovered at Lubbenham, Dowbridge, Barrow, Hallaton, Ratby, Knaptoft, and Kibworth. There are also traces of Roman buildings at Wanlip, Rothley, and Market Harborough.—Ratæ was the point of intersection of two roads—the Via Devana, or Chester Road, which enters the county near Medbourn, and passes Leicester and Ashby-de-la-Zouch on its way westward; and the Fosse Way, which crosses Watling Street at High Cross, and runs across the county in the direction of N.E. by N., leaving it near Six Hills. Watling Street is the common boundary of Leicestershire and Warwickshire. The Salt Way, which went from Grantham to Charnwood Forest, passing Croxton, Kerrial, and Six Hills, was perhaps a British road.—During the Heptarchy, Leicestershire formed part of the kingdom of Mercia, but in 880 was ceded by Alfred to the Danish king Guthrun, and was included in the Danelagh until recovered by Ethelfleda during the reign of Edward the Elder. At the Norman Conquest it was, like other counties, parcelled out among the adherents of the new king, who erected several castles to guard against rebellion. Of these but few remain. The principal ones were situated at Leicester, Mountsorrel, Shilton, Whitwich, Groby, Hinckley, Donington, Melton Mowbray, Ravenstone, Sauvey, and Thorpe. The county was the scene of several battles after the accession of William II. (as is mentioned in the article LEICESTER), and again during the barons' war in the reigns of John and Henry III. At the close of the 14th century Leicestershire was noted as being the centre from which the sect of the Wickliffites promulgated their new doctrine. In 1485 the wars of the Roses were terminated by the victory of the Duke of Richmond over Richard III. between Market Bosworth and Dadlington. In the Civil War, the people of Leicestershire chiefly adopted the side of the parliament; but the royalists were in possession of Belvoir Castle, and thence made several expeditions, with varying success. In May, 1645, Charles I. stormed Leicester, but it was soon after retaken; and in November of the same year both Belvoir and Ashby-de-la-Zouch were lost to the royal cause.—Leicestershire is principally table land, and may be divided into the two vales of the Soar and Wreak. The surface is moderately hilly, but none of the hills attain to any great height. The highest is Bardon Hill, in Charnwood Forest, which is 853 feet above the sea-level, but not more than 250 feet above the neighbouring country, which is very irregular and rugged. Beacon Hill is also in the forest, but on the eastern side, while Bardon is on the W. Other hills in the same district are Breedon and Cloud hills, and Ashby-on-the-Wolds. Another range passes through the portion of Derbyshire which enters Leicestershire, terminating in a fork, the extremities of which are at Orton and Twycross. In the S.W. the highest localities are Enderby, Hinckley, Croft, and Higham; and in the S., Saddington and Gumley. Blaby Hill also, on the Fosseway, is a considerable eminence. In the E. there are Whadborough and Tilton hills, which are almost united; and a little further N., Burrow Hill. In the N.E. portion of the county there is a straight range of hills, parallel to the Nottinghamshire border, which runs from near Long Clawson, past Stathern, terminating in the hill on which Belvoir Castle is erected.—The largest rivers in Leicestershire are the Soar, the Wreke, the Welland, the Avon, the Swift, and the Anker. The Trent forms the N.W. boundary of the county from Castle Donington to where it receives the Soar. This river rises in Warwickshire, though not more than half a mile from the boundary, and flows in a north-westerly direction, receiving, near Blaby, Billesdon brook and some other minor streams. It then passes Leicester, Wanlip, Mount Sorrel, Barrow-upon-Soar, and Loughborough. At Stanford it divides the county from Nottinghamshire, until it falls into the Trent. It is navigable from that point to Loughborough, whence a canal proceeds to Leicester. The length of the Soar is about 40 miles. The Wreke rises near Goadby Marwood, flows S. to Melton Mowbray, then westward past Asfordby, Frisby, Hoby, and Ratcliff, joining the Soar near Thurmaston. The river Eye, which rises in Rutlandshire, is more properly a continuation of the Wreke than the stream which it joins at Mowbray. Its channel is partly used as a canal. The total length is 25 miles. The Welland forms the S.W. boundary of the county from Husband's Bosworth to Rockingham, a distance of about 17 miles. It is there joined by the Eye brook, which divides Leicestershire from Rutland. The Avon, a tributary of the Severn, also divides Leicestershire from Northamptonshire, from Welford to Catthorpe, about 8 miles. The Swift, which rises near Gilmorton, and passes near Lutterworth, joins it after its entrance into Warwickshire. The Anker, a tributary of the Tame, divides the county from Warwickshire for a distance of 3 or 4 miles, from Mancetter to Pinwall Grange. Its tributary, the Sence, formed by streams rising near Bosworth Field, Ibstock, and Normanton Heath, joins the Anker near Radcliffe Culey. The Devon has two sources, at Eastwell and Croxton. It flows through Woolsthorpe, Muston, and Bottesford, to unite with the Trent at Newark. The Mease rises at Blackfordby, on the Ashby Woulds, and, flowing through the portion of Derbyshire which protrudes into Leicestershire, leaves that county near Nether Seal. The Smite has sources at Nether Broughton, Howes, and Long Clawson, and waters the Vale of Belvoir. It finally joins the Devon at Shilton, in Nottinghamshire.—The climate of Leicestershire is mild, and not too moist, owing to the absence of large rivers, and of high hills to break and catch the clouds. As to the geological formation, Leicestershire may be divided into two portions by a line from Claybrook to Broughton. Of the eastern division the N. part is occupied by oolite, and the remainder by lias, but red sandstone, of which Belvoir Castle is built, occurs from Grimston to Ab Kettleby, Wymondham, and Edmundthorpe. The vale of the Soar, and the western part of the county generally, is formed of red marl or sandstone, with the exception of Charnwood Forest, the hills of which consist of transition slate and syenite, affording valuable quarries at Swithland and other places. There are large coal-fields on the N.E. and S.W. of Ashby-de-la-Zouch. At Osgathorpe there is an isolated quarry of limestone; and the rocks at Mount Sorrel and Quorndon abound in felspar and quartz, as well as granite, which is used for the London pavements. Gypsum is quarried near Leicester, and limestone for cement at Barrow-upon-Soar. The Whittle Hill, near Loughborough, supplies hones of a superior quality. There are mineral springs at Moira and Ivanhoe, near Ashby, and at Dalby, Gumley, Hinckley, Shearesby, Holt, and Burton Lazars. The soil is principally strong and stiff, and composed of clay and marl.—Fully half of the county is permanently kept in pasture, but barley, oats, turnips, and especially beans, are grown to a considerable extent. Wheat is also cultivated in the sandstone district. Woods and uncultivated ground occupy but a very small proportion of the area. Both the horned cattle and sheep of Leicester are deservedly famous, and owe much of their present excellence to the perseverance of Mr. Bakewell, of Dishley, who lived at the close of the last century. The long-horned cattle are of a red colour, short in the leg, and fatten easily. The old short-horns are, however, still extensively bred. The sheep are large and long-woolled. In Charnwood Forest there is an inferior breed known as forest sheep. A large number of horses are bred in the county, as well for the cart as hunters and carriage-horses. The western portion of the county is celebrated as the chief hunting country in England. Dairy farms are numerous, especially about Melton Mowbray, Bosworth, and Hinckley; and the eastern part of the county is famous for its cheese. The village of Withcote, near Melton, is the place where Stilton was first manufactured.—Leicestershire is divided into North Leicestershire and South Leicestershire. The former division contains the hundreds of East Goscote, West Goscote, and Framland; the latter those of Gartree, Guthlaxton, and Sparkenhoe. Four hundreds only are mentioned in the Norman Survey. The county contains 207 parishes., with parts of 7 others, and 26 extra parochial places, and about 560 villages and hamlets. The market towns are Leicester, the county town, Ashby-de-la-Zouch, Market Bosworth, Market Harborough, Hinckley, Loughborough, Lutterworth, Melton Mowbray, and Mount Sorrel. These towns, with the exception of Mount Sorrel, are new County Court districts; and the same places, with Bedworth, Barrow, Billesdon, and Blaby, are the seats of registries and Poor-law Unions. Each division returns two members to the House of Commons. For the N. division Leicester is the election town, and Ashby-de-la-Zouch, Castle Donington, and Melton Mowbray, the polling places. For the S. division Loughborough is the election town, and the polling places are fixed at Market Bosworth, Market Harborough, Hinckley, and Lutterworth. Two members are also returned for the borough of Leicester. The county is governed by a lord-lieutenant, the Duke of Rutland, about 20 deputy-lieutenants, and 230 magistrates. It is included in the North-Eastern military district, and in the Midland circuit. The assizes and quarter sessions are held at Leicester. The population in 1861 was 237,412. The county constitutes the archdeaconry of Leicester, in the diocese of Peterborough, province of Canterbury, and is divided into the rural deaneries of Akeley, Framland, Gartree, Goscote, Guthlaxton, and Sparkenhoe.—In the extent of its manufactures Leicestershire is only surpassed by five other counties. The chief articles of manufacture are woollen and cotton stockings, which are made principally at Leicester, Lutterworth, Hinckley, Loughborough, Shepeshead, and Seleby. Lace is also manufactured at the two first-mentioned towns. Market Harborough possesses worsted and carpet mills. Other articles, which are less extensively manufactured, are gloves, needles, pottery, fire-brick, and agricultural implements. There are also some iron foundries.—Of the antiquities in this county, the Roman roads and stations have already been mentioned, but besides these there are tumuli of Roman or British erection at Shipley, Syston, Gilmarton, and Medbourne. A little to the S. of Leicester there are two parallel embankments, known as the "Raw Dykes," extending for rather more than a quarter of a mile, and about 16 yards apart. It has been supposed that they formed a British racecourse, but the fact is not certain. There are remains of abbeys at Leicester, Garendon, Croxton, and Owston, and of nunneries at Gracedieu and Ulvercroft. The church at Lutterworth is interesting, as possessing the pulpit from which Wickliffe preached. The churches of Hormingshold, Hallaton, and Melton Mowbray, are also of great antiquity, as is that of Bottesworth, where are the tombs of several of the Manners family. The only ancient castles of which any remains exist are those at Ashby; Kirkby Muxloe, which belonged to the Hastings family; Bradgate, where Lady Jane Grey was born; Donington, formerly the property of the Despencers; and Groby. Frisby and Hallaton possess old market crosses.—The chief seats of the nobility and gentry are —Belvoir Castle, the Duke of Rutland; Donington, Marquis of Hastings; Stapleford, Earl Harborough; Staunton Harold, Earl Ferrers; Melton Mowbray, Earl Wilton; Sysonby, Earl Bessborough; Bradgate, Earl Stamford; Gopsall, Earl Howe; Buckminster, Lord Huntingtower; Market Bosworth, Dixie, Bart.; Carlton Curlieu, Palmer, Bart.; Colcorton, Beaumont, Bart.; Great Glen, Robinson, Bart.; Kirkby Belers, Burdett, Bart.; Noseley, Haselrigge, Bart.; Lowesby, Fowke, Bart.; Skeffington, Skeffington, Bart.; Rocelliffe, Heygate, Bart.; Wanlip, Palmer, Bart.; Wistow, Halford, Bart.; Austey, Martin; Barkby, Pochin; Beaumanor, Herrick; Husband's Bosworth, Turville; Braunston, Winstanley; Brooksby, Wyndham; Burleigh, Tate; Burton, Mundy; Little Dalby, Hartop; Enderby, Smith; Evington, Colmar; Gaddesby, Chency; Garendon, Phillips; Kirby Frith, Pares; Langley Priory, Cheslyn; Laund Abbey, Dawson; Lindley, Heming; Lodington, Humfrey; Misterton, Franks; Nether Seal, Gresley; East Norton, Heycock; The Oaks, Grundy; Osbaston, Cope; Overton, Turner; Prestwould, Packe; Quenby, Ashby; Quorndon, Farnham; Ravenstone, Creswell; Rollestone, Greeve; Rothley Temple, Babington; Shenton, Wollaston; Stoughton, Keck; Withcote, Palm; and Whaplode, Boulton.—The chief line of railway in Leicestershire is the Midland, which enters the county to the W. of Lutterworth, and passes Leicester, Syston, Barrow-upon-Soar, Loughborough, and Normanton, on its way to the N. A branch line from Rugby to Peterborough passes along the south-eastern border, and has a station at Market Harborough, whence there is another line joining the main line about 3 miles S. of Leicester. The Leicester and Swannington line passes through Kirkby Muxloe, Swannington, and Ashby-de-la-Zouch, on its way to Burton-upon-Trent. The Syston and Peterborough leaves the main line at the former place, and, after passing Frisby and Melton Mowbray, turns southward through Rutlandshire, and unites with the Rugby and Peterborough line at North Luffenham. The line between Nottingham and Grantham passes through the projecting north-eastern corner of the county. The canals are—the Leicestershire navigation, from Loughborough to Leicester, which is partly artificial, and partly the river Soar; the Leicester and Melton Mowbray, which joins the above near Syston, and follows the course of the Wreke (from Melton it runs to Oakham under the name of the Oakham canal); the Leicestershire and Northamptonshire Union, from Aylstone to Foxtone, whence there is a cut to Market Harborough, while the main canal continues southward, past Husband's Bosworth, under the name of the Grand Union canal; and the Ashby-de-la-Zouch canal, from the Ashby and Moira collieries to near Nuneaton. There is also a small canal, which crosses Charnwood Forest. The roads and distances from Leicester are—to Syston, 5 miles; Melton Mowbray, 15 miles; Oakham, 25 miles; Croxton Park, 21 miles; Belvoir, 25 miles; and Grantham, 31 miles: to Kibworth Harcourt, 8 miles; Market Harborough, 14 miles; and to Northampton, 29 miles: to Blaby, 4 miles; Lutterworth, 13 miles; and Rugby, 21 miles: to Leicester Forest, 5 miles; Hinckley, 12 miles; Market Bosworth, 12 miles; and Gopsall, 16 miles: to Bradgate Park, 5 miles; Bardon Hill, 10 miles; Ashby, 17 miles; and Burton, 25 miles: to Mount Sorrel, 7 miles; Nottingham, 15 miles; Loughborough, 12 miles; Kegworth, 18 miles; Castle Donington, 20 miles; and Derby, 28 miles.

LEICESTER, the county town of Leicestershire, a municipal and parliamentary borough, with separate jurisdiction, a market and assize town, and the seat of a Poor-law Union, is situated in Guthlaxton and Gartree hunds., in 52° 38′ N. lat., and 1° 8′ W. long. It is distant from London 97 miles by road, and 102¾ by the Midland railway. The town stands on the E. bank of the river Soar, and is surrounded by meadow land and spacious parks. Leicester has existed as a town from the earliest periods of English history. By the Britons the place was called Caer Loidcot, and is said to have been founded by King Lear, about 800 B.C. At the time of the Roman invasion it was the capital of the tribe Coritani, but was taken from them by the Romans, and used as a station on the Via Devana and the Fosse Way, both of which pass it. Many relics of Roman occupation, as tesselated pavement, coins, arms, &c., have been discovered in the town, and about 2 miles to the N. of it, on the Fosse Way, a curious cylindrical milestone of the time of Adrian was dug up. This has now been fixed on a pedestal at the Belgrave Gate. Foundations have also been discovered near St. Nicholas church, which are supposed to have belonged to a temple of Janus. The Latin name of the town was Ratæ. Under the Saxon rule Leicester at first belonged to Mercia, under the name of Legraceaster, and was made a bishopric in 680, but was subsequently annexed to Northumbria by Ethelfrith. In 886 it was taken by the Danes, and occupied by them at intervals till the reign of Edmund Ironsides, who finally drove them from this part of the country in 1016. During the tenth and eleventh centuries the town increased rapidly. A mint was instituted by Athelstan, and continued in operation till the reign of Henry II. Domesday Book mentions it as Ledecester, stating that it possessed six churches, and was held by Hugh de Grentemaisnel. The castle was made part of the royal demesne, and considerably strengthened by William I. At his death the Grentemaisnels held the castle for his son Robert, but were attacked by William II., who destroyed the fortifications, which were rebuilt by Henry I., and after passing successively through the hands of Robert de Bellomonte, first Earl of Leicester, Robert de Bossu, founder of St. Mary's Abbey, 1143, the Montfort family, and John of Gaunt, the old castle was taken down in 1633 to repair the castle house. The Lancastrian princes frequently used Leicester as a royal residence, and parliaments were held there in 1414, 1426, and 1450. The army of Richard III. were quartered here previous to the battle of Bosworth. The king slept at the "Blue Boar Inn," and the bedstead which he used is still preserved at Rotheley Temple. The abbey of St. Mary de Pratis, mentioned above, is celebrated as the place of Cardinal Wolsey's death, but it is now merely a heap of ruins. Charles I. stormed the town in 1645, but it was taken again by Fairfax the same year. —The principal streets of the town are wide and well-paved, and both the dwelling-houses and shops are of modern building, and chiefly constructed of red brick.

The length from N. to S. is about a mile, but the town is gradually extending in all directions. Water is brought from springs at Thornton by the Leicester Water Company, and a considerable quantity is also afforded by a conduit in the market-place, and by wells in different parts of the town. The streets are lighted with gas manufactured by a company. At the S.E. side of the town there is a promenade called the New Walk, consisting of an avenue of trees. Both sides of the walk are lined by well-built villas. The townhall was built in the reign of Elizabeth, and opened by a dinner to celebrate the victory over the Spanish Armada. The principal room is about 80 feet in length. The assizes are held in the assembly rooms, one of the handsomest buildings in Leicester, which was originally built for an hotel, but purchased by the county and altered to serve its present purpose. The town library, founded in 1632, adjoins the Guildhall. It contains about 1,000 volumes, mostly of old divinity. The public library and newsroom is an Ionic building, erected by Mr. Flint in 1838. The town museum is situated in New Walk, and contains a collection of antiquities and other objects of curiosity. The literary and philosophical society have placed their collection there. There is also a mechanics' institute, possessing an extensive library. The theatre was built in 1837, and is a handsome building both externally and internally. The temperance hall is also a fine room. The exchange is a plain brick building in the market-place. The new county gaol and house of correction are at the S. side of the town, and the town gaol in Highcross-street. There is a bath-room in the New Walk, comprising plunge, vapour, shower-baths, &c., of the most perfect arrangement. There are five banks in Leicester, including a branch of the National Provincial Bank of England, in addition to a savings-bank.—Leicester is noted for its stocking manufacture, both woollen and cotton, which is inferior in extent only to that of Nottingham. Lace, cotton, and woollen thread, gloves, and rope are also largely manufactured.—The first charter of incorporation was granted to the town by King John, and extended by other sovereigns, the last grant being in the forty-first year of Elizabeth. It is now divided into seven wards, and governed by a mayor, fourteen aldermen, and forty-two councillors, with the style of the "mayor, bailiffs, and burgesses of the borough of Leicester." Since the reign of Edward I., the borough has returned two members to parliament. The mayor is the returning officer. The mayor and his predecessor hold commissions of the peace in conjunction with about twenty borough magistrates. The corporate revenue is about £22,700. The population, according to the census of 1861, was 68,056, against 60,584 in 1851, giving an increase of 7,472. The Poor-law Union is co-extensive with the borough, and contains 3,960 acres. The headquarters of the militia are fixed here. The earldom of Leicester is now held by the Coke family. It was previously possessed by Robert Dudley in the time of Queen Elizabeth, having belonged to various families since the Norman period. The manor is the property of the duchy of Lancaster.—Leicester is divided into the following parishes:—All Saints, St. Leonard with Abbey and Woodgate, St. Martin, St. Mary, St. Nicholas, St. Margaret with Bishop's Fee, and the liberties of Blackfriars, Newark, and Whitefriars. All Saints' is a vic.,* val. £70, pat. the lord chancellor. The church is small, with a low tower. The chancel is modern, the rest being early English. The font is remarkable for its age and curious design. St. Leonard's is a vic., val. £50, in the patron. of the lord chancellor, but the church was destroyed in the Civil War, and was never rebuilt. The churchyard is, however, still used. St. Margaret's is a vic.,* val. £380, including the cur. of Knighton, in the patron. of the prebend of Lincoln. The church, which possesses a tower built in 1444, is stated by Leland to have been formerly a cathedral. It is a mixture of the English and perpendicular styles. St. Martin, or St. Crosse, is also a vic., val. £148. The church is cruciform, with a central tower supported on four arches, and is the largest in the town. The archdeacon's courts are held here, and the judges of assize attend Divine service here. The Puritans made use of it as a barrack during the Civil War. St. Mary's is a vic.,* val. £221. The church was built in 1353, on the site of a more ancient one, an aisle being added by John of Gaunt. Three Norman stalls still remain. The tower has been three times struck by lightning, and the present one was erected 1783, on the model of the one destroyed at that time. St. Nicholas is a vic.,* val. £150. This is the most ancient church in the town, and the tower is supposed to be Saxon. It is partly built of the remains of a Roman temple, a portion of which, called the Jewry Wall, adjoins the church. The last three vics. are all in the patron. of the lord chancellor. St. George's is a perpet. cur. in the par. of St. Margaret, in the patron. of the Prebend of Lincoln, val. £300. The church was built in 1826, and has 1,800 sittings. Trinity Church was built in 1838 by F. Turner, Esq. The living is a perpet. cur., val. £550. Christchurch, in Bow-street, was built by subscription, and is placed under the patron. of trustees. St. John's district church was built in 1854, by grants from various funds. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the patron. of the Bishop of Peterborough. There are also ten chapels belonging to the Baptists, three to the Independents, two to the Wesleyans, three to the Primitive Methodists, one to the Unitarians, one to the Latter-day Saints, and one to the Roman Catholics, and a Friends' meeting-house. Leicester archdeaconry, in Peterborough diocese, contains the deaneries of Ackley, Christianity, or Leicester (the town parishes only), Framland, Gartree, Goscote, Guthlaxton, and Sparkenhoe; the benefices numbering about 200. There were formerly religious houses belonging to the Austin, Black, and Grey Friars, and the Friars de Pœnitentia. Cardinal Wolsey died at the Augustine abbey of St. Mary de Pratis, founded in 1143, and partly endowed by the lands of a more ancient collegiate church. A hospital in honour of the Virgin was founded in 1330 by Henry Duke of Lancaster, and converted into a college by his son. The town gaol was built by the corporation on a portion of the land belonging to it, and on the remainder the Trinity Hospital, for 90 inmates. The cemetery stands on a hill to the S. of the town. Its extent is about 25 acres. Most of the churches and chapels have Sunday-schools in connection with them, the total number exceeding 30. There are also two National and several other day schools. The collegiate school, in Prebend-street, affords a good commercial and classical education, and is in connection with the Established Church, the Bishop of Peterborough being visitor. There is also a Dissenting school of a similar character. Both are sufficiently large for 300 boys. Alderman Newton's green-coat school was founded in 1762 for the education of 35 boys, but the number has since been increased to 100. The free grammar school, which was open to all sons of burgesses, has been disused since 1836, in consequence of the stoppage of an annual grant from the corporation. St. Martin's charity school was built in 1791; and St. Mary's, at which 80 boys and 40 girls are brought up, was erected by subscription at a later period. The female asylum, in Newark liberty, is an industrial school for from ten to sixteen girls between the ages of thirteen and fifteen, who are entirely supported for three years. The school is maintained by subscriptions, and by the sale of the children's work. A school of design has been established in the town within the last few years by the council. Trinity Hospital, mentioned above, is the principal charity in the town. Other hospitals are Wigston's hospital, founded in 1513, for twelve old men and twelve old women, all of whom must be unmarried; St. John's hospital, for six widows; Bent's, for five; Simons', for six single women; and the Spittal House. There are also three almshouses: Johnson's Consanguinitarium, founded by John Johnson, a native of Leicester and an architect, for five of his relatives; Miss Mason's, in Vauxhall-street, founded in 1833, for four women, each of whom receives 4*s.* weekly; and the Cock Muckhill almshouses. Leicester also possesses a lunatic asylum, an infirmary, and a union poorhouse. The following gentlemen's seats are in the vicinity of the town. Leicester Frith House; Leicester Grange; Evington Hall, H. Colmar, Esq.; Braimston, C. Winstanley, Esq.; and Westcotes, T. Freer, Esq. The local history has been published by Thursby, clerk of one of the parishes. The newspapers published are the Leicester Chronicle, the Leicester Journal, the Leicestershire Mercury, the Leicester Guardian, and Payne's Advertiser.—Markets are held as follows: on Wednesday fat cattle and vegetables, Tuesday and Thursday vegetables, and on Saturday a general market. Fairs for horses, cattle, and sheep are held as follows: 4th January, 2nd March, the Saturdays before and after Easter, 12th to 15th May, 1st June (for wool), 5th July, 1st August, 13th September, 10th to 13th October (for cheese), and 8th December. The races are held in September, on an oval course of 1 mile 60 yards.

LEICESTER ABBEY, an ext. par. place in the hund. of West Goscote, co. Leicester, 1 mile N. of Leicester. It is situated on the river Soar.

LEICESTER-FOREST, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Sparkenhoe, co. Leicester, 2 miles N. of Leicester.

LEICESTER FRITH, or SHERMAN'S GROUNDS, an ext. par. place in the hund. of West Goscote, co. Leicester.

LEIGH, a chplry. in the par. and hund. of Yetminster, Sherborne div. of co. Dorset, 6½ miles S.W. of Sherborne, its post town. The inhabitants are wholly employed in agriculture. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £61, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. The charities produce about £22 per annum.

LEIGH, a par. in the hund. of Rochford, co. Essex, 5 miles S.W. of Rochford, its post town, and 4 W. of Southend. It is a station on the London, Tilbury, and Southend railway, and has a small port on the Thames, opposite Canvey Point. The par., which is traversed by the road from Southend to Tilbury, includes an island called Leigh Marsh. About a mile from Crowstone, which marks the boundary of the port of London, is a small customhouse, and vessels of 180 tons come up with coal to the quay. Between Leigh Middle Ground and the Nore Sand, which is 2 miles in length, is Leigh Road, an anchorage with four fathoms water. The town of Leigh is situated on a creek which forms part of the river Thames at high tide. It consists chiefly of one street. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the coasting trade, and in the oyster and shrimp fisheries, which employ above 100 boats. The oysters are brought here from distant coasts to improve, the Leigh shore being admirably adapted for that purpose. Roman coins were found in a cliff near the town in 1864. A great portion of the land is marsh, the rest arable and pasture. The surface rises gradually from the river to a considerable elevation, commanding views of the surrounding country. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £284, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Clement, is situated on rising ground behind the town, and commands a view of the river Thames. It is of ancient construction, with a lofty ivy-covered tower containing six bells. In the interior are two painted windows, numerous stalls of carved oak, and several brasses. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. There are National and infant schools. A fair is held on the second Tuesday in May.

LEIGH, a par. and market town in the hund. of West Derby, co. Lancaster, 7 miles S. of Bolton, 15 from Manchester, and 193¼ from London. It has two stations —one at Leigh, the other at Atherton, on the Bolton and Kenyon branch of the London and North-Western railway. The parish is situated in the S. parliamentary division of the county, and is intersected by the Wigan and Leigh branch of the Leeds and Bridgwater canal. It is of large extent, comprising the tnshps. of Astley, Atherton, Bedford, Pennington, and West Leigh, which two last form the town of Leigh. The growth of this town has been extremely rapid, the population having more than doubled in the decennial period from 1851 to 1861—at the former census the inhabitants were returned at 5,206, and at the latter at 10,621. The streets are regularly laid out, and most of the houses of recent erection. The town is well paved, and lighted with gas. The principal public institutions are the townhall, erected in 1840; union poorhouse; offices of the Warrington division of the county constabulary, which has its head-quarters here; a mechanics' institute, with library containing 1,200 volumes, established in 1842; a branch bank; market-place; new cemetery, opened in October, 1856, for the rest of the parish, except the township of Atherton, which has a cemetery of its own, formed in 1857. There are also extensive silk and cotton factories, maltings, corn-mills, a brewery, and iron foundries; and, in the adjoining township of Atherton, establishments for the manufacture of nails and bolts. One weekly newspaper, the Leigh Chronicle, is published in the town on Saturday. In the vicinity of the town are collieries, stone quarries, and brickfields. The soil is clayey, on a subsoil of sandstone. The chief crops are wheat, oats, potatoes, and in the township of Atherton grass and vegetables. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £263. The parish church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient stone structure, with a tower and two mortuary chapels attached. There is also a chapel-of-ease at West Leigh, erected in 1855. There are district churches at Astley, Atherton, Bedford, and Pennington, the livings of all which are perpet. curs., varying in val. from £100 to £250. The church of St. Stephen, at Astley, is a brick building with a square embattled tower containing one bell, and was restored in 1852. The church of St. John, at Atherton, was erected in 1810, and has a tower containing a clock and one bell. The church of St. Thomas, at Bedford, is a new brick building with a tower. The church called Christ Church, at Pennington, is of stone, erected in 1854. There are places of worship belonging to Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, Independents, Baptists, and Unitarians; also a Roman Catholic church in the suburban township of Bedford, erected in 1855 at the cost of £4,000. The free grammar school is situated in the township of Astley. There are besides several National, Sunday, and infant schools, in connection with the several district churches. Leigh is the head of a Poor-law Union embracing the above-mentioned tnshps., with the tnshps. of Culcheth, Golborne, Kenyon, and Lawton, in the adjoining par. of Winwick. The board of guardians meet every Thursday at the union workhouse. It is also the head of superintendent registry and new County Court districts—the latter is held monthly at the townhall. Petty sessions are held on alternate Mondays at Leigh and Atherton, both in this parish. Lord Lilford is lord of the manors of Leigh and Atherton; Malcolm Nugent Ross, Esq., of the manor of Astley; and the Earl of Ellesmere, of Bedford. Saturday is market day. Fairs are held at Leigh on the 24th and 25th April for cattle and live stock, on the 7th and 8th December for pedlery and pleasure, and at Atherton on the last Thursday in March for cattle, and pleasure fairs on the 29th June and 24th August.

LEIGH, a par. in the lower divs. of the hunds. of Deerhurst and Westminster, co. Gloucester, 5 miles N.W. of Cheltenham, its post town, and 4½ S. of Tewkesbury. It is a small agricultural vil., situated in the vale of Gloucester, near the river Severn and the Comb canal. The par. is intersected by the road leading from Gloucester to Tewkesbury. It comprises the hmlt. of Evington. The surface is level, and richly wooded with oak and elm. A considerable part of the land is in pasture and meadow, and is occasionally inundated by the overflow of the rivers. The soil is a blue clay, but very productive. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £247, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. James, is a neat structure with an embattled tower containing five bells. The parochial charities produce about £52 per annum, chiefly the produce of the church lands, &c. There is a mixed school under the British and Foreign School Society. The Dean and Chapter of Westminster are lords of the manor.

LEIGH, or LYE, a par. in the hunds. of Codsheath and Somerden, lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, co. Kent, 4 miles W. of Tonbridge, its post town, and 6 S. of Sevenoaks. There is a mineral spring possessing properties similar to those of Tunbridge Wells. The parish is intersected by the South-Eastern railway, which here passes through a deep cutting. The river Medway flows through the parish. The village, which is still considerable, though not of so much importance as formerly, is situated on the road from London to Penshurst. The surface is well wooded, and about 150 acres are in hops, and about 70 orchard grounds. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £555, and the vicarial for £510 15*s*. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £373. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has recently been thoroughly restored, with the addition of a tower. It is of ancient construction, and had formerly a chantry, which was suppressed by Edward VI. The charities produce about £91 8*s*. per annum. There is a National school. Hall Place, the principal residence, is a mansion situated in an extensive park abounding with deer. Thomas Farmer Baily, Esq., is lord of the manor.

LEIGH, a par. in the S. div. of the hund. of Totmonslow, co. Stafford, 5 miles N.W. of Uttoxeter, and 12 N.E. of Stafford. Cheadle is its post town. It is a station on the Crewe, Stoke, and Uttoxeter branch of the North Staffordshire railway. The parish, which is very extensive, is situated on the banks of the river Blithe. It contains the tnshps. of Field with Church Leigh, Upper and Lower Leigh, and six other hmlts. The soil is a stiff clay, and a large portion of the land is in pasture. The inhabitants are chiefly supported by agriculture. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £688 15*s*. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £748. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a cruciform structure with a square embattled tower, rising from the centre, and containing five bells. The church, with the exception of its tower, was rebuilt in 1846, at an expense of £6,272, defrayed by public contribution. The interior is decorated with richly-stained windows and grained stone ceiling, &c. The S. transept contains an altar-tomb to Sir John and Lady Ashton, with their recumbent effigies, bearing date 1523. The parochial charities produce about £154 per annum, of which £67 goes to Spencer's free school, founded in 1620. There is a National school for girls.

LEIGH, a par. in the first div. of the hund. of Reigate, co. Surrey, 3 miles S.W. of Reigate, its post town. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Mole, and is wholly agricultural. The land is chiefly meadow and pasture. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £146. The church, dedicated to St. Bartholomew the Great, is an ancient structure. The interior contains brasses of the Arderne family, bearing date 1480. There are National schools. Leigh Place, formerly the seat of the Ardernes, is now a farmhouse.

LEIGH, a chplry. in the par. of Ashton-Keynes, hund. of Highworth, co. Wilts, 2 miles N.E. of the Minety railway station, and 3 S.W. of Cricklade. It is situated on the river Thames. The charities produce about £25 per annum.

LEIGH, a tythg. in the par. of Great Bradford, hund. of Bradford, co. Wilts, 2 miles N.E. of Bradford. It is joined to Woolley. The village is considerable.

LEIGH, a tnshp. in the par. and hund. of Westbury, co. Wilts, 1 mile S. of Westbury. It is supposed to be Egg-lea of the Saxon Chronicle, where Alfred the Great encamped prior to the battle of Ethandune. At Courtfield in this township was once a Saxon palace. It formerly belonged to the Cobhams and Molins.

LEIGH, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Pershore, co. Worcester, 5 miles S.W. of Worcester, and 9 N.W. of Upton. The parish, which is very extensive, is situated on the river Teme. The surface is varied. The land is partly in hop-ground. The principal residence is Leigh Court. The inhabitants are wholly engaged in agricultural pursuits. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £695, and the rectorial for £330. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £312. The parish church, dedicated to St. Edburgh, is an ancient structure with a tower at the W. end. In a recess over the N. doorway is a sculptured figure representing our Saviour. It has a chapel at the W. end called Braunsford's Chancel, which is divided from the S. aisle by an ancient carved and gilt screen of antique workmanship; there is also a richly-painted E. window and Norman font. The chancel contains monuments of the Devereux family. In addition to the parish church, there is also a district church, dedicated to St. Matthias, at the Link, val. £100, in the patron. of the bishop; also a chapel-of-ease at Bransford. The parochial charities produce about £64 per annum, which goes to the endowed school. There are chapels belonging to the Huntingdonians and Wesleyans. The Earl Somers is lord of the manor.

LEIGH, a tythg. in the par. of Wimborne Minster, hund. of Badbury, co. Dorset, 1 mile E. of Wimborne Minster. The village is considerable. There was formerly a chapel-of-ease.

LEIGH, a tnshp. in the par. of Worthen, co. Salop, 12 miles S.W. of Shrewsbury.

LEIGH, a tythg. in the par. of Pitminster, hund. of Taunton, co. Somerset, 3½ miles S.W. of Taunton. The Wesleyans have a chapel here.

LEIGH, a tythg. in the par. of Winsham, co. Somerset, 2 miles S.E. of Chard. It is joined with Street.

LEIGH, a tythg. in the par. of Havant, co. Hants, 2 miles N.W. of Havant. The principal seat is Leigh Park.

LEIGH, ABBOT'S. See ABBOT'S LEIGH, co. Somerset.

LEIGH COURT, a seat in the par. of Abbot's Leigh, hund. of Portbury, co. Somerset, 2 miles N.W. of Bristol. It is situated in a wooded spot, near Rownham Ferry, on the banks of the Avon, and was the hiding-place of Charles II. in 1651. In 1844 the old seat was rebuilt by P. Miles, Esq., M.P. It is particularly celebrated for its picture gallery, which contains a collection of the ancient masters, including Rubens' "Conversion of St. Paul," De Vinci's "Salvator Mundi," Murillo's "St. Andrew," besides some of the choicest productions of Claude, Poussin, Titian, &c.

LEIGH-DE-LA-MERE, a par. in the hund. of Chippenham, co. Wilts, 5 miles N.W. of Chippenham, its post town, and 8 S.W. of Malmesbury. The village of Leigh consists of the church, parsonage, and manor farm, the rest of the par. forming the hmlt. of Sevington. The parish derives its name from the De-la-Mere family, who sold it prior to the year 1369. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £236. The living is a rect. with the cur. of Sevington annexed, joint val. £290, in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol. The living was once held by a brother of Bishop Latimer, who was interred here. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, is a neat edifice with a curious bell turret. The church was rebuilt in 1846 at the expense of the late Joseph Neeld, Esq. At Sevington is a small dame school. Sir John Neeld, Bart., is lord of the manor.

LEIGH, EAST and WEST, hmlts. in the par. of Harberton, co. Devon, 1 mile S.W. of Totnes. It is situated between the rivers Harburn and Dart.

LEIGHFIELD FOREST, an ext. par. place in the soke of Oakham, co. Rutland, 4 miles S.W. of Oakham.

LEIGH, HIGH, a tnshp. and chplry. in the hund. of Bucklow, co. Chester, 5 miles N.W. of Knutsford, its post town, and 6 S.E. of Warrington. The village, which is situated on the high road between Warrington and Knutsford, gives name to the Leighs of Stoneleigh and Lyme. The land is partly in common. The soil is clay and sand. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Chester, val. £160. The chapel is a stone structure erected in 1816. There is also an ancient chapel, and a school for both sexes. High Leigh Hall and West Hall are the principal residences. Major Egerton Leigh is lord of the manor.

LEIGHLAND, a chplry. in the par. of Old Cleeve, hund. of Williton, co. Somerset, 3 miles S.W. of Watchet. It is situated near the coast of the Bristol Channel. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £40. The church is dedicated to St. Giles.

LEIGHLINBRIDGE, a post and market town in the pars. of Agha and Wells in the bar. of East Idrone, co. Carlow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 8 miles S. of Carlow and 57 from Dublin. It is situated on the bank of the river Barrow, and contains Wells parish church, a Roman Catholic church, and school. A bridge of nine arches was thrown across the river in 1320. Corn and butter constitute the principal articles of export. There are a police station and a dispensary, which latter is within the Carlow Poor-law Union. A Carmelite friary was founded here by the Carew family in the time of Henry III., of which some remains exist. It was destroyed by Rory Oge O'More in 1577, and was stormed by Ireton in 1649, having been fortified by Lord Deputy Bellingham, to whom it was granted at the Suppression. There are traces of a castle built in 1181 by John de Clavill, near the bridge, called the Black Castle; also of a fort called the White Castle, built by Gerald, Earl of Kildare, in 1408. Mondays and Saturdays are market days. Fairs are held on Easter Monday, 14th May, 25th September, and 27th December.

LEIGHLIN, OLD, a par. and vil. in the bar. of West Idrone, co. Carlow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 1½ mile S.W. of Leighlinbridge, its post town. The parish is 4½ miles long by 4 broad. The surface is slightly mountainous and boggy. It is traversed by the road from Kilkenny to Bagnalstown. The village was first founded by St. Laserian in the 7th century, but was demolished in the beginning of the 10th century by the Ossorians and Danes. In 1060 it was destroyed by fire. Before the Union it sent two members to the Irish parliament by charter of James II., but now consists of little else than a few poor cabins. A monastery was founded here soon after the destruction of the town by Burchard, a Dane, and dedicated to St. Stephen. There was also an earlier monastery, known as St. Gobban's. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Leighlin, val. £97, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church is the cathedral of the diocese, and was founded about the middle of the 12th century. It is a Gothic edifice, containing some curious stone carvings, tombs, &c. Here are National and day schools. The principal objects of antiquity in this parish are St. Laserian's cross and well, an old chapter-house near the cathedral, and a rath. The see, which includes 59 benefices in the counties of Carlow, Queen's County, Wicklow, and Kilkenny, was joined to Ferns in 1600, and to Ossory in 1836. The chapter consists of a dean, chancellor, precentor, treasurer, archdeacon, prebendaries, and vicar-general. The Roman Catholic diocese is in the province of Leinster, and is joined to that of Kildare.

LEIGHLINSTOWN, a vil. in the par. of Killiney, in the bar. of Rathdown, co. Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 1 mile S.S.E. of Cabinteely. Leighlinstown House is the principal residence.

LEIGH, LITTLE, or LEIGH-JUXTA-BARTINGTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Great Budworth, hund. of Bucklow, co. Chester, 3½ miles N.W. of Northwich, its post town, and 8 S. of Warrington. It is situated on the river Weaver and the Grand Trunk canal. The soil consists of loam and sand. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Chester, val. £155, in the patron. of the Vicar of Great Budworth. The church is a small brick edifice, with a belfry containing one bell. There is a National school for both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is also held. The charities produce about £4 per annum. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. Lord Leigh is lord of the manor and chief landowner.

LEIGHMONEY, or LIFFANEY, a par. in the bar. of Kinalea, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles N.W. of Kinsale, its post town. It is 2 miles long by 1 broad. The surface lies along the E. side of the river Bandon. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Cork, val. £82, in the patron. of the bishop. There is a parish school. Shippool is the principal residence, retaining the name of the adjacent old castle, which was built by the Roche family.

LEIGH, NORTH, or NORTHLEIGH, a par. in the hund. of Colyton, co. Devon, 3½ miles S.E. of Honiton, its post town, and 4 N.W. of Colyton. The vil., which is of small extent, is situated on a branch of the river Axe, and is wholly agricultural. The soil is various. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £169 10*s.* The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £240. The church, dedicated to St. Giles, is a stone structure, with a tower containing four bells. In the interior of the church is a screen, dividing the nave from the chancel, which has been rebuilt. The parochial charities produce about £21 per annum, of which £7 goes to the Sunday-school. There is a National school for both sexes. Mrs. Proby of Seaton is lady of the manor.

LEIGH, NORTH, a par. in the hund. of Wootton, co. Oxford, 3 miles N.E. of Witney. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. About half a mile to the S. of the Roman Akeman Street, which passes by the northern boundary of the parish, the remains of a Roman villa were found in 1813, consisting of a spacious quadrangle 212 feet by 167. Its wall and foundations were clearly traceable, comprising galleries, baths, hypocausts, and apartments of various sizes floored with tesselated and mosaic pavements. Near the same spot were found above 100 Roman coins, chiefly of brass, struck during the reigns of Claudius and his successors. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £147. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure with a chantry chapel attached. In the interior are recumbent effigies, in alabaster, of a knight and his lady, a monument to William Lenthall, Esq., father of the Speaker of the House of Commons in the reign of Charles I., and several handsome monuments of the Perrot family, who formerly had a seat here. The parochial charities produce about £51 per annum, of which £3 go to the school.

LEIGHS, or LEES, GREAT, a par. in the hunds. of Chelmsford and Witham, co. Essex, 5 miles S.W. of Braintree, its post town, and 7 N.E. of Chelmsford. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Chelmer, and on the road from London to Norwich. The par. contains the hmlt. of Chatley. It was formerly in pasture, from which circumstance it is supposed to have derived its name. The soil is hard gravel, alternated with a sandy loam of tolerable fertility. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £365. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £378, in the patron. of Lincoln College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, is a very ancient structure, with a circular tower of flint and stone, surmounted by an octangular spire of wood, and containing five bells. The charities produce about £30 per annum. There are National and British schools, also a place of worship for Independents. On the roadside was formerly a hermitage, now converted into an inn. Leighs Hall is a seat of the Earl of Liverpool.

LEIGHS, or LEES, LITTLE, a par. in the hund. of Chelmsford, co. Essex, 7 miles N.E. of Chelmsford, its post town, and 6 S.W. of Braintree. Here was a priory of Black Canons, founded by Ralph de Gernon in the reign of Henry III. Its revenue at the Dissolution was estimated at £141 14*s.* 8*d.* It is a small village, situated on the river Ter, and close to the Chelmsford and Sudbury road. The parish is of small extent. The soil is chiefly a sandy loam, resting on a substratum of clay. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £380. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £398. The church, dedicated to St. John the Evangelist, is a small ancient edifice, with a shingled spire. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. About 2 miles S. of the village are the ruins of Leighs Priory, comprising the Tudor gateway, with its towers, &c. It was formerly the seat of the Riches, built on the site of the old priory, and subsequently of the Duke of Buckingham, from whom it finally passed into the possession of Guy's Hospital.

LEIGH, SOUTH, a chplry. in the par. of Stanton-Harcourt, hund. of Wootton, co. Oxford, 3 miles S.E. of Witney, its post town, and 8 from Oxford. It is of small extent, and wholly agricultural. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Stanton-Harcourt, in the dioc. of Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. James, is an ancient edifice, with a square embattled tower. The charities produce about £12 per annum.

LEIGH, SOUTH, a par. in the hund. of Colyton, co. Devon, 3 miles S.W. of Colyton. It is situated near a branch of the river Axe, under Blackbury Castle, one of the most perfect Roman encampments in the county. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. Wiscombe Park is the principal seat. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £181. The church, dedicated to St. Laurence, is a small ancient structure. The charities produce about £9 per annum. There is a Sunday-school with a small endowment. At Kingsdown, in this parish, are lines of ancient earthworks, and in the vicinity several barrows.

LEIGHTERTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Boxwell, upper div. of the hund. of Grumbalds Ash, co. Gloucester, 1½ mile N.W. of Boxwell, and 4½ miles S.W. of Tetbury. Wootton-under-Edge is its post town. It was formerly a distinct parish. In 1700 a large barrow, situated in this hamlet, was opened by Matthew Huntley, and was found to contain an earthen urn filled with charred human bones. The living is a rect.* annexed to Boxwell, in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol. There are parochial churches both at Leighterton and Boxwell; the former, dedicated to St. Andrew, has a low square tower containing one bell.

LEIGHTON, or LEIGHTON CHAPEL, a tnshp. in the par. and hund. of Nantwich, co. Chester, 2½ miles from Middlewich, and 5 from Nantwich. It is a small village, situated near the river Weaver and the Grand Junction canal. The old seats of the Brooke and Erdswick families are now converted into farmhouses. There is a place of worship for Primitive Methodists.

LEIGHTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Neston, higher div. of the hund. of Wirrall, co. Chester, 1½ mile N. of Great Neston. It is a small irregularly built village, situated on the river Dee.

LEIGHTON, or LEIGHTON-BROMESWOLD, a par. in the hund. of Leightonstone, co. Huntingdon, 7 miles N. of Kimbolton, its post town, and 10 W. of Huntingdon. The village, which is small and irregularly built, is situated on a branch of the river Ouse. It is wholly agricultural. At Leighton Gorse is a meet for Earl Fitzwilliam's hounds. The land is nearly evenly divided between arable and pasture. There is a chalybeate spring, formerly in high repute. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £90, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a neat edifice, with a tower. There is a National school. The trustees of the late John Norris, Esq., are lords of the manor.

LEIGHTON, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Worthin, hund. of Cawrse, co. Montgomery, 2 miles S.E. of Welshpool, its post town, and 9 from Montgomery. The township, which is of small extent, is situated on the E. bank of the river Severn and near Offa's Dyke. The principal residence is Leighton Hall.

LEIGHTON, a par. in the Wellington div. of the hund. of South Bradford, co. Salop, 6 miles S.W. of Wellington, its post town, and 3 N. of Much Wenlock. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Severn, and on the Shrewsbury and Worcester turnpike road. The Wrekin Hill, a trap rock rising to the height of 1,320 feet, and commanding an extensive prospect, lies on the N.E. border of the parish. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £218. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a brick structure, with a wooden tower containing three bells. The interior of the church contains several fine tablets. The parochial charities produce about £12 6s. per annum. Robert Gardner, Esq., is lord of the manor.

LEIGHTON-BUZZARD, a par., post, and market town in the hund. of Manshead, co. Bedford, 18 miles S.W. of Bedford, and 41 from London. It has a station on the London and North-Western railway, which here passes through a slightly carved tunnel 272 yards in length; there is also a branch here to Dunstable. It is situated on the E. bank of the river Ouse, or Ousel, over which is a bridge leading into Buckinghamshire, and near the Grand Junction canal, which is navigable for vessels of eighty tons. The par., which is of large extent, contains the chplries. of Billington, Eggington, Stanbridge, and Heath with Reach. The soil is in general fertile, but there is a considerable tract of common, now enclosed. The proper adjunct to its name is "Beau Desert," corrupted into Buzzard. It is supposed to be the Lygeanburg of the Saxon Chronicle, which Cuthwulph took from the Britons in 571. Here was formerly a Cistercian cell to Woburn Abbey, founded in the reign of Henry III., also a priory cell at Grovebury, subordinate to Fontevrault Abbey in Normandy. The town of Leighton has considerably increased since the formation of the railway. It comprises one wide street branching off at the market-place to the right and left. It is paved and well lighted with gas. It contains many well-built houses and shops. There has lately been built by subscription a corn exchange with assembly rooms, &c., at a cost of £7,000. The market is considered the first in the county for corn, cattle, &c. Near the market-house, which was rebuilt in 1852, is an ancient stone cross of five sides, 27 feet in height, on a base of 7½ feet. It is in the early English style of architecture, and is supposed to have been built in the 13th century. Near the summit are niched figures of a bishop, Virgin and Child, &c. In the town are two banks, a savings-bank, temperance hall, union poorhouse, &c. The town is under the jurisdiction of the county magistrates, and is a polling place for the county elections. Courts leet and baron are held in Whitsun week, also on the last Thursday and Friday in October, by Colonel Hanmer, as lord of the manor. A considerable trade is carried on in timber, iron, lime, bricks, corn, &c. A portion of the female inhabitants are employed in the manufacture of lace and straw plait. Leighton Poor-law Union includes 16 parishes or townships, 10 in Buckinghamshire, and 6 in Bedfordshire. It is also the seat of a superintendent registry, and new County Court district. In the neighbourhood is a Roman encampment. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £400, in the patron. of the Prebendary of Leighton-Buzzard in the cathedral of Lincoln. The parish church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient cruciform structure, with a tower crowned by an octagonal spire 193 feet high. The interior of the church, which has been re-pewed, contains an old font, stalls, monuments, &c. In addition to the parish church, there are four district churches, at Stanbridge, Billington, Eggington, and Heath with Reach, the livings of all which are perpet. curs., varying in val. from £260 to £94. A new church, designed to be a chapel-of-ease, is now about to be built at the N. end of the town; also National schools, which are much required. The parochial charities produce about £599 per annum, including £200, the endowment of Wilkes' almshouses, founded in 1630. There are grammar, Lancastrian, infant, and British schools, the last founded in 1813. The Baptists, Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, and Society of Friends, have each a place of worship. Colonel Hanmer, K.H., of Stockgrove, is lord of the manor. Market day is Tuesday. Extensive horse and cattle fairs are held on 5th February, second Tuesday in April, Whit-Tuesday, 26th July, 24th October, and the second Tuesday prior to Christmas Day. The wool fair, which is the largest in the county, is held on the first Friday in July.

LEIGHTONSTONE, a hund. in co. Huntingdon, contains the pars. of Alconbury with Alconbury Weston, Barham, Brampton, Brington, Buckworth, Bythorn with Brington, Great Catworth, Coppingford, Covington, Easton, Edlington, Gidding (Great, Little, and Steeple), Graffham, Hamerton, Keyston, Kimbolton, Leighton, Molesworth, Spaldwick, Stow, Swineshead, Upton with Copmanford, Old Weston with Brington, Woolley, and parts of Luddington, Thurning, and Winwick, comprising an area of 56,130 acres.

LEIGH-UPON-MENDIP, a par. in the hund. of Frome, co. Somerset, 5½ miles W. of the Frome railway station, and 6 from Shepton-Mallet. The village, which is small, is situated in a very healthy spot, 884 feet above the level of the sea. The land is principally in pasture. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the dairy farming. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect.* of Mells, in the dioc. of Bath and Wells. The church, dedicated to St. Giles, is an ancient stone structure, with a tower containing a clock and six bells. The register dates from 1566. There is a National school for both sexes, also a Sunday-school. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel. The Rev. John S. H. Horner is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

LEIGH, WEST, a par. in the hund. of Fremington, co. Devon, 3 miles N.E. of Bideford, its railway station and post town, and 7 S.W. of Barnstaple. The village, which is small, is situated on the navigable river Torridge, and on the old turnpike road leading from Bideford to Barnstaple. Some of the women are employed in glove-making for the manufacturers of Torrington. Building stone is extensively quarried. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £159, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient structure, with a tower containing four bells. The interior of the church contains an antique font, elaborately carved oak seats, and several monuments to the Cleveland and Willett families. The windows are of stained glass. There is a free school for both sexes, also a place of worship for Wesleyans. Tapley Park is the principal residence. The trustees of the late Lieutenant Archibald Cleveland are lords of the manor.

LEIGH, WEST, or WESTLEIGH, a tnshp. in the par. of Leigh, hund. of West Derby, co. Lancaster, 1½ mile N.W. of Leigh, and 11 miles W. of Manchester. The village is a populous suburb of Leigh. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the muslin and silk manufactories, and in the collieries.

LEINSTER, one of the four provs. into which Ireland is divided, comprising the south-western part of the island. It is 140 miles in length by 70 broad, with a coast line of 180 miles, extending from Carlingford to Waterford. It was the first portion of Ireland taken possession of by the English in the reign of Henry II., who sent Strongbow to the assistance of Dermot MacMorogh, who had been expelled from his kingdom of Leinster by Roderick O'Connor, the titular King of Ireland, for seducing the wife of O'Rourke. MacMorogh, having recovered his kingdom by the aid of the English, gave his daughter Eva in marriage to Strongbow, who succeeded to the lordship, while Meath came to the Lacy family. Leinster, as now defined, includes the cos. of Carlow, Dublin, Kilkenny, King's County, Kildare, Longford, Louth, Meath, Queen's County, Westmeath, Wexford, and Wicklow, comprising 7,619 square miles, or 4,876,211 acres, of which the greater part is cultivated, except that under water or in roads. It gives the title of duke to the Fitzgeralds of Carlton, and forms the corps of the South-western or Leinster circuit.

LEINSTER, one of the loftiest mountains of the Blackstans range, being 2,610 feet high, on the border of cos. Carlow and Wexford, Ireland, about 5 miles W. of Newtownbarry.

LEINTHALL EARLS, a chplry. in the par. of Aymestrey, hund. of Wigmore, co. Hereford, 1 mile S.E. of Leinthall Starkes, and 7 miles S.W. of Ludlow. It belongs to Greenley, of Titley. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £64, in the patron. of the Vicar of Aymestrey. The church is a small structure, dedicated to St. Andrew. The charities consist of a small endowment for the school and almshouse.

LEINTHALL STARKES, a par. in the hund. of Wigmore, co. Hereford, 9 miles from Leominster, its post town, and 6 S.W. of Ludlow. The parish, which is of small extent, is situated on the turnpike road from Leominster to Knighton. The inhabitants are wholly engaged in agriculture. The soil consists of loam, gravel, and clay. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £53. The church, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene, is an ancient stone structure, with a belfry containing two bells. The parochial charities produce about £18 per annum, of which £14 go to Allen's free school, founded in 1704. A Sunday-school is also held in the schoolhouse. In the churchyard are several old yew-trees.

LEINTWARDINE, a par. in the hund. of Wigmore, co. Hereford, 9 miles S.W. of Ludlow, its post town, and 5 S.W. of Onbury railway station. The parish, which is extensive, is situated on the turnpike road leading from Ludlow to Knighton, and near the confluence of the rivers Teme and Clun. These rivers are celebrated for their abundance of trout and grayling, which causes the village to be a favourite resort of anglers. The parish has for several centuries been the property of the Harley family, earls of Oxford, through the Mortimers. It contains the tnshps. of Leintwardine, Brakes, Kinton, Whitton, Trippleton, Marlow Heath, Jay, Walford, Letton, Newton, Adforton, Paytoe, and Stanway with the Grange. About a mile distant from the village is a Roman camp, with a single ditch and rampart, named Brandon Camp. The soil is loamy, and the subsoil limestone, of which several quarries are in operation. The ancient forest of Mocktree, which has long been disafforested, is in this parish. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £400. The church, dedicated to St. Magdalen, is a large ancient structure, with a tower containing six bells. It has a fine E. window, and some beautiful fragments of ancient stained glass, representing crowns, lions, fleurs-de-lis, with the arms of Mortimer, &c. The parochial charities comprise several bequests divisible among the poor in coal, bread, and clothing annually. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. There are National schools for both sexes, with an income from endowment of £60 per annum. Heath House, the principal residence, is situated about 3 miles from the village. Lady Langdale and Sir William Rouse Boughton are owners of the manor. Fairs are held on the Monday before Easter, and on the 26th September, for cattle, sheep, pigs, horses, &c. Races take place annually in September.

LEIPSCOTT HEPSCOTT, a tnshp. in the par. of Morpeth, E. div. of Castle ward, co. Northumberland, 2 miles S.E. of Morpeth.

LEIRE, a par. in the hund. of Guthlaxton, co. Leicester, 4 miles N.W. of Lutterworth, its post town. The parish, which is of small extent, is traversed by the line of the Midland Counties railway, which is carried through a cutting 62 feet in depth, and over an embankment 40 feet in height. Two-thirds of the parish are in pasture, the remainder arable. The soil is loamy. The lowlands are watered by a brook called the Soar. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. The tithes were commuted for land and annual money payments under an Enclosure Act in 1779. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £292. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. The parochial charities produce about £36 per annum, including £10, the endowment of a school built in 1814 in commemoration of the peace.

LEISTON, a par. in the hund. of Blything, co. Suffolk, 4 miles S.E. of Saxmundham, its post town, and 4 N.W. of Aldborough. It is a station on the Aldborough branch of the Great Eastern railway. It is situated on the coast of the North Sea, and contains the hmlt. of Sizewell. Here is the extensive agricultural implement manufactory of Garrett and Sons, whose premises extend over seven acres of land, with five steam engines. Waterproofings and grease are also manufactured here. Half a mile distant from the town, which is lighted with gas and partially paved, are the ruins of Leiston Abbey, in the midst of which are a flower garden and a farmhouse of modern construction. A large portion of the land belongs to the crown, having been seized by Henry VIII. at the dissolution of Leiston Abbey. This monastery was founded in 1182 by Ranulph de Glanville for Premonstratensian canons, and had a revenue at the Dissolution of £181 17*s.* 1½*d.* It was rebuilt in 1389 after a fire. Sizewell Gap, situated about 2 miles distant, is a fishery and coast-guard station. The appropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £435. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £376, in the patron. of Christ's Hospital and the Haberdashers' Company alternately. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, was erected in 1853, and has a flint tower containing five bells. It stands about a quarter of a mile W. of the village. The register dates from 1538. The charities produce about £73 per annum, chiefly the produce of a farm bequeathed by Thomas Grimsby, Esq., in 1721. There are parochial and infant schools for both sexes, supported by voluntary contributions, also a mechanics' institute. The Wesleyans and the Society of Friends have each a chapel. The principal residence is Leiston Abbey, which stands near the ruins of the old monastery.

LEITH, a seaport town, and municipal and parliamentary burgh, in co. Edinburgh, Scotland. It was originally called Inverleith, and includes the parish of North Leith, nearly the whole of South Leith parish, and a small part of the parish of St. Cuthbert, Edinburgh. It is situated 2 miles N.N.E. of the cross of Edinburgh (of which city it is the port), in 55° 58′ N. lat., 3° 9′ W. long., on the S. shore of the Frith of Forth. The town is about 1 mile long, and measures about half a mile at its broadest point. It is irregularly built. In the ancient part the streets are narrow and inconvenient, and the houses old and closely built; of late years, however, some good streets and numerous dwelling-houses have been erected, particularly in the vicinity of what is called the "Links," or downs, a large open space on the S.E. side of the town. There is a good supply of water, and the town is lighted with gas. The principal thoroughfares are Leith-walk, Constitution-street, Kirkgate, Bernard-street, and Commercial-place. The Leith water intersects the town, and is spanned by a stone bridge and two drawbridges; the last mentioned were erected in place of a stone bridge built by Robert Ballendean, Abbot of Holyrood, as a means of access to a chapel erected by him in North Leith. That portion of the town situated on the N.W. side of the river is known as North Leith, and that on the opposite as South Leith; the former, although pretty extensive, being little more than a suburb of the latter, where all the chief business of the town is transacted, and where the offices and residences of the merchants chiefly are. Among the public buildings worthy of mention are, the townhall and courthouse, erected in 1828, in which are held the burgh and sheriff courts; the exchange buildings, containing the post-office and assembly rooms; the Trinity House, or mariners' hospital, built in 1817 in place of a building erected in 1555; the custom-house, a Grecian edifice, erected in 1812; the Female Asylum for Incurables, erected by the late Sir John Gladstone, Bart., a native of Leith; Seafield baths, near the Links, erected in 1813; the gaol, built in 1822, situated in Tolbooth-wynd, is now converted into dwelling-houses. Near the gaol, and on the site of the old custom-house and excise-office, the market-places were erected in 1819.—The par. of North Leith is in the presb. of Edinburgh and synod of Lothian and Tweeddale, in the patron. of the heads of families: the minister's stipend is £285. The parish church was built in 1816. There is a chapel-of-ease at Newhaven, in the patron. of the trustees and male seat-holders above eighteen years of age. Here there are three Free churches, one United Presbyterian, and one Baptist chapel. The par. of South Leith is in the same presb. and synod as that of North Leith, in the patron. of the crown and the kirk session, &c.: the first minister's stipend is £396, and the second minister's is £247. The parish church stands in Kirkgate, and is an ancient and commodious structure in a good state of repair. St. Thomas's church was given by Sir John Gladstone, Bart., to the General Assembly. There is also an Established church at Restalrig. In this parish there are three United Presbyterian churches, three Free churches, besides five chapels belonging respectively to the Episcopalians, Independents, Morrisonians, Wesleyan Methodists, and Roman Catholics. Among the public educational establishments throughout the town are, the High School; Dr. Bell's school, in which 700 children receive instruction on the Madras system; and there are several parochial schools. There are numerous benevolent and charitable institutions which are well supported, as well as a public library, mechanics' subscription library, and a savings-bank. The manufactories of Leith are considerable, they comprise colour and paint works, roperies, canvas, sail, and soap making, brewing and tanning, fish curing, and the manufacture of glass—the latter supposed to have been introduced by English settlers in the time of Cromwell. Ship-building is rather extensively carried on, and the yards here have turned out a number of very fine steam and sailing vessels. It is, however, to its shipping business that Leith owes its importance. From the year 1799 to the present period large sums of money (partly grants from government) have been expended in the construction of wet and dry docks, lengthening the piers, and otherwise improving the harbour. The aggregate length of the quays is 8,400 feet, and they, together with the docks, have very extensive warehouses and sheds, cranes of great strength and almost every modern improvement. A line of railway connects the quays with the Leith terminus of the Edinburgh, Perth, and Dundee lines, and also the North British line. There are lighthouses on both the E. and W. piers. Leith fort, overlooking the beach, is the head-quarters of the royal artillery of Scotland. The town has the advantage of several banks, viz. the Bank of Scotland, the British Linen, the Clydesdale, the Commercial, the Union, and the Royal; the last named was formerly known as the Leith Bank. The several incorporated trades are the Ship Masters (or Trinity House), combining a benefit society with a board for licensing pilots; the Traffickers, or Merchant Company; and the Convenery of Trades, representing eight trades. The newspapers published here are the Leith Commercial List, on Tuesday and Friday, and the Leith Herald on Saturday.—The coasting, foreign, and colonial trade of Leith is of vast extent. The foreign and colonial trade is carried on with Russia, Holland, Denmark, Sweden, Germany, the Levant, the East and West Indies, America, China, and Australia. The shipping belonging to the port in 1692 comprised 29 vessels of aggregately 1,702 tons, while in 1855 the number amounted to 168 sailing vessels of an aggregate tonnage of 19,067, besides 25 steam vessels of an aggregate tonnage of 6,326. The customs revenue of the port in 1859 amounted to £572,872. The principal imports are grain, hemp, tallow, timber, hides, tobacco, and wine; and the chief exports are iron, hardware, machinery, coals, cottons, linen, silks, woollens, haberdashery, &c. The number of ships entered inwards at the port of Leith in 1859 amounted to 1,539, of an aggregate tonnage of 216,356; while the entries outwards amounted to 415 of an aggregate tonnage of 98,877. The total value of the exports of 1859 amounted to £872,673. The port enjoys frequent steamboat communication with London, Liverpool, Hull, Newcastle, Greenock, Glasgow, Aberdeen, and other ports of Great Britain, and likewise with St. Petersburgh, Copenhagen, Rotterdam, Hamburgh, Dantzic, &c. The town is connected to Edinburgh by a branch of the Edinburgh, Perth, and Dundee line; there is also a line for goods traffic in connection with the North British line. Omnibuses run to the city. Leith, in conjunction with Portobello and Musselburgh, sends one member to parliament, and is governed by a provost, who bears the title of "Admiral of Leith," four bailies, a treasurer, and councillors. The courts held here by the magistrates are known as the admiral and bailie courts of Leith, and a society of solicitors exists for practising in them. A sheriffs' small-debt court is held here every Tuesday. Police matters are managed by a commission. The real property of the town in 1860-1 amounted to £147,636. The corporation revenue in 1859 was £692. The population of the district of Leith, embracing Leith, Musselburgh, and Portobello, in 1851, was 30,919, and in 1861, 45,417.—One of the earliest, if not the earliest mention of Leith, occurs in the charter of Holyrood Abbey, founded by David I., where it is termed Inverleith. Its proximity to the capital, and the circumstance of its having until recently been the port of Edinburgh, have rendered Leith the scene of several interesting historical events. In 1313, and again in 1410, the shipping in Leith Harbour was burnt by the English. In 1544 the town was almost destroyed, and its shipping carried off by the English under the Earl of Hertford. In 1549 the French took possession of the town to assist the Queen Regent to suppress the Reformation. In 1560 the forces of Queen Elizabeth, in conjunction with the Scottish Protestant forces under the Lords of the Congregation, took possession of the town. The Solemn League and Covenant was sworn and subscribed in 1643 by many of the inhabitants. It was visited by the plague in 1647, which carried off 2,000 out of 4,000 of the inhabitants. In 1650, after the defeat of the Scots by Cromwell at Dunbar, the town was occupied by Lambert, his major-general, while Cromwell possessed himself of Edinburgh; it was afterwards occupied by General Monk, who induced several English families to settle here, to whom a good deal of the mercantile spirit of the port is attributable. Leith fort was repaired, and a citadel with five bastions erected by Cromwell. Races were instituted in the reign of Charles II., and until recently were held in the month of July. The citadel was held for a short time in 1715 by the Pretender and his adherents. In 1779 Paul Jones caused a great panic in the town by appearing in the Frith. George IV. landed here in 1822 on his way to Edinburgh, an inscribed plate marking the spot where he landed. In 1842 the town was visited by the Queen and the late Prince Consort.

LEITH, two hills of this name in co. Surrey, one near Haslemere, the other near Dorking. The latter is the highest point in the county, being near 1,000 feet above the sea-level. It commands extensive views over the counties of Surrey, Sussex, Oxford, Hants, Middlesex, Essex, and the sea.

LEITHEN WATER, a tributary of the river Tweed, in co. Peebles, Scotland. It joins the Tweed at Innerleithen.

LEITH LUMSDEN, a vil. in the par. of Auchindoir, co. Aberdeen, Scotland, 3 miles from Auchindoir. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the marble quarry.

LEITHOLM, a post-office vil. in the par. of Eccles, co. Berwick, Scotland, 4 miles N.W. of Coldstream. It is situated near Leet Water.

LEITH WATER, a river of co. Edinburgh, Scotland, rises under West Cairn, in the Pentland hills, and after a course of 18 miles, in which it turns numerous mills, falls into the Forth at Leith. It is crossed by the Dean and other bridges, and has on its banks a suburb of Edinburgh, in the par. of St. Cuthbert, called from it the Water of Leith.

LEITRIM, a maritime co. in the prov. of Connaught, in the N.W. of Ireland, bounded on the N. by Donegal Bay and the cos. of Donegal and Fermanagh, on the E. by Fermanagh and Cavan, on the S. by Longford, and on the W. by Roscommon and Sligo. Its greatest length, N. to S., is 51 miles, and its breadth varies from 5½ to 26 miles. The circuit is about 134 miles, of which 4 miles, in Donegal Bay, are sea-coast. The area is 613 square miles, or 392,363 acres, of which 249,350 are arable, 115,869 uncultivated, 3,396 planted, and 23,748 covered by water. It extends from 53° 45′ to 54° 29′ N. lat., and from 7° 53′ to 8° 8′ W. longitude. According to the geographer Ptolemy, Leitrim, with Fermanagh and Cavan, was occupied by the tribe of Erdini, or Ernaigh, and this district subsequently was known as Breifne, or Brenny. Leitrim was known as West Breifne, Hy-Brinin-Breifne, or Breifne O'Rourk, the former name arising from Brian, son of Eachod, the first Scotch king of Connaught, and the latter from the chief family in the district; while Cavan was called Breifne O'Reily, from the name of the ruling family there. The country was invaded by Dermod MacMurrough, with the assistance of Henry II., but Tiernan O'Rourk, who was chief at that time, defeated him, and subsequently assaulted Dublin, though unsuccessfully. He afterwards, however, assisted the English in their attack on Roderick, King of Connaught. From this time, till it was constituted a county by Sir H. Sidney in 1595, Leitrim formed part of Roscommon. The O'Rourks remained independent of English rule till the middle of the 16th century, and in 1588 Brian O'Rourk rose against the English and occupied Dromahaire Castle, from which he was driven by the Earl of Clanricarde and Sir Richard Bingham. He then fled to Scotland, where he was captured, and was finally hanged in London. In 1596 his son Teigue joined O'Donnell's rebellion, and in the next year he, with Maguire, chief of Fermanagh, defeated Sir Conyers Clifford in the Curlew mountains. In 1603 he submitted to the English rule. In 1641 the people of Leitrim, under Sir Owen O'Rourk, joined O'Nial's rebellion, at the termination of which most of the remaining property of the family was confiscated. Many grants to new settlers were also made at the restoration of Charles II. and the accession of William III. Other powerful families in Leitrim were the O'Murreys, MacLoghlins, MacGlanchies, and MacGrannels. The name Reynolds is borne by some of the descendants of the last-mentioned family, being obviously a corruption of the more ancient name.—The northern part of the county is exclusively mountainous, while the southern extremity, from Rusky to Carrick, and along the vale of the Shannon, is fertile and cultivated. Tracts of good land occur also in the vales of the northern division, as, for instance, round Dromahaire, Manorhamilton, and Glencar. The principal mountains are as follows:—In the vicinity of Lough Allen, Slievan Jerin, 1,922 feet; Bencroy, 1,707 feet; Lugna Cuillagh, 1,424 feet; Cashell, 1,377 feet; Bartony, 1,301 feet; Slieve Nakilla, 1,703 feet: near Manorhamilton are the two mountains of Mullaghnatire, 1,422 feet; and Benbo, 1,366 feet: further N. are Truskmore, 2,072 feet, the highest in the county; Brookhill, 1,712 feet; Dovey, 1,511 feet; Cruckaballin, 1,408 feet; Aghabonad, 1,346 feet; and Mullaghnatire, 1,275 feet.—The Shannon is the chief river in Leitrim. It enters the county from Cavan at Glangavlin, and, passing through Lough Allen, proceeds southwards through Leitrim, Carrick-on-Shannon, Jamestown, and Drumsna. The whole length has been rendered navigable by means of canals. Lough Allen is the largest lake in Leitrim, measuring 7 miles by 5. The Shannon also forms loughs Boffin, Corry, and Bodarig. The river Bonnet rises in Lough Glenade, towards the N. of the county, and flows past Manorhamilton and Dromahaire into Lough Gill. The Glenfarn runs from near Manorhamilton into Lough Macnean, which lake is united to Lough Melvin by the river Kilcoo, which separates Leitrim from Fermanagh. The river Differin runs through Lough Car into Sligo Bay. Lough Belhavel is united to Lough Allen by a short stream called the Duibhachar. W. of Lough Allen there are the Yellow river, which rises near Bencroy, and flows past Ballinamore to Lough Garadice; the Eslin, which flows through several small lakes into Lough Boffin; the Rinn, which rises near Feenagh, and passes through Lough Rinn on its way to join the Shannon; and several smaller streams and lakes. The Drowes and the Duff, which are the respective outlets of loughs Melvin and Gill, possess salmon fisheries. Trout and other fish are plentiful in all the loughs and rivers, and herrings, sprats, cod, whiting, and ling, are caught in abundance off the coast.—The geological formation of the county corresponds with the character of its surface. The fertile valleys in the S.W. have a substratum of limestone, covered with a dark rich loam, while those in the N. rest upon conglomerate, sandstone, and greywacke. The subsoil of the sides of the hills is more commonly clay-slate. The mountains round Lough Allen are chiefly formed of millstone grit, while those farther N. are mountain limestone. The Old Red sandstone occurs on the sea-coast. The granite and trap found on the western side of the Bonnet, with the gneiss and mica slate of Benbo, are the only primary rocks in the county. Coal and iron are plentiful on the W. of Lough Allen, and lead, copper, and manganese on the mountains near Manorhamilton. There are sulphur springs at Drumsna, Meelock, Athimonus, Drumshanbo, and Cashcarrigan, and chalybeate spas at the northern extremity of Lough Allen and at Oakfield, near the coast.—The climate is cold and damp, and subject to sudden changes. The land is more suited for grazing than for agriculture, and though the dairies are neither large nor numerous, still, as nearly each family possesses a cow or two, large quantities of butter are made for exportation to England. The best breeds are a cross between the old Leicester and Durham for the lowlands, and between the Leicester and the native long-horn for the uplands. The new Leicester breed of sheep, or a cross between that breed and the sheep of the country, are found to thrive exceedingly well. The breed of pigs is not so good as in other parts of Ireland, and the horses are not equal to those of Longford, Roscommon, and Sligo. The agricultural capabilities of the county are not sufficiently developed, and modern improvements are but sparingly used. The most fertile tracts are the valleys of the Shannon, Rinn, and Bonnet, and the flat country in the S.W. of the county. The chief crops are oats, potatoes, and flax, but wheat, barley, and clover are becoming more common. Good orchards and kitchen gardens are found attached to most of the farmhouses. The food of the country people is chiefly oaten bread and potatoes, with buttermilk and fish. Meat is not within the reach of the lower classes. The majority of the inhabitants can speak English.—Leitrim is divided into the following five baronies: Carrigallen, Dromahaire, Leitrim, Mohill, and Rosslogher, which contain 14 parishes and parts of 3 others. There are four market towns—Carrick-on-Shannon, Manorhamilton, Ballinamore, and Mohill. The first mentioned is the county, assize, and sessions town; the first three have quarter sessions courts; and the first two, with Mohill, are the heads of Poor-law Unions. The above towns, with Dromahaire, are the heads of police districts, there being in all 39 stations, the chief station being at Carrick. The county returns two members to the House of Commons. At the Union, before which six members were returned, Carrick and Jamestown were disfranchised, but the former is still the place of election for the county. The population in 1851 was 111,915, and in 1861, 104,744. The local government is in the hands of a lieutenant and custos, a high sheriff, 16 deputy-lieutenants, and 55 magistrates. The county is in the Connaught circuit and the Belfast military district. The barracks of the regulars are at Carrick, and the headquarters of the militia at Mohill. The revenue police have stations at Drumshanbo, Manorhamilton, Mohill, and Drumkeeran. The county prison is at Carrick, and there are court-houses and bridewells also at Manorhamilton and Ballinamore. The county infirmary is situated at Carrick, and dispensaries in that town and at Ballinamore, Carrigallen, Drumsna, Kinlough, Kiltubrid, Manorhamilton, and Mohill. Leitrim has the right of sending 34 patients to the Connaught lunatic asylum at Ballinasloe. Leitrim is in the dioceses of Kilmore and Ardagh. The earldom of Leitrim was granted in 1795 to Robert Clements, who had previously held the barony and viscountcy.—The manufactures in the county are unimportant, the principal being the spinning of flax and weaving of linen. Friezes, flannels, and other coarse woollen stuffs are also made, and the flannel especially is considered as good as any made in Ireland. At Dromahaire and Leitrim a considerable quantity of common pottery is manufactured.—The antiquities of interest in Leitrim are, the Druid stones at Feenagh, Creeoles, and Letterfyan; the abbeys of Feenagh, founded in the 5th century by St. Caillin, Creeole, founded by the wife of Owen O'Rourke in 1508, Annaduff, Clone, Ince, and Kilnaile; and the castles at Dromahaire, Longfield, Cloncarrick, and Car—all of which belonged to the O'Rourks—Drumlease, Jamestown, Castlefore, Castlejohn, Dungarbery, and two on Lough Gill. The castle at Manorhamilton is a handsome building of the time of Elizabeth. The seats of the nobility and gentry in the county are, Manorhamilton, of the Earl of Leitrim; Lough Rhynn, Viscount Clements; Portland, White; Hollymount, Armstrong; Killycar, Godley; Kilbracken, Irwin; Belhaville, Montgomery; Derrycairne, Nisbet; Garradice, Percy; Drincy House, Peyton; Clooncorrick, Simpson; Kilronan Castle, Tenison; and Glenfarn Hall, Tottenham.—The Midland Great Western railway from Longford to Sligo runs through the S. of the county, passing Newtownforbes, Rooskey, Dromod, Drumsna, and Carrick-on-Shannon. Another line from Enniskillen to Bundoran and Sligo is also being constructed. There is a canal from Carrick-on-Shannon to Ballyconnell or Lough Erne. The roads and distances from Carrick are, to Leitrim, 3 miles; Drumshambo, 8 miles; Drumkeeran, 22 miles; Lough Balhavel, 25 miles; Dromahaire, 29 miles; Sligo, 39 miles; Manorhamilton, 33 miles; Lough Glenade, 39 miles; Kinlough, 44 miles; Bundoran, 46 miles; and Ballyshannon, 57 miles: to Kiltogher, 4 miles; Feenagh, 12 miles; Ballinamore, 14 miles; and Newton Gore, 19 miles: to Drumsna, 3 miles; Drumote, 9 miles; Longford, 16 miles; and Dublin, 90 miles: to Mohill, 9 miles; Cloone, 13 miles; Carrigallen, 20 miles; and Cavan, 30 miles.

LEITRIM, a bar. in the co. of Leitrim, prov. of Munster, Ireland. It is bounded by the bars. of Dromahaire, Carrigallen, and Mohill, and the co. of Roscommon. It is 11 miles long, and its greatest breadth is 7 miles. It contains the pars. of Kiltoghert, Kiltubbrid, and parts of those of Annaduff, Fenagh, and Mohill, with the towns of Carrick-on-Shannon and Drumsna.

LEITRIM, a vil. in the par. of Kiltoghert, in the bar. and co. of Leitrim, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 4 miles S. of Drumshanbo. It is situated on the left bank of the river Shannon, and on the road from Carrick-on-Shannon to Manor-Hamilton. It is supposed to have anciently been a town of some importance. It was called Leathdroman, and gave name to an ancient diocese and to the county of Leitrim. A six-arched bridge spans the river, and there are some vestiges of an ancient structure of unknown origin. Fairs are held on the 22nd January, 21st February, 25th March, 5th May, 16th June, 23rd July, 1st September, 13th October, and 1st December.

LEITRIM, a bar. in co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland. Its boundaries are the bars. of Kilconnel, Longford, Lough Derg, and co. Clare. It is 24 miles long, and its greatest breadth is 9 miles. It contains the pars. of Ballynakill, Clonrush, Kilcooly, Kilreekill, Leitrim, and parts of Abbeygormacon, Duniry, Inishcaltra, Kilbarron, Killoran, Kilmeen, Kitteskill, and Tynagh, with the town of Mountshannon.

LEITRIM, a par. in the bar. of Leitrim, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 4 miles S.E. of Loughrea. Portumna is its post town. The par. is 3 miles long by 2 broad. It lies at the base of the Slieve Boughty mountains. The soil is generally good, and the road from Loughrea to Mountshannon crosses the interior. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Clonfert, val. with Lickmolassey, £436. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Killaneen and Kilcooly. There is a day school. Carrow-Keel is the principal residence.

LEITRIM, a par. in the bars. of Condons and Coshmore, cos. Cork and Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles N.E. of Fermoy. Kilworth is its post town. It is 5 miles long by 3 broad. The surface consists of a tract peninsulated by the river Blackwater and the small stream Araglin. It is mountainous and pastoral for the most part, and is crossed by the road from Fermoy to Lismore. Limestone, building stone, and slate are quarried. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Cloyne, val. with Kilworth, £712, in the patron. of the bishop. There are two hedge-schools.

LEIXLIP, a par. post and market town, in the bars. of Newcastle and North Salt, cos. Kildare and Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 10 miles W. of Dublin. It is a station on the Midland Great Western railway. The par. is 2 miles long, and about the same broad. The surface consists of a good soil, and is bounded on the S. by the river Liffey, and the Royal canal traces the northern border. The Rye joins the Liffey at the town, near which is a waterfall or salmon-leap. An aqueduct carries the canal across the Rye. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Dublin, val. with others, £527, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church stands in the town, likewise a Roman Catholic chapel united to that of Maynooth. There are two day schools. Leixlip House is among the seats. Leixlip Castle occupies a prominent site on the banks of the Liffey near the town. It was formerly the seat of the Whites, from whom it was purchased by the Right Hon. William Conolly. It was built by Adam Fitz-Henford, and was some time the residence of King John, while Earl of Mortaigne. It is now the residence of the Hon. George Cavendish. A spa here was formerly much celebrated, and attracted great numbers of visitors. The town is seated at the confluence of the Liffey and Rye, on the road from Dublin to Athlone. It consists chiefly of one street, and contains a police station. A three-arched bridge spans the river. There are rolling and flour mills in the vicinity. Saturday is market day. Fairs are held on 4th May and 9th October.

LELANT, or UNY LELANT, a par. in the hund. of Penwith, co. Cornwall, 3 miles S.E. of St. Ives, 6 N.E. of Penzance, and 1 mile from St. Erth station, on the West Cornwall railway. It is bounded on the N. by St. Ives Bay, and on the E. by Hayle harbour and river. It belongs to Praed of Trevethow, and is included within the borough of St. Ives. The par., which is of considerable extent, contains the hmlts. of Gunwyn and Trink, and Hayle lighthouse. When the tide is out, carriages can cross to St. Ives by Hayle, thus saving a distance of several miles. Near the sea-shore the surface is partly overwhelmed with drift sands, but in other districts it is gravelly, producing good wheat crops. The substratum is chiefly granite, greenstone, killas, and felspar; but the first predominates, forming the substance of the various hills with which the surface is diversified. Tin and copper are abundant, and the following mines are at present in operation—Weal Margery, Providence, East Wheal Margaret, Wheal Kitty, Wheal Mary, Wheal Wreeth, and Lelant Consols. A fine yellow clay is found here, much in request for building furnaces and ovens. The principal residences are Trevethow and Treadreath—the latter, an old Tudor building, was a seat of the Hoskinses. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. with Towednack, £441, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Ewny, is an ancient stone structure, with a square embattled tower containing six bells. Surrounding it are banks of land, and in the churchyard are several ancient crosses. There are two places of worship for Wesleyans, also National and Sunday schools—the latter held at the church. A fair for the sale of cattle is held on the 15th August.

LELLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Preston, middle div. of the wap. of Holderness, East Riding co. York, 3 miles N.E. of Hedon, 2 N. of Preston, and 8 N.E. of Hull. It is a small agricultural place. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1769. There is a small chapel-of-ease.

LEMAN, a feeder of the river Exe, in co. Devon.

LEMAN, a sandbank in the North Sea, off the coast of Norfolk, about 25 miles N.E. by E. of Cromer, in N. lat. 53° 8′ and E. long. 2° 1′. It extends nearly 15 miles N.W. and S.E., and is marked out by two floating lights put up in 1840, which may be seen at the distance of 10 miles.

LEMANGHAN, a par. in the bar. of Garrycastle, King's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, containing its post town, Ballycumber. It is 7 miles long, and its greatest breadth is 4. The surface is boggy, with a large proportion of pasture land. The river Brosna passes from the southern to the eastern boundary. The Grand canal infringes on the S.E., and the road from Dublin to Loughrea traverses the interior. The living, also called Kilnagarenagh, is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Meath, val. £340, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built partly by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits, in 1826. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Ballinahown. There are several day schools. Doon is the principal seat. The church is said to occupy the site of a monastery dedicated to St. Manachan, which was lost sight of early in the 13th century. There are ruins of two or three castles, one of which was the seat of the O'Mooneys, near Doon House.

LEMINGTON, LOWER, a par. in the hund. of Tewksbury, co. Gloucester, 2 miles N.E. of Moreton-in-the-Marsh, its nearest railway station and post town, and 5 from Shipston-on-Stour. The parish, which is of small extent, is situated on the Strafford railway and the ancient Fosse Way, where coins, &c., have been found. There is no village, only a few farmhouses. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £27. The church, dedication unknown, is a very small ancient edifice, with a turret containing one bell. The charities produce about £16 per annum, chiefly the bequest of Dr. Juxon, Archbishop of Canterbury. Lord Redesdale is lord of the manor.

LEMMINGTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Edlingham, N. div. of Coquetdale ward, co. Northumberland, 4½ miles S.W. of Alnwick. It contains the hmlts. of Lemmington Mills and Battlebridge. Lemmington Tower was rebuilt by the Pawsons, who inherited the manor through the Fenwicks.

LEMNO WATER, a tributary of the river Esk, in co. Forfar, Scotland, rises near Kerriemuir, and joins the Esk at Aberlemno.

LEMORNA, a cove on the coast of Cornwall, 5 miles S.W. of Penzance. It is famed for violet axinite which is picked up here.

LEMPITLAW, a vil. in the par. of Spronston, co. Roxburgh, Scotland, 4 miles E. of Kelso.

LENACRE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Dent, and par. of Sedbergh, West Riding co. York, 2 miles from Dent, and 9 N.E. of Kirkby-Lonsdale. It is situated near the river Dent.

LENBOROUGH, a hmlt. in the par. and borough of Buckingham, co. Bucks, 1 mile S. of Buckingham.

LENCH, ABBOTT'S, or HOB-LENCH, a hmlt. in the par. of Fladbury, co. Worcester, 5 miles N. of Evesham.

LENCH, ATCH, a hmlt. in the par. of Church-Lench, lower div. of the hund. of Blackenhurst, co. Worcester, 6 miles N. of Evesham.

LENCH, CHURCH. See CHURCH-LENCH, co. Worcester.

LENCHES, a tnshp. in the par. of Bury, higher div. of the hund. of Blackburn, co. Lancaster, 8 miles N.W. of Manchester. It is a joint township with Coupe.

LENCH, ROUSE, a par. in the hund. of Middle Oswaldslow, co. Worcester, 1 mile N.W. of Church-Lench, and 6 miles N. of Evesham. It contains the hmlt. of Radford, which is a meet for the Worcestershire hounds. The soil in the uplands is a rich loam, and in the lower grounds marl. The substratum is a tenacious clay used for brick-making, for which there are several kilns. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1778. The village is small, and wholly agricultural. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £346. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient structure with Norman traces. It contains monuments and tombs of the Rouse family, who formerly held the manor.

LENCH, SHERIFFS, a hmlt. in the par. of Church-Lench, lower div. of the hund. of Blackenhurst, co. Worcester, 5 miles N.W. of Evesham.

LENCHWICK, a tythg. and chplry. in the par. of Norton, lower div. of the hund. of Blackenhurst, co. Worcester, 2 miles N. of Evesham, its post town. The village consists of a few farmhouses. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Norton, in the dioc. of Worcester. The church, which was dedicated to St. Michael, has been demolished.

LENDRUM, a hill in Monquhitter, co. Aberdeen, Scotland, where Donald of the Isles was defeated by the Cumines.

LENE, a lough in the northern part of co. Westmeath, Ireland, near Castle Pollard. It is 3 miles long by 1 mile broad, and has upon its banks Lough Park.

LENHAM, a par. and post town in the hund. of Eyhorne, lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, 9 miles N.W. of Ashford, 10 S.E. of Maidstone, and 7 N.E. of Headcorn. It is situated near the source of the river Stour, and at the foot of the scarp of the chalk hills. The parish derives its name from the small river Len, which rises here, and flows into the Medway at Maidstone. The land is chiefly arable, with a considerable extent of pasture and woodland, and 180 acres of hop-grounds. The soil consists of chalk and loam. There are quarries of Kentish ragstone. The village, which is still considerable, was once a market town. The road from London to Folkestone passes through the parish. The appropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £1,205, and the vicarial for £670. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £381. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient edifice with a square tower at the W. end, containing eight bells. It is situated at the S. end of the town. The interior of the church contains sixteen ancient stalls, formerly used by the monks of St. Augustine's Abbey, at Canterbury, when they visited their estate in this parish. There is also a stone confessional, several ancient monuments, and a recumbent figure in long robes in a recess. The register dates from the reign of Queen Elizabeth. The Independents have a place of worship. There are six almshouses for widows, founded and endowed by Anthony Honeywood, Esq., in 1622. There are newly-constructed National schools for children of both sexes, which have a small endowment bequeathed by John Ford in 1766. Chilston Park, about 1½ mile S. of the village, is the principal residence, and the seat of J. S. Douglas, Esq., who is lord of the manor. Fairs are held on 6th June and 23rd October for cattle and horses.

LENNEL, NEW, a vil. in the par. of Coldstream, co. Berwick, Scotland, 1 mile N.E. of Berwick. It was the ancient name of the parish, and was burnt during the Border wars. The principal residence is Lennel House, the seat of the Earl of Haddington.

LENNIE WATER, a tributary of the river Spey, rises under Scarsoch, co. Inverness, Scotland.

LENNOCK WATER, a tributary of the Lossie, co. Elgin, Scotland. It has a course of about 10 miles, and on its bank are the remains of Plascarden Abbey.

LENNOX, an extensive district adjoining the Leven, including the whole of Dumbartonshire and parts of cos. Stirling, Perth, and Renfrew, Scotland. On the Stirlingshire border are the Lennox hills, some of which attain an altitude of 1,400 or 1,500 feet.

LENNOX CASTLE, two ruins of this name, one in Clarinch, co. Stirling, on the banks of Loch Lomond, and the other on Leith Water, near Currie, co. Edinburgh, Scotland.

LENNOXLOVE. See LETHINGTON, co. Haddington.

LENNOXTOWN, a post-office vil. in the par. of Campsie, co. Stirling, Scotland, 5 miles S. of Fintry. It is the terminus of the Campsie branch of the Edinburgh and Glasgow railway. The village, which is situated under the Lennox hills, is very considerable, and is chiefly inhabited by calico-printers and colliers. In the vicinity are extensive lime and alum works. It is a polling-place for the county, and the seat of a small-debts court.

LENTON. See LAVINGTON, co. Lincoln.

LENTON, a par., tnshp., and suburb of Nottingham, in the S. div. of the wap. of Broxtow, co. Nottingham, 1½ mile S.W. of Nottingham, its post town. It is a station on the Nottingham and Mansfield section of the Midland Counties railway. The parish is situated on the banks of the river Leen, a small branch of the Trent, near its confluence with that river and the Nottingham and Cromford canal, which passes through the village. It contains the chplry. of Hyson-Green, and the extensive park of Bestwood, belonging to the Duke of St. Alban's, which is 5 miles distant from the village. Lenton belongs to the honour of Peveril, the court-house being situated here till a few years ago, when it was abolished. It was granted by William the Conqueror to his son William Peveril, who founded a Cluniac priory here, subordinate to the abbey of Cluny, but which was made denizen on the suppression of alien priories. It continued to flourish till the Dissolution, when its revenues were returned at £417 19*s.* 3*d.* In the fifth year of Elizabeth the site and remains were granted to John Harrington. Lenton, from its proximity to Nottingham, is engaged in various and extensive trades. The village is spacious and well built, and contains several large factories, chiefly for lace, machinery, agricultural implements, leather, and starch; there are also two extensive malting establishments, several steam flour-mills, tanneries, chemical works, iron foundries, and bleaching establishments. Adjoining the town are collieries belonging to Lord Middleton, the seam of coal being near 5 feet thick. At New Lenton are baths and tea-gardens. In the vicinity the land is chiefly rich meadow, with several acres of market-garden. The soil is sandy, but extremely fertile. The detached portions of the parish known as Bestwood Park and Hyson Green are chiefly arable. The tithes were commuted for land under Enclosure Acts in 1767 and 1796. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £250, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, was erected in 1842, at the expense of £5,000, chiefly contributed by F. Wright, Esq. It has a tower containing a clock and six bells. It contains a large square-figured font said to be Saxon. There is also a district church at Hyson-Green, partly in this parish, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £150. The charities produce about £200 per annum. There are National—built by Mr. Wright at an expense of £2,000—also infant schools, built by the Misses Wright. The Independents, Wesleyan Methodists, Kilhamites, Old Methodists, and General Baptists have each a place of worship. There are many residences in the parish, including Lenton Priory, built on the site of the old priory, and containing a portrait of Nell Gwynne, &c.; Lenton Hall, Lenton Grove, and Lenton Lodge, the seat of the Wrights. George Gregory, Esq., is lord of the manor. Fairs for horses, pigs, and cattle are held on Whit-Wednesday, 11th November, and St. Martin's Day.

LENTRAM, a railway station on the Inverness and Aberdeen Junction line, 6 miles from Inverness.

LENTRATHEN, or LINTRATHEN, a par. in the Grampian district of co. Forfar, Scotland. It is situated about 9 miles W. of Kirriemuir. It comprises the hmlts. of Pitmudie and Bridgend, together with a post-office station of its own name. Its length from N. to S. is about 11 miles, and its greatest breadth 6. The greater part of the surface consists of several eminences, which in some cases attain a height of nearly 1,000 feet. There are about 3,000 imperial acres under tillage, and 1,200 in wood. The chief streams are the Isla, the Slug of Alchrannie, the Back water, and the Melgam water. The par. is in the presb. of Meigle, and synod of Angus and Mearns. The minister's stipend is £160. The church is a modern structure. There are parochial and private schools. The Earl of Airlie is the chief heritor.

LENY, a par. in the bar. of Corkaree, co. Westmeath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 1 mile S. of Multyfarnham. Rathowen is its post town. It is 4 miles long by 1 mile broad, and contains the vils. of Ballinalack and Brumbrusna. The surface consists generally of prime land. Loughs Iron and Hoyle, in the S., diversify the landscape. The parish is crossed by the road from Dublin to Sligo. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Meath, val. £67. The church is a very prominent object. It was built in 1812 by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. There are four daily schools in the parish. The seats are Lakeview and Clandagh House.

LENY, a demesne in co. Perth, Scotland, 2 miles N.W. of Callander. It is situated near the falls of Leny Pass, at the bottom of Loch Lubnaig. It was given by Alexander II. to Alan de Lani in 1237, and now belongs to the Hamiltons of Bardowie.

LENZIE, an ancient par. in co. Dumbarton, Scotland, now forming part of the pars. of Cumbernauld and Kirkintilloch, to which it was united in 1659.

LEOCHEL, a quoad sacra par. in the par. of Coull, co. Aberdeen, Scotland, 1 mile E. of Farland, and 3 miles from Aboyne.

LEOCHEL AND CUSHNIE, an united par. in the Alford district of co. Aberdeen, Scotland. It is 6 miles S. of Alford, its post town. Its length eastward is about 6 miles, and its breadth averages from 3 to 6 miles. The surface is mountainous, and attains a height at Soccoch, or the Hill of Cushnie, of nearly 2,000 feet above sea-level. About 5,500 imperial acres of the parish are under tillage, 3,800 are waste or moor, 1,000 woodland, and the same number in pasture. The soil for the most part is clayey. The Leochel is the chief stream. The par. is in the presb. of Alford, and synod of Aberdeen. The minister's stipend is £190. The parish church, built in 1798, is a commodious structure. There are a United Presbyterian church, a Free Church preaching station, two parochial schools, two endowed and another school. The parishes of Leochel and Cushnie were permanently united in 1795. Ruins of the ancient churches of the respective parishes still remain. A good many of the inhabitants are employed in knitting, and in the manufacture of woollen goods. Craigievar Castle, one of the principal seats, is the mansion of Sir William Forbes, Bart., who is the chief landowner. Hallhead, Cushnie, and Corse castles are the other buildings of note; the last was built in 1581, and is now a ruin. In the neighbourhood are camps, cairns, and Picts' houses. Patrick Forbes, Bishop of Aberdeen, and other distinguished members of the same family, were natives of this place. Fairs are held on the second Tuesday in March, and the first Friday in November.

LEOMINSTER, a par., market town, municipal and parliamentary borough, exercising separate jurisdiction, but locally in the hund. of Wolphy, N. div. of co. Hereford, 12½ miles N. of Hereford, 11 from Ludlow, and 157 W.N.W. of London. It is a first-class station on the Shrewsbury and Hereford line, and the junction station of the Leominster and Kington railway. The par., which is over 7 miles in length, is situated in the midst of a most luxuriant and fertile district, abounding with orchards, hop-grounds, gardens, and fruitful valleys. It is watered by the three rivers Lugg, Pinsley, and Kenwater, which flow through the town, besides the river Arrow, and several other streams, which traverse the "out-parish." Besides the borough of Leominster, the par. includes the tnshps. of Brierley, Broadward, Chorlstrey, Eaton, Hennot, Hyde Ash, Ivington, Newtown, Stagbatch, Wharton, and Wintercott, with the new ecclesiastical district of St. John's, Ivington. It was anciently a place of great strength, bordering on the Welsh marches, and is said by Leland to have derived its name Leofminstre from a minster or monastery founded here about 658 by Merewald, the Saxon king of West Mercia, who had a castle or palace about half a mile to the E. of the town. In 777 it was taken by the Danes, assisted by the Welsh, who burnt the nunnery, and again in 1055 by the Welsh chieftains, who refortified the castle; but it was shortly after reduced by Harold, who stationed a garrison here. At the time of the Domesday Survey the manor, with its appurtenances, belonged to Editha, queen of Edward the Confessor; and in the reign of William II. the fortifications were strengthened, to secure it against the incursions of the Welsh. In the reign of John the town, priory, and church were plundered and burnt by William de Braose, Lord of Brecknock. In 1187 Archbishop Baldwin and Giraldus the historian preached the crusade here in Merewald's nunnery, which had then become a college or priory, attached to Shaston and Reading abbeys. In the reign of Henry IV. the town was in possession of Owain Glyndwr, after his victory over Mortimer, Earl of March, whom he took prisoner, and confined in a house in Church-street, now a stable. Upon the defeat of Glyndwr at Ivington Camp in 1404, it submitted to Prince Henry, afterwards Henry V. In the next century the inhabitants took an active part in the establishment of Mary on the throne, defeating Lady Jane Grey's partisans at Cursneh Hill, for which service she granted them their first charter of incorporation, dated 28th March, 1553. By this charter the Court of Record, for recovery of debts under £100, which has been only recently discontinued, was constituted; power given to have a separate court of quarter sessions, a gaol, coroner, certain markets, annual fairs, and many other privileges, and lands. In the civil war of Charles I. the town was taken by Waller in 1643, but was retaken by Charles in 1645.—It has returned two members to parliament since the reign of Edward I.; and under the Reform Act its boundaries were enlarged, so as to include the whole of the parish. The population of the borough in 1851 was 5,214, and in 1861, 5,660. Under the Municipal Reform Act the town is governed by a mayor, 4 aldermen, and 12 common councilmen, with the style of "bailiffs and burgesses of the borough of Leominster." The acreage of the town is 1,150, but of the borough 9,290, with an income of £671. The town business is managed by commissioners for paving, lighting, and improving, who meet quarterly, and were appointed under the recent Act of Parliament, by which many important privileges were conferred. The borough magistrates, who exercise separate jurisdiction, meet at the townhall every Thursday; and the county justices for the lower division of the hundred of Wolphy hold petty sessions at the county police station every Friday. The new county court meets monthly, and has superseded the ancient Court of Record. It is a polling place for the election of knights for the shire, and the mayor is the returning officer for the borough.—The town consists of several spacious and well-paved streets, which are kept remarkably clean, and are lighted with gas. The shops are large and well supplied; and many of the private houses are handsome, some even fine specimens of Elizabethan domestic architecture, with their projecting fronts, supported by grotesquely carved brackets, heads, gable boards, &c. The new buildings are in general of a superior class, suited to the growing prosperity of the town, which has a thriving general trade, chiefly in agricultural produce, as corn, timber, wood, bark, cider, cattle, and sheep. There are also a few trades carried on, as tanning, leather-dressing, wool-stapling, malting, flannel-weaving, brick-making, leather glove making, and coarse cloth manufacture, but these two last have declined. In the vicinity are several corn-mills, an oil-mill, and a printing-ink manufactory. The public buildings are—the townhall, an Italian structure, just completed at the cost of £3,000. It has a frontage of nearly 60 feet, and is 160 feet in length, surmounted by a cupola and clock tower rising to the height of 70 feet from the pavement. It contains a council chamber 45 feet by 30 feet, session-rooms, retiring-rooms, &c. Adjoining the townhall, and forming, as it were, a portion of it, is the new market-house, 125 feet long by 40 feet wide, and upwards of 22 feet high, fitted up with stalls, packing-rooms, &c., and covered with a roof of corrugated galvanised iron, supported on two rows of iron pillars. The Butter Cross, a beautiful example of Elizabethan timber work, was erected in 1633 by John Abel, the "king's carpenter," consisting of a series of spacious rooms, supported by twelve Ionic pillars of oak, with arches, spandrils, and other ornamental carved work, described by Clayton, in his "Ancient Timber Edifices," as "the most interesting building of the kind in the kingdom." It was taken down on the building of the new townhall, which it adjoins, but is re-erected on the Grange, a large open space in the centre of the town. The gaol, a neat brick edifice, erected in 1750, stands in New-street. The county police station is a modern building, erected on the site of the theatre, which last, while it stood, was an object of great interest, having been built in the 13th century. The union poorhouse, with which was incorporated the remaining portion of the old priory in 1836; the excise-office, in South-street; the post-office, in Drapers'-lane; the stamp-office, in Broad-street; and the savings-bank, in Burgess-street, which last is a new building of brick, with Bath stone dressings. There are besides two branch banks, several reading-rooms and book societies, subscription and circulating libraries, insurance offices, young men's mutual improvement society; two bridges over the Kenwater, one of stone, and the other of iron; several clubs and associations, including the agricultural and horticultural, which hold several shows during the season, cricket club, angling association, philharmonic society, &c.—It is the head of a Poor-law Union embracing 24 parishes, also the seat of new County Court and superintendent registry districts. One newspaper, the Leominster Gazette, is published in the town. Near the town was a good race-course, where races were held in August; but since this was cut through by the Shrewsbury and Hereford railway, the races have been discontinued. The harriers and other hounds are kennelled in the neighbourhood. —On Shrove Tuesday, when the bell rings at noon, the good people of the town still keep up the old custom of frying their pancakes. This place gives the title of Baron "Lempster" to Earl Pomfret, though the manor is held by John Arkwright, Esq., of Hampton Court, in this parish, who inherits it from the Villiers family, through the Coningsbys and H. Martin the regicide.—Leominster gives name to a deanery in the archdeac. and dioc. of Hereford. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £230 with augmentation from Queen Anne's bounty, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, was partly burnt in 1700, but has been restored. It is an irregular and massive structure, exhibiting specimens of every style of Norman and English architecture, and has been recently described by an eminent architect as "one of the noblest examples of this variety of Gothic architecture in existence." The tower at the N.W. angle is of Norman character at the base, but of later styles in the upper stages, surmounted by an embattled parapet and pinnacles, and containing a peal of eight bells, and a clock that chimes. The western doorway is ornamented with pillars and receded arched mouldings. The southern part of the edifice is modern, and is appropriated to the performance of Divine service. It contains the communion-table supported by two full-length figures of Moses and Aaron, and the altar-piece, a painting of the Last Supper, after Rubens. The old Norman nave, which formed a part of the original monastic structure, and is far-famed for its Norman architecture, and which for centuries past has been disused, except as a place of interment, has, within the last year, been restored, with a painted ceiling, at a cost exceeding £2,000. There are also several monuments, tombs of the Hackluyts of Eyton Hall, and of J. and S. Ward, grandparents of Mr. Kemble and Mrs. Siddons; a carved font, recently presented by the rural dean, the Rev. W. E. Evans; three decorated sedilia, a piscina, and richly chased antique communion service. There is also a district church at Ivington, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £100, in the patron. of the vicar. The church of St. John's, Ivington, situate 3 miles W. of the town, was erected in 1841. There are places of worship for Baptists, Wesleyans, Moravians, Society of Friends, Unitarians, Llewellynites, Plymouth Brethren, Primitive Brethren, and local missionaries, which last have a new chapel in Etnam-street, called the Town and County Mission, first opened in 1855. The charities produce about £155 per annum, including £25, the endowment of Clarke's almshouses for four widows, founded in 1735, and £20, the income of Queen Mary's grammar school, situated in Church-street. Archbishop Peckham's "Chapelle in the Fourbury," a very ancient edifice of the 13th century, is now converted into a lawyer's office. Gothic schools, comprising a boys' and girls', National, and infant schools, with a master's residence, have been recently erected at a cost of nearly £3,000. There are besides British and Foreign schools, Society of Friends' girls' school, St. John's schools at Ivington, and Sunday-schools in connection with the several denominations.—"Almory Close" was the site of the Almonry or Almsbury. Within the parish are several ancient earthworks, as Ivington Camp and Cursneh Hill Camp, from which is a fine view, as also from Eyton and Croft-Ambrey hills. Price, the local historian, and the two monks William and John of Leominster, were natives of the town.—Friday is market day, the chief markets being on the first Friday in every month, and the Friday before the 11th December, called "the great market before Christmas;" also a small butter and poultry market on Tuesdays. Fairs are held on the 13th February, Tuesday after Mid-Lent Sunday, 2nd May, 29th June, 10th July, 4th September, 17th October, 8th November, and the Friday after 11th December.

LEOMINSTER, or LYMINSTER, a par. in the hund. of Poling, rape of Arundel, co. Sussex, 2 miles S.E. of Arundel, itspost town, and 1½ mile from Littlehampton. It is a station on the South Coast railway. It is a small agricultural village situated on the road from Worthing to Portsmouth, and near the river Arun. The par. contains the tythg. of Warning-Camp, anciently a chplry. A Benedictine nunnery was founded here in 1070 as a cell to Almanasche, in Normandy, by Roger de Montgomery, Earl of Arundel, which, on the suppression of alien priories, was given to Eton College. There was also a priory of Black Canons at Pynham, founded by Adeliza, the second queen of Henry I., which continued till the Dissolution, when its revenue, amounting to £43, was granted to Cardinal Wolsey, towards the endowment of his intended colleges. The impropriate tithes, belonging to the Provost and Fellows of Eton College, have been commuted for a rent-charge of £375, and the vicarial for £350. The impropriate glebe comprises 5 acres valued at £10 per annum. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £350, in the patron. of Eton College, on the nomination of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene, is a very ancient edifice, with a square tower containing six bells. There is a free school, endowed by the late Mr. Wyatt with the interest of £5,000 three per cents., for children of this and Rustington parish. On the Causeway hill in this parish is a chalybeate spring.

LEONARD, ST., a chplry. and hmlt. in the par. of Aston-Clinton, hund. of Aylesbury, co. Bucks, 3 miles S.E. of Wendover, and 4 N.E. of Aylesbury. It is a small agricultural place situated near the Wendover and Aylesbury canals. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £170, in the patron. of trustees. The church is a small ancient edifice. The Rothschild hounds meet here.

LEONARD, ST., a par. in the hund. of Wonford, co. Devon, comprised within the borough of Exeter, which see.

LEONARD, ST. See POCKTHORPE, co. Norfolk.

LEONARD, ST., a par. in the district of St. Andrew's, co. Fife, Scotland, adjoining the city of St. Andrew's.

LEONARD, ST., two small places of this name in co. Hants, one near the mouth of the river Beaulieu, the other 3 miles S.W. of Ringwood. At the former are the remains of the grange of Beaulieu Abbey, measuring 226 feet in length by 67 wide and 60 high.

LEONARD'S, ST., or ST. LEONARD-ON-SEA, a par. and fashionable watering-place, chiefly in the hund. of Baldslow, but having a detached portion in the hund. of Guestling, rape and borough of Hastings, co. Sussex, 1 mile W. of Hastings, within which borough it is included, and 62 miles S.S.E. of London. It has stations on the London, Brighton, and South Coast, and Hastings branch of the South-Eastern railways. It is entirely of recent origin, having been begun in 1828 by James Burton, Esq., who purchased this valley from the Eversfield estate. In 1832, having laid out the general plan of the town, Mr. Burton obtained an Act of Parliament "for the better lighting, watching, paving, &c., the town of St. Leonard's-on-Sea." It consists of several terraces facing the sea, and built under the shelter of the cliffs. It contains good hotels, libraries, baths, assembly rooms, public gardens, and archery ground, which last obtained the patronage of Queen Victoria, who stayed here for some months in 1834 with the late Duchess of Kent. The success of the first undertaking led to the extension of the town, which is now connected by one uninterrupted line of houses with Hastings Old Town. The parish is of small extent, a part, including the site of the old church, having been washed away by the sea. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Chichester, val. with that of St. Mary Magdalene, £1,100. The church is a Gothic structure, erected in 1831 by Mrs. Burton. There are numerous private academies, and several charities supported by voluntary contributions. Quarry House is the residence of Sir Woodbine Parish.

LEONARD'S, ST., FOREST, comprising about 11,000 acres, in co. Sussex, 5 miles E. of Horsham. It anciently formed part of the extensive forest called Andredswold.

LEONARD'S, ST., HILL, a seat in Windsor Forest, co. Berks, near Sunning Hill.

LEONARD STANLEY, or STANLEY ST. LEONARD'S, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Whitstone, co. Gloucester, 1½ mile S. of Stonehouse, its post town, 3½ miles W. of Stroud, and 1 mile E. of the Frocester station on the Gloucester and Bristol railway. The manor was held at the time of Domesday Survey by Richard de Bercklai, or Berkeley, one of whose descendants founded a priory cell to the Benedictine abbey at Gloucester. At the Dissolution its revenues were returned at £126, and the site was given to the Kingstone family. The parish, which is inconsiderable, is situated near the Stroudwater canal, and on the road from Gloucester to Stroud. An extensive view may be obtained from a hill called Sandford's Knoll. The soil consists of clay and sand. The village, which was once a market town, was burnt down in 1686. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £200. The church, dedicated to St. Swithin, is an ancient cruciform structure of stone, with a tower containing four bells. In the interior are tombs of Crosse, the last prior, and of the Sandfords, who partly rebuilt the priory in 1750. The charities produce about £32 per annum. The Rev. J. P. Jones is lord of the manor. Fairs are held on St. Swithin's Day and the 6th November.

LEPPINGTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Scrayingham, wap. of Buckrose, East Riding co. York, 8 miles S.W. of New Malton, its post town, and 2 from Scrayingham. It is a small agricultural village situated near the river Derwent. Gypsum is found here, and about 18 inches below the surface is a stratum of petrified marine shells. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the rect.* of Scrayingham, in the dioc. of York. The church is ancient, and formerly was a chantry to Missenden. Lord de Grey is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

LEPTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirkheaton, Upper div. of the wap. of Agbrigg, West Riding co. York, 4 miles S.E. of Huddersfield, its post town. This tnshp., which is very populous, contains the vils. of Great and Little Lepton, and seven other hmlts. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the manufacture of woollen cloths and fancy goods. Divine service is performed here on Sunday afternoons and evenings. There is a newly erected National school for both sexes. The Primitive Methodists have a chapel at Leptonfields, and the Wesleyans one at Cowms. There is a mechanics' institute at Lascelles Hall, and one at Leptonfields.

LERI, a river of co. Cardigan, falling into Cardigan Bay, above Aberystwith.

LERRIG, a vil. in the bar. of Clanmaurice, co. Kerry, Ireland, 7 miles N.W. of Tralee.

LERWICK, a par. and post town situated on the mainland or largest island of the Shetland group, Scotland. The par. is 6 miles long, and does not exceed a mile in breadth. Its eastern coast, with the opposite island of Bressay, forms the spacious harbour called Bressay, or Lerwick Sound, which is a good anchoring ground. The surface is hilly and rocky, and consists for the most part of peat or moss. Old Red sandstone is quarried. The par. is the seat of a presb. in the synod of Shetland. The minister's stipend is £158. The United Presbyterians, the Free Church, the Independents, and the Methodists have each a place of worship. At Gulberwick are the ruins of several chapels. There are the remains of a Pictish castle near the town. Sir A. Nicholson of Gremista is the chief landowner. The town, situated on the E. coast of the mainland, at the centre of Bressay Sound, is 95 miles from Kirkwall, and 21 N.E. of Samburgh Head. The town, the principal one in Shetland, occupies a lunated segment of the sea-shore about half a mile in length, and becomes gradually more elevated as it recedes from the coast. The principal street extends through the whole length of the town, following the curvature of the sea-shore, and there are numerous lanes and closes running to the higher parts of the town. The houses are built of a species of grey sandstone, and, save in the more modern parts, are placed irrespective of order. Fort Charlotte, which protects the harbour, was originally built in Charles II's reign, but rebuilt in 1781, when it received its present name in honour of the consort of George III. The chief buildings are the parish church, the Free church, and an edifice which is used as a court-house, town-house, and prison. The trade of the town is more extensive than its population would indicate. Almost the whole produce of Shetland, consisting of salted fish, beef, oil, butter, and hosiery, passes to market through the merchants of Lerwick, and by them in like manner are imported all the colonial produce and manufactured goods used throughout the islands. The only manufactures are the making of herring nets and the knitting of articles of hosiery. The herring fishery employs upwards of 660 boats and about 4,000 persons. In 1859 the tonnage entered inwards in the foreign, colonial, and coasting trade, amounted to 27,437, and the entries outwards to 24,570. The number of vessels registered at the port was 68, with an aggregate tonnage of 2,372. There is weekly steam communication with Aberdeen, Leith, and Kirkwall. The town is a burgh of barony. Its municipal government is vested in two bailies and nine councillors, with a separate board of police, all of whom are elected by the burgesses. The sheriff, commissary, and admiralty courts for Shetland are held at Lerwick every Thursday during session. A justice of peace small-debt court is held on the first Tuesday of May, and on the first Wednesday of every other month.

LESBURY, a par. partly in the S. div. of Bambrough ward, and partly in the E. div. of Coquetdale ward, co. Northumberland, 3½ miles E. of Alnwick, its post town, and half a mile N.E. of the Bilton railway station. The village, which is small, is situated on the N. bank of the river Alne, over which is a bridge, and on the Hexham turnpike road. The parish is bounded on the N. by Long Houghton, on the S. by Shilbottle, on the E. by the German Ocean, and on the W. by the parish of Alnwick. It includes the tnshps. of Lesbury, Alnmouth, Hawkhill, Bilton, and Worden. There is a large corn mill in the neighbourhood. The soil is loamy, with subsoil clay and gravel. The river Alne falls into the German Ocean at Alnmouth, where considerable quantities of grain are shipped for the London market. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £269, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a very ancient structure, with a square tower containing three bells, and was restored in 1846. There is also a district church at Alnmouth, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £100, in the patron.

of the Duke of Northumberland. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. The parochial charities produce about £5 10s. per annum. A Church of England school was erected in 1857 at the expense of the Duke of Northumberland, who is lord of the manor.

LESGRIFFIN, a vil. in the bar. of Orrery, co. Cork, Ireland, 3 miles from Buttevant.

LESKEARD. See LISKEARD, co. Cornwall.

LESK WATER, a feeder of the Bann, co. Wexford, Ireland.

LESLIE, a par. in the district of Garioch, co. Aberdeen, Scotland. It is about 4 miles square, and is watered by the rivulet Gadie, a stream celebrated by Arthur Johnston in his Latin poems. The surface of the parish is hilly, and there are about 2,000 acres under tillage. Here is found a greenish coloured amianthus, which is easily cut and formed by the common people into snuff-boxes and other trinkets. The par. is in the presb. of Garioch and synod of Aberdeen. The minister's stipend is £159. The parish church is a modern structure. There are a Free church, Independent chapel, and a parochial school. Leslie House, now in ruins, was once the seat of the barons of Leslie. Several remains of Druidical temples, cairns, and an ancient encampment, exist. Hay of Rannes is chief landowner.

LESLIE, a par. and post town in the co. of Fife, Scotland, 12 miles S.W. of Cupar, and 3 W. of Markinch. It is connected to the Edinburgh, Perth, and Dundee railway by a branch line from Markinch. The length of the par. eastward is about 5 miles, and its greatest breadth 4. The northerly part of the par. is situated on the Lomond hills. About 4,300 imperial acres are in tillage, 1,000 pasture or waste, and 350 woodland. Coal, limestone, and trap are worked. The par. is in the presb. of Kirkcaldy and synod of Fife. The minister's stipend is £257. The church is a modern structure. Here the United Presbyterians have two churches, the Free Church one, and the Baptists a chapel. Within the parish are five schools. Leslie House possesses a picture gallery. It is the seat of the Earl of Rothes, one of the chief landowners. Strathendry House is a structure in the Elizabethan style of architecture. There are six flax spinning mills, corn mills, and one paper mill. Hand-loom weaving employs a large number of the inhabitants. The original name of the parish was Fetkill; its present one is taken from the family name of the earls of Rothes. The town of Leslie is seated on the summit of a ridge rising from the Leven on the southern, and from a shallow vale on the northern side. It is situated on the public road up the Vale of Leven, leading into co. Kinross. It consists principally of one street running from E. to W., and is a very ancient place. The streets, which are lighted with gas, are irregularly built, and the houses old, being built in many cases with the gable ends to the street. At the eastern entrance of the town is a public green, formerly the scene of various pastimes, and the place of annual meeting for the pedlars or packmen of Scotland. There is a savings-bank, and a branch of the Union Bank of Scotland. Leslie is a burgh of barony, and is governed by two bailies and sixteen councillors. The Earl of Rothes is superior of the burghs. The inhabitants pride themselves for their upright dealing, in support of which they adduce as fact that no lawyer is to be found in their town. Fairs are held on the first Thursday in April (old style) and on the 10th October.

LESMAHAGOW (popularly called ABBEY GREEN), a par. in the Upper ward of the co. Lanark, Scotland, 12 miles S.E. of Hamilton, and 6 N.W. of Douglas Mill. It includes the post-office station of Lesmahagow, and the vils. of Boghead, Crossford, Hazelbank, Kirkfieldbank, Kirkmuirhill, and New Trows. It measures in length about 14 miles, and its greatest breadth is 12 miles. The surface is irregular, and there are about 21,000 acres in tillage, and 11,000 in pasture or waste. The rivers are, the Clyde, Nethan, Douglas-water, Logan, Kype, and Peniel. Coal, limestone, and sandstone, abound in the district. A considerable number of the inhabitants find employment in weaving for the Glasgow manufacturers. The par. is in the presb. of Lanark and synod of Glasgow and Ayr. The charge is collegiate. Each of the ministers has a stipend of £324. The parish church, a modern and commodious structure, is situated at Abbey Green. Here are two United Presbyterian churches, one Free church, and one Reformed Presbyterian church. At the village of Lesmahagow, which is lighted with gas, there is a branch of the Western Bank of Scotland, and a savings-bank. Here are the ruins of Craig-Nethan or Dauphane Castle, overhanging the Nethan, in which the unfortunate Queen Mary took refuge after her escape from Loch Leven Castle. Among the rocks in the southern part of the parish is Wallace's Cave. The road from Glasgow to Lanark intersects the parish. There is a branch line communicating with the Caledonian railway. There was formerly a weekly market held at the village. Fairs are held, but they are merely devoted to holiday amusements.

LESNEWTH, a hund. in co. Cornwall, contains the town of Camelford, and the pars. of Advent, Altarnum, St. Clether, Davidstow, Forrabury, St. Genny, St. Juliot, Lanteast, Lanteglos, Lesnewth, Michaelstow, Minster, Otterham, Poundstock, Tintagel, Trenegloss, Trevalga, and Warbstone, comprising an area of 67,000 acres.

LESNEWTH, a par. in the above hund., co. Cornwall, 5 miles N. of Camelford, its post town, and 15 from Launceston. The par., which is situated near the Bristol Channel, is wholly agricultural. The soil is a dark loam, upon a subsoil of rock, well adapted both for arable and pasture. The surface is hilly, and the lower lands are watered by several brooks. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £190. The church, dedicated to St. Knet, is an ancient stone structure with a square tower containing five bells. It has a carved roof and ancient font. There is a place of worship for Dissenters. Sir J. B. Y. Buller, Bart, M.P., is lord of the manor.

LESSINGHAM, or LASINGHAM, a par. in the hund. of Happing, co. Norfolk, 3½ miles N.E. of Stalham, its post town, and 8 S.E. of North Walsham. The village, which is small, is situated near the coast. It formerly had a priory cell to Ogbourne Abbey, in Wiltshire, founded in the reign of William Rufus. On the suppression of alien priories it was granted to Eton College, and subsequently to King's College, Cambridge. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £235. The living is a rect. with that of Hemstead annexed, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure with a square embattled tower. It contains part of an ancient carved screen and a Norman font. The register dates from 1558. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. There is a National school, supported by subscription. The manor is in possession of King's College, Cambridge.

LESSNESS, a hund. in the lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, co. Kent, contains the pars. of Crayford, Erith, Plumstead, and East Wickham, comprising an area of 10,410 acres.

LESSNESS HEATH, a hmlt. and chplry. in the par. of Erith, hund. of Lessness, and lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, co. Kent, 3 miles N.W. of Dartford, and 2 from Crayford. In Lesness or Abbey Park was formerly an Austin canonry, founded in 1178 by Richard de Lucy, Lord Chief Justice of England, who assumed the habit, and shortly after died in the house. Its revenue at the Dissolution was estimated at £186 9s., and was granted to Cardinal Wolsey towards the endowment of his colleges. The site subsequently passed to the Sadlers, and is now the property of St. Bartholomew's Hospital. In 1857 All Saints chapel was opened for Divine service, built at the expense of Sir Culling Eardley Eardley, Bart. The living with a residence is valued at £200 per annum. There is a place of worship for the Baptists, also a National school for both sexes.

LESSUDDEN, a vil. in the par. of St. Boswell's, co. Roxburgh, Scotland, 4 miles S.E. of Melrose. It formerly gave name to the parish.

LESWALT, a par. in the Rhinns of Galloway, co. Wigton, Scotland, 4 miles N.W. of Stranraer. Its length is 8 miles, and its greatest breadth 7. The surface of this district is most agreeably varied with hill and dale, while from the sea the coast presents bold and rocky features. A large proportion of the parish is pasture. The parish is watered by several brooks, the chief being Piltanton burn. Here are sandstone and greywacke quarries. The par. is in the presb. of Stranraer, and synod of Galloway, in the patron. of the crown. The minister's stipend is £143. The church is a modern structure. At Sheuchan there is a chapel-of-ease. There are two Free churches, and also three non-parochial schools. Lochnaw Castle is an ancient structure delightfully situated, at present the seat of Sir Andrew Agnew, one of the chief landowners. There is a monument, 70 feet high, erected by public subscription to the memory of the late Sir Andrew Agnew.

LETCHMORE HEATH, in co. Herts, 3 miles N.E. of Watford.

LETCHWORTH, a par. in the hund. of Broadwater, co. Herts, 2 miles N.E. of Hitchin, its railway station and post town, and 2½ S.W. of Baldock. The village, which is inconsiderable, is situated near the source of the river Hiz. The surface is hilly, and the scenery diversified. The soil consists of clay and loam. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £240. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £318. The church is an ancient structure with a tower containing one bell. The Rev. John Alington is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

LETCOMBE-BASSETT, a par. in the hund. of Kintbury-Eagle, co. Berks, 3 miles S.W. of Wantage, its post town. The par., which is of small extent, is situated in the Vale of the White Horse, near Letcombe Castle camp. It is crossed by the ancient Icknield Street, here called Ridge Way. The village is wholly agricultural. The land is chiefly arable. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1772. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £215, in the patron. of Corpus Christi College. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a small structure with a square tower. The charities consist of a fuel allotment and of a few cottages for the poor. There is a place of worship for the Wesleyan Methodists. Dean Swift, while residing at the rectory, wrote his pamphlet entitled "Free Thoughts on the Present State of Affairs."

LETCOMBE-REGIS, a par. in the hund. of Kintbury-Eagle, co. Berks, 1½ mile S.W. of Wantage, its post town. It is situated on a branch of the river Ock, and near the Wilts and Berks canal. The par., which is of large extent, contains the chplries. of East and West Challow. The land is chiefly arable. To the N. of the village, which is wholly agricultural, the Roman Icknield Street crosses the Vale of White Horse. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £200, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Winchester, who are impropriators. The parish church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is a neat structure with a square embattled tower containing six bells. There are also district churches at East and West Challow, the livings of which are perpet. curs., val. £100. The parochial charities produce about £18 per annum, of which £8 goes to Fethplace's school. There are National and infant schools. On the summit of the chalk hills to the S. of the village is an extensive quadrangular entrenchment called Letcombe Castle, supposed to be Roman.

LETHAM, a post-office vil. in the par. of Dunnichen, co. Forfar, Scotland, 5 miles E. of Forfar, and 11 W. of Arbroath. It is a place of modern date, founded by the late Mr. Dempster, and thrives by the manufacture of linen cloth, a branch of industry which gives employment to a large proportion of the inhabitants. It contains a townhall, police station, Free church, an United Presbyterian church, and Independent chapel. Fairs are held on the Thursday after the 22nd January, 15th May, Monday after the 21st July, and 23rd November.

LETHAM, a post-office vil. in the par. of Monimail, co. Fife, Scotland, 4 miles W. of Cupar. A fair is held on the third Wednesday in June.

LETHEM, two small places of this name, one near Arbroath, co. Forfar, and the other near Haddington, co. Haddington, Scotland.

LETHENDY, a par. in the Stormont district of co. Perth, Scotland, 5 miles S.E. of Blairgowrie, its post town. The par. is 5 miles long from E. to W., and 1½ mile at its broadest point. There are about 1,480 imperial acres under tillage, and 150 acres in pasture and wood. The Lunan water runs along the eastern boundary. It is in the presb. of Dunkeld, and synod of Perth and Stirling, and is united to Kinloch, in the patron. of the crown. The minister's stipend is £211. The parish church answers both for this and Kinloch parish. The United Presbyterians have a church here. There is a parochial school. Lethendy House, a very ancient structure, is the only notable seat. Roman antiquities have been discovered in the neighbourhood.

LETHENTY, a hmlt. in the district of Garioch, co. Aberdeen, Scotland, 3 miles from Inverury, and 17 N.W. of Aberdeen. It is a station on the Old Meldrum branch of the Great North of Scotland railway. It is situated near the confluence of the rivers Don and Ury. The principal residence is Lethenty House, the seat of the Skenes.

LETHERINGHAM, a par. in the hund. of Loes, co. Suffolk, 2½ miles N.W. of Wickham Market, its post town, and 3½ S. of Framlingham. The village, which is small, and wholly agricultural, is situated on the river Deben. It had formerly a Black priory cell to St. Peter's, Ipswich, founded by Sir J. Bovile. The site was given to the Nauntons, one of whom, Sir Robert, author of the "Fragmenta Regalia," built a large house near the old priory, part of which has been pulled down, and the remainder converted into a farmhouse. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to that of Hoo, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient edifice, and formerly belonged to the priory. It has a tower and nave, but the chancel is in ruins. It contains tombs of the Boviles, Nauntons, and Wingfields, and a brass in tabard bearing date 1399. There is a National school. The Duke of Hamilton is lord of the manor.

LETHERINGSETT, a par. in the hund. of Holt, co. Norfolk, 1½ mile W. of Holt, its post town. The village, which is small, and wholly agricultural, is situated in the deep and well-wooded valley of the river Glarvin, and on the road from Fakenham to Holt. An extensive brewery gives employment to a number of hands. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £245. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £227. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient structure with a round tower containing three bells. Letheringsett Hall, the principal residence, is surrounded by richly-wooded grounds. In the meadow belonging to the hall several ancient spears and warlike weapons were dug up in 1810.

LETHINGTON, or LENNOXLOVE, an ancient tower in co. Haddington, Scotland, 3 miles from Haddington. It anciently belonged to the Giffords, but is now the property of Lord Blantyre. It is famed in story for Secretary Lethington's walk. Here is preserved the portrait of Frances, Duchess of Lennox, by Lely, which gave the original idea of "Brittania" on the current coin.

LETHNOTT AND NAVAR, an united par. in the co. of Forfar, Scotland, 6 miles S.E. of Brechin, its nearest post town. It is 13 miles long and measures about 6 miles at its broadest part. It is situated in the midst of the Grampians, and consists of a strip of cultivated land, with considerable tracts of moors and wastes. The soil of some parts of the arable land is a rich loam and in others clayey. The streams are the water of Saugh, the Westwater, Pelphrie Burn, and several brooks. The par. is in the presb. of Brechin and synod of Angus and Mearns, in the patron. of the crown. The minister's stipend is £158. The parish of Navar gave the title of baron to the Panmures. In the neighbourhood are several cairns and Druidical remains.

LETTERFEARN, or ARDINTOUL, a district in the par. of Glenshiel, co. Ross, Scotland. It extends along the shore of Loch Duick.

LETTERFINDLAY, a post-office station on the E. shore of Loch Lochy, in co. Inverness, Scotland, 15 miles N.E. of Fort William.

LETTERKENNY, a small post and market town, in the par. of Conwall, in the bar. of Kilmacrenan, co. Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 7 miles S.W. of Rathmelton, and 146 from Dublin. It is situated on the left bank of the river Swilly, and consists principally of one long street. It contains Conwall church, a Roman Catholic and three Protestant chapels, a bank, court-house, fever hospital, dispensary, bridewell, and a one-arched bridge which spans the river. It is an assize town and police station. Letterkenny Poor-law Union has 14 electoral divisions in co. Donegal. The presbytery comprises Carigart, Dunfanaghy, Fannet, Letterkenny, Kilmacrenan, Milford, Ray, Ramelton, Ramullen, and Trenta. Friday is market day. Fairs are held on 12th May, 10th July, 11th August, and 8th November.

LETTERLUNA, or LITTER, a par. in the bar. of Ballybritt, King's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles N.E. of Kinnetty, containing the vil. of Cadamstown. The par. is 4 miles long, and its average breadth about 2 miles. The surface is very mountainous, comprising Black Gap and the Spink Mountain summits, which attain respectively the heights of 1,602 and 1,087 feet. The roads from Clonaslea to Roscrea, and from Mountrath to Frankford, traverse through the interior. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Killaloe, val. with Kinnetty, £231, in the patron. of the bishop. There are a Roman Catholic chapel and two day schools.

LETTERMACAWARD, a par. and post-office vil. in the bar. of Boylagh, co. Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 7 miles W. of Glenties. Ardara is its post town. The par. is 10 miles long and about 2 in average breadth. The surface extends along the right bank of the Guibarra river, with Trawenagh Bay on the N., which partly peninsulates the parish. It is crossed by the road from Glenties to Dunglo. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Raphoe, val. £90, in the patron. of the crown. The church was built in 1788, chiefly at the expense of the late Board of First Fruits. There are a Roman Catholic chapel and two daily schools. Fairs are held on 20th February, 20th May, 20th August, and 1st October.

LETTERMORE, an island at the mouth of Kilkerran Bay, in the bar. of Moycullen, co. Galway, Ireland. It is about 3 miles in length by 2 broad.

LETTERMULLEN, an island off Gulin Head, in the bar. of Moycullen, co. Galway, Ireland, near Gorumna Island. It is 2 miles in length by 1½ mile broad.

LETTERSTON, or LETTARDSTON, a par. in the hund. of Dewisland, co. Pembroke, 8 miles W. of Haverfordwest, its post town, and 4 from Fishguard. The village is situated on a branch of the river Cleddau. It derives its name from its ancient proprietor Lettard, who gave the advowson of the church, with the chapel of Llanfair, to the preceptory of the Knights of St. John of Jerusalem at Slebech. The living is a rect.* with the cur. of Llanvair-Nant-y-Gove annexed, in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £387, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is dedicated to St. Giles. In the chancel is an effigy to Lettard. Heathfield Lodge is the principal residence.

LETTIKEEN, a vil. in the bar. of Burrishoole, co. Mayo, Ireland, 4 miles N.W. of Newport.

LETTON, a par. in the hund. of Stretford and Wolphy, co. Hereford, 12 miles W. of Hereford, its post town, and 6½ S.W. of Weobley. The village, which is small, is situated on the northern bank of the river Wye, and on the road from Hereford to Hay. The land is partly in hops, and the soil principally clay. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £230. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £221. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is an ancient stone structure with a tower containing three bells. In the interior of the church are several tablets to the Blisset family. The charities, with those of Stanton-on-Wye, produce about £462 per annum. The Rev. Henry Blisset is lord of the manor, and resides at Letton Court.

LETTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Leintwardine, hund. of Wigmore, co. Hereford, 8 miles S.W. of Ludlow, and 6 S.E. of Knighton. It is joined to Walford. There is a National school.

LETTON, a par. in the hund. of Mitford, co. Norfolk, 4 miles W. of the Thuxton railway station, 4 N.W. of Hingham, and 1 mile S.E. of Shipdham, its post town. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Blackwater, near the East Anglian section of the Great Eastern railway. The soil is extremely rich, and the dairy farms have long been famed for excellent butter and milk. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £198 14*s*. The living is a rect. consolidated with that of Cranworth, in the dioc. of Norwich. There is no church, the inhabitants frequenting the church of Cranworth. Letton Hall, the principal residence, was formerly the seat of the Bramptons, and subsequently of the Gurdons, who came over from Gourdon, in Normandy, with the Conqueror. It is a mansion of white brick, surrounded by a large park abounding with oaks. There are some allotment lands for the poor.

LETWELL, a chplry. in the par. of St. John Throapham, S. div. of the wap. of Upper Strafforth, West Riding co. York, 5 miles S.W. of Tickhill, and 5 N.W. of Shireoak railway station. It is a small agricultural village. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to that of Firbeck, in the dioc. of York. The church, dedicated to St. James, is a stone structure, with a tower erected in the early part of the 16th century. Sir Thomas Woollaston White, Bart., is lord of the manor.

LEUCHARS, a par. in co. Fife, Scotland. It is 9 miles in length by 5 in breadth, and is bounded on the E. by the German Ocean. It is drained by the river Eden on the S. and S.W. The surface is for the most part level, and the soil tolerably fertile. There are about 6,300 acres under tillage, 3,120 in pasture, and 300 woodland. Trap is the predominant rock, and is worked for building purposes. The par. is in the presb. of St. Andrew's and synod of Fife, in the patron. of the crown. The minister's stipend is £253. The church is very ancient, and considered one of the most perfect specimens of Saxon architecture in Scotland. It is supposed to have been erected in the 12th century, and contains 850 sittings. Here are two Free churches—the one at Leuchars and the other at Balmullo. There is a parochial library and several private schools. Earlshall, a mansion erected about the early part of the 17th century, contains a fine hall. The castle of Leuchars has disappeared. Pitcullo, Pitlethie, and Ardit are the other mansions. A large number of Roman coins were discovered in 1808 on Craigie Hill. The parish is intersected by the Edinburgh, Perth, and Dundee line, which has a station here. The village of Leuchars is situated about 1 mile from the coast, and 6 miles from St Andrew's, on the road from that town to Dundee. The inhabitants of the parish are employed in the manufacture of coarse linens, and in the district there are several mills of various kinds, together with an extensive distillery. Fairs were formerly held here, but are now discontinued.

LEUTHER, a river of co. Kincardine, Scotland. It rises above Auchenblae, and joins the North Esk above Maryport.

LEVAN, ST., a par. in the hund. of Penwith, co. Cornwall, 8 miles S.W. of Penzance, and 2 from St. Buryan. It is situated on the bold granite-bound coast near the Land's End, and contains the celebrated Logan, or Rocking-stone, an immense block of granite poised on the summit of one of the three rocks called Castle Treryn, or Trereen Dynas Camp, overhanging the sea. The weight of this stone is supposed to be 90 tons; yet so nicely balanced as to be easily rocked to and fro by a single individual. In 1820, though considered almost the greatest curiosity in Cornwall, Lieutenant Goldsmith, with a party of sailors, in a frolic dislodged the mass; but, being reprimanded by the government, he took steps shortly afterwards to replace it, with the help of capstans, &c., when it was secured by chains. The village, which is small, is situated in a secluded dell opening to the sea. It is said to derive its name from a British martyr, whose well and ancient oratory still remain. The surface is boldly undulating, and in parts rocky, especially near the coast. At Cape Tolpeder-Penwith, which is separated from the mainland by an ancient stone wall, is the Funnel Rock, through which the sea dashes with tremendous noise. The substratum is chiefly granite and slate, and the soil killas. There is a copper mine 260 yards deep, employing several hundred miners. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. with St. Burian and Sennen, £1,004. The church of St. Levan, situated near Porth Kernow Bay, is a stone edifice, with a square embattled tower containing three bells. In the interior are several mural monuments, an ancient font, a register chest, and the tomb of Miss Dennis, an excellent Greek scholar, and author of "Sophia de St. Clare." There is a register of ancient date. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. There is a National school for this and the adjoining parish of Sennen.

LEVEDALE, a lib. in the par. of Penkridge, co. Stafford, 2 miles N.W. of Penkridge.

LEVELS, a hmlt. in the par. of Thorne, West Riding co. York, 2 miles S.W. of Thorne.

LEVELS GREEN, a hmlt. in the par. of Bishop's Stortford, hund. of Braughin, co. Herts, 2 miles N. of Bishop's Stortford, and 11 N.E. of Hertford. It is situated near the river Stort.

LEVELS, HIGH and LOW, hmlts. in the par. of Hatfield, wap. of South Strafforth, West Riding co. York, 3 miles S.W. of Thorne. These hamlets are situated at a short distance from the river Don, near Hatfield Chase.

LEVEN, a par. in the N. div. of the wap. of Holderness, East Riding co. York, 6 miles N.E. of Beverley, its post town. The land has been considerably improved by draining, and is well cultivated. The par. includes the tnshp. of Hempholme. Leven is an extensive and prosperous village, situated on the canal in conjunction with the river Hull, and on the Beverley and Bridlington road. The village consists of two streets crossing at right angles, with several detached houses. It contains a white brick building erected in 1852, for the convenience of the magistrates, and in which the petty sessions are held every alternate Thursday. Adjoining the court-house is a cell for prisoners. The principal trade is in corn, coal, lime, &c. At the enclosure of the parish, in 1790, a yearly modus and 136 acres of land were appropriated in lieu of tithes. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of York, val. £1,190. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, has a tower containing four bells. The interior of the church has an open-timbered roof, and the aisle is divided from the nave by four pointed arches supported by pillars. The E. window is of stained glass, in three compartments, with a trefoil light above. There is a parochial school for both sexes. The Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, and Independents have each a chapel. A curious ancient cross was dug up in the churchyard.

LEVEN, a post town and seaport in the par. of Scoonie, co. Fife, Scotland, 9 miles from Kirkcaldy, 4 from Wemyss, and 3 from Largo. It is a railway station on the East of Fife branch of the Edinburgh, Perth, and Dundee line. It stands on the coast of the Frith of Forth, at the mouth of the river Leven, from which the place takes its name. The town consists of three principal streets, irregularly built, but contains some good houses. It is connected with the village of Dubbieside by a suspension bridge. Not far from the town is the parish church. The United Presbyterians, the Free Church, and the Independents have each a place of worship. Here are branches of the City of Glasgow, the Commercial, and the Royal banks; and there is also a savings-bank, a gas company, and several insurance agencies. The harbour is of limited dimensions, and but few vessels can approach the quay at the same time. It ranks as a creek to the port of Kirkcaldy. The principal imports are timber, flax, ashes, and pig-iron; and the exports are linens, cast-iron, potatoes, and whisky. A vessel sails every Tuesday from this place to Leith. The staple trade of Leven is the preparation and spinning of flax, and the weaving of linens—the mills of the former especially employing a considerable number of hands. In the neighbourhood there is an iron foundry, a distillery, corn and other mills, brick and tile manufactory, &c. During the summer months the town is a resort for sea-bathing. The town is a burgh of barony, and includes the hmlt. of Scoonie Burn. It is governed by a baron bailie, before whom petty offences are tried. The sheriff's small-debt court is held here on the second Friday of March, the first Friday of June, and the last Fridays in the months of August and November. The town gives title of earl to the family of Melville. Fairs are held on the second Wednesday of April (old style), on the second Wednesday of June, on the first and last Wednesdays of July, and on the third Wednesdays of the months of August, September, and October.

LEVEN, a river of co. Dumbarton, Scotland. It has its source in Loch Lomond, and joins the Clyde near Dumbarton. On its banks are many print-works and bleach-grounds.

LEVEN, or FOSS RIVER, in co. Westmoreland, is the outlet for the waters of Lake Windermere, and falls into Morecombe Bay near Ulverstone, where the sands are 3 miles across.

LEVEN BRIDGE, a hmlt. in the pars. of Hilton and Stainton, North Riding co. York, 2 miles N.E. of Yarm. It is situated near the point where the river Leaven joins the Tees.

LEVEN LOCH, a sheet of water in co. Kinross, Scotland. It is situated to the E. of the town of Kinross, near the Lomond and Binnary hills. It is 3¼ miles by 2½, and 9 miles in circumference. It abounds with trout, pike, eel, and wild fowl. It underwent a partial drainage in 1829-30 at a cost of about £40,000, and this reduced its area to the amount of 1,000 acres. It contains four islands, the largest of which comprises about 48 English acres, and upon it stood the ancient priory of St. Serf, of which only a fragment now remains. On another island stand the ruins of Loch Leven Castle, which was founded by the Picts and given by Robert III. to the Douglasses, who had the custody of Archbishop Graham (who died here in 1478), and of Queen Mary in 1567-8 (who was here forced by Lindsay to sign her abdication). The rivers Gairney and Queich run into the loch, and the Leven river flows from its E. end 12 miles in an easterly direction past Balbedie Leslie to the Frith of Forth at Leven. Near the loch is Kinross House, the seat of the Grahams; Burleigh Castle, and Kinneswood, where M. Bruce, the poet, was born.

LEVEN, LOCH, on the E. side of Loch Linnhe, between cos. Argyle and Inverness, Scotland. It is 10 miles in length by 1 mile broad, and commands some fine views below the vale of Glencoe and the Ballachulish slate quarries.

LEVENS, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Heversham, ward of Kendal, co. Westmoreland, 3½ miles N.W. of Milnthorpe, its post town and railway station, and 5 S.W. of Kendal. It is situated on the river Kent, which is here crossed by a bridge, and near Levens Force waterfall, which is formed by the dam erected to work the powder mills at Sedgwick. The tnshp. includes the hmlts. of Beathwaite Green, Sizergh-Fell-Side, and Brigsteer. It came through the Redmans, Bellinghams, Grahams, to the Howards, whose venerable mansion, Levens Hall, is situated on the eastern bank of the Kent, embosomed in a wooded park, and crowned by towers which, overtopping the highest trees, command extensive prospects in all directions. It is an old Elizabethan seat with an entrance hall hung with ancient armour, most of the apartments wainscoted with exquisitely carved oak and hung with tapestry, part of which is gobeline. In the park, which is well stocked with deer, is a dropping well, and a ruin at Kirkstead, supposed to have been a Roman temple dedicated to Diana. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £200. The church is a modern structure, with a spired tower containing one bell. It was built and endowed by the late Honourable Colonel and Mrs. Howard.

LEVEN-SEAT, a hill in co. Lanark, Scotland, near Carnwath. It attains an altitude of about 1,200 feet above the sea.

LEVENSHULME, a tnshp. in the par. of Manchester, hund. of Salford, co. Lancaster, 3 miles S.E. of Manchester, its post town. It is a station on the London and North-Western railway. The village, which is large, is situated on the high road between Manchester and Buxton. There are two cotton mills and extensive print and bleach works. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Manchester. There is no church, Divine service being performed in the National school-room, which is liscensed for that purpose. The Wesleyans and Roman Catholics have each a chapel. There is a convent in Alma Park.

LEVENTHORPE, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Thornton, and par. of Bradford, West Riding co. York, 3 miles W. of Bradford. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the worsted mills and in neighbouring mines. Leventhorpe Hall is the principal residence.

LEVEN WATER, a tarn in co. Cumberland, 5 miles W. of Hawkshead. It lies under the Old Man mountain, and is about 1 mile in circumference.

LEVER-DARCY. See DARCY, LEVER, co. Lancaster.

LEVER, GREAT, a tnshp. in the par. of Middleton-le-Moors, hund. of Salford, co. Lancaster, 1½ mile S. of Great Bolton, its post town and railway station. The village, which is small, is situated on the great road from Bolton to Manchester. There are collieries, chemical works, and bleach grounds. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £33. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is a modern edifice, with a turret containing two bells. Adjoining the church is a school for both sexes, also a Sunday-school.

LEVERINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Wisbeach, Isle of Ely, co. Cambridge, 2 miles N.W. of Wisbeach, its post town and railway station. The par. is situated near the river Nen, and contains the chplry. of Parson Drove. It formerly had a chantry at Fitten End. A portion of the land is in common, though the greater part was enclosed by Act of Parliament in 1841. The soil consists of rich loam, but the surface is fenny. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £2,099, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is of great antiquity, and has a spired tower containing a clock and six bells. It was thoroughly restored in 1856. The interior of the church contains an old brass lectern or reading desk. There is also a district church at Parson Drove, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £271, in the patron. of trustees. This living was formerly held by Bishop Warren, and Nasmith, the editor of Tanner's "Notitia." The register dates from 1558. The charities produce about £600 per annum. There is an endowed school for both sexes, and a Sunday-school.

LEVER, LITTLE, a chplry. in the par. of Bolton-le-Moors, hund. of Salford, co. Lancaster, 3 miles S.E. of Great Bolton, its post town, and 1 mile N.W. of Bradley Fold station on the Liverpool and Bury line of railway. It is situated at the junction of the Bolton and Bury and the Bolton and Manchester canals, being bounded on the W. by the river Irwell. There are several collieries, cotton-mills, chemical works, and bleach-grounds. The village is populous. Most of the houses are modern. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £150, in the patron. of the Vicar of Bolton. The church, dedicated to St. Matthew the Evangelist, is a small structure of brick, with a turret containing one bell. There are National and Sunday schools. The Wesleyans and Independents have places of worship. Lever Hall, an ancient building, was once occupied by Bishop Bridgeman.

LEVERN, a quoad sacra par. in the pars. of Eastwood, Neilston, and Abbey, co. Renfrew, Scotland, 3 miles S.E. of Paisley. It is watered by the Levern Water, a tributary of the White Cart. The village, which is considerable, is chiefly inhabited by linen weavers. The par. is in the presb. of Paisley, in the patron. of the male communicants.

LEVERSDALE, a tnshp. in the par. of Irthington, ward of Eskdale, co. Cumberland, 7 miles N.E. of Carlisle, and 2 W. of Brampton. The village, which is considerable, is situated near the river Irthing, which rises in Spadeadam Moss on the borders of Northumberland, and joins the Eden near Warwick Bridge. There is a school with a small endowment.

LEVERSPOOL WATER, a tributary of the river Eden, in co. Fife, Scotland.

LEVERSTOCK GREEN, a hmlt. in the borough of St. Alban's, co. Herts, near St. Alban's. It contains a church, built by Earl Verulam in 1849, and dedicated to the Holy Trinity.

LEVERTON, a par. in the wap. of Skirbeck, parts of Holland, co. Lincoln, 6 miles N.E. of Boston, its post town. It is situated near the coast, on the turnpike road leading to Wainfleet. The par. contains the hmlt. of Outgate. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1810. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £759, in the patron. of the lord chancellor and A. Booth, Esq., alternately. The church, dedicated to St Helen, has a square tower containing four bells. The chancel contains three sedilia. The register dates from 1562. The charities produce about £150 per annum, chiefly the produce of 61½ acres of poor's land, but by whom given is not known. There is a National school at Outgate.

LEVERTON, a tythg. in the par. of Chilton-Foliatt, hund. of Kintbury-Eagle, co. Berks, 1 mile N. of Hungerford. It is situated on the river Kennet.

LEVERTON, NORTH, a par. in the North Clay div. of the wap. of Bassetlaw, co. Nottingham, 5½ miles N.E. of East Retford, its post town, and 6 S. of Gainsborough. It is a station on the Retford and Lincoln branch of the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire railway. The parish is situated near the river Trent, which here separates the counties of Nottingham and Lincoln. The village is small and wholly agricultural. The surface is level and the soil clayey, with some rich meadow land on the margin of the river. The tithes were commuted for land under an Act of Enclosure in 1795. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £181, in the patron. of the Bishop of Manchester. The church, dedicated to St. Martin, is an ancient structure, with a square embattled tower containing three bells. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. The charities produce about £5 per annum. G. S. Foljambe, Esq., is lord of the manor.

LEVERTON, SOUTH, a par. in the North Clay div. of the wap. of Bassetlaw, co. Nottingham, 5½ miles E. of East Retford, its post town, and 4½ N. of Dunham. It is a small agricultural village situated on the river Trent. In the W. of the parish the surface rises gradually to a considerable eminence, commanding a view of Lincoln Cathedral and the surrounding country. This par. contains the tnshp. of Cottam. The soil is chiefly clay, but towards the river a light loam alternated with sand. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1795, when 57 acres were added to the glebe. The living is a vic.* with the cur. of Cottam annexed, in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £134, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure, with a tower containing three bells. At Cottam is a chapel-of-ease. The parochial charities produce about £20 per annum, which goes to the grammar school founded by John Sampson in 1691. There is a place of worship for Wesleyans. G. S. Foljambe, Esq., is lord of the manor.

LEVESDON, a hmlt. in the par. of Watford, in the hunds. of Cashio and Dacorum, co. Herts, 3 miles N. of Watford.

LEVETT-HAGG, a hmlt. in the par. of Warmsworth, West Riding co. York, 2 miles S.W. of Doncaster.

LEVINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Colneis, co. Suffolk, 5 miles S.E. of Ipswich, its railway station and post town, and 7 S. of Woodbridge. It is a small agricultural parish situated on the N. bank of the navigable river Orwell. It contains the small hmlt. of Stratton Hall, and was the place where shellsand was first used in 1718. The living is a rect. united to that of Nacton, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. There was formerly a chapel-of-ease at Stratton, and a lazar-house. The charities produce about £15 per annum, chiefly the endowment of Hitcham's almshouses, founded in 1636. George Tomline, Esq., M.P., is lord of the manor.

LEVISHAM, a par. in the wap. of Pickering Lythe, North Riding co. York, 6 miles N. of Pickering, its post town, and 1 mile E. of the Levisham station on the Whitby branch of the North-Eastern railway. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. The soil consists of loam and sand on a subsoil of limestone and clay. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of York, val. £120. The church is a stone edifice, rebuilt in 1804, and contains two bells. The parochial charities produce about £15 per annum, which goes to the free school, built in 1799. A Sunday-school is also held in the free schoolroom. James Walker, Esq., is lord of the manor.

LEW, a hmlt. in the par. of Witney, hund. of Bampton, co. Oxford, 3½ miles S.W. of Witney. In the village is a small chapel-of-ease. Lew Heath is a meet for the old Berkshire hounds.

LEW, NORTH. See NORTHLEW, co. Devon.

LEWANNICK, a par. in the N. div. of the hund. of East, co. Cornwall, 5 miles S.W. of Launceston, its post town, and 9 N.W. of Callington. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. It is situated on the river Inny and the Launceston and Liskeard road. The surface is hilly. The soil is a rich loam, alternated with sand. A considerable portion of the land is in pasture, and much attention is given to the rearing of cattle, which are chiefly of the North Devon breed. At Pollyfont is a quarry of fine freestone of a rich green colour, with black veins, which, when polished, is used for mantelpieces and ornamental work. There are also several quarries of good building stone, and one of exceedingly hard slate. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £225, and the vicarial for £185. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £242, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Martin, is an ancient freestone structure, with a lofty square embattled tower crowned with pinnacles, and containing six bells. The church has tombs of the Lowers and Archers of Trelaske. There is a National school for both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is also held. The Wesleyans, Independents, Baptists, and Bible Christians, have each a chapel. Trelaske House is the principal residence, situated about 1 mile S.E. of the church.

LEWELL, a hmlt. in the par. of Knighton, co. Dorset, 3 miles E. of Dorchester.

LEWES, a rape in co. Sussex, contains the hunds. of Barcomb, Butting-hill, Dean, Fishergate, Holmstrow, Lewes, Poynings, Preston, Street, Swanborough, Whalesbone, and Younsmere, comprising an area of 126,240 acres.

LEWES, a hund. in the rape of Lewes, co. Sussex, co-extensive with the old borough. It gives name to an archdeac. and to a deanery in the dioc. of Chichester.

LEWES, or LEWIS, a par., market town, municipal and parliamentary borough, in the rape of Lewes, co. Sussex, 7 miles N. of its seaport, Newhaven, 8 from Brighton, and 50 from London. It has a station on the Brighton and South Coast railway. It is situated under the South Downs, on the navigable river Ouse, from which it derives its name, L'Ouse, translated in Domesday Book by L'Aquis. The town is of ancient date, and is supposed to occupy the site of the Roman Mutuantonis. It was a royal demesne in the Saxon times, and was made a mint town by Athelstane. After the Norman Conquest it was given by the Conqueror to his son-in-law, William de Warine, who built the castle, and, with his wife Gundrada, founded St. Pancras Cluniac Priory in 1078, in which they were buried. The priory extended over 32 acres, and contained a church 150 feet in length, with walls 10 feet thick. At the Dissolution, in the reign of Henry VIII., the greater portion of the monastery was destroyed, leaving some traces of the hall, gate, &c., which were removed in 1845 to make room for the station of the South Coast railway. During the excavation two leaden chests were discovered, containing the remains of William de Warine and Gundrada, the founders of the above priory, which have been deposited in a mausoleum on the S. side of the adjacent church of Southover. Lewes gives name to a decisive battle fought in 1264 on Mount Harry, in which Simon de Montfort took Henry III. prisoner.—The town is a borough by prescription, nominally governed by two constables, two head-boroughs, and other officers, annually chosen at the court-leet of the lords of the manor, viz. the Duke of Norfolk, Earl of Abergavenny, and Earl de la Warr. It has returned two members to parliament since the reign of Edward I., and under the Reform Act its boundaries have been greatly extended, so as to take in several adjoining hundreds. It is also the place of election, and one of the polling-places for East Sussex. The population in 1851 was 9,533, and in 1861, 9,709. The quarter and intermediate sessions for East Sussex are held in the town, as also petty sessions.—An extensive business is done in the grain and malt trade. There are also several large breweries and iron foundries, a paper-mill, several corn-mills, and a ship-building yard. The river Ouse is navigable from a distance of some miles above the town to the sea.—The town is well paved, lighted with gas, and bountifully supplied with water, under an Act passed in 1833. It consists of several streets, built on an acclivity rising from the western bank of the river Ouse, over which is a stone bridge of one arch, erected in 1727, and widened in 1829 by the addition of a footpath on each side. The streets are in general regularly built, and contain many good shops and houses. It contains the shirehall, which cost £15,500, where the winter and summer assizes are held; county gaol and house of correction, naval prison, corn and hop exchange and assembly rooms, market-house, literary and book societies, mechanics' institute, with museum and library, theatre, two union poorhouses, two banks, viz. Lewes Old Bank, and London and County Joint Stock Bank, savings-bank, and Star hotel, with an ancient dungeon for a wine cellar.—The livings are all rects.* in the dioc. of Chichester, varying in val. from £250 to £35. There were formerly twelve, but now only six churches, viz. St. Michael, St. Peter, and St. Mary, West-out, or, St. Anne, St. John-sub-Castro, All Saints, St. Thomas-at-Cliffe, and St. John, Southover. The church of St. Michael, situated in High-street, is an ancient edifice, restored in 1755. It contains two brasses, one of a knight in armour, bearing date 1400, and one of a priest. The church of St. John-sub-Castro is a massive Norman structure, of which only the nave remains standing. It contains a painting of the Presentation, after Rembrandt, and a curious Saxon inscription on the S. wall to Mangrius, a Danish soldier. The charities produce about £208 per annum, including the endowment of the free school, and of St. Michael's almshouses.—The public schools include the free grammar school, situated in High-street, founded and endowed in 1512 by Agnes Morley, and one of the oldest schools in England. It was carried on in Southover for 200 years, and was removed to its present site in the 18th century, when it was further endowed by Mrs. Mary Jenkins. At it Evelyn and the mathematician Pell were educated. It has at present an income from endowment of about £150 per annum, with a presentation, and £10 per annum to be distributed in prize books. There are British, National, and infant schools for both sexes, also South Malling parochial school. The Baptists, Unitarians, Society of Friends, Wesleyans, and Independents, have places of worship. The Westgate meeting-house was formerly a seat of the Gorings, and another is the burial-place of William Huntingdon, S.S., or "sinner saved."—Dr. Mantell first discovered in the chalk stratum on which this town stands the fossil remains of the megalosaurus, plesiosaurus, and other extinct lizards. Near the priory stood St. James's hospital, and at Glynd Bridge are traces of a Roman ford. Part of the town walls still remain, and there are extensive ruins of the old Norman castle, with its gateway of the time of Edward III., and double keep. This last is now fitted up as a museum of antiquities for the Sussex Archæological Society.—Lewes is the head of a Poor-law Union, and the seat of new County Court and superintendent registry districts. The county court is held monthly at the shirehall.—The newspapers published in the town are—the Sussex Advertiser on Tuesday; Sussex Agricultural Express, twice a week, on Tuesday and Saturday; and the Lewes Times, Eastbourne Chronicle, and Hailsham Observer, on Wednesday.—At Mount Harry, where the battle of Lewes was fought, is the racecourse, with a commodious stand, built in 1772. It was formerly one of the finest four-mile courses in the kingdom, but is now reduced to $2\frac{3}{4}$ miles. The races usually take place in March and August. A cattle show takes place about Christmas. Tuesday is market day for corn and hops, and every alternate Tuesday for sheep, cattle, and pigs. Fairs are held on Whit-Tuesday, 6th May for horses, 26th July for wool, and 21st September for Southdown sheep, which last is very extensive.

LEWESDON, a hill in co. Dorset, 2 miles W. of Beaminster. It serves with Pillesdon Pen Hill as a landmark for sailors, who term them the Cow and Calf.

LEWESOG WITH TREFYDD-BYCHAIAN, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanrhaidr-in-Kinmerch, co. Denbigh, 3 miles S.E. of Denbigh.

LEWESTON, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Sherborne, Sherborne div. of co. Dorset, 3 miles S. of Sherborne. It is a meet for Mr. Farquharson's hounds. Leweston House is the principal residence.

LEWIS, a district of Long Island, or Outer Hebrides, Scotland, forming the northern division, which is separated from Harris on the southern district by a ridge of lofty mountains, but the appellation of Lewis is also commonly applied to the whole island. The Harris district is in the co. Inverness, while that of Lewis is in the co. Ross, and comprises the pars. of Barvas, Locks, Stornoway, and Uig. The only town is Stornoway, but there are several villages. The surface of the country is less rugged than that of Harris, and attains a height at the mountain of Suaneval of about 2,700 feet. The superficial extent of the district is 561,200 acres, about three-quarters of which is moor or waste, and the rest rocky. There are numerous bays and inlets on the coast, where quantities of shell-fish are found; and the fisheries of herring and cod are prosecuted with success. The streams abound with trout and salmon. The district was a few years ago purchased by Sir James Matheson, Bart., for £190,000; and much has been done by that gentleman in the improvement of agriculture, the extension of manufactures and fisheries, and otherwise rendering the place more flourishing.

LEWISBURGH, or LOUISBURGH, an extensive bog in co. Mayo, Ireland, near the town of Louisburgh. It contains above 14,000 acres, and is drained by a stream of the same name falling into Clew Bay.

LEWISHAM, a par. in the hund. of Blackheath, lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, co. Kent, 1 mile from Greenwich, and 5 miles S.E. of London. It has stations on the North Kent and Mid Kent railways. It is situated on the river Ravensbourne, and on the high road to Sevenoaks and Tunbridge. It was anciently written Levesham, signifying "the dwelling among the meadows." The par., which is of large extent, contains the whole of Sydenham, Forest Hill, Brockley, Loampit Hill, Loat's Pit, and the greater portion of the hmlt. of Blackheath. It formerly had a Benedictine priory, a cell to St. Peter's Abbey, Ghent, to which it was given by Elthruda, Alfred's niece; but on the suppression of alien priories in the reign of Henry V., was transferred to the convent of Sheen. At the dissolution of monasteries it was seized by Henry VIII., and finally became the property of the Legges, earls of Dartmouth, from whence they take the inferior title of viscount. The village, which is situated on the river Ravensbourne, extends about 1 mile along the high road, and consists principally of one street. There are many good shops in the village, and the neighbourhood is thickly studded with gentlemen's seats and villas. It is lighted with gas, and is supplied with excellent water from a stream which rises at the upper end of the village and passes through it. There is a police station, and petty sessions are held at Croom's Hill, Greenwich. There are some brick fields and limestone quarries.—Lewisham is the seat of a superintendent registry, but belongs to Greenwich, and is a new County Court district. It is also the head of a Poor-law Union, comprising the following parishes:—Charlton, Eltham, Kidbrook, Lee, Lewisham, Mottingham, and Plumstead. The poorhouse, situated in the village, has accommodation for 200 inmates. The soil is extremely fertile, consisting of clay, gravel, and sand. There are marl and limestone quarries. The surface is well wooded. The Surrey canal passes through the parish. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of London, val. with Dartmouth chapel annexed, £1,100. The parish church, dedicated to St. Mary, and rebuilt in 1774, has a Corinthian portico on the S. side, and a square tower at the W. end, containing a clock and a good peal of bells. It sustained considerable injury from a fire in 1830, but has been restored. In the interior are tombs of the Petries, by Banks, and of Dean Stanhope, formerly vicar, with several others. In addition to the parish church, there are three district churches—All Saints, at Blackheath, St. Bartholomew's, at Sydenham, and Christ Church, at Forest Hill, the livings of which are all perpet. curs.* varying in val. from £300 to £100. There are also chapels-of-ease at Southend and Sydenham. The charities produce about £692 per annum, of which £343 go to Colfe's free grammar and reading schools, with exhibitions at either of the universities. Here is a British school for both sexes, also Congregational and infant schools. The Wesleyans, Independents, and Baptists have each a place of worship. The Earl of Dartmouth is lord of the manor. Bishop Duppa, who wrote part of the "Eikon Basilike," was born in this parish.

LEWISTOWN, EAST and WEST, hmlts. in the par. of Urquhart, co. Inverness, Scotland, 13 miles N.W. of Fort Augustus. They are situated near Loch Ness.

LEWKNOR, a hund. in co. Oxford. It includes part of the Chiltern range of hills, and is traversed by the Roman way Icknield Street. It contains the pars. of Adwell, Aston-Rowant, Britwell, Salome, Chinnor, Crowell, Emmington, Lewknor, Sydenham, Stokenchurch, and part of Kingsey, comprising an area of 19,780 acres.

LEWKNOR, a par. in the above hund., co. Oxford, 4 miles S.E. of Tetsworth, its post town, 5 S. of Thame, and $2\frac{1}{2}$ N.E. of Watlington. It is situated under the Chiltern hills, and contains the tnshps. of Lewknor-Uphill and Postcombe. The village is small, and wholly agricultural. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £280, in the patron. of All Souls' College, Oxford. The parish church of St. Margaret is an ancient structure, with a square tower containing a clock and five bells. The interior of the church contains a sculptured font and an effigy in stone, and a brass of a priest, bearing date 1390. It is the burial-place of the Scroops and Fanes, whose mansion and estate of Wormsley are partly in this parish. There is a district church at Cadmore End, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £150, in the patron. of the Bishop of Oxford (two turns) and All Saints College (one turn). Also a chapel-of-ease at Ashampstead. There is a National school for children of both sexes. Sir Richard Joddrell is lord of the manor.

LEWSTON, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Sherborne, co. Dorset, 4 miles S. of Sherborne.

LEWTRENCHARD, a par. in the hund. of Lifton, co. Devon, 9 miles N. of Tavistock, and 8 N.E. of Launceston. Okehampton is its post town. It is situated on a branch of the river Tamar, and includes the chief part of the small vil. of Lew Down, which is situated on the high road between Launceston and Okehampton. There are quarries of slate and limestone. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £265. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a stone structure, with a small tower containing five bells. There is a National school. Edward Baring Gould, Esq., is lord of the manor.

LEXDEN, a hund. in co. Essex, contains the divs. of Colchester and Witham, comprising 38 par. with an area of 62,060 acres. It gives name to a deanery in the archdeac. of Colchester and dioc. of Rochester.

LEXDEN, a par. in the above hund., co. Essex, 1½ mile W. of Colchester, within the liberties of which borough it is included. The great rampart from the marshes to the river Stour passed obliquely through this parish. The village, which is considerable, is situated on the road from Malden to Colchester. The land is chiefly arable, with some pasture. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £660. The Heath was enclosed in 1820. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £566. The church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, was rebuilt in 1820. There is a National school, erected in 1817, and endowed with £20 per annum by the late Mrs. Rawstorn. Roman antiquities are frequently met with, and there were until recently traces of a Danish encampment.

LEXHAM, EAST, a par. in the hund. of Launditch, co. Norfolk, 3 miles N. of Dunham station on the Lynn and Dereham railway, and 7 N.E. of Swaffham, its post town. The village is small, and wholly agricultural. The land is chiefly arable, with a small proportion of pasture and meadow, and about 70 acres of woodland. The Hall is situated in a small but well-wooded park. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £205. The living is a rect. united to that of Litcham, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is a small ancient structure, with a circular tower overgrown with ivy. There is a school for boys and girls, on the British and foreign system, built by the lord of the manor, Frederick Walpole Keppel, Esq., who is owner of the soil. There are several small charities for the poor.

LEXHAM, WEST, a par. in the hund. of Launditch, co. Norfolk, 2 miles S.E. of Rougham, 6½ from Swatham, its post town, and 4 N. of the Dunham railway station. The parish is of small extent, and is wholly agricultural. The soil consists of a light loam. The land is chiefly arable, with a small proportion of pasture and woodland. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £188. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £197. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is a small edifice of great antiquity, with a circular tower. The register dates from 1669. The Earl of Leicester is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

LEXINGTON. See LAXTON, co. Nottingham.

LEYBOURNE, a par. in the hund. of Larkfield, lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, 6 miles N.W. of Maidstone, its post town, and half a mile N. of Malling. It is a small agricultural village, situated on a branch of the river Medway, and contains the hmlts. of Great and Little Comp. The land is partly in common, with a portion in hops. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £413. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is a small ancient edifice, with a low tower. The parochial charities produce about £331 per annum, of which £324 goes to Holme's schools for this and two other places. Near the church is a farmhouse formerly the seat of the Goldings; also ruins of the moated castle of the Leybournes, consisting of a gateway, flanked by circular towers, various arches, &c. Edward I. was entertained here, and the site was afterwards given by Edward III. to St. Mary Grace's Abbey, London. Leybourne Grange, the principal residence, is situated in the midst of a park half a mile N. of the church. Sir J. Hawley, Bart., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

LEYBURN, a tnshp., post and market town, in the par. of Wensley, wap. of West Hang, North Riding co. York, 2 miles N.W. of Middleham, 8 S.W. of Richmond, and 46 N.W. of York. It is a station on the North-Eastern line of railway. The township is situated on the northern side of Wensleydale. The surface towards the N.W. rises in bold undulations to the lofty moors of Wensleydale and Swaledale. About half a mile W. of the town is the celebrated walk called Leyburn Shawl, consisting of a ridge of rocks forming a natural terrace, extending upwards of a mile in length. It was much improved by the neighbouring tradespeople in 1846, and is considered the principal attraction of Leyburn. The views from this terrace take in the ruins of Middleham and Bolton castles. A suspension bridge here crosses the river Ure, connecting the township with that of Middleham. The town consists principally of one long street, containing several shops. Most of the houses are well built, and of modern dates. It is paved and lighted with gas, and attracts many visitors on their way to the lakes of Westmoreland and Cumberland. There are a bank, savings-bank, gas works, dispensary, circulating and subscription library, and townhall. This latter is a stuccoed building mounted with stone, and erected at a cost of £2,000 by Lord Bolton. Petty sessions for the division of West Hang are held at the townhall on the last Friday in each month. The county court is held monthly. The board of guardians meet every alternate Friday. The Poor-law Union comprises 41 parishes and townships. The union poorhouse is an old building situated a short distance from the town. This township is productive of coal, lime, and lead. The land is principally in meadow and grazing land. The soil is stiff clay, gravel, and loam, upon a subsoil of light limestone. There is a small chapel-of-ease, erected in 1836, capable of accommodating about 260 persons. The Roman Catholics have a chapel, erected in 1834, and the Wesleyan Methodists a small place of worship. The charities produce about £32 per annum, £30 of which is from Hutton's charity, and is applied in support of the dispensary. There are National and Roman Catholic schools for both sexes. The inhabitants frequently resort to the parish church of Wensley, about 1½ mile distant. Lord Bolton is lord of the manor and principal landowner. Market day is Friday. Fairs for cattle and sheep are held on the second Fridays in February, May, October, and December.

LEYLAND, a hund. in co. Lancaster, contains the pars. of Brindle, Chorley, Croston, Eccleston, Hesketh, Hoole, Leyland, Penwortham, Rufford, Standish, and Tarleton, comprising an area of 79,990 acres.

LEYLAND, a par. in the above hund., co. Lancaster, 6 miles from Preston, its post town, and 4¾ N.W. of Chorley. It is within a mile of the joint station on the North-Western and Lancashire and Yorkshire lines of railway. The par., which is extensive, contains the tnshps. of Clayton-le-Woods, Cuerden, Euxton, Heapey, Hoghton, Leyland, Wheelton, Whittle-le-Woods, and Withnell. It is intersected by the small river Lostock, and is separated from the par. of Chorley by the river Yarrow. The river Darwin flows through the N. part of the parish, and falls into the Ribble at Walton-le-Dale. Leyland is a petty sessions town and populous manufacturing village Many of the inhabitants are engaged in the cotton and muslin manfactures. There are extensive bleach works, giving employment to a large number of persons. The Leeds and Liverpool canal and the old north road to Lancaster pass through the parish. Wild boar hunting was formerly pursued here, and bones of the boar and elk are not unfrequently met with. Roman coins and numerous Celtic antiquities have been found here embedded in the moss about three yards below the surface. The soil consists of sand and gravel, with some peat moss. The principal crops are wheat, oats, potatoes, and turnips. There are several stone quarries and mineral alkaline springs at Whittle-le-Woods. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £1,200. The parish church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is a stone structure, with a pinnacled tower containing a clock and six bells. Like Westminster Abbey, it was originally built without a single pillar, but was enlarged and greatly altered in 1817, at which period a spacious nave was added. Adjoining the chancel is the private chapel of the St. Farringtons of Warden Hall, containing several monuments of that family. The windows are of ancient design. The church contains a sedilia, piscina, and a carved octagonal font. In addition to the parish church there are six district churches, viz. St. James's, Euxton, Heapey, Hoghton, Whittle-le-Woods, and Withnell, the livings of which are all perpet. curs., varying in val. from £200 to £141. The parochial charities produce about £600 per annum, of which £28 goes to Queen Elizabeth's free grammar school, £176 to Balshaw's charity school, £21 to Moss-side schools, and £118 to Osbaldiston's almshouses. The infant school was erected in 1837 by voluntary contributions. There are places of worship for the Independents, Wesleyans, and Roman Catholics. The two ancient residences, Atherton Hall and the Old Hall, are now converted into farmhouses. The principal residences are—Shawe Hall, which has a museum of natural curiosities; Golden Hill House, Wellfield, Lostock Grove, and Worden Hall; this last named mansion is situated in an extensive park within half a mile distance of the village, and adds much to the improvement of the S. end of the village. The Misses Farington are ladies of the manor and chief landowners. Fairs are held on the 24th March and 26th October. An annual agricultural and horticultural meeting is held in September.

LEYNY, a bar. in co. Sligo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland. It is bounded by the bars. of Carbery, Tiraghrill, and Corran, and by co. Mayo. It is 17 miles long, and its greatest breadth is 10 miles. This bar. contains the pars. of Achonry, Killoran, Kilmacteigue, and Kilvarnet, and parts of Ballysadare, comprising about 121,686 acres.

LEY-OF-HALLIBURTON, a vil. in the bar. of Kettins, co. Forfar, Scotland, 9 miles N.W. of Dundee.

LEYSDOWN, a par. in the Isle of Sheppey, lathe of Scray, E. div. of co. Kent, 5 miles N. of Faversham, and 9 S.E. of Queenborough, its post town. The village, which is small, is situated on rising ground opposite Harty Island, overlooking the sea and the marshes. It is considered the most eastern village in the island. There is a ferry over the river Swale to the Faversham road; and at Shellness is a coast-guard station and beacon commanding a view of the river Swale and Whitstable Bay. About two-thirds of the land is in pasture, the remainder arable, with only nine acres of woodland. The appropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £394, and the vicarial for £265. The living is a vic.* with the perpet. cur. of Harty, in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. together £245 and £55, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to St. Clement, is a small modern edifice situated near the ruins of the old one. The parochial charities produce about 11 per annum. There is a National school. Captain Hilton is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

LEYS LOCH, in co. Kincardine, Scotland. It is situated in the northern portion of the county, near Banchory Ternan, and is about 3 miles in circumference. It has the ruins of a castle belonging to Sir T. Burnett, Bart., of Leys.

LEYSMILL, a hmlt. in the par. of Inverkeillor, co. Forfar, Scotland, 5 miles N.W. of Arbroath. It is a station on the Dundee, Arbroath, and Forfar branch of the Scottish North-Eastern railway.

LEYTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Bispham, hund. of Amounderness, co. Lancaster, 2 miles S.W. of Poulton-le-Fylde. It is situated near the coast, and contains the vil. of Blackpool, which is resorted to in the summer as a bathing place.

LEYTON. See LAYTON, co. Lancaster.

LEYTON, LOW, a par. in the hund. of Becontree, co. Essex, 6 miles N.E. of London, its post town, being in the N.E. Metropolitan postal district. There are two stations on the Great Eastern railway, one at Low Leyton and the other at Leytonstone. The par. is situated on the western bank of the river Lea, near Epping Lower Forest, and contains the hmlt. of Leytonstone, which now comprises nearly half the inhabitants of the whole parish. It was named by the Saxons Ligton, from the river Lea, then called Ligea. The village of Leyton consists chiefly of one long street, extending from the forest to Stratford. It is built on a gentle ascent and is lighted with gas. The soil is gravelly, and the neighbourhood abounds with springs. The land is in a high state of cultivation, and there are about 300 acres in the occupation of nurserymen and market-gardeners. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £369 14*s.* 6*d.*, and the vicarial for £399 15*s.* The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of London, val. £534. The parish church is a small ancient structure, dedicated to St. Mary. It contains tombs of Strype, the antiquary, who was vicar to this parish for above 60 years; Bowyer, the printer, &c.: also two brasses, the earliest bearing date 1493. The charities produce about £178 per annum, £87 of which go to Smith's almshouses, and £18 to Ozler's schools. There are National and infant schools at Low Leyton and Leytonstone. The Wesleyans and Independents have places of worship. There are almshouses for eight widows, founded and endowed by John Smith in 1653. Sir Thomas Roe, the statesman and ambassador to the Great Mogul in the reign of Charles I., was born here in 1580. Near the village Roman pavements, foundations of temples, consular and imperial coins, and other antiquities have been found, identifying this as the site of the Roman station Durolitum.

LEYTONSTONE, a district chplry. in the par. of Low Leyton, hund. of Becontree, co. Essex, 2 miles from West Ham, and 5¼ N.E. of London, being in the N.E. postal district. It is a station on the Great Eastern railway. The village is situated on the river Lea, and is much frequented by pleasure parties from London during the summer season. It has several villas, and has recently greatly increased in population. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of London. The church is situated on the high road from Stratford to Epping, and has a tower at the W. end crowned with four pinnacles. Stanley was a scholar of this place. There are National and British schools for both sexes, also a place of worship for the Independents, and a police station. Leytonstone Hall is the principal residence.

LEY, UPPER, a tnshp. in the par. of Aymestrey, hund. of Stretford, co. Hereford.

LEZANT, a par. in the N. div. of the hund. of East, co. Cornwall, 4½ miles S.E. of Launceston, its post town. The parish, which is wholly agricultural, is bounded by the river Inny on the S., and by the Tamar on the E. It contains the vils of Trebollet, Rezare, Trekenna, and the hmlt. of Trewarlet. The land is chiefly arable but well wooded. The substratum abounds in mineral wealth, and near Landew is a lead mine. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £406, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Breock, or St. Breage, is an ancient stone structure, with a square pinnacled tower containing six bells. The church contains monuments of the Manatons of Trecarrell, and of the Herles of Landew. There were formerly chapels-of-ease at Trecarrell and Landew, the former dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene, and the latter to St. Bridget. There are National and infant schools. The Wesleyans, Reformed Wesleyans, and Baptists have each a place of worship. There are the remains of an unfinished mansion at Trecarrell which was begun by Sir John Trecarrell. The principal residence is Landew, formerly the seat of the Herles.

LEZAYRE. See KIRK-CHRIST-LEZAYRE, Isle of Man.

LEZIATE, a par. in the hund. of Freebridge-Lynn, co. Norfolk, 4½ miles E. of Lynn its post town. The village, which is small, is in a sad state of dilapidation. A portion of the land is in rabbit warren and common, and the remainder nearly evenly divided between arable and pasture. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £280. The living is a rect., not in charge, annexed to that of Ashwicken, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church is in ruins.

LHANBRYDE, a par. in the co. of Elgin, Scotland. See St. Andrew's, Lhanbride.

LIBBERSTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Filey, wap. of Pickering Lythe, North Riding co. York, 4 miles N. of Hunmanby.

LIBBERTON, a par. in the Upper ward of the co. of Lanark, Scotland, 2½ miles S. of Carnwath, its post town. It was united in 1660 to the par. of Quothquan. It is 7 miles from N. to S., and 4 in breadth. It contains about 8,700 imperial acres, of which 5,700 are under tillage. Through the parish runs the Clyde, and its tributary stream the Methven, or Medwin, on the banks of which are some fertile spots. It is in the presb. of Biggar and synod of Lothian and Tweeddale. The minister's stipend is £226. The church is a modern structure. Quothquan Law is a hill about 600 feet above the Clyde. On this eminence is a large stone known as Wallace's chair, on which he is said to have sat in council shortly before the battle of Biggar. Sir N. McD. Lockhart, Bart., is the chief heritor.

LIBBERY, a vil. in the par. of Grafton Flyford, co. Worcester, 8 miles E. of Worcester.

LIBERTON, a par. in the co. of Edinburgh, Scotland, 2 miles S. of Edinburgh. It contains the vils. of Upper (or Over) Liberton, Liberton Kirk, and Nether Liberton, with Gilmerton and Green End. Its length northward is about 7 miles, and its greatest breadth is 4 miles. The area of the par. is about 4,140 acres, of which 3,550 are under tillage. It is watered by the Braid-burn and Burdiehouse-burn. The parish, which lies at the base of the Pentland hills, is exceedingly populous, and its coal mines and lime works are most extensive and valuable. There are several sandstone quarries in the neighbourhood. It is in the presb. of Edinburgh and synod of Lothian and Tweeddale, in the patron. of the crown. The minister's stipend is £327. The parish church, situated at Kirk Liberton, is a semi-Gothic structure; it was erected in 1815 and is very commodious. There are besides a chapel-of-ease and two Free churches in the parish. There are nine schools, four of which are partly endowed. Craigmillar Castle is an old ruin standing on rising ground, and commands an extensive prospect. Queen Mary, after her return in 1561, made this castle her residence. Niddry, Southfield, Mount Vernon, and Brunstane are the chief mansions. Galachlaw Hill, in this parish, is the site of Cromwell's encampment previous to the battle of Dunbar in 1650. The ancient Balm well at St. Catherine's contains mineral oil.

LIBO, a small loch in co. Renfrew, Scotland, near Neilston. It is situated under Lochliboside Hill, and is the source of the river Lugton.

LICHART, a loch in co. Ross, Scotland. It is situated under Ben Wyvis, and is drained by the river Contin, abounding in trout.

LICHFIELD, a city, market town, municipal and parliamentary borough exercising separate jurisdiction, but locally situated in the S. div. of Offlow hundred, co. Stafford, 18 miles S.E. of Stafford, 15 N. of Birmingham, and 115¾ N.W. of London by the South Staffordshire and London and North-Western railways, on which it is a station. The city stands in a vale surrounded by hills of moderate height, and is divided at the southern extremity from the Cathedral Close by a small stream, which is crossed by bridges. As it has never been surrounded by walls its shape is irregular, and many of the streets extend to a considerable distance from the body of the town. The majority of the houses are modern. The name is of Saxon origin, and the first syllable is variously interpreted—some say that "lich" signifies a marsh, while others ascribe to it the meaning of corpse, and assert that this name was given to the city at the time of the persecution of the Christians under Diocletian. Christian Field, near the city, is said to be the spot where 1,000 martyrs were put to death. The Roman station of Etocetum was in the immediate neighbourhood. Lichfield was the seat of the only bishopric in Mercia in the early Saxon period, and the first bishop is said to have been appointed by Oswy, king of Northumbria, after his defeat of Penda, king of Mercia. Ethelbald divided the see into the five dioceses of Lichfield, Leicester, Lincoln, Hereford, and Worcester. In the time of William I. the city had so decreased that he transferred the bishopric to Chester; but it was restored by King Stephen, during whose reign a castle was built by Roger de Clinton, and a mint was also instituted. The whole city was destroyed by fire in 1291, with the exception of the castle, in which Richard II. was confined in 1399; and in 1593 it was visited by a plague. During the Civil Wars in the 17th century the city was taken by Lord Brooke, on behalf of the parliament, in 1643, retaken by Prince Rupert, but finally given up by him in 1646. At the time of the rebellion in 1745, the Duke of Cumberland for a short period established his head-quarters at the Friary, which was founded by Bishop Stavenby in 1229. The city was visited by Queen Elizabeth in 1575, by James I. in 1624, and by the present Queen, when princess, in 1832, and when queen in 1843.—The guildhall, in Bore-street, is a stone building containing a hall used for the quarter-sessions, private rooms for the transaction of city business, the police station, &c., while the basement is used for the house of correction. The city prisoners are now sent to Stafford gaol. The market-house and corn-exchange stands in St. Mary's-square, on the site of the market cross erected by Dean Denton. The upper story consists of a room used for balls, concerts, &c. The savings-bank is close to this building. A statue of Dr. Johnson, by Lucas, was presented to the town by the Rev. James Law, chancellor of the diocese in 1838. It stands in the market-place, opposite the house in which the doctor was born. The height of the statue is 7 feet, and it stands on a square pedestal of 10 feet, the sides of which contain bas-reliefs of various incidents in his life. Water is supplied to the town from springs about 1 mile to the S.W., under a trust devised by Hector Beane; and both the Minster and Stowe pools are employed as reservoirs by the South Staffordshire Waterworks Company. The streets are lighted by gas-works at the W. of the city.—The principal trades here are the carpet manufacture and brewing. There are also several coach-builders' yards and malt kilns, a flax mill, and a paper mill. The National and Provincial and the North Wilts banks have branches here.—The borough, which is divided into two wards, is governed by a corporation consisting of 6 aldermen and 18 councillors, one of whom is mayor, with the style of "the bailiff and citizens of Lichfield." The first charter of incorporation was given in the second year of Edward VI., before which the city was governed by a guild established during the reign of Richard II. The charter by which the corporation was regulated previously to the municipal Act was granted in the 16th year of Charles II. Lichfield has returned two members to the House of Commons since the 49th year of Henry III. The borough now includes the pars. of St. Mary, St. Michael, and St. Chad, the Close and Friary, extra parochial, and part of Pipe Hill. It is also a polling-place for the county election. The mayor, as sheriff, is returning officer. The income of the borough is about £1,330. The population in 1861 was 6,893, against 7,012 in 1851, showing a decrease of 119 in the ten years. The Poor-law Union includes the city, Alrewas, Armitage, Burntwood, Colton, Elford, Farewell, Fisherwick, Fradley, Hammerwick, King's Bromley, Longdon, Orgreave, Ogley Hay, Ridware, Rugeley, Shenstone, Streethay, Swinfen, Curboro, Wall, Weeford, Whittington, and Yoxall. The new County Court district is the same, exclusive of Armitage, Colton, Longdon, Rugeley, and Pipe, which forms part of Ridware in the above list. Quarter sessions for the county of the city, and petty sessions for the county and city are held at Lichfield. The district registry for proving wills is also in this city. The excise district includes Lichfield, Walsall, Tamworth, Coleshill, Sutton, and Birmingham. The King's Own Staffordshire militia have their headquarters here, the barracks being in the Birmingham road. Lichfield gives the title of earl to Viscount Anson, of Shugborough. The diocese of Lichfield extends over Stafford, Derby, and parts of Shropshire and Warwickshire, forming three archdeaconries, with the names of the first three of the above counties. They contain 24 deaneries and 491 livings. The chapter includes, besides the archdeacons, a dean, 4 canons, 19 prebendaries, a chancellor, and 5 minor canons. The seat of the bishop is at Eccleshall Castle, and his income is £4,500, with the patronage of about 116 livings. The livings in the city are:—St. Mary's, a vic.,* val. £458, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church stands in the market-place. It was rebuilt in 1721, and contains an altar-piece and monuments of the Dyott family. St. Chad's, a cur., val. £250, in the patron. of the vicar. The church is at Stow, and the oldest in the neighbourhood. St. Chad's hermitage and well are close to the church, which formerly contained his shrine. Christ Church, a cur.,* val. £250, in the patron. of the bishop, is at Lemonsley. The church, which is built in the decorated style, with a square tower, was consecrated in 1847. There is a Sunday-school attached to it. St. Michael's, a cur., val. £368, in the patron. of the vicar, was built in the reign of Henry VIII., but partly rebuilt in 1844. Dr. Johnson's father is buried here. The churchyard attached to this church is the chief cemetery of the town. There is also a chapel dedicated to St. John, in St. John-street, near the hospital. The cathedral, which is dedicated to St. Chad, was founded about 665 by King Oswy, and rebuilt about 700 by Bishop Hedda, who removed thither the bones of the patron saint from Stow. It was completed by Bishop Langton in 1296, and the damages inflicted during the Civil Wars in the 17th century were repaired by Bishop Hacket. The whole of the cathedral was again restored by Wyatt in 1788. The style is chiefly early English, but there are traces of Norman work. It is built in the form of a cross, standing 2½ points out of the line of E. and W., and has one spire in the centre 258 feet in height, and two at the W. end of 183 feet. The size of the building is 411 feet by 67, and 60 in height. There is a statue on the roof representing Charles II., which supplanted an older image of some Biblical personage. The W. portico contains some particularly fine carving, among which are figures of Christ, supported by two angels, of Moses and Aaron, &c. Over it is a large circular window given by James II.; but the stained-glass that now adorns it was inserted by Dean Addenbrooke in 1776. The N. and S. porches are also ornamented with figures, and the S. front possesses a stained-glass window. The choir is in the decorated English style, and consists of 24 stalls. It contains monuments to Bishop Hacket, to one of the Stanley family, and others. The screen was erected by Bishop Langton. The Lady Chapel, built by the same bishop, is extremely beautiful. Each side contains three windows, and the stained-glass of two of those on the E. was brought by Sir Brooke Boothby from the abbey of Herckenrode, in the diocese of Liege. The central window represents the Resurrection, and was designed by Sir J. Reynolds. To the N. of this chapel is a much older one, where two Mercian kings are buried. The chapter-house is octagonal, and in the room over it Dean Heywood's valuable library is preserved, where may be seen a Saxon copy of the Gospels, a Koran taken at the siege of Buda, an illuminated Chaucer, Pope Nicholas's "Valor," and other rare and curious volumes. The sacristy contains an old fresco, and several interesting monuments. Among the tombs in the body of the cathedral are those of Addison's father, Dr. Johnson, Lady Mary Wortley Montague, Garrick, Miss Seward, one by Chantrey to the two children of a Mrs. Robinson, a monument to those of the 50th, or Staffordshire regiment, who fell at Moodkee, the tomb of the late Earl of Lichfield, &c. The whole building has undergone a restoration by Mr. Gilbert Scott and Mr. S. Smirke. Service is performed daily at 10 A.M. and 4 P.M., and on Sundays at 10½ A.M. and 4½ P.M. The bishop's palace is situated at the N.E. corner of the Close, and was built in 1687, on the site of a more ancient mansion; but the bishops now habitually reside in Eccleshall Castle, letting the palace. The deanery is to the W. of this building, and a part of it is as old as the 15th century. The Roman Catholics have a chapel situated at the S.W. of the city, called Holy Cross; and there are also places of worship belonging to the Independents in Wade-street, to the Wesleyans, and the two bodies of Methodists. The Lichfield grammar school, in St. John-street, was founded in the reign of Edward VI., and was rebuilt in 1692 and in 1850. Its income is about £106, and it educates 30 pupils. Among the celebrated men who have been brought up here may be mentioned Dr. Johnson, Bishops Newton and Smallridge, Addison, Ashmole, Garrick, Chief Barons Lloyd and Parker, and Chief Justice Wilmot. Minor's school, in Bore-street, was founded in 1677 for teaching 36 boys English reading and the catechism. The endowment is £135. Ball's school is another free school with an income of £20. The Lichfield diocesan training-school is near the cathedral. There are also National schools for boys and girls, and industrial and infant schools. St. John's hospital, in St. John's-street, provides rooms and allowances of money, &c., for 13 old men. It was instituted in the time of Henry III., and its present income is about £350. The building is remarkable for the curious arrangement of its chimneys. Dr. Milley's hospital, in Beacon-street, was founded in 1504, and supports 15 aged women. Andrew Newton's almshouses for the widows and unmarried daughters of the clergy, stands in the Close. It was founded in 1798 and supplies to 20 persons a residence with a garden, and an allowance of £50 a year. Lunn's almshouses are comparatively unimportant, the income of the charity being only £11. The lunatic asylum is at Sandfield, about 1 mile S. of the town. The dispensary and mendicity-office is in Tamworth-street. There is also a union poorhouse, a savings-bank, and three friendly societies, which dispense charity. The museum and free library, near the Minster Pool, was founded by John Philip Dyott, mayor. The museum contains antiquities, objects of art, &c., which, with the newsroom and library of 2,000 volumes, is free to all. There is a theatre in Bore-street.—Races are held in September, on Whittington Heath, the chief event being the Queen's Plate of 100 guineas.—The principal seats in the neighbourhood are—Elmhurst Lodge, J. Smith, Esq.; Maple Hayes, J. Atkinson, Esq.; Pipe Grange, — Wolfestan, Esq.; Freeford, General Dyott; Swinfen, S. Swinfen, Esq.; and Stow Hall. The most celebrated natives of Lichfield have been mentioned in connection with the grammar school. Others were William de Lichfield, a learned monk, Butt and Buckeridge, divines, Major André, and Dilke, the dramatist. Dr. Darwin, author of the "Botanic Garden," &c., practised here for many years as a physician. Watling and Icknield Streets both pass the city. It has two railway stations—those of the South Staffordshire, and of the Trent Valley branch of the London and North-Western. The Wyrley and Essington canal passes also near Lichfield. The only newspaper published in the town is the Lichfield Mercury. Friday is market day. Fairs are held on the first Wednesday in January, on Ash-Wednesday till the Friday following, on Old May Day, the first Mondays in July and November, and a fair called the Bower on Whit-Monday at Greenhill.

LICKBLA, a par. in the bar. of Fore, co. Westmeath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles N. of Castle Pollard, its post town. The par. is 4 miles long and 3½ broad at the widest. The surface lies along the right bank of the river Inny, near Lough Sheelin. The road from Castle Pollard to Finma, and the rivulet Glore, traverse the parish. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Meath, val.

with Rathgraff, £361, in the patron. of the bishop. There are a Roman Catholic chapel and two day schools. Ruins of the old church are seen. Near the Curreagh Rock stands Rathcreenagh Castle.

LICKERRIG, a par. in the bars. of Athenry, Dunkellin, and Loughrea, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 4 miles N.W. of Loughrea, its post town. The par. is 3½ miles long and its greatest breadth is 1½ mile. The surface consists mostly of a fair soil. The road from Loughrea to Athenry passes through the interior. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Clonfert, val. with Kilconickny, £310, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built by the late Board of First Fruits in 1816. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Kilconeran. There is a National school. St. Clarens is the chief seat.

LICKETSTOWN, a vil. in the bar. of Ivert, co. Kilkenny, Ireland, 4 miles W. of Waterford. It is situated on the river Suir.

LICKEY END, a hmlt. in the par. of Bromsgrove, co. Worcester, 1 mile N.E. of Bromsgrove. It is situated on a range of hills, which command extensive prospects, and are overgrown with cranberry and purple cinquefoil. Here is a seat known as "The Lickey," situated near a spring which discharges part of its waters into the North Sea and part into the Bristol Channel, the former by way of the rivers Rea and Trent, and the latter through the Stour and Severn.

LICKFINN, a par. in the bar. of Slievardagh, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles N.E. of Killinaule, its post town. It is about 1½ mile in length and the same in breadth. The living is united to the benefice of Killinaule [which see]. Lickfinn House is the principal residence of this locality.

LICKHILL, a hmlt. in the par. and borough of Kidderminster, lower div. of the hund. of Halfshire, co. Worcester. It is situated in the foreign of Kidderminster, near the rivers Stour and Severn.

LICKLAY, a bog in co. Galway, Ireland, near Athenry. It contains about 4,600 acres.

LICKMOLASSY, a par. in the bar. of Longford, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, containing its post town Portumna. The par. is 4½ miles long by 4 broad. The surface lies along the bank of Lough Derg, and includes several small islands lying within that piece of water. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Clonfert, val. with others, £436. The church was built by means of a sum lent by the late Board of First Fruits in 1832. There are two Roman Catholic chapels, a Sunday, and several day schools. Portumna is the demesne of the Marquis of Clanricarde. Oakley Park is another seat.

LICKORAN, a par. in the bar. of Decies-without-Drum, co. Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles N.E. of Cappoquin. It is 3½ miles long by 1½ mile broad, and lies along the bank of the river Phinisk. The surface is mountainous, and is traversed by the road from Cappoquin to Ballinamull. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lismore, val. with Whitechurch, £150. There is a day school.

LICKY, a tributary of the river Blackwater, rises under Drum Mountain, co. Waterford, Ireland.

LID, or LYD, a tributary of the river Tamar, rises at Lifton, in co. Devon.

LIDBROOK, a hmlt. in the par. of English-Bicknor, hund. of St. Briavel's, co. Gloucester, 4 miles S.W. of Mitcheldean. It is situated near the river Wye, and has some tin and iron work, said to have been the first established in the kingdom. There is a place of worship for Baptists. Coal and timber are brought from the Forest of Dean by tram railways, which run down to Newnham and Lydney on the Severn.

LIDDEL, a river of co. Roxburgh, Scotland, rises under Windburgh Hill, and flows through Liddisdale for 25 miles in a south-westerly direction to the Esk above Cannoby. It traces part of the English border, and has traces of Roman camps and remains of border towers on its banks.

LIDDIARD MILLICENT, or LYDIARD, a par. in the hund. of Highworth, co. Wilts, 2 miles S. of Purton, its railway station and post town, and 3 N.E. of Wootton-Bassett. The village, which is small, is situated near the Great Western and Cheltenham railways, and the road from Cricklade to Wootton-Bassett passes through the parish. The surface is flat and the land generally in rich pasture. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £495, in the patron. of Pembroke College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has a tower containing five bells. It has recently undergone thorough repair. The parochial charities produce about £6 per annum.

LIDDIARD-TREEGOOZE, a par. in the hund. of Kingsbridge, co. Wilts, 4 miles N.W. of Swindon, its post town, and 3 from Wootton-Bassett. The Great Western railway and the Wilts and Berks canal pass through the parish. It was anciently called Lidiar, and came through the Beauchamps of Bletsoe, to the St. Johns, viscounts Bolingbroke, in whose family it has remained since the reign of Henry VI. The village is situated on the road from Oxford to Bath. The parish is of large extent, and the land chiefly in pasture, with about 350 acres of woodland. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £603 18*s.* 5*d.* The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £628. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure, with a square tower containing five bells. It was partly rebuilt in 1683 by the Bolingbrokes, and was thoroughly restored about twelve years ago. The interior of the church contains several ancient banners and helmets, and the monuments of the viscounts Bolingbroke. The parochial charities produce about £21 per annum, bequeathed by the Rev. R. Miles for clothing of the poor. There is a school for both sexes, supported by Lord Bolingbroke and the rector. Liddiard Park, the seat of Lord Bolingbroke, who is lord of the manor, is situate at a short distance from the church.

LIDDINGTON, or LYDDINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Wrangdike, co. Rutland, 2 miles S.E. of Uppingham, its post town, and 2 N.W. of the Seaton station on the London and North-Western railway. The village, which is situated in the valley of the river Welland, was formerly a market town of some note. The market being removed to Uppingham, the town diminished in size, and is now only an insignificant village. The surface is diversified with hills, and the soil a stiff clay but very fertile. On the banks of the river are some rich meadows. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £216 11*s.*, and the vicarial for £221. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. with the vic. of Caldecote annexed, £265, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient Gothic structure, with a tower and spire. It contains an antique screen, and several brasses. There is also a church at Caldecote. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. Jesus Hospital, formerly a palace of the bishops of Lincoln, is a structure in the early English style, consisting of a large hall with painted windows. It was founded and endowed in 1600, by Thomas Lord Burghley, as a refuge for twelve men and two women, under the government of a warden, and has a revenue of about £150. Parnham's school has an endowment producing £34. The whole of the parochial charities, including the above, realise nearly £200 per annum. The Marquis of Exeter is lord of the manor.

LIDDINGTON, or LYDDINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Kingsbridge, co. Wilts, 4 miles S.E. of Swindon, its post town and railway station, and 8½ N.E. of Marlborough. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. It is situated on the road from London to Newbury and Hungerford. The par. includes the hmlts. of Coate, Liddington Wick, Liddington Warren, and Kedbourn. On Beacon Hill was a large circular earthwork called Liddington Castle, or Badbury Castle Camp. The Wilts and Berks canal runs up to Swindon. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1776, and a commutation has since been effected for a rent-charge of £221. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £325. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a very ancient stone structure, with a square tower containing five bells. It has a roof of timber frame work, and contains a font of great antiquity. The church was thoroughly restored and open sittings fitted in lieu of the old pews in 1850. It contains tombs of the Abbot and Abbess of Shaftesbury, the founders of the church. There is a National school, also a place of worship for the Wesleyans. Situated in a dell are the remains of the old moated manor-house, a specimen of Elizabethan domestic architecture. The Duke of Marlborough is lord of the manor.

LIDFORD. See LYDFORD, co. Devon.

LIDGATE, or LYDGATE, a par. in the hund. of Risbridge, co. Suffolk, 7 miles S.E. of Newmarket, its post town, and 10 S.W. of Bury St. Edmund's. The parish is of small extent and wholly agricultural. It was formerly held by Richard "sans Nose," who gave it to Bury Abbey. On a mount near the church are traces of a seat called "King John's Castle." The tithes were commuted for corn-rents under an Enclosure Act in 1812. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £473. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure with a square tower containing five bells. In 1845 a portion of the building was restored and a stained window inserted. The interior of the church contains the brass of a priest. The register dates from 1547. John Lydgate, the poet, was born in this parish in 1380. The parochial charities produce about £15 per annum, of which £6 go to a school. There is a National school, also a place of worship for the Independents. W. C. Kitchener, Esq., is lord of the manor.

LIDGEN. See LIDSING, co. Kent.

LIDGET, a vil. in the tnshp. of Lepton and par. of Kirk-Heaton, West Riding co. York, 3 miles S.E. of Huddersfield. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the cloth manufacture.

LIDGET-GREEN, a vil. in the chplry. of Horton and par. of Bradford, West Riding co. York, 2 miles from Bradford. It is a populous village, chiefly inhabited by factory workers and weavers.

LIDLINGTON, or LITLINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Redbornestoke, co. Bedford, 3¼ miles N.W. of Ampthill. It is a station on the Bletchley and Bedford branch of the London and North-Western railway. The manor of Goldington, in this parish, was for many generations the seat of the Goldington family. The village is chiefly agricultural. The impropriation belongs to the Duke of Bedford. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £88. The church, dedicated to All Saints, contains an ancient tomb with the brass effigy of a knight in armour. The Wesleyans have a place of worship, and there is a school with a small endowment.

LIDNEY, or LYDNEY, a par. in the hund. of Bledisloe, co. Gloucester, 4 miles N.W. of Berkeley, and 9 N.E. of Chepstow. The South Wales line of railway has a station here, and the Gloucester and Chepstow road passes through the town. It is situated on the western bank of the river Severn, near the Forest of Dean, and includes the tythgs. of Aylburton, Alaxton, Nass, Newarne, and Purton. The Romans had a station here, supposed by some to be Abona. The neighbourhood abounds with coal, iron, lime, and good building stone. There are tin-plate works, in which many of the people are employed. A tram-road from Lidbrook passes through here to the river Severn, on which is conveyed coal, &c., to be shipped. In the town is a mechanics' institute. Petty sessions are held every fourth week. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. with the cur. of Aylburton annexed, £600, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Hereford. The church is a commodious stone edifice, dedicated to St. Mary. It has a tower and spire and a carved stone pulpit. The whole of the interior has recently undergone thorough repair, and new stained-glass windows inserted. The charities amount to about £5 per annum. The Baptists, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists have chapels, and there is a free school for boys and girls. Numerous Roman remains, consisting of coins, pavements, bath, urns, &c., have been brought to light. Lydney Park, in which most of the above were found, is an old seat. Charles Bathurst, Esq., is lord of the manor. Wednesday is market day, and fairs are held on the 4th May and 8th November.

LIDSEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Aldingbourn, hund. of Box, and rape of Chichester, co. Sussex, 5 miles E. of Chichester. The Portsmouth and Arundel canal passes in the vicinity.

LIDSING, or LIDGEN, a vil. in the par. of Gillingham, hund. of Chatham, and lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, 3½ miles S.E. of Chatham. It is a small agricultural village. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic.* of Gillingham, in the dioc. of Rochester. There is a chapel-of-ease.

LIDSTONE, a hmlt. in the par. of Enstone, hund. of Chadlington, co. Oxford, 1½ mile N.W. of Neat Enstone, and 3 miles E. of Chipping Norton. It is situated on the river Glyme.

LIEGECASTLE, a hmlt. in the par. of Llancarvan, co. Glamorgan, 4 miles S.E. of Cowbridge.

LIFF WITH BENVIE AND INVERGOWRIE, an united parish, partly in the co. of Perth, and partly in the co. of Forfar, Scotland, 5 miles W.N.W. of Dundee. It contains the vils. of Liff, Dargie, Benvie, Muirhead, Invergowrie, and Blackmuir, with part of the burgh of Dundee and the town of Lochee. It is about 6 miles in length by 4 in breadth. About 6,700 imperial acres are in wood, 4,400 under tillage, and 80 in pasture. The streams are the Dighty Water and Invergowrie burn. Freestone is abundant, and there are several quarries of grey slate. The par. is in the presb. of Dundee and synod of Angus and Mearns. The minister's stipend is £298. The parish church is a modern and commodious structure in the Gothic style of architecture. There is a large chapel-of-ease at Lochee (in the presentation of the male communicants), as well as a Free church and an United Presbyterian church. There is also a Free church at Liff. There are several schools. The present par. contains the ancient pars. of Liff, Benvie, Invergowrie, and Logie. The inhabitants for the most part are employed in the weaving of linen fabrics for the Dundee manufactures, and there are both spinning and paper mills. Near the church, on the estate of Lord Gray, are the remains of a palace built by Alexander I. Camperdown House (named from Lord Duncan's victory), the seat of the Earl of Camperdown; Gray House, the mansion of Lord Gray; and Balruddery House, are the chief seats in the parish. The parish has three stations on the Dundee, Newtyle, and Forfar line, viz. Liff, Camperdown, and Lochee, and one station (Invergowrie) on the Dundee and Perth railway.

LIFFEY, a river rising in co. Wicklow, and falling into Dublin Bay, Ireland. It has its source in the Kippure Mountain, at a spot 1,715 feet above the sea-level, in the northern part of the county of Wicklow, receiving in its course of 50 miles to the sea the waters of the King's River, Lye, Eskar, and Slade, besides those of the Tolka and Dodder near its mouth. There is a cascade called Poul-a-Phouca, and the salmon leap near Leixlip.

LIFFORD, a decayed market town and borough, and county town of co. Donegal, Ireland, 14 miles S.E. of Letterkenny. It is situated on the river Foyle, here crossed by a bridge of twelve arches. The town was anciently called Clonleigh, and is said to have been founded by St. Colomb in the early part of the 6th century, who built a monastery here. It was subsequently the seat of the O'Donnells, who having revolted against the English sovereignty, their castle was seized by Elizabeth, and given by James I. to the Hansards, who obtained a charter for the town. Before the Union it returned two members to the Irish parliament. Although now only an inconsiderable village, it is the place where the county assizes and sessions are held, and is a chief police station and post town. It contains the county courthouse, gaol, barracks, two Roman Catholic chapels, and the parish church of Clonleigh [which see].

LIFTON, a hund. in co. Devon, contains the pars. of Bradstone, Bratton-Clovelly, Bridestowe, Broadwood-Widger, Coryton, Dunterton, Germasweek, Kelly, Lamerton, Lewtrenchard, Lidford, Lifton, Marystow, Okehampton, Sourton, Stowford, Sydenham, Damerell, Tavy St. Mary, Thrushelton, Virginstow, and part of Tavy St. Peter, comprising an area of 136,350 acres.

LIFTON, a par. in the above hund., co. Devon, 4 miles N.E. of Launceston, its post town, and 9 N.W. of Tavistock. It is a large agricultural village situated at the confluence of the rivers Lyd and Tamar, near the Bude canal, and is a petty sessions town. There are manganese mines, also a lime quarry. Petty sessions are held on the last Thursday in every month at the Arundel Arms. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £491. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient stone structure, with a square tower containing eight bells. The interior of the church contains tombs of the Harrisses of Hayne, and of the Arundell family. Lifton Park, the principal residence, formerly belonged to the Arundell family. There are two schools supported by subscription.

LIGHTBURN, a vil. in the par. of Cambuslang, co. Lanark, Scotland, 5 miles N.W. of Hamilton.

LIGHTCLIFFE, a chplry. in the par. of Halifax, wap. of Morley, West Riding co. York, 3 miles E. of Halifax. It is a station on the Leeds, Bradford, and Halifax Junction railway. The village is situated in the fertile valley of the Calder, and on the road from Halifax to Leeds. In the village are several modern mansions. There are quarries of building stone. The living is a perpet. cur., val. £150, in the patron. of the Vicar of Halifax. The church, dedicated to St. Matthew, has a campanile turret. There are places of worship for Independents and Wesleyans.

LIGHTGRAVE, or LEEGRAVE, a hmlt. in the par. of Luton, hund. of Flitt, co. Bedford, 3 miles W. of Luton.

LIGHTHORNE, a par. in the hund. of Kington, co. Warwick, 3½ miles N.E. of Kineton, its post town, and 4 from the Harbury railway station. The village, which is small, is situated near the ancient Fosse Way. This place is a meet for the Warwickshire hounds. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £327. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £322. The church is dedicated to St. Lawrence. There is a school for both sexes supported by Lord Willoughby.

LIGHTWOOD FOREST, a chplry. in the par. of Trentham, co. Stafford, 2 miles from Lane End, and 6 N.W. of Stone. It is joined with Blurton. The village is situated near the river Trent and Grand Trunk canal.

LILBOURNE, a par. in the hund. of Guilsborough, co. Northampton, 5 miles S.E. of Rugby, its post town, and 6 S. of Lutterworth. It is a station on the Rugby branch of the London and North-Western railway. The village, which is extensive, is situated on the river Avon, and on the Roman way Watling Street. It is supposed to occupy the site of the ancient Tripontium. There are traces of a square camp a quarter of an acre in extent, also a large tumulus at Round Hill. The inhabitants are partly employed in the stocking manufacture. The tithes were commuted for land at the enclosure of the parish. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £127, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has a square embattled tower containing five bells. The charities produce about £40 10s. per annum, the produce of 40 acres of land. There is a free school for both sexes. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. William Smith, Esq., is lord of the manor.

LILBURN, EAST and WEST, tnshps. in the par. of Eglingham, Coquetdale ward, co. Northumberland, 3 miles S.E. of Wooler. At the W. end of the village are some ruins of a chapel, and of a tower of the Lilburnes and Clennells, opposite the seat of H. Collingwood, Esq., the present proprietor. It is a meet for Lord Elcho's hounds.

LILFORD, a par. in the hund. of Huxloe, though locally in that of Polebrook, co. Northampton, 3 miles S.W. of Oundle, its post town. The par., which is small, is situated on the river Nen, and contains the hmlt. of Wigsthorpe. It is intersected by the Northampton railway. The living is a vic. annexed to the rect.* of Thorpe Achurch, in the dioc. of Peterborough. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. It contains monuments and effigies of the Elmes and Powys families. The charities produce about £8 per annum. Lilford confers the title of baron on the Powys family, who reside at Lilford Hall.

LILLESDON, a tythg. in the par. of Curry, co. Somerset, 6 miles W. of Langport.

LILLESHALL, a par. in the Newport div. of the hund. of South Bradford, co. Salop, 3 miles S.W. of Newport, its post town, and 1 mile from Donington railway station. It is situated on the Donington Wood branch of the Shrewsbury canal, and a little to the S.E. of the Newport and Wellington turnpike road. The par. contains the tnshps. of Donington and Muxton, and the ecclesiastical district of Donington Wood. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the coal mines. The soil consists principally of a strong clay on a subsoil of red sandstone. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £313. The parish church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient stone structure with a tower containing a clock and six bells. In the interior of the church are several tombs, including two full-length effigies of Sir Richard and Lady Katherine Leveson, ancestors of the Duke of Sutherland, bearing the dates 1661 and 1674. The charities produce about £60 per annum. There are National schools for both sexes. Lilleshall House, the seat of the Duke of Sutherland, is a white freestone mansion situated on rising ground, and commanding a very extensive view of the surrounding country. About a mile distant from the church, in a secluded spot, are the ruins of Lilleshall Abbey, including a portion of the church 228 feet in length, with a Norman doorway. The Duke of Sutherland is lord of the manor and chief landowner.

LILLEY, a tythg. in the par. of Catmore, co. Berks, 4 miles S.W. of East Ilsley.

LILLEY, or LINDLEY, a par. in the hund. of Hitchin, co. Hertford, 4 miles N.E. of Luton, its post town, and 5½ W. of the Hitchin railway station. The village, which is small, is situated near the borders of Bedfordshire, on the road from Hitchin to Luton. The par. contains the hmlt. of Mangrove, and formerly belonged to the Dockwras family. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the manufacture of straw-plait. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £340, in the patron. of St. John's College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient structure with a wooden spire containing three bells, and is in a ruinous condition. The register dates from 1711. The Wesleyans have a chapel. About half a mile S. of the village, at Putteridge Bury, is a park.

LILLIESLEAF, a par. in co. Roxburgh, Scotland, 10 miles from Galashiels, and 3 from the New Belses railway station of the North British line. It is 4 miles in length by nearly 3 in breadth, and is intersected by the Ale-water. The surface of the parish is hilly, about half of which is in tillage, and the other half pasture. The par. is in the presb. of Selkirk and synod of Merse and Teviotdale. The minister's stipend is £243. The parish church, erected in 1771, is a commodious structure. The United Presbyterians have a church here. At Chapel, in this parish, there formerly stood a chapel in the centre of a burying-ground, known as Chapel Park. The moor of Lilliesleaf is celebrated as the scene of a number of meetings of the Covenanters. Riddell is the chief mansion here, and was until 1823 the seat of the Riddell family, mentioned by Scott in his notes to "The Lay of the Last Minstrel."

LILLIFFEE, a hmlt. in the par. of Hedsor, hund. of Desborough, co. Buckingham, 3½ miles S.E. of Great Marlow.

LILLINGS AMBO, or EAST AND WEST LILLING, a tnshp. in the par. of Sheriff-Hutton, wap. of Bulmer, North Riding co. York, 2½ miles from Sheriff-

Hutton, and 9 N.E. of York. The township of West Lilling is of small extent, and situated near the Scarborough railway. East Lilling contains but two farms and the Hall. Charles M. Ingram, Esq., is lord of the manor.

LILLINGSTONE-DAYRELL, a par. in the hund. of Buckingham, co. Bucks, 4½ miles N. of Buckingham, its post town. The village is small and wholly agricultural. The surface, which is well wooded, is hilly in parts, commanding extensive prospects. The lower grounds are watered by a brook. The soil is clayey, and the land chiefly in meadow and pasture. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £278 8*s.* 6*d.* The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £204. The Dayrell family have been lords of the manor from the time of the Conquest. The church is dedicated to St. Nicholas.

LILLINGSTONE-LOVELL, a par. in the hund. of Ploughley, co. Bucks, formerly in Oxford, 4¾ miles N.E. of Buckingham, its post town. The village is small and wholly agricultural. The land is chiefly in meadow and pasture. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £177. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £193. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The charities consist of the interest of £100 distributed to the poor on St. Thomas's Day. There is a day school for both sexes.

LILLINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Sherborne, co. Dorset, 3 miles S. of Sherborne, its post town, and 6 S.E. of Yeovil. The village is small and wholly agricultural. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Sarum. The church is dedicated to St. Martin. The parochial charities produce about £3 per annum.

LILLINGTON, a par. in the Kenilworth div. of the hund. of Knightlow, co Warwick, 1½ mile N.E. of Leamington, its post town and railway station, and 3 miles N.E. of Warwick. The village, which is small, is situated near the river Avon and Napton canal, and is chiefly agricultural. There are some brickkilns. Sandstone is quarried for building purposes. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £167. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £200. The church, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene, is an ancient edifice with an embattled tower containing three bells. It was enlarged by the addition of an aisle in 1858, and has a fine E. window. The register dates from 1538. There is a parochial school for both sexes, supported by voluntary contributions.

LILLISDON, a tythg. in the par. and hund. of North Curry, co. Somerset, 5 miles S.E. of Taunton.

LILLY, a hmlt. in the par. of Catmere, hund. of Compton, co. Berks, 5 miles S.W. of East Ilsley.

LILLYHOO, a hmlt. in the par. of Wateringbury, hund. of Twyford, lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, 4 miles S.W. of Maidstone.

LILSTOCK, or LITTLE-STOKE, a par. in the hund. of Williton, co. Somerset, 12 miles N.W. of Bridgwater, its post town, and 8 N.E. of the Williton railway station. It is a small scattered village situated on the coast of the Bristol Channel, and is wholly agricultural. The parish is bounded on the N. by Bridgwater Bay. Limestone for building is extensively quarried. The tithes were commuted for land under an Act of Enclosure in 1803. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic.* of Stogursey, in the dioc. of Bath and Wells. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is a small structure with a square tower containing four bells. Sir P. Acland is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

LILWALL, a tnshp. in the par. of Kington, hund. of Huntington, co. Hereford, 2 miles S. of Kington.

LIMBER-HILL, a hmlt. in the par. of Egton, North Riding co. York, 7 miles S.W. of Whitby.

LIMBER MAGNA, a par. in the E. div. of the hund. of Yarborough, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 5 miles S. of Ulceby railway station, its post town, 5 N.E. of Caistor, and 10 W. of Great Grimsby. The village, which is small, is situated on the Wolds. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The substratum is principally chalk, which is extensively quarried for burning into lime. The tithes were commuted for land and corn-rents under an Act of Enclosure in 1812. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £623, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient structure with a tower containing three bells. The church was given in the reign of Henry II. to the Cistercian abbey of Aulnoy, in Normandy, by Richard de Humet, Constable of Normandy. At the suppression of alien priories it was sold to the Carthusian abbey of St. Anne, near Coventry. The Wesleyans have a chapel. The charities produce about £10 per annum. There is a commodious National school for both sexes at Brocklesby Park, in this parish. It was erected in 1849, at the expense of the Earl of Yarborough, and is open to the children of the pars. of Brocklesby, Habrough, Keelby, and Kirmington. A good library is established here for the working classes. The Earl of Yarborough is lord of the manor.

LIMBER PARVA, a hmlt. in the par. of Brocklesby, E. div. of the wap. of Yarborough, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 6 miles N. of Caistor.

LIMBURY-CUM-BISCOTT, a hmlt. in the par. of Luton, hund. of Flitt, co. Bedford, 2 miles N.W. of Luton. It is situated on the ancient Icknield Way.

LIMEBROOK, a tnshp. in the par. of Wigmore, co. Hereford, 4 miles N.E. of Presteign. It is situated near the river Lug. There was formerly an Austin nunnery founded in the reign of Richard II. by the Mortimers.

LIMEFIELD, a vil. in the par. of Bathgate, co. Linlithgow, Scotland, 2 miles from Bathgate, and 19 from Edinburgh.

LIMEHOUSE, a par. and suburb of London, in the Tower div. of the hund. of Ossulstone, co. Middlesex, 3 miles E. of St. Paul's, London. It is a station on the London and Blackwall railway. The parish is situated on the Thames at Limehouse Reach, including part of Ratcliff, and is comprised within the metropolitan borough of the Tower Hamlets. It is approached from London by the Commercial-road, and is traversed by the Blackwall railway, the Regent's canal, and Lea Cut. In ancient records it is called Limehurst, or the Lime-Grove, and formed part of Stepney till 1730, when it was constituted a distinct parish. Here are the Limehouse, Regent's, and Lea Cut docks, also Huddart's patent rope factory, 1,200 feet long, and the Stepney union poorhouse. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of London, val. £714, in the patron. of Brasenose College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Anne, is a massive Grecian structure, after designs by Hawkesmoor, being one of the 50 churches built by Queen Anne. It was much damaged by fire in 1850. There are also two district churches—viz. St. John's, and one at Ratcliffe, the livings of both which are perpet. curs.,* val. £175 and £300. Several of the Dissenting bodies have places of worship. There is a foundation school with an income from endowment of £190 per annum, also National and other schools. Limehouse Reach extends for near 2 miles in the river Thames from N. to S., and has a depth of water from 10 to 16 feet. On the eastern shore are the West India docks, Millwall, Seaward's and other works; and on the western the Commercial and East Country docks, Deptford, and numerous timber, lime, and other yards.

LIMEKILNS, a vil. and small seaport in the par. of Dunfermline, co. Fife, Scotland, 3 miles S. of Dunfermline. It is a subport to Bo'ness, and has a small tidal harbour.*

LIMERICK, a maritime co. in the prov. of Munster, Ireland, bounded on the N. by the estuary of the Shannon and the cos. Clare and Tipperary, on the E. by Tipperary, on the S. by Cork, and on the W. by Kerry. Its greatest length N. and S. is 35 miles, and its greatest breadth E. and W. 54 miles, extending from 52° 17′ to 52° 45′ N. lat., and from 8° 6′ to 9° 15′ W. long. It comprises 1,061 square miles, or 680,842 acres, of which 526,876 are arable and pasture, 121,101 uncultivated, 11,575 in plantations, 2,759 occupied by towns and roads, and 18,531 under water. In circuit it measures 175 miles, of which 35 are washed by the Shannon, having here from 2 to 20 fathoms water, and on whose bank is situated the county town of Limerick, with Tervoe coastguard station and Tarbert lighthouse. The surface is one vast undulating plain rising into mountains in the S.E., W., and N.E. On the S.E. the plain country is bounded by the Galtees, rising precipitously to a considerable height, and forming the boundary of Limerick towards Tipperary, into which county they extend for a far distance. In the W. an unbroken range of mountains stretches in a curve from Loughill to Drumcollogher, and on the N.E. the skirts of the Slieve Phelim mountains occupy part of the barony of Owneybeg. Near the centre of the county are the Ballingarry hills—one of which, the Knockferine, is very conspicuous, rising in a conical form abruptly from a fertile plain. Between Shanagolden and the Shannon is a conspicuous hill called Knockpatrick, and in the neighbourhood of Pallasgrean are several very beautiful elevations.—The county is watered by several rivers, all tributaries of the Shannon. This river, after passing the pool of Limerick, which is 60 miles from the Atlantic Ocean, expands into a wide estuary, and after a course of about 17 miles mingles its waters with those of the Fergus, forming an arm of the sea several miles wide. Its tributaries are the Maigue, navigable to the village of Adare; the Deel, navigable to Askeaton; the Mulcairn, the Commogue, and the Daun, or Morning Star. The county is touched on the S.W. boundary by the Feale, and on the S.E. by the Funcheon. The only canal is that cut in 1759 above Limerick, to facilitate the navigation of the Shannon.—The geological formation of the county comprises three great divisions, carboniferous, or mountain limestone, with coal, sandstone, and trap, or basalt. The first comprises the greater portion of the champaign country, including the vales of the rivers that are tributary to the Shannon, the dip being almost uniformly from E. to W. The coal lies chiefly on the western boundary of the limestone district, alternating with ironstone; but neither of these minerals are worked to any extent. There are also some thin seams of coal in the glen between Castlereagh, Galbally, and the town of Tipperary. The second formation includes the Old Red sandstone range of hills running E. and W. from the Deel to the Maigue, and the New Red sandstone range from Charleville to Glenbrohane, forming the boundary between Cork and Limerick, and merging into the Galtees. The third or basalt formation chiefly prevails in the neighbourhood of Lough Gur and the Dead river, sometimes, as at Linfield, rising to a height of near 200 feet, and presenting a perpendicular colonnade of massive pillars 109 feet long, of pentagonal or hexagonal form; but in general the basalt of this region is amorphous, as in the hills of Ballygooly, Knockruadh, Cahirnarry, and the hill of Newcastle. A little to the S.E. of this district rises Knockgreine, or "the Hill of the Sun," 500 feet high, with a base of limestone and a summit of basalt. Oxide of iron and iron clay are found in large quantities at the foot of the hills, and ironstone in the coal measures. Traces of lead are met with in the carboniferous limestone, and sometimes in large quantities, as near Toryhill; also pure copper ore near Abington, and various other minerals, as slate, flagstones, freestone, and an inferior kind of pipeclay in other parts of the county; but no adequate attempts have as yet been made to render available these mineral treasures. The soil of Limerick is peculiarly fertile, comprising about 100,000 acres of the richest land in all Ireland, named by reason of its extraordinary abundance the Golden Vale, which extends from the borders of Tipperary westward through the centre of the county, a distance of 32 miles, and in breadth from Drehidtarsna, by the city of Limerick, to Abington, a distance of 18 miles. The morasses or low meadow lands which extend from the Maigue along the Shannon to Limerick, though not included in the Golden Vale, can scarcely be surpassed in the abundance and richness of their herbage. In several of the lower lands are small detached portions of bog, which supply the greater part of the inhabitants with fuel, and are in consequence extremely valuable, letting sometimes for as much as £1 per rood; when reclaimed, these bog lands are peculiarly adapted to the culture of hemp. Some of the hilly districts not entirely mountainous are also well adapted both for pasture and tillage, though not so luxuriant as the plains. The soil of the lowlands is in general a deep yellow loam resting on limestone, or stiff clay, except in the morasses, which are formed of a black vegetable mould occasionally mixed with sand and gravel resting on a stratum of yellow and blue clay. The hills are more or less fertile, according to the prevailing character of the underlying rock.—In the earliest times this country appears to have been inhabited by the Coriondi mentioned by Ptolemy, and subsequently formed part of the native kingdom or principality of Thomond. In the 9th century it was overrun by the Danes, or Ostmen, who retained the city of Limerick and the island of Iniscattery, in the Shannon, till the 11th century, when they submitted to the O'Briens, princes of Thomond, who then removed the seat of government to Limerick. At the time of the English invasion the chief families were the O'Briens, O'Ryans, or O'Regans, O'Donovans, O'Gormans, O'Scanlans, O'Kinealys, O'Thyans, MacSheehys, MacEneirys, and some others. The disposal of this territory was granted by Henry II. to Herebert Fitz-Herebert, and subsequently to Philip de Braosa, with the exception of the city and castle of the Ostmen, which was committed to William de Burgo, ancestor of the De Burghs, by Richard I. Braosa's grants having been forfeited, various Anglo-Norman settlements were effected under Theobald Fitz-Walter, ancestor of the Butler family, Hamo de Valois, William Fitz-Aldhelm, Thomas Fitzgerald, the Graces, and others, who united with the O'Briens of Thomond in reducing the native clans, and procured their territory to be formed into a county by King John in 1210. The native Irish of Thomond still retained their ancient customs, and were frequently at war with the English settlers. In 1367 they took prisoner the Lord Justice Gerald Fitz-Gerald, at Manister-Nenagh, and during the Wars of the Roses overran the whole country. In the reign of Elizabeth the Earl of Desmond revolted against the English authority, and possessed himself of Askeaton, Kilmallock, Newcastle, and Rathkeale, then the four chief places in the county; but on his death his estates were confiscated and bestowed on new proprietors—an event which considerably increased the number of English settlers, as did also the wars of 1641 and 1688. Towards the commencement of the 18th century Lord Southwell brought over a number of German Protestants, or Palatines, whom he settled in the country around Adare and Rathkeale, who by their industry and skill have greatly conduced to the advancement of agriculture and the wealth of the country, but were originally looked upon with great jealousy by the native population. In the year 1762 a most alarming spirit of insurrection showed itself in this part of the country; the peasantry assembled in great numbers, chiefly by night, dug up cornfields, houghed or killed the cattle of the gentry, and murdered many who were obnoxious to them from their harsh mode of collecting the tithes and taxes. From their practice of wearing shirts over their clothes to distinguish each other at night they were called Whiteboys, and kept the country in a continual state of agitation for near sixty years, till the great rebellion of 1820, when they burnt the churches of Athlacca, Ballybrook, and Kilkeedy, besides numerous gentlemen's houses, committing their devastations often in the open day. Several wealthy and influential persons were murdered, amongst whom was a Roman Catholic clergyman, who rashly attempted to exhort them to submission to the laws; and it was only under the application of the Insurrection Act, and the most vigorous exertions of the magistracy, that the spirit of violence was at length suppressed.—Through the uncertainty of life and property prevailing in this part of the country, a great check was given to enterprise, which it has not yet entirely recovered. The occupations are chiefly agricultural, and large quantities of produce are exported. Pasture and dairy farming are most cultivated, tillage being still in a backward condition, notwithstanding the extraordinary capabilities of the soil. It is said that in some seasons the heat of the summer's sun is scarcely powerful enough to ripen the heavy crops of grain, but in general the climate is remarkably good, and the weather less variable than in any other county of Ireland—an effect which has been much promoted by the drainage and cultivation of the bogs. The absence of hedgerows and timber trees, except in the immediate vicinity of gentlemen's seats, gives the country a very denuded appearance, notwithstanding its great fertility. The tillage, except on large farms, which are mostly in the hands of gentlemen, is generally conducted in a slovenly manner, and even the wealthier landholders are not exempt from the charge of negligence; but much good appears to have been recently wrought in this part of the country by the operations of the Encumbered Estates Act, which has transferred whole properties from the hands of absentee landlords to industrious and enterprising capitalists. The estates are in general large. In some parts the land is much divided, and wretchedly exhausted by the impoverishing system of sub-letting. The condition of the larger farmers is generally good, and the cottages of the peasantry neat and well-kept. The chief crops are oats, wheat, barley, rye, potatoes, turnips, clover, peas, mangold-wurzel, carrots, &c. The only manufactures are friezes, coarse woollens, paper, gloves, lace, flour, and meal. The net annual value of property in the county, under the Tenement Valuation Act, is £519,162.—The population has for the last quarter of a century been on the decrease—in 1851 it was 262,136, and in 1861, 217,277. For civil purposes the county is divided into 13 baronies.—Clanwilliam, Connello Lower and Upper, Coonagh, Coshlea, Coshma, Glenquin, Kenry, Kilmallock Liberties, North Liberty, Owneybeg, Pubblebrien, Shanid, and Small County, and contains 131 parishes and parts of parishes. The baronies of Glenquin, North Liberty, and Shanid have been recently constituted; and that part of the county of the city without the new municipal boundary has been apportioned between Clanwilliam and Pubblebrien baronies, with the exception of the portion N. of the Shannon, which has been made a distinct barony. The principal towns are Limerick city, the county and assize town, Rathkeale, Newcastle, and Askeaton, besides the market towns of Bruff, Kilfinane, Ballingarry, Glin, and Pallaskenry. The county returns four members to parliament—two for the county at large, constituency in 1859, 6,481; and two for Limerick city, constituency 2,013. It is in the Munster circuit, and in the Cork military district. It is governed by a lieutenant, vice-lieutenant, 18 deputy-lieutenants, custos, sheriff, and about 125 magistrates. For ecclesiastical purposes it constitutes the dioceses of Limerick and Emly, with parts of Cashel and Killaloe, all within the province of Dublin. In 1850 there were 103 National schools, attended by 16,975 children.—The county is traversed by about 20 miles of the Great Southern and Western railway of Ireland, which enters from Tipperary by Oolla and Pallasgrean to Limerick. The roads are numerous and remarkably good, the principal lines radiating from Limerick to Dublin, through Annacott and Nenagh; to Galway, through Bunratty; to Tralee, through Adare and Rathkeale; to Mallow and Cork, through Bruff and Kilmallock; to Tipperary and Cashel, through Pallasgrean and Oolla; and to Pallaskenry, down the Shannon.—The principal seats are—Newcastle, of the Duke of Devonshire; Shannon Grove, of the Earl of Charleville; Mount Shannon, of the Earl of Clare; Adare Castle, of the Earl of Dunraven; Roxborough, of Viscount Gort; Doneraile House, of Viscount Doneraile; Rockbarton, of Viscount Gillamore; The Castle, of Lord Courtenay; The Hermitage, of Lord Massey; Mount Trenchard, of Lord Monteagle; Elm Park, of Lord Clarina; Springfield, of Lord Muskerry; Carrah, of De Vere, Bart.; Carass, of Roche, Bart.; Knocknacree, of Waller, Bart.; besides numerous mansions belonging to private gentry.—There are numerous remains of antiquity in the county, including Druidic circles, cromlechs, &c., around Loch Gur, at Croom, Carrickgalla, the Grange, Knockfennel, &c.; round towers with ruins of churches at Ardpatrick, Croom, and Kilmallock; of abbeys and churches at Abbeyfeale, Adare, Askeaton, Ballingarry, Cahirconlish, Kilmallock, Kilshane, Manister-Nenagh, Mungret, and Rochestown; also of Danish raths and baronial castles, of which there were above 100 in this county.

LIMERICK, a maritime county of a city, municipal and parliamentary borough, seaport, and county town of co. Limerick, between which and co. Clare it is situated, in the prov. of Munster, Ireland, 51 miles N. of Cork, and 119¼ W.S.W. of Dublin by road, or 129 by the Great Southern and Western railway, on which it is a station. It is also the terminus of the Waterford and Limerick railway. This ancient and important city is supposed by some antiquaries to have been the Regia mentioned by Ptolemy, and the Rosse-de-Nailleagh of the Annals of Multifernan, and is subsequently described under the name of Lumneach, whence its English designation is supposed to have been derived. The first authentic notices of Limerick represent it as a Danish settlement, and one of their principal maritime stations. In the middle of the 9th century the Danes surrounded it with walls and towers, which enclosed the area now occupied by the English town. For nearly a century their power continued to increase, till Brien Boroimhe, King of Munster and Thomond, subjected it to a tribute of 365 tons of wine of 32 gallons each, to be paid annually. In 1106 Murtogh removed to here the seat of royalty, and Limerick continued to be the residence of the kings of Thomond, or North Munster, until its conquest by the English in the reign of Henry II., who placed a garrison here. After Henry's departure Donald O'Brien, King of Thomond, regained possession of it; but in 1175 it was retaken by Raymond le Gros, who obtained a great booty and secured it by a garrison. Upon the death of Earl Strongbow it was again evacuated by the English, and subsequently burned by order of Donald, who declared that it should no longer be a nest for foreigners. In 1179 it was granted, with the kingdom of Limerick, to Herbert Fitz-Herbert; but he failed, as did likewise Philip de Braosa, to secure the conquest. In the reign of John it received its first charter of incorporation, and was committed to the custody of William de Burgo, who formed a settlement which from that period set at defiance all the efforts of the Irish. A strong castle and bridge were erected, and many English families settled within its jurisdiction. In 1234 the city was taken, after a siege of four days, by Richard, Earl Marshal of England, then in rebellion; and by the continued wars in the surrounding country, especially among the O'Briens, De Burghs, De Clares, and Fitzgeralds, its progress in commercial prosperity appears to have been greatly checked. In 1316 Edward Bruce terminated his career of conquest southward at this place, and kept his court here until the following Easter. During the 15th century the fortifications, which previously had enclosed only the English town, were so extended as to include the portion on the S. bank of the Shannon, called the Irish Town, which was completed by the erection of St. John's Gate, in 1495. In 1467 a mint was established here, and in 1495 the brotherhood of the guild of merchants was instituted. Parliaments were held here by Gerald, Earl of Kildare, in 1484, and by Sir Anthony St. Leger in 1543—in which latter divers important Acts were passed. During the whole of the Tudor period the country was in a state of political commotion—sometimes in open revolt against the English sovereignty, and at others distracted by local feuds resulting from the commercial jealousies between Limerick and Galway, which not unfrequently resulted in open hostilities. The steady adherence of Limerick, however, to the royal cause in the reign of Elizabeth greatly facilitated its progress, so that a contemporary writer describes it as a place well and substantially built, with walls extending round a circuit of about 3 miles; and Sir Henry Sydney, the Lord Deputy, when he visited it in 1567, 1569, and 1576, states that he was received here with greater magnificence than he had hitherto experienced in Ireland. In 1642 the citizens threw open the gates upon the approach of the insurgent army, under Lord Ikerrin and General Barry, who besieged the royal garrison of 200 men in the castle. It was subsequently garrisoned by the Marquis of Ormond and Earl Castlehaven for the king, and sustained a siege of six months in 1651, when Ireton invested the town. During the siege a brilliant sally was made by O'Nial, who commanded the garrison, on the besiegers, which nearly proved fatal to the parliamentarian army. The siege being protracted until the approach of winter, famine, misery, and death made formidable ravages among the ranks of both parties; and the city would not even then have been taken, only for some officers of the garrison who took possession of one of the gates and turned the cannon against the city. The garrison were suffered to march out unarmed, and the inhabitants to remove their effects to such place as they might be assigned to live, while the soldiers and English adventurers were installed in the forfeited houses at six years' purchase, and for five years the city was subjected to military government. The siege cost the parliamentarians one of their bravest generals, Ireton, who died here of the plague. In 1656 the municipal government was restored by the election of a mayor and 12 English aldermen. The accession of James II. once more threw the government of the city into the hands of the Roman Catholic party; and after the battle of the Boyne the Earl of Tyrconnel established his vice-regal court here. The fortifications and natural defences of the town were speedily restored, and the Irish army, under Generals Boileau and Sarsfield, prepared to resist the victorious arms of William III., who was unable, with his 20,000 veteran troops, to take the town, though he assaulted it three times. In 1691 it capitulated, after six weeks' siege, to Ginkell, who signed a treaty, as is said, on the "Treaty Stone," near the Clare end of Thomond Bar, promising the Roman Catholic inhabitants free toleration of their religion; but this treaty was violated in Queen Anne's time. During the Scottish rebellion, in 1745, strenuous precautions were employed to prevent any commotion, but no symptom of disaffection was discovered; and in 1760 Limerick was declared to be no longer a fortress, and the dismantling of its walls and other defences was immediately commenced, and completed by slow degrees, as the extension of the various improvements rendered it necessary.—The modern town, built on King's Island and on both sides of the Shannon, consists of three portions—the English Town, the Irish Town, and Newtown-Pery. The two first constitute the older part of the town, and are subject to occasional inundation by storms and high tides, which on several occasions have caused the loss of many lives and property. The houses of the English Town are antique, chiefly built in the Flemish fashion, and the streets are dirty and ill paved, most of the wealthy inhabitants having removed to the New Town, which is one of the handsomest modern towns in Ireland, containing New-square, Richmond-place, and many good streets. It stands on elevated ground below the union of the two streams of the Shannon, and has been wholly built within the present century, on property belonging to the Pery family. On the Clare side of the river is the populous suburb of Thomondgate, once the only entrance to the ancient city, and protected by a strong castle, which is still of considerable extent. There are five bridges; one of which, the Wellesley bridge, is a five-arched structure crossing the harbour. It was built in 1827, of stone, at a cost of £85,000, and has a swing-bridge for shipping. Thomond bridge, to Irish Town, was rebuilt in 1839, to replace the old level fourteen-arched bridge constructed in 1210. Baal's bridge, of one arch, rebuilt in 1831. Park bridge, across the canal, which shortens a bend of the Shannon. New Bridge, over Abbey river, to King's Island; besides Athlunkard bridge, on the Killaloe road, built in 1830. The principal buildings are the cathedral, mentioned below; the county court house, built in 1810, at a cost of £12,000; city court-house, built in 1763, measuring 60 feet by 30 feet, with a gaol attached; county gaol, built in 1821 in the castellated style, with a tower 60 feet high; custom-house, built in 1769; exchange, in 1778; Commercial buildings, erected in 1806, where the Chamber of Commerce meet; townhall, linen hall, flax factory, lace factory, district lunatic asylum, which admits 347 patients; Bushy Park lunatic asylum; workhouse and auxiliaries, capable of containing 4,000 inmates; model school, savings-bank, three commercial banks, literary institution, to which is attached a library and mechanics' institute; theatre, assembly-rooms, Mount St. Vincent Orphanage, County hospital, built in 1759; Barrington's hospital, or city infirmary; fever and lock hospitals; markets for corn, butter, meat, and hay; a chief police station, four military barracks, comprising the Castle, Keith's Strand Ordnance, St. John's, and Boherboy; police barrack, and lately the Mont de Piété, or charitable pawnhouse—this last was a handsome building with portico and dome; but its affairs having become involved, it was wound up about ten years ago. There are seven breweries, distilleries, tanneries, foundries, flour mills, a patent slip for vessels of 500 tons, and three shipbuilding slips; also Russell's provision stores, covering three acres, paper mills, and others. Limerick is also celebrated for the manufacture of fishing-hooks and of lace, which latter was introduced by the Walkers in 1829. The manufacture of linen, which had nearly expired, has recently been revived through the enterprise of Messrs. Russell and Sons; and that of gloves continues, chiefly for houses in Cork.—For the purposes of local government the city is divided into eight wards, each electing one alderman. It is governed by a mayor, who is admiral of the port, &c., 8 aldermen, and 32 councillors, with other officers, bearing the style of "the mayor, aldermen, and burgesses of Limerick." It has a revenue of about £8,100, derived from tolls and customs, supplemented by the rents of houses and lands and the fishery of the salmon weir. It comprises an area of 60¾ square miles, or 38,863 acres. The population in 1861 was 44,476, against 53,448 in 1851, showing a decrease of 8,972 in the decennial period. The borough returns two members to parliament since the passing of the Reform Bill, the bounds being those of the county of the city, which include Newtown-Pery, in St. Michael's parish, the Old or English and Irish Town, in St. Mary's, also Cahirnarry, Cahirvally, Derrygalvin, Donoughmore, Killeely, Kilmurry, St. Patrick, and parts of Abingdon, Carrigparson, Crecora, Kilkeedy, Kilnegarruff, Knocknegaul, Mungret, and Stradbally, besides several extra parochial places. The constituency in 1860 was 2,013, the sheriffs being the returning officers. The net annual value of property under the Tenement Valuation Act is £63,237. The assizes for the county and county of the city are held here, also quarter and petty sessions. The mayor holds a court of conscience for pleas under 40*s.*, and the assistant-barrister holds a civil bill court for the county and city. Limerick Poor-law Union contains 19 electoral divisions in counties Limerick and Clare, with 34 guardians. The city is the headquarters of the South-Western military district, and contains artillery, cavalry, and infantry barracks; there is also a city police barrack.—The Hanging Gardens, constructed in 1808 by William Roche, Esq., at an expense of £15,000, form a singular ornament to the town, being raised on arches from 25 to 40 feet high, with ranges of hothouses and greenhouses at the angles. The façade of these gardens extends about 200 feet, and the top of the highest terrace, which is 70 feet above the street, commands a most extensive view of the city and the Shannon, the noblest river in Ireland.—The harbour at the head of the estuary extends above 1,600 yards in length and 150 in breadth, with from 2 to 9 feet at low water, and 19 at spring tides, which latter enables vessels of 600 tons to moor at the quays, on which there are cranes. The quayage and wharfage, which extend for 1,600 yards, cost above £18,000 in the erection. The commerce of the port has recently considerably increased, and the management is invested, under the amended Act of 10 and 11 Vict., cap. 198, in 43 commissioners, who have the direction of tolls, &c. Its subports are Clare, Dingle, Kilrush, and Tarbert. The chief exports are beef, pork, butter, bacon, wheat, oats, oatmeal, flour, beans, barley, &c., and all sorts of agricultural produce. Trout, eels, perch, pike, and salmon are caught in the Shannon—the last being the property of the corporation. An Irish Western Yacht Club was established here twenty years ago.—Four newspapers are published in the town—the Limerick Chronicle, the Limerick Reporter and Tipperary Vindicator, the Munster News, and the Southern Chronicle.—Ever since the 7th century it has been the seat of a bishopric, formerly in the province of Cashel, but now in that of Dublin. In 1195 the bishopric was increased by the accession of Innisattery, and in 1650 by the amalgamation of the sees of Ardfert and Aghadoe, together comprising 115 benefices, in the counties of Limerick and Clare, of which 11 are unions, 23 in the patron. of the bishop, and 5 in that of the crown. The chapter comprises a dean, archdeacon, precentor, chancellor, treasurer, and 11 prebendaries. Limerick Palace is the residence of the bishop, whose income amounts to about £5,000 per annum. The livings within the liberties of the city are—St. Mary's, a rect. with St. Nicholas, Cappagh, Cahirnarry, Bruree, and Mungret annexed, constituting the corps of the deanery, joint val. £400, in the patron. of the crown; St. Michael's, a rect. with Ardagh and Kildimo annexed, val. £450, in the patron. of the bishop, the living being generally held by the archdeacon; St. Munchin, a rect. with Drehidtarsna and Killonehan annexed, val. £350, in the patron. of the bishop. The other livings—viz. St. Lawrence, St. John, St. Patrick, and St. Michael, or St. George—are of small value. The cathedral, which serves as the parish church of St. Mary, is a venerable Gothic building situated in the English Town. It was originally founded by Donald O'Brien, King of Limerick, in 1200, but re-edified by the citizens in 1490, and carefully restored after the wars of the 17th century, and improved at various subsequent periods. It is a large heavy building surrounded with graduated battlements, and has at the W. end a square tower 120 feet high, surmounted by turrets at the angles, and containing a peal of eight bells. The choir is 90 feet by 30, with a fine window at the E. end, and in front of the communion-table is a modern Gothic screen. It contains a curiously-carved episcopal throne, and the splendid tomb of Donogh, the great Earl of Thomond, composed of three compartments of marble of different colours, and surrounded by pillars of the Ionic, Corinthian, and Composite orders, and decorated with his arms and various trophies. Also several side chapels, formerly endowed, and a fine monument of the Galway family. Besides the cathedral there are five Protestant churches within the city. The total number of parishes within the dioc. is 92, of which 17 are unions; and the number of churches 42, besides several chapels-of-ease and other places licensed for Divine service. In the Roman Catholic divisions the see is a separate dioc. within the prov. of Cashel, comprising 40 parochial bénefices, or unions, and about twice that number of chapels. The bishop's parishes are those of SS. John and Patrick, both in the county of the city. The church of St. John, which is a cruciform structure erected in 1753, is considered the cathedral. There are besides four parochial and four conventual Roman Catholic chapels within the city. The residence of the Roman Catholic bishop is Park House. There are within the city five Protestant Dissenting places of worship, and several conventual establishments, including the Austin friary, which was formerly the theatre. Of the early conventual establishments the only one of which traces still exist is the Dominican friary of Donagh O'Brien, founded in 1327. Of the town walls, which had 17 gates at one time, some remnants exist, as also the two round towers and handsome gateway of King John's Castle, at Thomond Bridge; also parts of the citadel and the Black Battery, raised by William III. From this place the family of Pery, of Limerick House, take the titles of earl and viscount. Wednesdays and Saturdays are market days. Fairs are held on Easter Tuesday, 4th July, 4th August, and 4th December; also the Great Munster fair, in spring and autumn.

LIMERICK, a vil. in the bar. of Gorey, co. Wexford, Ireland, 4 miles N. of Gorey.

LIMERSTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Brixton, Isle of Wight, co. Hants, 5 miles S.W. of Newport.

LIMINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Stone, co. Somerset, 1 mile E. of Ilchester, its post town, and 6 W. of Sparkford. It is situated on the river Yeo, and contains the tythg. of Draycott. The village is small and entirely agricultural. The soil consists of loam and clay. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £410. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £366, in the patron. of Wadham College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient stone structure with a lofty tower containing four bells. The interior of the church contains the cypher of Cardinal Wolsey, who once held the living, several monuments, including one to Sir Richard Gyverney, who founded the chantry in 1329, and several of the Beatons, to whom this parish belonged. The register dates from 1680. There is a National school for both sexes, built in 1834, in which a Sunday-school is also held. The Primitive Methodists have a place of worship. G. D. Digby, Esq., is lord of the manor.

LIMNE. See LYMPNE, co. Kent.

LIMPENHOE, a par. in the hund. of Blofield, co. Norfolk, 2 miles from the Reedham railway station, 4 N.E. of Loddon, and 5 S. of Acle, its nearest money-order office. The village, which is small, is situated near the Yarmouth railway. The navigable river Yare bounds the parish on the S. The waste lands were enclosed in 1840, under an Act of Parliament. The living is a vic. annexed to the rect. of Southwood, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church, dedicated to St. Botolph, is a small ancient edifice with a low square tower and an enriched Norman doorway. The register dates from 1657. There is a National school for both sexes, also a place of worship for the Primitive Methodists.

LIMPLEY-STOKE, a chplry. in the par. and hund. of Great Bradford, co. Wilts, 3 miles W. of Bradford, its post town. It is a station on the Bathampton branch of the Wilts and Somerset railway. It is situated on the river Avon, and near the Kennet and Avon canal. It is joined with Winsley. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the vic.* of Bradford-on-Avon, in the dioc. of Sarum. The church is a small structure dedicated to St. Mary.

LIMPOLE, a vil. in the hmlt. of Serlby and par. of Harworth, co. Nottingham, 2 miles N.W. of Bawtry. It is situated on the river Torn, a tributary of the Idle.

LIMPSFIELD, a par. in the first div. of the hund. of Tandridge, co. Surrey, 4¼ miles E. of Godstone, its post town, and 10 from Croydon. The village is large, but principally agricultural. It is situated on the road from Croydon to Maidstone. Chalk is quarried for burning into lime. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £694. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £595. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, has a tower surmounted by a wooden spire and containing a clock. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum. There are National and infant schools for both sexes. The Wesleyans have a chapel, situated on the common. Hook Wood is the principal residence. G. W. G. Leveson Gower, Esq., is lord of the manor.

LINAAN, a tributary of the river Suir, co. Tipperary, Ireland.

LINAANE BAY, in the bar. of Innishowen, co. Donegal, Ireland. It is situated on the E. side of Lough Swilly.

LINACRE, a tnshp. in the par. of Walton-on-the-Hill, hund. of West Derby, co. Lancaster, 4 miles N.W. of Liverpool.

LINBRIGGS, a tnshp. in the par. of Allenton, W. div. of Coquetdale ward, co. Northumberland, 11 miles N.W. of Rothbury. It is situated on the river Coquet, here crossed by a bridge. The Ridlee Burn and several brooks run through the glens in the neighbourhood to join the river Coquet.

LINBY, or LYNBY, a par. in the N. div. of the wap. of Broxtow, co. Nottingham, 7 miles N.W. of Nottingham, its post town, and 7½ S. of Mansfield. It is a station on the Nottingham and Mansfield branch of the Midland railway. It is situated in the vicinity of the river Leen, and Newstead Abbey. Wire was formerly manufactured. Limestone is abundant, and is quarried for building and burning into lime. There are two ancient crosses—one at either end of the village. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £280. The land is well cultivated. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £200. The church is a small edifice dedicated to St. Michael. It has recently been thoroughly restored, at the expense of the rector, and contains monuments of the Chaworth and Strelly families. Andrew Montagu, Esq., is lord of the manor.

LINCH, a par. in the hund. of Easebourne, rape of Chichester, co. Sussex, 5 miles N.W. of Midhurst, its post town. It is mentioned in Domesday Book as Lince, and was then held of Edward the Confessor by Uric. It subsequently belonged to the Montague and Poyntz families, and is now the property of the Earl of Egmont. It is divided into two portions, known as Woodman's Green and Linch Farm: the former is a well-wooded district situated within the limits of the borough of Midhurst, as extended under the Reform Act; the latter consists of about 700 acres of fertile land at the base of the chalk downs. A considerable portion of the land is unenclosed. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £57. The church is a stone structure situated at Woodman's Green, and erected about 1700. It has a curious E. window. The register dates from 1701. There are no remains of the old church, which was situated at the other end of the parish.

LINCHLADE. See LINSLADE, co. Bucks.

LINCHMERE, or LYNCHMERE, a par. in the hund. of Easebourne, rape of Chichester, co. Sussex, 5 miles N.W. of Midhurst, and 2 E. of Liphook, its post town. The village is small and entirely agricultural. The manor was anciently held by William-de-Percy, of the house of Arundel, and afterwards formed part of the estates of the Fitzalans, from whom it passed to Sir William Fitzwilliam, and finally became incorporated with the Cowdry estates. The Earl of Egmont is lord of the manor. The surface is varied and embellished with timber, above a third of the land being woodland; the remainder is divided between arable and pasture, with some orchard and waste. About half a mile from the church are the remains of Shulbrede Priory, founded by Ralph de Arderne about the beginning of the reign of Henry III., for five canons of the order of St. Augustine, and now converted into a farmhouse. The revenue of the priory was returned at £76 15*s.* 6*d.* at the time of the Dissolution. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £60. The church, of which the dedication is not known, is an ancient structure occupying an elevated site from which a rich prospect is commanded. At the time of the restoration of the church, in 1856, some stained windows were inserted. The register commences in 1560. There is a parochial school for both sexes.

LINCLUDEN, an ext. par. place in co. Kirkcudbright, Scotland, 1 mile N. of Dumfries. Here are the remains of a Black nunnery founded by Uthred of Galloway in the reign of Malcolm IV., and subsequently converted into a college. At the Reformation it became the property of the Maxwells.

LINCOLNSHIRE, a maritime co. on the E. coast of England, lying between 52° 39′ and 53° 43′ N. lat., and between 0° 22′ and 0° 56′ W. long., bounded on the N. by the estuary of the Humber, on the N.W. by Yorkshire, on the W. by Nottinghamshire, on the S.W. by Leicestershire and Rutlandshire, on the S. by Northamptonshire, on the S.E. by Cambridgeshire, and on the E. by the German Ocean. Its greatest length from the Humber, near the town of Barton, to Market Deeping, is 75 miles, and its greatest breadth from the junction of the three counties of York, Nottingham, and Lincoln, to Saltfleet, 50 miles. Its area is 1,775,457 statute acres, being greater than that of any other English county except Yorkshire. Its population in 1861 was 412,246, having increased since 1851 by 5,024, when it was 407,222, or, at the rate of 1 per cent. It is now double what it was in 1800. The number of inhabited houses in 1861 was 86,626, and of uninhabited, 4,289.—At the time of the Roman invasion Lincolnshire formed part of the territory of the Coritani, a kindred tribe with the Iceni. During the period of the occupation of Britain by the Romans, it was included in the division Flavia Cæsariensis, and was opened up by the construction of dykes and roads: of the former are the Fossedyke and Cardyke; of the latter, Ermine Street, the Fosse Way, and the Salt Way. The Roman towns were, Lindum, the modern Lincoln, situated at the intersection of the two great roads—the eastern branch of Ermine Street and the Fosse Way; Ad Abum, now Winteringham; Aquis, Alkborough; Banovallum, Horncastle; Brigæ, Brenn-Broughton; Causennis, Ancaster; Duro Brivis, Tattershall; In Medio, Kirton-in-Lindsey; Margidunum, Willoughby, near Grantham; Pretorium, Broughton; Vainona, Wainfleet; and Verometum, Willoughby. Besides which, many other places, as Caistor, Gainsborough, Ludborough, Yarborough, &c., are only known to have been Roman stations from antiquities discovered on their sites. Under the Saxons it formed a dependency of the kingdom of Mercia, and was comprehended in the conquests of Edwin of Northumbria, under whose influence Christianity was introduced into this county by Paulinus. During the commotions which the ravages committed by the Danes created here in the reign of Ethelred I., Lincolnshire, with its numerous monastic establishments, suffered greatly. About the year 877 it appears to have fallen entirely into the power of the Danes, and, as part of the territory of the burgs of Stamford and Lincoln, to have been included in the Danelagh. In the civil war between Stephen and the Empress Maud, Lincolnshire was the scene of several important events. In 1141 Lincoln was besieged, and a battle was fought before its walls. Another battle subsequently occurred at the same place, by which the civil war between the adherents of the Dauphin and John was terminated. In the reign of Edward IV., 30,000 Lincolnshire men, under Sir Robert Wells, rose in rebellion against the king. They were defeated with great slaughter at the battle of "Lose Coat Field," near Stamford, and their leader was slain. On the suppression of the monasteries in 1536, another insurrection broke out in this country. It commenced at Louth, and spread over Lincolnshire into Yorkshire, where the insurgents were commanded by Robert Aske; but at the approach of the king's forces they quietly dispersed. In the civil war between Charles I. and the parliament, Lincolnshire was the scene of numerous contests. In 1642, Colonel Cavendish, at the head of a body of royalists, took possession of Grantham, capturing a large quantity of arms and ammunition, and demolishing the fortifications. In the same year Cromwell defeated the royalists near Grantham; General Cavendish gained a victory over the parliamentarians at Ancaster; and the parliamentarians took Gainsborough. In the following year, at the last-mentioned place, Cromwell defeated the royalists under General Cavendish, the latter losing his life in the engagement; and in the same year the royalists were again defeated at Horncastle. In 1644 Lincoln Castle and Cathedral were stormed by the parliamentary forces under the Earl of Manchester.—In former times Lincolnshire was chiefly noted for its abundance of fish, wild fowl, and rabbits, owing to the wide extent of the fens and wolds, where all kinds of game were bred. When these became improved by drainage, it was equally celebrated for its grazing and its tillage; but has only of late years become a commercial county, though situated on the sea, there having previously been a want of good havens. The principal harbours are, Gainsborough, which is rapidly increasing in foreign trade and shipbuilding; Great Grimsby, at the mouth of the Humber, where the extensive docks opened in 1850 render it a rapidly increasing rival to Hull; and Boston, near the mouth of the Witham, the approach to which has recently been much improved. The coast of Lincolnshire, which extends nearly in a half circle, being washed on the N.E. by the salt waters of the Humber, on the E. by the German Ocean, and on the S.E. by the Wash, is for the most part low and marshy—that portion of it which lies between the mouth of the Welland and that of the Nene requiring an embankment to protect it from the encroachments of the sea. Opposite Spurnhead light it swells into low cliffs, but again becomes marshy towards the Wash. The principal points along the coast are, Axholme island, at the mouth of the river Trent; Barton-on-Humber; New Holland, at the ferry to Hull; Stallingborough lighthouse; Great Grimsby docks; Cleethorpe watering-place, opposite Spurnhead light; Tetney haven; Saltfleet; Mablethorpe watering-place; Ingoldwell's point, the most easterly part of the county; Wainfleet, in Boston Deeps; the harbour of Boston, on the river Witham; Fossdyke Wash, where King John lost his baggage whilst crossing the Welland; and Crosskeys Wash, near the mouth of the river Nene. About half the county is in wolds and uplands, and the remainder in fens and marshes, which, since they have been drained, render it one of the richest counties in England. A great portion of the surface is below the sea-level, and consists for the most part of marsh or fen land, which was anciently covered by a vast forest. That part of the county which is bounded on the N. by a line drawn from Burgh to Tattershall, and thence to Bardney, and on the W. by another line drawn from Heckington to Uffington on the Welland, belongs to the great fen country of England. To the W. of the Trent, surrounding the Isle of Axholme, is another tract of marsh land called Thorne Waste, or Thorne Level. In consequence of the excellent measures which have been adopted for the draining of the fens, little of this district remains in its original condition; but the drainage is constantly going on, and a grand scheme has been recently formed, under the name of the Great Level of the Wash, to embank the sands on the Wash, and render them fit for tillage, at the same time improving the havens and watercourses of South Lincolnshire. A range of chalk hills called the "Lincolnshire Wolds," about 47 miles in length, and from 5 to 8 in width, runs from Barton-upon-Humber to Burgh; skirting the chalk along its entire length is a belt of greensand; W. of which the ironsand occupies a narrow strip of land; the two last formations form a range of hills running parallel to the Wolds from Market Rasen to the neighbourhood of Spilsby. The whole of the western side of the county to the S. of Lincoln is occupied by the lias formation; a bed of oolite occupies the country which lies between the lias and the fen district; the north-western corner of the county belongs to the New Red sandstone or red marl formation; gypsum occurs plentifully in this district. The mineral productions, as well as the geological formation, favour the agricultural character of the county. In the Wolds limestone is quarried and burnt into lime, which forms an excellent manure; in the Isle of Axholme sulphate of lime, or gypsum, and plaster of Paris are obtained; and from the cliffs of the Humber a fine variety of chalk is procured for making into whiting. Around Ancaster are numerous quarries of freestone, and in various parts sandstone is quarried for building purposes. The soil is in general diluvial and alluvial, and in the fens is often of great depth.—The principal rivers of Lincolnshire are, the Trent, Ancholme, Witham, and the Welland. The Trent, which is the great stream, after forming the boundary between the counties of Lincoln and Nottingham for 16 miles, flows northward past Gainsborough for 19 miles, almost entirely within the border of Lincolnshire, leaving the Isle of Axholme to the W. between it and the Don. The Trent having reached the Humber, takes an easterly direction, and these rivers flow in one very wide channel to the German Ocean, where the estuary is 7 miles across. Vessels of 150 tons can ascend with the tide as high as Gainsborough, where the river is crossed by a bridge. Both the Trent and Humber are navigable throughout for ships and steamers, and are connected by means of canals with all the chief rivers of England. The principal tributaries of the Trent in Lincolnshire are, the navigable Idle, or Bykerdike, which enters from Nottinghamshire, and falls into the river below Gainsborough on the left bank; the Old Thorne river, the New Idle river, and the New Thorne river. These two last are only cuts from the rivers after which they are named, but fall into the Trent. The Ancholme rises near the village of Spridlington, between Lincoln and Market Raisen, and being joined at Briggs by the Rase, becomes navigable; the greater part of its course, which is northerly, is then through an artificial channel about 20 miles long to the Humber at Barton. The streams which fall into it are small, being chiefly the drainage of the valley between the Wolds and the oolite or stonebrash hills. The Witham, next in importance to the Trent, rises near Thistleton, just within the border of Rutlandshire, and flows in a northerly direction through Grantham to Lincoln, where, having received the waters of the little river Brant, it becomes navigable for steamers. It then pursues an easterly course to Bardney Abbey, where it is joined by the united stream of the Langworth and South Beck; then flowing S.E., it receives near Tattershall, on the left bank, the waters of the Bain, and on the right bank the Kyme Ean, or Sleaford river; from here it flows by an artificial cut to Boston, below which town it flows in its natural bed, which has recently been improved, into the Wash. The whole length of the Witham is nearly 80 miles, for about half of which it is navigable. The Welland rises in Northamptonshire, and touches the border of Lincolnshire just above Stamford, when it runs easterly to Crowland, forming for a short distance the boundary between Northampton and Lincoln shires. It then separates into two streams, one termed the Old Welland, running N.E. through Spalding to the Fossdyke Wash, the other, called the Shire Drain, proceeds easterly along the border of the county to Cross Keys Wash, at the mouth of the Nene. This river is navigable up to Stamford, both its branches flowing for a considerable distance in artificial channels. Another river called the Glen, which is also navigable for a distance of about 12 miles, falls into the Wash at the mouth of the Welland. Besides these principal rivers, there are many small streams falling into the numerous canals and dykes which intersect all parts of the county, intended chiefly for draining the land, but some of them are navigable, and even gigantic works, as the Cardyke and Fossedyke, mentioned above, as constructed by the Romans. The former is 60 feet wide, and near 40 miles in length, joining the Welland and Witham. It traverses the whole of South Lincolnshire from N. to S. The Fossedyke connects the city of Lincoln with the Trent; the South Forty-Foot is cut from the Glen to the Witham at Boston; the North Forty-Foot joins the Kyme or Sleaford river with the South Forty-Foot; the Stainforth and Keadley canal intersects the Isle of Axholme from the Don to the Trent; the Old and New Hammond Beck runs from the Welland near Spalding to the South Forty-Foot near Boston; the Sleaford navigation connects the town of Sleaford with the Witham, and the Louth canal renders that river navigable from Louth to the North Sea; the Grantham canal runs from that town to the Trent at Nottingham, also the Horncastle, Bourne, West Fen Catchwater, East Fen Catchwater, with numerous minor cuts, provincially termed leams, droves, becks, eaux, and dykes, which are too numerous to admit of distinct notice. River steamers ply inland from Hull and from Boston in communication with the great lines of ocean steam navigation. There are several ferries over the Humber, and a steam ferry from New Holland to Hull. The county is likewise traversed by several lines of railway. The Great Northern enters the county from Peterborough, the main line going through Grantham and Newark; on the E. it sends out a line through Spalding, Boston, Burgh, Louth, to Great Grimsby and New Holland; another branch diverges from Boston, by Tattershall and Lincoln, to Gainsborough, where it joins the Manchester and Sheffield line; a third branch diverges at Saxelby westward to the Manchester line: from the Midland railway at Nottingham a line goes to Lincoln, which is continued by Market Rasen towards Brigg and New Holland: in the northern part of the county a line comes from the Manchester, Stafford, and Lincolnshire railway through Gainsborough and Kirton to Brigg, where it forks in two directions, one to Great Grimsby, the other to Barton and New Holland on the Humber; there is also a branch of 22 miles from near Brigg to Market Rasen and Lincoln. Acts have been obtained for the construction of other lines and branches within the county, which will prove of considerable advantage, as direct communication is still wanting between the E. and W. The main roads are, the Hull, Barton, and Lincoln, which enters the county at Market Deeping, about 90 miles from London, and runs N. in a direct line for many miles along the old Roman road Ermine Street to the S. bank of the Humber, opposite Hull; the Louth and Boston road, which branches off from the above near Market Deeping, just before it enters Lincolnshire, bends eastward, passing by Spalding, Boston, and Spilsby, to Louth, whence it is continued along the coast to Great Grimsby; the Great North road enters the county at Stamford, and runs N.N.W. by Grantham into Nottinghamshire. Other roads lead from Lincoln to Wragby, and Horncastle to Tattershall, thence over the Wolds to Spilsby and Burgh; by Wragby to Louth and Saltfleet, or to Market Rasen, Caistor, and Grimsby; besides which there are numerous cross-roads, well constructed and maintained in excellent repair.—Since the wolds and heaths have been enclosed, and the fens drained, many sources of wealth have declined, as the decoying of wild fowl, breeding geese for their quills and feathers, snaring rabbits for their skins, &c., but the ordinary employments of industry, chiefly agriculture, have so vastly increased, that the population has doubled since the commencement of the present century, and Lincolnshire now stands first of English counties in point of cultivation as well as in extent of surface.—The soil varies greatly in different districts, the uplands being in general clayey, and the lowlands a sandy loam, enriched by bone-manure, fish, rape seed, and along the coast and tidal rivers by warping. This process, which is only the retaining of the water on the land a sufficient time to permit of the deposit of the sand and mud held in solution, in some instances produces almost a miraculous effect, by covering extensive tracts of poor land with a new soil of the finest quality, as the crops raised upon it clearly show. Besides creating a soil, the warping fills up all inequalities of surface, and gives to the land a natural power of production which cultivation and manuring cannot imitate. The Wolds, which were formerly bare chalk and sand hills, forming vast rabbit warrens, have within the present century been brought under tillage, and produce good crops. Lincoln Heath, once 40 miles long, is now all turnip land, let at £1 per acre. A great deal of corn is grown, chiefly wheat, which yields 44 bushels per acre, also barley, oats, beans, and in the low grounds hemp, flax, coleseed, and wood. The chief occupation, however, is in the fattening of beasts and rearing of sheep and horses for the London markets. Some of the pastures are so luxuriant that it is said two acres in summer will feed one bullock and seven sheep, and large quantities of oil-cake are imported for stall feeding. Horncastle fair is one of the greatest horse fairs in England, and is attended by the London dealers for the purchase of hunters, dray and carriage horses, which fetch very high prices, the Lincolnshire horses being celebrated for their size and power. The cattle are chiefly of a large short-horned breed, which are preferred for grazing, and some crosses of long-horns, the farmers paying more attention to breeding and fattening than to the dairy, although some excellent cheese is made of the Stilton kind. The sheep, which are a variety of the large Leicester breed, are remarkable for their long wool, yielding 6 to 9 lbs. per fleece, and if, as is said, there be two and a half millions of sheep within the county, the annual yield of wool cannot be less than 20,000,000 lbs. of long wool, a quantity nearly equal to the whole produce of New South Wales. The breed of pigs has been recently much improved by crossing, and immense numbers of geese are reared. The estates and farms are of small extent, the latter held on lease for 7 and 14 years; the farm buildings are middling, but not in accordance with the advanced state of husbandry, and the farm-labourers' cottages pretty comfortable. The chief difficulty the people have to contend with is the want of pure water—this first requisite of life being procured in the lower grounds only from wells and ponds, which are all brackish. Although not so abundant as formerly, there are still a great variety of wild fowl and fish. The former include swans, geese, ducks, widgeon, moorhens, snipes, woodcocks, pheasants, partridges, teel, ruffs, peewits, terns, reeves, grebes, storks, herons, cranes, rails, coots, lapwings, and gotwits. The most plentiful sorts of fish are, eels, perch, carp, pike, chub, roach, tench, bream, dace, barbel, &c. The varieties of aquatic plants are numerous.—The only manufactures carried on are ship-building, tanning, lime-burning, sack-weaving, rope and cord walks, hemp, woollens, carpets (chiefly at Louth), linen, silk-weaving, and lace, besides many steam flour, bone, and other mills, breweries, and malt-houses. Scarcely 10 per cent. of the population live by trade and manufactures, whilst 16 per cent. are employed in agriculture, including farmers and graziers.—The inhabitants are chiefly descended from the Angles, or Jutes, and Danes, as evidenced by the prevalence of the Danish terminations "by" and "thorpe" in the names of places, and the provincial accent of the common people. In some of the fen-lands Dutch and French colonies of Protestant refugees were introduced by the undertakers who commenced the drainage of these fens in the reigns of Elizabeth and Charles I., but little trace of them now remain. Another evidence of the Danish element, derived from the time when Lincolnshire formed part of the Danelagh, is the substitution of "wapentake" for hundred in the territorial divisions of the county, and the changed names for the popular assemblies.—For political purposes the county is separated into two divisions, N. and S. The former, usually designated parts of Lindsey, comprises the northern and eastern parts of the county above the river Witham, including 12 wapentakes, 3 hundreds, and 2 sokes. The S. division comprises parts of Holland in the S.E. part of the county, full of dykes and canals near the shore, and includes 3 wapentakes; also parts of Kesteven in the S.W., including 9 wapentakes and 1 soke. These are further divided into 630 parishes, 10 ecclesiastical districts, and 43 extra parochial places. The Isle of Axholme is part of Lindsey to the W. between the Trent and Don. The N. and S. divisions of Lincolnshire return two members each to parliament for the shire, Lincoln being the place of election for the former, and Sleaford for the latter, or South Lincolnshire; and the towns of Lincoln, Boston, Grantham, and Stamford, two each, besides Grimsby, which returns one member. Lincolnshire is governed by a lord-lieutenant, about 110 deputy-lieutenants, and 500 magistrates. It is in the Midland circuit, and the assizes are held at Lincoln, where is the county gaol. For ecclesiastical purposes the county forms part of the diocese of Lincoln, in the province of Canterbury, and constitutes the two archdeaconries of Lincoln and Stow. It is included within the Home Military district. Before the Norman accession, each of the three ancient divisions of the county, viz. Lindsey, Holland, and Kesteven, had its tithing reeve, and still has its separate magistrates, quarter sessions, clerks of the peace, and treasurers. For the further convenience of rating, it is divided into 14 Poor-law Unions and the like number of superintendent registries, with 17 new County Courts. The towns, 30 of which have markets, are neither very populous nor remarkable. Lincoln is a cathedral city, being the seat of a bishop, and is the county town. Boston, Great Grimsby, and Gainsborough are flourishing seaports. Other fair towns are, Stamford, which had a university and four colleges in the reign of Henry III., Horncastle, Louth, Grantham, Spalding, and Barton. The other market towns are, Bourne, Caistor, Glandford Brigg, Holbeach, Sleaford, Spilsby, Market Rasen, Alford, Bolingbroke, Market Deeping, Donnington, Epworth, Folkingham, Kirton, Sutton, Swineshead, Tattershall, Wainfleet, and Wragby. Besides these, there are 2,000 towns, villages, and hamlets.—The chief seats are, Riseholme Palace, of the Bishop of Lincoln; Belton House, near Grantham, of Earl Brownlow; Belvoir Castle, of the Duke of Rutland; Burghley House, of the Marquis of Exeter; Glentworth, of the Earl of Scarborough; Brocklesby and Manby, of the Earl of Yarborough; Uffington Hall, of the Earl of Lindsey; Haverholm, of the Countess Dowager of Winchilsea; Nocton Park, of the Earl De Grey and Ripon; Grimsthorpe Castle, near Edenham, of Lord Willoughby D'Eresby; Buckminster, of Lord Huntingtower; Burton Hall, of Lord Monson; Little Grimsby, of Lord Beauclerk; Aswarby, of Whichcote, Bart.; Burgh Hall, of Crawford, Bart.; Caswick Hall, of Sir J. Trollope, Bart., M.P.; Denton Hall, of Welby, Bart.; Easton Hall and Norton Place, of Cholmeley, Bart.; Lea Hall, of Anderson, Bart.; Normanby, of Sheffield, Bart.; Somerby, of Beckett, Bart.; Stubton Hall, of Neville, Esq., where is a heronry; Scrivelsby Court, of Dymoke, Bart.; Sysdon Hall, of Thorold, Bart.; Thurlby Hall, of Bromhead, Bart.; Bayons Manor, of the Hon. C. T. D'Eyncourt; Bloxholm Hall and Well Vale, of the Hon. R. C. N. Hamilton; Branston Hall, of the Hon. A. L. Melville, besides numerous mansions of private gentry.—The antiquities are numerous and interesting, chiefly situated on the lines of the Roman roads Ermine Street, Fosse Way, Salt Way, and Tilbridge Lane, all of which traversed parts of the county. The capitol, Lindum, the modern Lincoln, is mentioned by Ptolemy as Λινδον, and was evidently a British town before it was made a Roman station. The walls of the Roman encampment which occupied the summit of the hill, where now stand the cathedral and castle, enclosed an area of 1,200 feet by 1,300, nearly facing the cardinal points, with a gate on each side. Although time has almost levelled with the ground the ancient walls, one gate still remains, called "Newport Gate," and is one of the most remarkable Roman remains in the kingdom, consisting of one central arch about 16 feet wide, flanked by two smaller arches now nearly choked up by the detritus of the old wall and accumulation of soil. Another portion of the wall, including an arch, is incorporated into the wall of the Norman castle, and is formed of large stones apparently piled together without cement. In 1739 a tesselated pavement, 13 feet below the present surface, was discovered here, also portions of glazed earthen conduit pipes, and various other antiquities, comprising hypocausts, stone coffins, a sarcophagus, earthen and glass urns, besides numerous coins of Nero, Vespasian, Julian, and Carausius. At Ancaster, supposed to be the station Causennæ mentioned by Antonine, Roman coins have been found. At Winterton, or Winteringham, supposed to be Ad Abum mentioned by Richard of Cirencester, three tesselated pavements were found in 1747, also chimney stones and other antiquities, but these last were unfortunately not preserved. At Scampton, Denton, and Horkstow, tesselated pavements, Mosaics, and foundations of villas, have been found; one discovered in 1795 covered an area of 200 feet square, and comprised 40 chambers on the ground plan. At Roxby, Appleby, Broughton, Hibbaldstow, and Sandton, numerous antiquities have been met with, and on the banks of the Trent, a little to the W. of Stow, two Roman altars were found. In the same part of the county, near Gainsborough and Alkborough, are traces of Roman camps, and at the latter place a labyrinth formed of banks known as Julian's Bower. There are also traces of camps at Gedney Hill, near Holbeach, at Honington, near Grantham, at Yarborough, Caistor, South Ormsby, and Summer Castle camp, besides British or Danish camps at Barrow, Falkingham, Ingoldsby, Revesby, and Well. There are remains of Norman castles at Lincoln, Somerton, Tattershall, Torksey, and Moor Tower, and of monastic edifices at Thornton, where the Abbey church, gatehouse, refectory, and part of the octagonal chapter-house, are still standing; Croyland Abbey, with its curious triangular bridge: Barlings Abbey, where the rising began in 1536 under Prior Mackerel, and of which part of the walls and some fragments of columns remain; Bardney Abbey, Kirkstead Abbey, Revesby Abbey, Louth Abbey, and Tupholm; besides which there are priory ruins at Bullington, Burwell, Croxhill, Haverholm, now incorporated into a modern mansion, Sempringham, and Stamford. The Knights Templars had preceptories at Aslackby and Temple Bruer; of the latter, the tower of the church and a few vaults are all that remain. At Stamford and Tattershall were colleges, and at Spittal a hospital. The old hall at Gainsborough is an interesting specimen of ancient architecture, as are also the old houses of Morlaby, Belleau, and Pinchbeck. Of the other ecclesiastical edifices, including the cathedral of Lincoln, and the many churches in the Fens, which present a number of interesting features, no particular notice is here requisite, as they are described under the names of their respective parishes.

LINCOLN, the capital of Lincolnshire, a city, municipal and parliamentary borough, and county of itself, situated on the left bank of the river Witham, in 53° 14′ N. lat., and 0° 32′ W. long., distant 132 miles N.W. from London by road, and 140 miles by rail. It has stations on the Great Northern, the Nottingham and Lincoln, and the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincoln railways. The limits of the municipal and parliamentary borough are co-extensive. The population in 1861 was 20,999; the number of inhabited houses in the same year was 4,315, and of uninhabited, 135.—From the earliest period Lincoln has been a place of considerable importance. Previous to the conquest of Britain by the Romans, a British town existed here, which subsequently gave place to the Roman station Lindum. This station was in the form of a parallelogram, divided into four parts by two streets which intersected each other at right angles. It is stated to have been relieved by King Arthur in 518 when besieged by the Saxons, who afterwards captured it, and raised it to the dignity of one of the capitals of Mercia. During the Saxon period Lincoln was the scene of numerous contests. At the period of the Domesday Survey it was one of the most important towns in England, containing 900 burgesses and 1,070 houses; of the latter 166 were pulled down in 1086 to make way for the castle. Under Henry I. the trade of Lincoln was in a very flourishing condition, and its prosperity was still further promoted by the clearing of the Fossedyke, whereby communication with other parts of the kingdom was much facilitated. During the civil war of the reign of Stephen, Lincoln sustained several sieges; it was taken by Stephen in 1140, was afterwards recaptured by the partisans of the Empress Maud, who were again besieged here by Stephen and relieved by Robert, Duke of Gloucester, natural brother to the empress, in 1141. In the wars of the reign of John it fell into the hands of Gilbert de Gaunt, Earl of Lincoln, one of the barons in the interest of Louis, Dauphin of France. On the death of John the adherents of the Dauphin were totally defeated here, and the town was recaptured by the Earl of Pembroke. In the great civil war of the reign of Charles I. Lincoln was the scene of numerous struggles. It was finally stormed by the parliamentary forces under the Earl of Manchester in 1644, and taken after a determined resistance made by a body of royalists who had retired to the castle and the cathedral.—The city is built on the summit and southern declivity of a hill which rises from the left bank of the river Witham. The streets in the northern part are narrow, and the general plan of the town is irregular.

The principal street crosses the river from its right bank by a bridge, and traverses a great part of the town. Lincoln is well paved, lighted with gas, and has a good supply of water. Of the public buildings the most important is the cathedral, one of the largest and finest structures of the kind in the kingdom; situated on the summit of the hill, it forms a conspicuous object for many miles across the flat country which surrounds it. It was founded in the year 1088 by Bishop Remigius, on his translation from Dorchester, and is built in the form of a double cross. From its having been erected at different periods, it presents specimens of various styles of architecture, the predominant one being early English. The dimensions of the cathedral are as follow:—length of exterior, 524 feet; of interior, 482 feet; width of W. front, 174 feet; length of exterior of great transept, 250 feet; of interior, 222 feet; width, 66 feet; length of smaller or eastern transept, 170 feet; width, including the side chapels, 44 feet. The W. front has richly decorated doorways, windows, niches, and arcades. Over the central one of the three doorways in this front, under decorated canopies, are statues of eleven kings of England. Flanking the W. front are two towers 180 feet high, formerly surmounted by spires 101 feet high; and at each angle are octangular staircase turrets crowned with pinnacles. The central tower, at the intersection of the transept with the nave and choir, is 300 feet high and 53 feet wide. Hanging in this tower is the celebrated bell called "Tom of Lincoln," recast from a larger one which until 1827 hung in the north-western tower, and placed here in 1834; it is 6½ feet in diameter at its mouth, and weighs 5 tons 8 cwt. Notwithstanding the narrowness of the side aisles, the interior of the cathedral has a very imposing effect. The Galilee porch in the southern transept is in the early English style, and ornamented with beautiful mouldings. At the end of the same transept is a circular window, which is one of the finest in the early English style remaining. There is a fine E. window at the eastern end of the choir; separating the nave from the choir is a rich stone screen. There are numerous chapels in different parts of the cathedral. On the N. side are the cloisters, enclosing an area of 118 feet by 91 feet; within this area is a Roman pavement. Over the northern cloister is Dean Honeywood's library, containing many ancient books and manuscripts. On the eastern side of the cloisters is the chapter-house, an elegant decagon 60½ feet in diameter. Besides the cathedral, and the church of St. Nicholas, which was opened in 1840, 12 only of the 52 churches which Lincoln is said once to have contained now remain, and these are for the most part small and destitute of architectural beauty. The Wesleyan Methodists and the Independents have each two chapels, and the Primitive Methodists, Huntingdon Connexion, General and Particular Baptists, Roman Catholics, Friends, and Unitarians, each one. The Roman Catholic chapel contains a fine painting of the Descent from the Cross.—The principal public buildings, besides those above mentioned, are, the county hall, a modern Gothic building, erected from a design by Smirke, at a cost of £40,000; the county hospital, on the Steep Hill, erected in 1769; the lunatic asylum, a building with a noble front and portico of the Ionic order; the county gaol, the city prison, the assembly rooms, the theatre, the Midland railway and the Great Northern railway stations, and the corn exchange. The principal literary, scientific, and educational institutions are, the mechanics' institute, with a good library and museum; the Stock library, containing a valuable collection of books; the topographical society; the agricultural society; the grammar school; the diocesan school; National schools; British, Wesleyan, Roman Catholic, infant schools; and Christ's Hospital, or blue-coat school, with a yearly revenue of £2,000. The most important charities, besides those already mentioned, are, the Sibthorp almshouses, the lying-in hospital, the female penitentiary, and the Dorcas charity. To the first of these is attached the chapel of St. Ann.—Lincoln is exceedingly rich in antiquities: the most remarkable are, the Roman gate in Hermin-street, one of the most perfect in the kingdom; the Stone Bow, erected in the time of Richard II., in High-street; the Exchequer Gate in the Cathedral Close; remains of John of Gaunt's palace, containing a beautiful oriel window, and of his stables; remains of a tower called the Lucy Tower; and the Gray Friars, now used for the purposes of a school and the mechanics' institute.—Lincoln became the seat of a bishopric on the removal of the see from Dorchester. The diocese, which is divided into the archdeaconries of Lincoln, Nottingham, and Stow, includes the counties of Nottingham and Lincoln. The chapter consists of a dean, 4 canons residentiary, 3 archdeacons, 42 prebendaries, a chancellor, and 4 minor canons. The most illustrious of the prelates were, Grossetête, Wolsey, Sanderson, Gibson, Wake, Tenison, and Tomline. Eminent natives of the town were, Disney, Partridge, and Reyner, divines; Willis, the physician; and Hilton, the painter.—The manufactures are unimportant. Those employing the largest number of hands are the engine works, carriage works, tanneries, breweries, and roperies. The principal trade of the town is in flour; a large trade is also carried on in corn and wool. There is a new railway in course of construction between Lincoln and Honington, to be completed in 1866.—Lincoln is governed by 6 aldermen and 18 councillors, one of whom is mayor. It returns two members to parliament. The assizes for the county and the quarter sessions are held here.—Three newspapers, the Lincoln Chronicle, Lincoln Standard, and Lincoln Gazette are published in the town. Races are held here in the spring on West Common. The market day is Friday. There is a large meat market, and a covered market for butter, eggs, and poultry. The vegetable market adjoining the latter is on the site of the old sheep market. One of the largest horse fairs in the kingdom is held here on four days in the last week in April. Other fairs are held on Midsummer Day, 6th October, and 28th November.

LINDALE, a chplry. and post-office vil. in the par. of Cartmel, co. Lancaster, 3 miles from Ulverstone, and 4 N.E. of Cartmel. It is a station on the Furness, Ulverstone, and Lancaster railway. It is situated on the river Kent. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £80. The church has been rebuilt, and contains 115 free sittings. There is a National school for boys.

LINDEAN, an ancient par. in the co. of Roxburgh, Scotland, now united to Galashiels [which see]. It is a station on the Selkirk branch of the North British railway.

LINDETH, or LINDRETH, a hmlt. in the par. of Warton, hund. of Lonsdale South of the Sands, co. Lancaster, 8 miles N. of Lancaster, and 5 W. of Burton-in-Kendal.

LINDFIELD, a par. and post town in the hund. of Burleigh Arches, rape of Pevensey, co. Sussex, 1½ mile N.E. of Hayward's Heath railway station, and 3½ miles E. of Cuckfield. It is situated on the banks of the river Ouse, and from its elevated position commands a view of the river, which is navigable for barges to Ryebridge. The village, which is considerable, consists of one wide street containing many well-built houses. It is lighted with gas, and has an excellent supply of water. There are brick and tile kilns, also a pianoforte manufactory, employing a large number of persons. About 1 mile E. of the village is the newly formed cemetery, and at the S. end is Camomile Common, so called from its abounding in that plant. The new County Lunatic Asylum is situated in this parish. About two-fifths of the parish are tithe free; the impropriator receives about £500 per annum. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Chichester. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is an ancient structure, with a tower crowned by a spire. It is situated on a commanding spot at the N. entrance to the village. In the interior of the church are a carved stone font, and monuments to the Crawford, Board, Brett, and Covert families. The register dates from 1559. The Independents have a place of worship. There are Church and British schools for both sexes; also an industrial school, founded by the late William Allen, Esq., for the instruction of children in the art of agriculture, and in various trades. Fairs are held on the 1st April and 12th May for sheep and cattle, and on the 5th August for lambs.

LINDHURST, an ext. par. place, in the Southwell div. of the wap. of Thurgarton, co. Nottingham, 3 miles S.E. of Mansfield. It is situated near Sherwood Forest.

LINDISFARN. See HOLY ISLAND, co. Durham.

LINDLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Higham-on-the-Hill, hund. of Sparkenhoe, co. Leicester, 5 miles N.W. of Hinckley. It is situated near the Roman way Watling Street. Lindley Hall was the seat of Hardwick, who guided the Earl of Richmond's forces to the battle of Bosworth Field. It is a meet for the Atherton hounds. William Burton, the county historian, and his brother Robert, author of the "Anatomy of Melancholy," were born here.

LINDLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Otley, Upper div. of the wap. of Claro, West Riding co. York, 4 miles N.E. of Otley. The village, which consists of a few scattered houses, is situated in the vale of the Washburn rivulet, on the banks of which are some corn mills. The soil is various, with a subsoil of clay and rock. Francis Hawksworth Fawkes, Esq., is lord of the manor. There are remains of the old seat of the Palmes family.

LINDLEY, or QUARMBY-WITH-LINDLEY, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Huddersfield, Upper div. of the wap. of Agbrigg, West Riding co. York, 3 miles N.W. of Huddersfield, its post town. The chplry. contains Birchamcliffe and five other hmlts. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in the woollen manufacture, for which there are several large establishments. The village is large and well built. The land is chiefly pasture and woodland. Building stone is extensively quarried. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £150, in the patron. of the Vicar of Huddersfield. The church is dedicated to St. Stephen. It was erected in 1830 at an expense of £2,700, granted by the Parliamentary Commissioners. The sites for the church and cemetery were given by the late John Thornhill, Esq. The Baptists, Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, and Kilhamites, have places of worship. There is a National school with a small endowment.

LINDLEY, OLD, a tnshp. in the par. of Halifax, wap. of Morley, West Riding co. York, 3 miles S. of Halifax. It is in conjunction with Stainland.

LINDONS, UPPER and LOWER, constablewicks in the par. of Rock, Lower div. of the hund. of Doddingtree, co. Worcester, 5 miles W. of Stourport.

LINDORES, a post-office vil. in the par. of Abdie, co. Fife, Scotland, 2 miles S.E. of Newburgh. It is situated near Lindores Loch, abounding in fish and wild fowl, and includes Lindores Grange. Here are remains of the ancient castle of the Macduffs, and of a rich cell to Kelso Abbey, founded in 1178 by David Earl of Huntingdon, and given by James VI. to the Leslevs, who take from it the title of baron.

LINDRETH, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Undermilbeck, co. Westmoreland, 8 miles W. of Kendal.

LINDRICK, a tnshp. in the par. of Ripon, lower div. of the wap. of Claro, West Riding co. York, 3 miles W. of Ripon. It is a small tnshp. consisting of two large farms, and bounding Studley Park on the N. and W. Its name, formerly pronounced Linerigg, is said to have been derived from a strip of land designated "Roman Rigg," and near to which a gold ring was found in 1820. The appropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £8 10*s*. In a field called "Yattagarth" are ruins of an ancient village, supposed to be one of the lost Studleys.

LINDRICK, a hmlt. in the par. of Tickhill, wap. of Strafforth, West Riding co. York, 2 miles from Tickhill, and 38 S.W. of York.

LINDRIDGE, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Oswaldslow, co. Worcester, 5½ miles E. of Tenbury. Stourport is its post town. It is situated on the river Teme and near the Leominster canal, which here passes through a tunnel 3,850 yards long. The par. comprises the chplries. of Knighton and Pensax, and the hmlt. of Newnham. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The land is partly in hops. The appropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £479, and the vicarial for £600. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £450, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Worcester. The church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, is an ancient structure, containing several very old tombs. There are also two district churches at Knighton-on-Teame and Pensax, the livings of both which are perpet. curs., val. £100 each. The charities produce £8 per annum. There is a parochial school. The Wesleyans have a chapel at Frith Common.

LINDRIDGE, a seat in the par. of Chudleigh, hund. of Exminster, co. Devon, 2 miles S.E. of Chudleigh, and 10 S. of Exeter. It is situated near the river Teign, and is surrounded by plantations. It formerly belonged to the Martyn and Lear families, and contains some valuable paintings.

LINDSELL, a par. in the hund. of Dunmow, co. Essex, 4 miles N.E. of Dunmow, its post town, and 4 S.E. of Thaxted. The village, which is small, is situated on a branch of the river Chelmer. Prior to the Conquest it was held by Ulmar, and was subsequently given to Eudo Dapifer. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £204. The church, formerly belonging to Walden Abbey, has a tower and steeple containing three bells.

LINDSEY, a par. in the hund. of Cosford, co. Suffolk, 4½ miles N.W. of Hadleigh, its railway station and post town, and 6½ E. of Lavenham. The village, which is inconsiderable, is situated near Lindsey Tye. It was the first seat of the "Lindsey Wolsey" manufacture, but which has now entirely disappeared. Here are extensive brick and tile kilns. The appropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £320. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £110, in the patron. of King's College, Cambridge. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. The charities produce about 15*s*. per annum. The Baptists have a place of worship. Ravens Hall is the principal residence. The Rev. R. Daniel, of Coombs, is lord of the manor.

LINDSEY, PARTS OF, comprises the northern div. of co. Lincoln, and returns two members to parliament. It contains, besides the city of Lincoln, the waps. of Aslacoe (East and West), Bradley-Haverstoe, Candleshoe, Corringham, Gartree (North and South), Lawress, Ludborough, Manley (East, West, and North), Washcroft (North and South), Well, Wraggoe (East and West), Yarborough (East, North, and South), the hunds. of Calceworth, Hill, Louth-Eske, the sokes of Bolingbroke (East and West), and Horncastle, comprising 962,000 acres.

LINE, or LEAVEN, a tributary of the river Esk, rises on the borders of Scotland in two heads, and, flowing through Cumberland, joins the Esk at Lyneside.

LINEHAM. See LYNEHAM, co. Wilts.

LINESIDE, a tnshp. in the par. of Arthuret, ward of Eskdale, co. Cumberland, 3 miles S.E. of Longtown. It lies at the confluence of the Esk and Line rivers, and is intersected by the Hallburn rivulet. In the village is a school with a small endowment.

LINEY, or LANGHAY, a hmlt. in the hund. of Whitley, co. Somerset, 3 miles S.E. of Bridgwater. It is situated on the confines of the marshy tract called Sedgemoor.

LINE WATER, a stream of co. Northumberland, falls into the sea at Linmouth.

LINFIT, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Kirk Burton, West Riding co. York, 4 miles S.E. of Huddersfield.

LINFORD, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Fordingbridge, co. Hants, 2 miles from Ringwood.

LINFORD, GREAT, a par. in the hund. of Newport, co. Bucks, 2 miles S.W. of Newport Pagnell, its post town, and 2½ from the Wolverton station on the London and North-Western railway. It is a small agricultural village, situated on the banks of the river Ouse. The manor was held at Domesday by Hugo Bolebec, and Walter Giffard. The land is chiefly pasture and meadow. Limestone is quarried, and many fossils are found here. The Grand Junction canal and the Newport Pagnell branch both pass through the parish. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £400. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £400. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, has a tower and north porch, of which the roof is groined. The parochial charities produce about £60 per annum, of which £52 goes to Pritchard's school and almshouses. There is a place of worship for Independents. Henry Andrew Uthwatt, Esq., is lord of the manor. In this parish is a spring strongly impregnated with sulphuretted hydrogen gas, similar in its properties to the Harrogate waters.

LINFORD, LITTLE, a par. in the hund. of Newport, co. Bucks, 2 miles N.W. of Newport Pagnell, its post town, and 4 from Stoney Stratford. The parish, which is small, is situated on the river Ouse, and is wholly agricultural. It is principally grazing land, with some rich meadows on the bank of the river. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £66. The church, a small structure dedicated to St. Leonard, was formerly a chapel-of-ease to Newport Pagnell. Matthew Knapp, Esq., is lord of the manor.

LING. See LYNG, co. Somerset.

LINGA, an islet belonging to the par. of Stronsay and Eday, in the Orkney Islands, coast of Scotland. It is situated on the N.W. of the island of Stronsay, and is occupied by one family.

LINGA, an islet belonging to the par. of Tingwall, in the Shetland Islands, coast of Scotland. It is situated about midway between the island of Hildasay and the mainland.

LINGA, an island of the Shetland group, coast of Scotland, 3 miles S. of Yell. It measures about 2 miles in length.

LINGARDS, or LINGARTHS, a tnshp. in the par. of Almondbury, Upper div. of the wap. of Agbrigg, West Riding co. York, 5 miles S.W. of Huddersfield. The surface is hilly, affording good moorland pasture. The tnshp. contains, besides the hmlt. of Lingarths, part of the village of Slaithwaite, in which most of the population reside. There are quarries of good building stone.

LINGAY, one of the western islands, coast of Scotland, near Eriskay. It is included in the par. of Barra.

LINGBOB, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Wilsden, and par. of Bradford, West Riding co. York, 4 miles N.W of Bradford. It is situated near the river Aire. Part of the inhabitants are engaged in the collieries, and in cotton spinning.

LINGEN, a par. in the hund. of Wigmore, co. Hereford, 4 miles N.E. of Presteign, its post town, and 3 from Wigmore. It is a small village, situated on a branch of the river Lug, and on the road leading from Leintwardine to Presteign. Near the village are the ruins of a castle. The soil is various, but generally fertile. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £70, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, has a small belfry containing one bell. The charities produce about £5 10*s.* per annum. There is a small day-school. John Edwards, Esq., is lord of the manor.

LINGFIELD, a par. in the first div. of the hund. of Tandridge, E. div. of co. Surrey, 3½ miles N. of East Grinstead, its post-town, and 4 S.E. of the Godstone railway station. The village, which is considerable, is chiefly agricultural. About 2½ miles E. of the village is Sterburgh Castle, originally built in the time of Edward III., but dismantled by order of the parliament. The parish, which is of large extent, is separated from the county of Kent by the river Eden. The land is nearly evenly divided between arable, pasture, and meadow, with above 1,000 acres of woodland. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £150. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, was erected in 1431 by Reginald Lord Cobham. It has a tower at the W. end of the S. aisle surmounted by a spire. The interior of the church contains some antique monuments, several brasses, and an altar tomb. The Independents and Baptists have places of worship. There are National and Infant schools for both sexes, also a lending library. The principal residence is Lingfield Hall, built on the site of the old castle by Sir James Burrow, and considerably enlarged by Sir Thomas Turton. In Plaistow-street, near the church, is an ancient stone obelisk of two stones with niches in its sides. A farmhouse now occupies the site of Lord Cobham's College, which had a revenue at the Dissolution of £79 15*s.* 10*d.*

LINGHOLME, an islet in Windermere Lake, co. Westmoreland. It is well wooded, and commands fine views of the lake.

LINGS, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Hatfield, West Riding co. York, 3 miles S.W. of Thorne.

LINGWELL-GATE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Stanley, West Riding co. York, 1 mile N.W. of Wakefield.

LINGWOOD, a par. in the hund. of Blofield, co. Norfolk, 8 miles E. of Norwich, its post town, 9 from Yarmouth, and 3 from the Buckenham Ferry railway station on the Norwich and Yarmouth line. The Blofield union poor-house is in this parish, which is of small extent. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The surface is well wooded. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £256 15*s.* 6*d.* The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £55. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a small ancient edifice with a square embattled tower. The charities consist of a poor's allotment, producing about £20 per annum, distributed in coals. The Primitive Methodists have a place of worship. There is a National school for both sexes. H. N. Burroughes, Esq., is lord of the manor.

LINHEAD, a vil. in the par. of Corsenside, co. Northumberland, 6 miles N.E. of Bellingham. There are some ironstone works.

LINHOPE, with GREENSHAWHILL, hmlts. in the par. of Ingram, N. div. of Coquetdale Ward, co. Northumberland, 8 miles S.W. of Wooler. It is situated on the river Breamish, under the Cheviots, and near Linhope Spout waterfall, which has a depth of 56 feet. There are some earthworks, and traces of an ancient British road.

LINHOUSE, a vil. in the par. of Kirknewton, co. Edinburgh, Scotland, 3 miles S.W. of Calder. It is situated on the Lin Water, which joins the river Almond at Mid Calder.

LINK-END, a hmlt. in the par. of Leigh, co. Worcester, 4 miles W. of Worcester. Malvern is its post town. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £100.

LINKENHOLT, a par. in the hund. of Pastrow, co. Hants, 10 miles N. of Andover, its post town, 8 S.E. of Great Bedwin, and 10 S.W. of Newbury. The parish is wholly agricultural. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £168. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £213. The church is a small ancient structure dedicated to St. Peter. There is a free school supported by the Rev. John Morton Colson, who is lord of the manor.

LINKHILL, a hmlt. in the par. of Hever, hund. of Somerden, lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, co. Kent, 7 miles W. of Tonbridge.

LINKINHORNE, a par. in the N. div. of the hund. of East, co. Cornwall, 4 miles N.W. of Callington, its post town, and 8 S.W. of Launceston. The parish, which is extensive, is situated between the rivers Inney and Lynner. It contains Carraton Downs, 1,208 feet above the sea, where in 1644 Charles I. was joined by Prince Maurice. The manor was held by Launceston Priory, and now belongs to the Duchy of Cornwall. The parish includes numerous points affording extensive views, among which may be mentioned Sharp Tor, and the remarkable rocks called the Hurlers and the Cheesewring. There are several tin and copper mines. The soil is loamy on a subsoil of clay-slate. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £312. The church, dedicated to St. Mellor, is an ancient structure, with a lofty tower containing six bells. It was rebuilt by the Trecarells of Trefey. The interior of the church contains several monuments. The parochial charities produce about £8 per annum, with the interest of £705 bequeathed by Charles Roberts, Esq., for a free school for both sexes. A Sunday-school is also held in the school-room. The Wesleyan Methodists have places of worship. An annual cattle fair is held at Rilla-Mill on 3rd December.

LINKTOWN, a burgh of regality, in the par. of Abbotshall, co. Fife, Scotland. It forms a populous suburb of Kirkcaldy.

LINLEY, a par. within the lib. of the borough of Wenlock, co. Salop, 2½ miles from Broseley, its post town, and 4 N.W. of Bridgnorth. It is a station on the Severn Valley railway. The village, which is small, is situated near the river Severn, and on the Shrewsbury and Bridgnorth turnpike road. The land is partly in common. The living is a rect., not in charge, annexed to the rect.* of Broseley, in the dioc. of Hereford. The church, dedicated to St. Leonard, is an ancient structure, with a tower containing two bells. Linley Hall, the principal residence, was formerly the seat of the Lacon family. Lord Forester is lord of the manor.

LINLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of More, co. Salop, 3 miles N.E. of Bishop's Castle. It is a meet for the United Pack hounds. Linley Hall is the principal residence.

LINLITHGOW, or WEST LOTHIAN, a small county in Scotland. It is of a very irregular figure, lying on the S. shore of the Frith of Forth, having the co. of Edinburgh on the E. and S.E., the co. of Lanark on the S.W., and the co. of Stirling on the W. Its extent from N. to S. is 20 miles, and from E. to W. 15 miles, its area being 112 square miles, or 71,680 statute acres. Its surface is partly flat and partly hilly. The most remarkable eminences form a range running obliquely across the middle of the county. The central and western parts have the most hilly ground, while on the E. and S. the land is mostly level. With the exception of Cairnmaple, in the pars. of Torphichen and Bathgate, which rises 1,498 feet above the level of the sea, the mountains of this district are not of great altitude, nor are they numerous. Cocklerue and Binny Craig are the only other eminences that attract notice, being about 500 feet high. The Almond (or Amond) is the only river of consequence, but there are a number of considerable burns, and the Forth yields advantages which amply compensate for deficiency of river navigation. The Almond rises in the high grounds of Lanark, and pursuing a N.E. course, falls into the sea at Cramond. There is a considerable lake on the boundary between Kirkleston and Dalmeny, also Lochcoat in Torphichen, and Linlithgow Loch in the par. of Linlithgow. There are medicinal springs in the pars. of Linlithgow, Barrowstounness, and Torphichen. The climate is in general temperate, the extremes of heat and cold being rarely experienced—the S.W. is the wind which most prevails. The county contains a store of minerals of the most useful kind. Coal has been worked here since the reign of Alexander III., and the present annual produce amounts to many thousand tons. Limestone is abundant, and in some parts ironstone is found in profusion. The whole surface seems to rest upon a bed of sandstone of the finest quality. Silver was formerly worked at Linlithgow and Bathgate, and there is plenty of marl, potters' clay, brick clay, and red chalk. Many places in the county present volcanic appearances, particularly at Dundas Hill, in the par. of Dalmeny, where there is a bold front of basaltic rock, exhibiting in some instances columns of that character. The soil of the county is clayey, with loam and sand and plenty of shell marl. The average size of the farms is from 70 to 200 acres; some, however, run to 300 acres, while others do not attain 50 acres. The farms generally are let at 19 years lease, and the farmsteads on the whole are in a very creditable condition. Until the year 1723 there was little improvement in the agriculture of the district. Soon after this period John Earl of Stair introduced new and advantageous modes of husbandry, and commenced the cultivation of the cabbage, carrot, and turnip by the plough. The example of this nobleman was beneficially followed by Charles Earl of Hopetoun, but both dying in 1740, before their plans were matured, thirty years elapsed before the agricultural spirit was again actively displayed. In more recent times some practical farmers, possessing the advantages of skill and capital, have brought the cultivation of the shire to comparative perfection. According to a recent return the estimated gross produce of the chief crops was 89,775 bushels of wheat, 180,323 bushels of barley, 470,256 bushels of oats, 168 bushels of bere, 50,707 bushels of beans, 73,336 tons of turnips, and 5,532 tons of potatoes. The following comprised the live stock of the county: 3,223 horses, 3,489 milch cows, 1,932 calves, 5,563 other bovine cattle, 14,239 sheep, and 2,093 swine. The old valued rent of the county was £6,237. The valuation for 1860-1 (exclusive of railways and canals, and without deductions) was £149,994.—Linlithgow, although rich in minerals, has but very few manufactures. The inhabitants are for the most part employed in agriculture, and in the working of coal, iron, freestone, &c. Three principal roads intersect the county, connecting Edinburgh and Glasgow. The following lines of railway run through the county: the Edinburgh and Glasgow, the Bathgate branch, and the Monkland system of railway. It is also traversed by the Union canal.—There are two royal burghs—Linlithgow and Queensferry, the latter being a seaport, as are also Borrowstounness and Blackness. The county sends one member to parliament, and the county town is Linlithgow, which is 17 miles W. of Edinburgh. The sheriff and commissary courts are held at Linlithgow every Tuesday and Friday during session. The sheriff small-debt ordinary court is held at Linlithgow every Friday. The sheriff small-debt circuit court is held at Bathgate on the third Wednesdays of January, April, July, and October; the justice of peace small-debt court on the first and third Tuesday of every month. Quarter sessions are held on the first Tuesday of May, first Tuesday of August, last Tuesday of October, and first Tuesday of March. Population in 1851, 30,135; in 1861, 38,645.—The county contains twelve whole parishes, and part of two other parishes; of these, one of the parts is in the presbytery of Edinburgh, but the other part, together with the whole parishes, are in the presbytery of Linlithgow. The synod of Linlithgow includes the whole county. There are places of worship in the county belonging to the Established Church, Free Church, United Presbyterians, Original Secession, Evangelical Union, and Mormonites.—Linlithgow was the seat of the Gadeni in the Roman Valentia, and was part of Northumbria until 1020. In the reign of David I. it was separated into a sheriffdom; it was placed by Robert, however, under the administration of a constable, and so continued until the time of James IV. The oldest family in the shire is that of Dundas of Dundas, who can trace an unbroken line of descent and residence on the same spot up to the reign of William the Lion, 1165. The extinct peerages of the county are Livingstone and Linlithgow, and the existing ones are Abercorn, Hopetoun, and Torphichen. The chief seats are Kinnel House, a seat of the Duke of Hamilton; Hopetoun House, of the Earl of Hopetoun; Dalmeny Park, of the Earl of Roseberry; Kirkhill and Amondell, of the Earl of Buchan; and Binnshouse, of Sir W. Dalzell, Bart.—There are pillar stones at Bathgate, Abercorn, and Catstane; also a Druid circle, cromlech, camp, and cairn, are visible at Torphichen, together with an ancient tower, church, and remains of the head Scottish preceptory of the Templars. There are cairns at Lochcoat and Kirkliston, a camp at Binnshill, ancient churches at Dalmeny and Kirkliston; castle ruins at Barnbougle, Niddry, Tartreven, and Mancerston, and Linlithgow Palace, where Queen Mary was born. Colonel Gardner was a native of Carriden, and Walter Stuart (Bruce's son-in-law) died at Bathgate.

LINLITHGOW, a par., containing the royal burgh of Linlithgow. and a portion of the vil. of Linlithgow-

Bridge, co. Linlithgow, Scotland. It is a station on the Edinburgh and Glasgow railway. It is 6 miles long, and about the same at its broadest part. It contains about 9,000 acres. The chief streams are the river Avon, the Main Burn, and the Nethermill Burn. There is a loch named after the burgh; also a mineral spring at Carrubber, and several copious springs in the neighbourhood. The surface is hilly but fertile. The principal eminences are, the Riccarton hills, Cocklerue (500 feet high) and Binney Craig. Coal is found but not worked. There are limestone quarries, and silver was anciently worked here and smelted at a place not far from the town, and still bearing the name of Silvermill. The par. is the seat of a presb. in the synod of Lothian and Tweeddale, in the patron. of the crown. The minister's stipend is £362. The parish church is an ancient Gothic structure, repaired in 1813. There are two United Presbyterian, one Free Church, and an Independent place of worship. There is a burgh school, several private schools, and a charity school for girls. On Boroughmore, a little E. of the town, Edward I. encamped previous to his defeating the Scots under Wallace at Falkirk. It was in this parish that the battle was fought between the Earl of Arran and the Earl of Lennox during the minority of James V. On Cocklerue Hill are vestiges of a military station; and on Boroughmore a large number of Roman coins have been discovered. The parish is intersected by the Edinburgh and Glasgow railway, the Slamannan railway, and the Union canal. The present par. comprehends the ancient par. of Binning.

LINLITHGOW, a post and market town, and royal burgh, in the par. and co. of Linlithgow, Scotland, 18 miles W. of Edinburgh, and 3 S. of Borrowstounness. It is a railway station on the Edinburgh and Glasgow line. The town was an early seat of the Scottish kings from David II., who called it Linticlu. It was occupied in 1298, previous to the battle of Falkirk, by Edward I., who was here in 1301, and again in 1305, and whose castle being taken by Bruce (through stratagem) was demolished, but rebuilt by the English, who held it in 1334 from Baliol. It was burnt in 1411, and again in 1424, and was the dower of several Stuart queens. On the 7th December, 1542, Mary, afterwards Queen of Scots, was born at the castle here. In 1545 a parliament and in 1552 a synod were held in the town, where, in 1570, the Regent Moray was shot by Hamilton of Bothwellhaugh. In 1580 it was taken by the English, and a parliament was held here in 1585, and again in 1646, when the plague was at Edinburgh. It was garrisoned by Cromwell, and afterwards witnessed, in 1662, the burning of the "Solemn League and Covenant." The Duke of York visited it in 1679, and at the Union it declined. It was occupied in 1745 by the royalists, who burnt the palace. Queen Victoria and the late Prince Consort visited it in 1842.—The town is situated near Linlithgow Loch, and chiefly consists of a single street running E. and W., with lanes and alleys running off at right angles on both sides. The houses for the most part have an ancient and decayed, yet substantial appearance, and on the whole may be said yet to retain some marks of its ancient grandeur when it was the residence of kings. The ancient town house, erected in 1688, was destroyed by fire in 1847, but the present one was shortly after built, and contains a council chamber, justice of peace, and bailie court rooms, &c. The county buildings, situated at the rear of the town house, has a plain exterior, but the hall is a fine apartment, and contains portraits of General Earl of Hopetoun and Sir Alexander Hope. Immediately opposite the town house is a fountain of singular appearance, erected in 1807 in imitation of the cross-well constructed in 1620. There are several other public wells throughout the town, this being the only way the inhabitants are supplied with water. The parish church, dedicated to St. Michael, is situated contiguous to the palace ruins. It is in the Gothic style of architecture, and has a tower and steeple. It is supposed to have been founded by David I., and was partly destroyed by fire in 1424. Its chancel roof was erected by Bishop Crichton, when vicar, and there are tombs of the Livingstones, earls of Linlithgow, in St. Catherine's aisle, where the supposed apparition of St. John appeared to James IV. to warn him of his approaching fate at Flodden Field, as related by Lindsay, the historian, and introduced by Scott into his poem of "Marmion." Besides the parish church, the town has two United Presbyterian churches, one Free church, and an Independent chapel. The palace is situated on a point or terrace of Loch Linlithgow, on the site of a Roman station, and is a fair quadrangular four story pile with corner turrets, rebuilt by James IV. and VI. The court contains some good carvings, and the banqueting room is 94 feet by 30. There is also the room where Queen Mary was born, the parliament hall, and a ruined well. The soldiers of Cromwell are said to have introduced into this town the art of preparing leather, and tanning, currying, and shoemaking, which are to this day deemed the staples of the place. The Union canal passes near the town, where it has a basin; and an aqueduct here conducts its water over the river Avon.—The town was first chartered by David I., or Robert II., and under the late Act is governed by a provost, four bailies, a dean of guild, and twenty-seven councillors, with a revenue of £688. It unites with Falkirk, Airdrie, Hamilton, and Lanark, in sending one member to Parliament. It is well lighted with gas, and has offices of the Western and Commercial banks, insurance agencies, eight incorporated trades, public library, and several religious and provident societies. The ancient practice of riding marches is still observed here in the month of June. The population of the parliamentary burgh in 1851 was 4,213, and in 1861, 3,843.—Friday is market day. Fairs are held on the Friday after the second Tuesday in January, on the 25th February, on the third Friday in April, on the second Thursday in June, on the 2nd August, and on the first Friday in November.

LINLITHGOW-BRIDGE, a vil., partly in the par. and co. of Linlithgow, and partly in the par. of Muiravonside, co. Stirling, Scotland, 1 mile W. of Linlithgow, of which it is a suburb. It is situated on the river Avon, and is a meet for the Linlithgow and Stirlingshire hounds.

LINMOUTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Woodhorn, E. div. of Morpeth ward, co. Northumberland, 7½ miles N.E. of Morpeth. It is situated on the river Line, which here discharges itself into the sea. In 1822 a whale came on shore at this place measuring 61 feet in length and 37 in circumference. It produced 9 tons and 158 gallons of oil, which were claimed by the admiralty as adroit of the crown. In the neighbourhood are some sand hills 40 feet high.

LINMOUTH, or LYNMOUTH, a small port under the cliffs at the river Lyn's mouth, on the Bristol Channel.

LINNHE, a loch between Appin and Morvern, co. Argyle, Scotland. It is 20 miles long by eight wide at the mouth, but narrows at the top towards lochs Eil and Leven.

LINON, a tributary of the Allua, co. Anglesea.

LINOP WITH INGRAM, a tnshp. in the par. of Ingram, N. div. of Coquetdale ward, co. Northumberland, 8 miles S.W. of Wooler. In this tnshp. is Linop Spout, or Roughtin Linn, a cataract with a fall of 48 feet. In the vicinity are the remains of an ancient British town, and a short distance to the N.W. are the Cardlaw Cairns, sepulchral monuments of the earliest inhabitants of the island.

LINSHEELES, or LINSHIELDS, a tnshp. in the par. of Holystone, W. div. of Coquetdale ward, co. Northumberland, 5 miles W. of Holystone, and 11 W. of Rathbury. It is situated at the confluence of the Redlees Burn, and on the S. side of the river Coquet. It is famed for its breed of Cheviot sheep. The soil is various in quality.

LINSLADE, or LINCHLADE, a par. in the hund. of Cottesloe, co. Bucks, 2 miles N.W. of Leighton Buzzard, its post town. It is situated on the river Ouzel, and Grand Junction Canal. The North-Western railway has a tunnel here 290 yards long. It was formerly a market town under the Beauchamps. There is a holy well, which was the resort of numerous pilgrims till 1299, when the practice was condemned by Bishop Sutton of Lincoln, who summoned the vicar for having encouraged the practice for his own emolument. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £100. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, was erected in 1849. There is a National school for both sexes. William Pulsford, Esq., is lord of the manor.

LINSTEAD, or LYNSTEAD, a par. in the hund. of Teynham, lathe of Scray, co. Kent, 3 miles S.E. of Sittingbourne, its post town, 5 S.W. of Faversham, and 1½ mile from the Teynham railway station. The village is extensive but chiefly agricultural. A large portion of the land is arable, with a considerable extent of hop-grounds and orchards. The hmlt. of Green Street is situated in the northern part of the parish. The impropriation belongs to the Archdeacon of Canterbury. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £216, in the patron. of the archdeacon. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, has two mortuary chapels belonging to the Teynham and Hugessen families. It has a memorial window inserted at the expense of Colonel Tyler. Tithes were commuted in 1839. There is a parochial school for both sexes. Linstead Lodge, situated about 1 mile E. of the village, is the principal residence, and is at present the seat of Colonel Tyler, who is lord of the manor. A fair is held on the 1st May for horses and cattle.

LINSTEAD MAGNA, a par. in the hund. of Blything, co. Suffolk, 5 miles W. of Halesworth, its railway station and post town. The village, which is small, is entirely agricultural. A portion of the land is in pasture. The soil is clay. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £315, and the ministerial for £82. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £97. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient structure with a square embattled tower. Lord Huntingfield is lord of the manor and chief landowner.

LINSTEAD PARVA, a par. in the hund. of Blything, co. Suffolk, 3½ miles N.W. of Halesworth, its post town. The parish, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The soil consists of clay. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £77 10s., payable to the impropriator, and £48 to the curate. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £78. The church is dedicated to St. Margaret. It contains a curiously-sculptured font. Lord Huntingfield is lord of the manor and chief landowner.

LINSTOCK, a tnshp. in the par. of Stanwix, ward of Eskdale, co. Cumberland, 2 miles N.E. of Carlisle, its post town, and 2 from Stanwix. It is situated on the banks of the river Eden, and has the tower of an old palace of the bishops of Carlisle, where Bishop Halton received Edward I. in 1307, who kept his court here for six days. A little to the N.E. are the remains of Drawdykes Castle, originally built out of the materials of the Roman wall which crossed its site, and partly rebuilt by John Aglionby, recorder of Carlisle in the 17th century. It is now converted into a farmhouse.

LINTHORPE, a tnshp. in the par. of Middlesborough, W. div. of Langbaurgh lib., North Riding co. York, 1½ mile from Middlesborough and 3 miles S.E. of Stockton. It is a small, irregularly built, but prosperous village, situated on the river Tees. The tnshp. includes the vil. of Newport and the hmlt. of Airsholme. Thomas Hustler, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

LINTHWAITE, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Almondbury, upper div. of the wap. of Agbrigg, West Riding co. York, 4 miles S.W. of Huddersfield. It is situated on the Huddersfield and Manchester road, and between the two branches of the river Colne. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the woollen manufacture, which is extensively carried on. There are also several large quarries of good building stone. Facility of conveyance is afforded by the Manchester canal, which passes through the township. The impropriate tithes belong to the governors of Clitheroe grammar school. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £150, in the patron. of the Vicar of Almondbury. The church, dedicated to Christ, has a square embattled tower crowned with pinnacles and surmounted by a spire. It was erected in 1828, at an expense of £3,000, partly defrayed by the Parliamentary Commissioners. There are places of worship for the Baptists, Wesleyans, and Free Wesleyans, also a Wesleyan school for both sexes and a mechanics' reading-room. The National school is at Milnes Bridge, and is licensed by the bishop for Divine service.

LINTHWAITE PIKE, the highest peak of Saddleback, co. Cumberland.

LINTON, a par. and post town in the hund. of Chilford, co. Cambridge, 6 miles from Saffron Walden, and 10 S.E. of Cambridge. The parish, which is wholly agricultural, is situated on a branch of the river Cam, and near the Great Eastern railway. The village, which is still considerable, was formerly a market town, and had a small priory cell to St. Jacutus-de-Insula, in Brittany, which was subsequently given by Henry VI. to Pembroke College, Cambridge. At Bareham are the ruins of a Crutched Friary cell to Welnetham Abbey, in Suffolk. This monastery was established in the reign of Edward I., and at the Dissolution came to the Mellicents. Many of the houses in the town are very old and thatched. The union workhouse, which cost £6,500, is situated a short distance from the village, near to which is the newly-erected police station. Petty sessions are held every alternate Wednesday, and courts leet occasionally by the lords of the manor. The soil consists of gravel and chalk. A considerable portion of the land is in orchards and market gardens. In 1838 an Act was obtained for enclosing the waste lands. The appropriate tithes, belonging to Pembroke Hall, have been commuted for a rent-charge of £780, and the vicarial for £260. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £204, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, has an embattled tower containing a clock and five bells. The church contains several ancient monuments, including the brass of a knight in armour, bearing date 1430, and the tomb to Mrs. Harrison, who died at the advanced age of 135 years. The parochial charities produce about £38 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, also a British school—the latter not in use. The charities produce £37 per annum, chiefly the endowment of the almshouses. There are places of worship for Independents and Primitive Methodists. The governors of Pembroke College, Cambridge, are lords of the manor. Linton is the head of a Poor-law Union embracing 20 parishes in the county of Cambridge, and 2 in that of Essex. It is also the seat of a superintendent registry, but is included within the Saffron Walden new County Court district. An extensive sheep fair is held on the 30th July, and one on Holy Thursday for small wares.

LINTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Church Gresley, hund. of Repton, co. Derby, 5 miles S.E. of Burton-on-Trent, its post town, and 2 S.W. of the Gresley railway station. The village is small and wholly agricultural. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. The land is nearly evenly divided between arable and pasture. The soil is fertile, and the pastures are extremely rich. This place is celebrated for its cheese and fat cattle.

LINTON, or LYNTON, a par. and post town in the hund. of Sherwill, co. Devon, 14 miles E. by N. of Ilfracombe, 20 miles from Barnstaple, and the same distance from Minehead. The village is situated on an eminence near the mouth of the river Lyn, over which is a bridge of one arch. It is a watering-place and fishing station under the cliffs of the Bristol Channel. There is a small pier erected by the lord of the manor. Some of the inhabitants are engaged in the coasting trade and in the fisheries. The principal articles of import are limestone, coal, and culm, and the exports bark and grain. Its varied scenery renders Linton a place of great attraction during the summer season, at which time the coaches run daily to Barnstaple, Taunton, Bridgwater, and Ilfracombe. The steam-packets from Bristol, Bideford, and the Cornish coast also touch here. Near the junction of the East and West Lyn rivers is the seaport of Linmouth, formerly a fishing-town of some consequence, but now possessing only about half-a-dozen fishing-boats. Both at Linton and Linmouth are numerous lodging-houses for the accommodation of visitors. The living is a perpet. cur.* united with that of Countesbury, in the dioc. of Exeter, joint val. £120. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient edifice, with a tower containing three bells. The church has been twice enlarged by the addition of aisles, in 1817 and again in 1833. A short distance from the church is the Valley of Rocks, a wild and rugged pass about 1 mile long and 300 feet in breadth, terminated by a cove or inlet. There is a National school, also a place of worship for the Independents. There are excellent baths and a library at Lynmouth. The lord of the manor holds a court leet and baron at Easter, when a portreeve, tythingman, and ale-taster are appointed. There is excellent trout-fishing in the river Lyn.

LINTON, a par. in the hund. of Greytree, co. Hereford, 5 miles E. of Ross, its railway station and post town, and 15 S.E. of Hereford. The village, which is inconsiderable and wholly agricultural, is situated on the Ross and Newent road. The soil consists principally of clay, with rocky subsoil. The vicarage is endowed with the rectorial tithes. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £479, in the patron. of St. John's College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient edifice, with a spired tower containing five bells. There is a National school for both sexes, with a small endowment. The Baptists have a place of worship at Gortsley Common. Maynard Colchester, Esq., is lord of the manor.

LINTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Bromyard, hund. of Broxash, co. Hereford, 3 miles S.E. of Bromyard. The village is small and wholly agricultural. Clater Park, the principal residence, is situated near the turnpike road leading from Bromyard to Worcester. It commands a view of the Ankerdine hills and the river Teme. The Bromyard union poorhouse is situated in this parish. R. B. Phillips, Esq., is lord of the manor.

LINTON, a hmlt. in the ext. par. place of Widdrington, ward of East Morpeth, co. Northumberland, 5 miles N.E. of Morpeth. It is situated near the coast, on the line of the Yorkshire and Berwick railway.

LINTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Churcham, lower div. of the hund. of Dudstone, co. Gloucester, 2 miles N.W. of Gloucester. It is joined with Highnam and Over.

LINTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Spofforth, upper div. of the wap. of Claro, West Riding co. York, 3½ miles S.E. of Spofforth, and 2 S.W. of Wetherby. It is a small agricultural village, situated on the N. bank of the river Wharfe. There is a place of worship for Wesleyans. The manor belongs to the Wyndham family.

LINTON, a par. in the hund. of Maidstone, lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, 5 miles N. of Staplehurst, its post town, and 4 S. of Maidstone. The village, which is small, is situated on the range of hills that bound the Weald on the N., and near the turnpike road leading from Maidstone to Cranbrooke. The steep and dangerous hill which anciently formed the approach to the village has been much reduced and otherwise improved. A great portion of the land is in hop grounds, gardens, and orchards, which are very productive. The surface is undulating. The soil is clay, with ragstone subsoil. Maidstone union poorhouse is situated in the parish. Coxheath, about half a mile from the village, was until recently an unenclosed plain, where George III. reviewed his troops in 1778, but is now enclosed and cultivated. The impropriate tithes, belonging to Earl Cornwallis, have been commuted for a rent-charge of £220, and the vicarial for £325. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £257, in the patron. of the heirs of Earl Cornwallis. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, was thoroughly restored and enlarged in 1860. It has a tower containing six bells, and crowned by a spire, which was damaged by lightning in November, 1838, but has been repaired. Adjoining the church are the North and South chapels, with a screen of carved oak separating the chancel from the South chapel. The North chapel contains a monument to Viscount Brome, with an effigy in white marble by Bayley, and other monuments to the Mayne, Mann, and Cornwallis families, including that of Sir Horace Mann, which bears an epitaph by his friend and correspondent Horace Walpole. The register dates from 1570. The parochial charities produce about £13 per annum, which goes to a school, and Slayne's almshouses for eight poor persons resident within the parish. There are National schools for both sexes. Linton Park, late the seat of Earl Cornwallis, is a white stuccoed mansion situated in a park, affording a view of the Weald of Kent. The Duke of Leeds is lord of the manor.

LINTON, a par. in the E. div. of the wap. of Staincliff, West Riding co. York, 8 miles N. of Skipton, its post town, and 20 from Settle. It is a considerable village, situated in the valley of the river Wharfe. The par., which is of large extent, comprises the tnshps. of Grassington, Hobden, and Threshfield, with the hmlt. of Linton Mill. The land is principally in pasture, and a considerable portion is hilly moorland. The population are chiefly employed in the lead mines of Grassington, and in the cotton and worsted mills. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ripon, in two medieties, val. £400, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient stone structure containing one bell. The interior of the church contains some ancient monuments, and had formerly two pulpits and two reading-desks. The register dates from 1562. The parochial charities produce about £385, of which £257 goes to Fountaine's hospital, and £80 to Hewett's grammar school, with four exhibitions at St. John's College, Cambridge. There are some other small bequests for distribution among the poor.

LINTON, a par. in co. Roxburgh, Scotland, 6 miles S.E. of Kelso, its post town and nearest railway station. It is 9 miles in length by 3 in breadth, and is bounded by Spronston on the N., Northumberland on the E., Eckford on the W., and Yetholm and Morebattle on the S. It is separated from the latter parish by the Kaile Water, besides which stream it has two small lochs which abound with trout, &c. The surface rises from the Kaile, and the highest part of the parish is Linton Hill. There are about 1,750 acres of waste land. Coal is found here, but is not worked. There is a sandstone quarry, and whinstone is abundant. The par. is in the presb. of Kelso, and synod of Merse and Teviotdale. The minister's stipend is £258. The church, an ancient structure, is situated on high ground. The parish, from its proximity to England, has several remnants of the Border Wars, and tumuli are found in various parts of the district. Thomas Pringle, the poet, was a native of this place. Elliot of Clifton is the chief heritor.

LINTON, EAST, a vil. in the par. of Prestonkirk, co. Haddington, Scotland, 6 miles W. of Dunbar. It is a railway station on the North British line. The village is situated on the river Tyne, which is here spanned by a viaduct of the above line. The Free Church and United Presbyterians have each a place of worship. A corn market is held, and there is a branch office of the National bank. The village was anciently a burgh of barony, and is a prosperous place.

LINTON, EAST AND WEST, a hmlt. in the par. of Howden, wap. of Howdenshire, East Riding co. York, 2 miles E. of Howden. It is situated near Howden Dyke, at the ferry on the river Ouse, and near the line of the Hull and Selby railway.

LINTON GRANGE, a vil. in the tnshp. of Wintringham, East Riding co. York, 7 miles S.E. of New Malton.

LINTON-KIRK, or KIRK-LEVINGTON, a par. in the ward of Eskdale, co. Cumberland, 4 miles S.E. of Longtown, and 9 N.E. of Carlisle. The par., which is extensive, is situated on the river Line, and contains the tnshp. of West Linton, with the hmlts. of Hethersgill and Middle Quarter. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in agriculture. The principal residence is Kirklington Hall, the seat of the Dacre family, built out of the materials of the old seat, Clough Hall, and commanding a view of the Solway Frith. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £94. The church, which is situated in the Middle Quarter, is dedicated to St. Cuthbert. It is a red freestone edifice, with Norman traces. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. The Society of Friends has a meeting-house and a place of interment at Meggs in the Middle Quarter. The Wesleyans have a place of worship at Ullermire. The endowed school is situated at Shaw Foot. The Earl of Carlisle is lord of the manor.

LINTON-UPON-OUSE, a tnshp. in the par. of Newton-upon-Ouse, wap. of Bulmer, North Riding co. York, 1 mile W. of Newton-upon-Ouse, and 6 miles S.W. of Easingwold. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. Formerly this township was very productive in its growth of flax. There is an endowed Church of England school, with an annuity of £25. The township is the property of University College, Oxford.

LINTON, WEST, or LEVINGTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirk-Linton, ward of Eskdale, co. Cumberland, 3 miles S. of Longtown.

LINTON, WEST, a par. in co. Peebles, Scotland, 10 miles N.W. of Peebles, and 17 from Edinburgh. The par. includes the vil. of Carlops, and gives the title of baron to the Earl of Traquair. It is about 10 miles long, and measures 7½ miles at its broadest part. Three-fourths of the entire area of the parish consists of hills or mountains, principally sheepwalks. There are about 4,000 acres of arable land. The rivers are, the North Esk, the Medwin water, the Lyne water, and their tributaries. There is a mineral spring called Heaven-Aqua Well. Freestone, limestone, and coal are extensively worked, and pebbles are found resembling the Cairngorm stone. Fullers' earth occurs, and there are extensive beds of marl. The par. is in the presb. of Peebles, and synod of Lothian and Tweeddale. The minister's stipend is £233. The parish church was erected in 1781. The United Presbyterians have a church, and there is a Free Church preaching station at Carlops. The village of Linton is a burgh of regality under the Earl of Wemyss. The inhabitants for the most part are employed in weaving. The parish is celebrated for its Cheviot breed of sheep, and the sheep market held here has been long noted. Stone coffins and a Roman urn have been found in this parish. Harbour Craig was a retreat of the Covenanters. Fairs are held on the third Wednesday after 11th June for sheep and hogs, on the Friday before first Monday in April, Wednesday after 18th July, and Friday before 24th September.

LINTROSE, a demesne near Cupar-Angus, co. Forfar, Scotland, 1 mile W. of Kettins. It formerly belonged to Lord Todderance.

LINTZ-GREEN, a tnshp. in the parochial chplry. of Tanfield, Chester ward, co. Durham, 8 miles S.W. of Gateshead. It is situated on the river Derwent, near Lintz-Ford.

LINWICK-STREET, a hmlt. in the par. of Rudgwick, hund. of West Easwrith, rape of Arundel, co. Sussex, 10 miles N.E. of Petworth.

LINWOOD, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Fordingbridge, co. Hants, 4 miles N.E. of Ringwood.

LINWOOD, a par. in the S. div. of the wap. of Walshcroft, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 3 miles S.E. of Market-Rasen, its post town. It is a small agricultural village. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £380, and the glebe comprises 95 acres, valued at £110 per annum. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £420. The church is an ancient edifice dedicated to St. Cornelius. It contains canopied brasses of J. Lynwode and family, bearing date 1419-21. There is a village school, built by the late Lady Gordon. The charities produce about £12 per annum, exclusive of "the clerk acre."

LINWOOD, a hmlt. in the par. of Blankney, second div. of the wap. of Langoe, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 6 miles N.W. of Tattershall. It is situated on Linwood Drain.

LINWOOD, a vil. in the par. of Kilbarchan, co. Renfrew, Scotland, 3 miles W. of Paisley. It is situated on the river Black Cart.

LIONESSE, THE, a rock off the W. coast of Cornwall, lying between the Land's End and Scilly, on which the Palinarus was lost in 1848. It is supposed to have been overwhelmed by the sea in 1099.

LIPHOOK, a hmlt. in the par. of Bramshott, lower half of the hund. of Finch, co. Hants, 5 miles W. of Haslemere. It is a station on the Guildford, Godalming, and New Portsmouth line. In the time of the coaches it was a famed halting-place on the old Portsmouth road.

LIPWOOD, a tnshp. in the par. of Warden, ward of Tindale, co. Northumberland, 6 miles W. of Hexham. Grindon Lake is situated in the township.

LISBELLAW, a vil. in the par. of Cleenish, bar. of Tirkennedy, co. Fermanagh, Ireland, 4 miles S.E. of Enniskillen. It is a station on the Dundalk, Clones, and Londonderry section of the Irish North-Western railway. The village, situated near Loch Erne, is chiefly inhabited by weavers. It contains a police station, where petty sessions are held, the parish church of Cleenish, three Roman Catholic chapels, and two schools. Fairs are held on the 11th May, 20th June, 18th August, 12th October, 11th November, and 23rd December, chiefly for cattle.

LISBUNNY, a par. in the bar. of Upper Ormond, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 1 mile E. of Nenagh, its post town. The par. is 4 miles long by 2 broad. The soil is mostly good. The road from Nenagh to Roscrea traverses the interior. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Killaloe, val. with Kilmore, £512, in the patron. of the bishop. Woodbine Lodge is the chief seat. Here are the ruins of an old church, and some castle ruins.

LISBURN, a post and market town, and parliamentary borough, in the par. of Blaris, bar. of Upper Massarene, co. Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 7 miles S.S.W. of Belfast, and 92 from Dublin. It is a station on the Ulster railway. It is situated on the river Lagan, and on the road from Dublin to Belfast. Its history as a thriving town dates from 1627, when Viscount Conway raised it from the obscurity of a poor village called Lisnegarvey. In 1707 a castle was built here. Petty sessions are held every Tuesday. It returns two members to the Irish parliament, by charter of Charles II. It now sends one representative to the imperial parliament. It is governed by 17 petty constables. It is a well-built and neatly kept town. The streets are clean, and lighted with gas. The principal buildings are, the parish church, or cathedral of the diocese of Down, a Roman Catholic and six other chapels, a court-house, bridge, market-house, assembly rooms, linen hall, union workhouse, banks, insurance agencies, &c. Among the charitable institutions are, Williams' and Trail's almshouses, a hospital, infirmary, &c. There are several good schools, among which are White's school and Handcock's school. A considerable trade is carried on in the manufacture of damask, diaper, &c. The linen trade was introduced by a settlement of French Huguenots in 1685. In 1641 Monroe made an attack upon the town, but was repulsed by Venables. In the church is the tomb of Jeremy Taylor, who died here, and Bishop Erasmus Smith was born here in 1665. The Vaughans take the title of earl and viscount from this place. Lisburn is the head of a Poor-law Union containing 27 electoral divisions in the counties Antrim and Down. There is a race-course at the Maze. Tuesday is market day. Fairs are held on the 21st July and 5th October.

LISBURNE, a lead mine near Crosswood, co. Cardigan, belonging to the Earl of Lisburne.

LISCARD, a tnshp. in the par. of Wallasey, lower div. of the hund. of Wirrall, S. div. of co. Chester, 2½ miles N. of Birkenhead, its railway station and post town. It is situated on the river Mersey, and near Liscard Vale. It was formerly an insignificant village, but is now a flourishing town, having recently become a place of resort for sea-bathing. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Chester. The church is dedicated to St. John. In 1854 a Roman Catholic chapel was erected in St. Alban's-road, with a burial-ground adjoining. There is also a Roman Catholic school. A savings-bank and freehold land society are held in the National school-rooms. The Independents have a place of worship. At Sir John Tobin's seat was the celebrated Bedford missal, 11 inches by 7½, with the portrait of the great Regent Bedford, &c., now deposited in the British Museum. About half a mile distant from the town is the Egremont steam ferry station.

LISCARMOR, a vil. in the bar. of Corcomroe, co. Clare, Ireland, 4 miles W. of Ennistymon. It is a fishing village, situated at the river Inagh's mouth, on Liscarmor Bay, which is 4 miles by 2, but exposed to the winds. The principal residence is Liscarmor House. In the vicinity are remains of O'Conor's old castle.

LISCARROLL, a par. and vil. in the bars. of Orrery and Kilmore, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 8 miles S.W. of Charleville. The par. is 3 miles long by 2 broad. The surface is slightly hilly, but has a good soil. It is traversed by the road from Mallow to Newcastle. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Cloyne, val. with Kilbrin, £417, in the patron. of the bishop. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Churchtown. There are three day schools. Liscarroll Castle, now an old ruin, is said to have been founded in the time of King John, by John, Earl of Mortaigne, and was the property of the Barry and Perceval families. It was twice besieged and reduced, in 1642 and 1646. There is a police station in the village. Fairs are held on the 25th March, 1st and 31st May, 31st August, 21st October, and 19th November.

LISCARTON, a par. in the bar. of Lower Navan, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles N.W. of Navan, its post town. The par. is 2½ miles long by 1 mile broad. The surface consists of good soil, and is traversed by the road from Navan to Kells. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with Ardbraccan, £684, in the patron. of the crown. Liscarton House is the principal residence. Some traces of the old castle may be observed in parts of this residence.

LISCLEARY, a par. in the bar. of Kerrycurrihy, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles S.E. of Cork, its post town. The par. is 4 miles long by 3 broad, and is situated on the bank of the Owinboy. The living is a suspended vic. in the dioc. of Cork, val. £70, in the patron. of the bishop. There is a hedge-school.

LISCOLMAN, a par. in the bar. of Shillelagh, co. Wicklow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 9 miles N.W. of Carnew. Tullow is its post town. The par. is 2½ miles long by 1½ mile broad. It is situated along the E. bank of the little stream Dereen. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Leighlin, val. with Aghold, £452, in the patron. of the bishop. Liscolman House and Rath House are the principal residences in this neighbourhood.

LISCOMBE PARK, an ancient seat in co. Bucks, 2 miles W. of Leighton Buzzard. It has been the property of the Lovett family for above 500 years, and has a chapel, part of which was built in the middle of the 13th century. It contains many valuable portraits, as Nell Gwynne, by Lely; Sir E. Montague, by Holbein; the Duchess of Marlborough, by Kneller; &c.

LISCOOLY, a station on the Finn Valley railway, near Strabane.

LISDEEN, a hmlt. in the bar. of Moyarta, co. Clare, Ireland, 2 miles E. of Kilkee. Fairs are held on the 7th May, 13th July, 8th September, and 17th December.

LISDOWNEY, a vil. in the bar. of Galmoy, co. Kilkenny, Ireland, 4 miles N. of Freshford.

LISGENAN, or THE GRANGE, a par. in the bar. of Decies within Drum, co. Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles N.E. of Youghal. Dungarvan is its post town. It is situated on the river Lickey, near the coast. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lismore, val. with Kinsalebeg, £217. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Ardmore and Ballymacart. There are three day schools. Grange Lodge is the seat of Sir R. Musgrave, Bart.

LISGOOLD, a par. in the bar. of Barrymore, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles N.N.W. of Middleton, its post town. The par. is 2 miles long and 1½ mile broad. It is situated on the banks of the river Curra. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Cloyne, val. with others, £760, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built in 1789 by the late Board of First Fruits. There are a Roman Catholic chapel and two day schools. Fairs are held on the 1st May, 24th June, 1st November, and 21st December.

LISHADDIN, a tributary of the river Laune, rises near Aghadoe, co. Kerry, Ireland.

LISKEARD, a par., market town, municipal and parliamentary borough, locally in the hund. of West, but having separate jurisdiction, in co. Cornwall, 15 miles S.W. of Launceston, 18 from Plymouth, and 225 W.S.W. of London. It has a station on the Cornwall and West Cornwall railway, which passes through the parish at Moorswater. This place was anciently called Liskerrett, and was given by William the Conqueror to Robert, Earl of Mortaigne, from whom it came to the earls of Cornwall, and was, by Act of Parliament, annexed to the duchy in the reign of Edward III. The castle, of which there are still some vestiges, was occasionally the residence of Richard, Earl of Cornwall, and King of the Romans. During the Civil War the parliamentary forces were routed here by Sir Ralph Hopton, who took possession of the town for Charles I. Liskeard is one of the most ancient and considerable towns in the county, having been one of the four coinage or stannary towns. It was first chartered by Earl Richard in the reign of Henry III., and re-chartered by Queen Elizabeth. From the time of Edward I. till the passing of the Reform Act it returned two members to parliament, but since that event only one, the boundaries of the parliamentary borough being extended so as to include the whole of the parish. The population of the municipal borough in 1861 was 4,689, and of the parliamentary 6,704. Under the Muncipal Reform Act it is governed by a mayor, 4 aldermen, and 12 councillors, with the style of "mayor and burgesses of Liskerret, otherwise Liskeard." The revenue of the borough, chiefly arising from the town lands, is about £550, and its acreage 8,129 acres. The town, which is chiefly built on steep hills at the upper extremity of a valley, stands near the turnpike road from Plymouth to Falmouth. It is irregularly laid out, but the streets are well paved, and lighted with gas. It contains a townhall, erected in 1707, on granite arches and columns; a handsome market-house for poultry, fish, and vegetables, built in 1822; two branch banks, savings-bank, mechanics' institute, East Cornwall Gunpowder Company, literary society, union poorhouse, and the house occupied by Charles I. in 1644. There are also tanneries and a paper-mill. Considerable facility for water carriage has been afforded by the canal cut from the river Looe, which terminates about 1 mile W. of the town, where are coal wharves and limekilns. The land in the neighbourhood is in a high state of cultivation, and in some parts is deep rich loam. The surface is hilly. The subsoil is brownstone, with mica slate, and traces of tin and other minerals. The town is a polling place for the eastern division of the county, the head of a Poor-law Union embracing 26 parishes, and the seat of new County Court and superintendent registry districts. Mr. Marshall's harriers hunt round here. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £303. The church of St. Martin is a spacious edifice, built of slate-stone, with a low embattled tower erected in 1627, containing six bells. It contains monuments of the Trehawkes, who had the manor, and one to Lieutenant James Huntley, who fell in a gallant attack on a squadron of Russian gun-boats in the Gulf of Finland.

At Dubwalls or Dobwells, a small village in this parish, is a chapel-of-ease to Liskeard. There are chapels for Roman Catholics, Independents, Wesleyans, Wesleyan Association Methodists, Society of Friends, and Bible Christians. The charities produce about £202 per annum, including Eliot's school endowment of £5. There are British and Foreign schools, erected in 1835, and Sunday-schools in connection with the several places of worship. Part of the conventual buildings belonging to the nunnery of Poor Clares, founded by Richard, Earl of Cornwall, yet remain, and have been converted into dwelling-houses. Saturday is market day. Fairs are held on Ascension Day and old St. Matthew's Day for cattle, besides several minor fairs.

LISKEEN, a vil. in the bar. of Moyarta, co. Clare, Ireland, 4 miles S. of Kilkee. In the vicinity is Liskeen Bog, covering above 1,900 acres.

LISKEENASHINGANE, a hmlt. in the bar. of Magunihy, co. Kerry, Ireland, 3 miles S.E. of Milltown.

LISKEEVY, a par. in the bar. of Dunmore, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 8 miles N.E. of Tuam, its post town. It is 6 miles long by 2 broad. The surface consists of a middling soil, and is traversed by the river Clare. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Tuam, val. with Tuam, £622, in the patron. of the bishop. There is a Roman Catholic chapel, united to that of Adragool; also two day schools are in the parish. Belmont is the principal seat. In the vicinity are church ruins, and remains of two castles.

LISKINFERE, a par. and post-office vil. in the bar. of Gorey, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles S.W. of Gorey. The par. is about 3 miles in length, and the same in breadth. The surface consists very generally of a good soil, and drains toward the N.W. into the river Bann. The road from Dublin to Wexford traverses the interior, upon which stands the village. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ferns, val. £655, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was erected by aid of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits in 1831. There is a day school. Mountforest, Ballinclay, Barnadown, and Moneylawn are the principal residences.

LISLEE, a par. in the bar. of Ibane and Barryroe, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 6 miles E. of Clonakilty, its post town. It is 5 miles long by 2 broad, and contains the towns of Butlerstown, Courtmacsherry, and Meelmane. It comprises part of the coast-line of Courtmacsherry Bay. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ross, val. with another, £500, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built by means of a sum lent by the late Board of First Fruits in 1830. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Abbeymahon. There are Sunday and day schools. Lislee House is the seat of Sir E. Synge, Bart., and Seacourt the villa of Earl Shannon. The hawk builds in the cliffs. Slate can be quarried.

LISLIVANE, a vil. in the bar. of Ibane, co. Cork, Ireland, 5 miles E. of Clonakilty.

LISMAKEERY, a par. in the bar. of Lower Connello, co. Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles S.W. of Askeaton. Rathkeale is its post town. It is 2 miles long by 1 mile broad. The surface lies along the bank of the river Deel. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Limerick, val. with Askeaton, £336. Altavilla is the principal residence. The church is in ruins.

LISMALIN, a par. in the bar. of Slievardagh, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles E. of Killenaule, its post town. It is 4 miles long by 3 broad. The surface lies along the N. side of the early waters of the river Lingan, and consists of a rich soil. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cashel, val. with others, £785, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built in the early part of the last century. There are two or three day schools. Lismalin Castle is an old residence.

LISMATEIGE, a par. in the bar. of Knocktopher, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles S.W. of Knocktopher. It is 2 miles long, and less than a mile broad, and is traversed by the road from Callan to Waterford. The living is joined to Burnchurch.

LISMORE AND APPIN, an united par. in the N. of the co. Argyle, Scotland. It comprises the districts of Lismore, Appin, and Kingairloch. Its present name, Lismore, signifies the Great Hunt, and it was anciently known as the parish of Kilmaluag. It is about 48 miles in length, and its average breadth is about 10. It contains about 346,000 acres of pasture, moor, and waste, 4,000 acres of arable land, and about the same proportion of woodland. The parish has a coast-line of about 90 miles in length, and enjoys steam-boat communication from the Clyde through the Sound of Mull and Loch Linnhe. The par. is in the presb. of Lorn and synod of Argyle. The minister's stipend is £275. There are two parish churches, one at Lismore and the other at Appin; and there is also a government church at Duror. There are three missions of the royal bounty, shared by several places in the parish. There are a Free church, United Presbyterian church, one Independent, one Roman Catholic, and three Episcopalian chapels. There are six parochial and several private schools.

LISMORE AND MOCOLLOP, an united par., post and market town, and seat of a dioc. in the bar. of Coshmore, co. Waterford, and in the bar. of Condons and Clangibbon, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland. There is a station on the Waterford and Limerick line at Clonmel for Dungarvan and Lismore. The par. is 10 miles long, and its greatest breadth is 8. It includes the vils. of Tallnobridge and Ballyduff, the city of Lismore, and the town of Cappoquin. The river Blackwater flows partly through, and then along the E. of the parish. The river Bride traces part of the southern boundary, and the Knockmealdown mountains are prominent in the N. The surface is very mountainous. It was ravaged by the Danes at various periods between the years 978 and 1157. In 1172, Henry II. declared the English law here.—The benefice of Lismore, val. £230, in the patron. of the dean, includes the cathedral district, with Coppoquin and Macollop, which are in the patron. of the vicars-choral. The cathedral is supposed to have been first founded in the 7th century by St. Carthagh, and burnt in the 12th century. It was succeeded by another edifice, which was demolished in the Munster rebellion by Fitzgibbon, the White Knight. It was again refounded by the Earl of Cork in 1633, but falling into decay, it was entirely re-built about a century ago. The building is cruciform, combining the Gothic and Saxon styles of architecture, with a spire, and Norman portal. It contains tombs of the Magraths and Musgraves of Tourin, and others. In the parish are a Roman Catholic chapel, and a Presbyterian meeting-house. There are several private schools, besides the National and parish schools.—The town is situated on rising ground, near the S. bank of the river Blackwater. It was formerly a parliamentary borough, chartered by James I., and sent two members to the Irish Parliament. Lismore, though once a city of importance, degenerated rapidly until about the middle of the last century, when, under the auspices of the Duke of Devonshire, great improvements were carried out; the bridge which spans the river was built, new streets formed, gaol and sessions-house built. The trade is not considerable, but a rather extensive salmon-fishery is carried on, and the river affords communication with the port of Youghal. It is governed by the county magistrates. The principal charitable institutions are the poorhouse, Earl of Cork's almshouses, fever hospital, and dispensary.—Perhaps the most attractive feature is Lismore Castle, which occupies an elevated site. It was founded in 1185 by the Earl of Mortaigne, afterwards King John. Soon after, it was entirely demolished by the Irish, but was rebuilt, and became the episcopal seat of the diocese, till it was granted by Bishop Magrath to Sir W. Raleigh, in 1589. It sustained a siege by the rebels in 1641; and again in 1643, under General Purcell, it withstood a tremendous force. In 1645 it was burnt by Lord Castlehaven; again being restored, it became the residence of the Boyles, and the birth-place of the great Robert Boyle. It is now in the possession of the Cavendish family, and was visited by James II. in 1785, and also by Lord Lieutenant the Duke of Rutland. Some paintings and specimens of tapestry are preserved in the castle.—The dioc. of Lismore is in the ecclesiastical province of Dublin; it was joined to Waterford in 1358, and subsequently to Cashel. It comprises 323,500 acres in cos. Waterford and Tipperary, and contains forty-seven benefices. The chapter consists of a dean, precentor, chancellor, treasurer, archdeacon, prebendaries, vicar-general, vicars-choral, &c. The Roman Catholic diocese is united to that of Waterford. The Poor-law Union of Lismore has nine electoral divisions in cos. Waterford and Cork. There is a police station in the town. Petty sessions are held once a fortnight, and general sessions in April, July, October, and December. Kilbree fort is situated in the parish; also traces of earthworks. Slate is quarried, and there are indications of copper, lead, and iron. Lismore gives title of viscount and baron to the O'Callaghans of Shanbally. Wednesday is market day. Fairs are held on 25th May, 25th September, and 12th November.

LISMULLEN, a par. in the bar. of Skreen, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles S.W. of Navan. Dunshaughlin is its post town. It is 1½ mile in length, and the same in breadth. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with Skreen, £507, in the patron. of the crown. The church was built in 1811, partly by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. Lismullen House is the demesne of the Dillon family. An Augustinian nunnery was founded here by Alicia de la Corner in 1240, the site of which was granted to Thomas Cusack, in the time of Edward VI.

LISNADILL, a par. in the bars. of Armagh, Lower and Upper Fews, co. Armagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 3 miles S.E. of Armagh, its post town. It is 7 miles long by 4 broad at the widest. The surface is somewhat mountainous, with a good soil. The road from Armagh to Manor Hamilton traverses the interior. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Armagh, val. £62, in the patron. of the incumbent of Armagh. The church was erected in 1772 by Archbishop Rokeby. The Roman Catholic Chapel is united to that of Armagh-Breague. There are two or three day schools. Lisnadill House is one of several residences.

LISNAKILL, a par. in the bar. of Middlethird, co. Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles S.W. of Waterford, its post town. It is 2½ miles long, and its average breadth is 1 mile. The surface consists of a medium soil, partly watered by the river Suir. The road from Waterford to Kill traverses the parish. The living is a suspended rect. in the dioc. of Waterford, in the patron. of the bishop. Here are the ruins of a church, likewise the remains of a castle.

LISNARRICK, a vil. in the par. of Derryvullen, in the bar. of Lurg, co. Fermanagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 3 miles S.E. of Kesh. It is situated on the road from Pettegoe to Enniskillen. The demesne of Castle-Archdall is the most attractive feature of the locality. Fairs are held on the 12th and 22nd January, 22nd February, 22nd March, 5th April, 9th and 23rd May, 22nd June, 22nd July, and 15th October, principally for the sale of live stock.

LISNASKEA, a small post and market town in the par. of Aghalurcher, in the bar. of Magherastephana, co. Fermanagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 10 miles S.E. of Enniskillen, and 92 from Dublin. It is a station on the Irish North-Western railway. It is situated near Lough Erne, on the road from Enniskillen to Belfast. It contains the parish church, two Roman Catholic chapels, a savings-bank, Leslie's school, and a market-house; also a dispensary, fever hospital, and union poorhouse. The Poor-law Union of Lisnaskea comprises 14 electoral divisions in co. Fermanagh. Saturday is market day. Fairs are held on the Monday before Easter, 13th April, Monday after Ascension Day, 1st June, and 10th October.

LISNEGAR, a demesne of Lord Riversdale, in co. Cork, Ireland, near Rathcormack.

LISPOLE, a vil. in the bar. of Corkaguiny, co. Kerry, Ireland, 4 miles S.E. of Dingle.

LISRONAGH, a par. in the bar. of East Iffa and Offa, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles N. of Clonmel. Frenchpark is its post town. It is 3 miles long by 2 broad. The soil is generally good. The road from Fethard to Clonmel traverses the interior. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lismore, val. £192. The church was built by a gift of the late Board of First Fruits in 1831. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Kilgrant. There is a police station.

LISRYAN, a post-office vil. in the par. of Mostrim, bar. of Ardagh, co. Longford, Ireland, near Edgeworthstown.

LISS, or LYSS, a par. in the lower half of the hund. of Finch Dean, Petersfield div. of co. Hants, 4 miles N.E. of Petersfield, its post town. It is a station on the Guildford, Godalming, and New Portsmouth branch line of railway. The par. contains the tythgs. of Liss Abbass and Liss Turney. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £150, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is an ancient structure, dedicated to St. Peter. The parochial charities produce about £8 per annum. There are a National school and Sunday-schools, also a place of worship for the Wesleyans. Sir Charles Taylor is lord of the manor.

LISSAN, a par. partly in the bar. of Loughinsholin, co. Londonderry, and partly in the bar. of Dungannon, co. Tyrone, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 2 miles S.W. of Moneymore. Cookstown is its post town. The par. is 9 miles long, and its greatest breadth is 4 miles. The surface is mountainous, Slievegullion and Fir Mountain being prominent heights. The Loughry stream courses through part of the parish, and part of Lough Fea is within the limits. The parish is crossed by the road from Cookstown to Newtown Limavady. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Armagh, val. £444, in the patron. of the primate. There are a church, Roman Catholic chapel, and several Sunday and day schools. Lissan House is the principal seat. Fairs are held on the 1st January, 12th May, 12th August, and 26th November.

LISSELTON, a par. in the bar. of Iraghticonnor, co. Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles N.W. of Listowel. Ballybunion is its post town. It is 2 miles long by 1½ mile broad. The surface is boggy. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ardfert and Aghadoe, val. £45. The church was built in 1815 by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. There are one or two hedge-schools; also remains of a friary which was founded by John O'Connor in 1478.

LISSETT, a chplry. and tnshp. in the par. of Beeford, N. div. of the wap. of Holderness, East Riding co. York, 3 miles N. of Beeford, and 6 S.W. of Bridlington. Hull is its post town. It is situated near the coast. The village is small, and wholly agricultural. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the rect.* of Beeford, in the dioc. of York. The church is dedicated to St. James.

LISSINGTON, a par. in the W. div. of the wap. of Wraggoe, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 4 miles S. of Market-Rasen, its post town. It is a small agricultural village. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £337. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £365, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of York. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is an ancient structure, with Norman traces. There is a place of worship for Wesleyans.

LISSONUFFY, a par. in the bar. of Roscommon, co. Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 3 miles S.E. of Strokestown, its post town. It is 5 miles long by 3 broad. It lies to the W. of the Shannon, and comprises a considerable extent of bog and waste land. It is crossed by the road from Strokestown to Lanesborough. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Elphin, val. with Bumlin, £423, in the patron. of the bishop. There is a Roman Catholic chapel, also several hedge-schools. Greenhill and Mount-Dillon are the chief seats.

LISSOY. See AUBURN, co. Westmeath, Ireland. This is the "Sweet Auburn" of Goldsmith's "Deserted Village."

LISSYWOOLEN, a hmlt. in the bar. of Brawny, co. Westmeath, Ireland, near Athlone.

LISTERLIN, a par. in the bar. of Ida and Knocktopher, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles S. of Innistioge. New Ross is its post town. It is 4 miles long, and its extreme breadth is 2½ miles. The surface is mountainous. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ossory, val. £213, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built at the close of the 18th century by means of a gift from the late Board of First Fruits. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Rosbercon and Dysertmoon. There is a day school; also remains of a Danish fort, and a cave. There is a police station in the parish.

LISTON, a par. in the hund. of Hinckford, co. Essex, 3 miles N.W. of Sudbury, its post town. It is a small ancient village, situated on the river Stour, and was formerly held by Hugh de Gournai, and subsequently by the Listons, by the tenure of placing "five wafers" before the king at the coronation. The land is generally fertile, and in the lower grounds near the river light and sandy. The tithes have been commuted for £200. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £163. The church, dedication unknown, is a small ancient edifice, with a square embattled tower containing three bells. On the S. side of the chancel is a marble monument to the Clayton family. Liston Hall is the principal residence.

LISTOWEL, a par., post and market town, in the bars. of Clanmaurice and Iraghticonnor, co. Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland. The par. is 2½ miles long and 1 mile broad. The surface includes a considerable area of bog and waste, and is traversed by the river Feale, and the road from Tralee to Limerick. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ardfert and Aghadoe, val. with others, £336. The church was built by a gift from the late Board of First Fruits in 1819. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Knockanure. There are National and several day schools. Ballinruddery is the demesne of the Fitzgeralds. The town is situated on the banks of the Feale, 170 miles S.W. of Dublin, and 40 N. of Killarney. It is a well-built and clean-looking town of ancient origin, approached by a five-arched bridge. The church is in the later English style. The Roman Catholics have a chapel. There is a chief police station. Petty and quarter sessions are held in the town. The castle formerly belonged to the Fitzmaurices of Duagh, who held it by grant of Henry II. It gives title to the Earl of Listowel. The Poor-law Union lies within the co. of Kerry, and has 21 electoral divsions. There are a dispensary and fever hospital. Tuesday and Friday are market days. Fairs are held on the 13th May, 26th July, and 28th October.

LISVANE, or LLYSVAEN, a par. in the hund. of Kibbor, co. Glamorgan, 5 miles N. of Cardiff, its post town. It is a small agricultural village. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £60. The church, dedicated to St. Dennis, is a small ancient structure. The charities produce about £13 per annum.

LITCHAM, a par. in the hund. of Launditch, co. Norfolk, 8 miles N.E. of Swatham, its post town, and 3 N.E. of the Dunham railway station. The village, which is large, is situated near the East Anglian railway, and was formerly a market town. Petty sessions are held at the Bull inn. The land is chiefly arable, and the remainder heath and common. A part of the commons has of late been enclosed under an Act obtained in 1770, but a portion is still left for the public pleasure. The orders of Foresters and Odd Fellows hold their annual meetings here, the former in July, and the latter at Whitsuntide. The Litcham Cricket Club play their matches on South Common. Petty sessions for the division are held here on the first Wednesday in every alternate month, and a court-leet is held in October. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £411. The living is a rect.* with that of East Lexham annexed, in the dioc. of Norwich, val. severally £501 and £208. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure, with a square brick tower. It has been thoroughly restored. It contains a carved oak screen, two painted windows, and several monuments. The parochial charities produce about £30 per annum, of which £8 go to Halcot's almhouses. There is a National school for both sexes. The Wesleyans, Wesleyan Reformers, and Primitive Methodists, have each a chapel. Near the bridge was anciently a hermitage, of which the chapel is now a farmhouse. Pleasure fairs are held on Whit-Tuesday and the 1st November.

LITCHBOROUGH, a par. in the hund. of Fawsley, co. Northampton, 6 miles S.W. of Weedon, its post town and railway station on the London and North-Western railway, and 6 N.W. of Towcester. The village, which is small, and wholly agricultural, is of great antiquity, having been one of the four garrisoned towns in this county taken by the Saxons in 571. The par., which includes the hmlt. of Foxley, is watered by a tributary of the river Tow. The surface is hilly. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £478. The church, dedicated to St. Martin, is a stone structure, with a tower at the W. end containing three bells. It was thoroughly restored and a gallery added in 1842. The interior contains an altar tomb to Sir John Needham, with a figure of a knight in armour. The parochial charities produce about £145 per annum, of which £32 go to Lady Leveson's free school. The Baptists have a place of worship. William Blake, Esq., is lord of the manor.

LITCHFIELD, a par. in the lower half of the hund. of Kingsclere, co. Hants, 3½ miles N. of Whitchurch, its post town. It is situated in a valley near the Roman way from Silchester, and on the modern road from Oxford to Southampton. The village consists of a few farmhouses. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £400. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £347. The church is a small ancient structure dedicated to St. James. William Kingsmill, Esq., is lord of the manor and sole landowner. There is also a small place of this name on the line of the South-Western railway, about 3 miles S.E. of Whitchurch.

LITCHURCH, a tnshp. in the par. of St. Peter's, Derby, hund. of Morleston-with-Litchurch, co. Derby, 1 mile S.E. of Derby. It partly gives name to the hundred. The Derby union poorhouse is situated in this township.

LITHERLAND, or WATERLOO, a tnshp. in the par. of Sephton, hund. of West Derby, co. Lancaster, 5 miles N.W. of Liverpool, its post town. This tnshp., which is situated near the coast, includes the hmlt. of Seaforth, a watering-place, and a portion of Waterloo. It is traversed by the Leeds canal and Southport railway. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the rect.* of Sefton, in the dioc. of Chester. The church, which is situated at Seaforth, is dedicated to St. Thomas. It is a neat edifice with a round tower, and was erected in 1815 at the expense of the late Sir John Gladstone. There are two National schools, also a Roman Catholic school. Seaforth Hall and Seaforth House are the principal residences. The Earl of Sefton is lord of the manor.

LITHERSKEW, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Helbeck Lunds, North Riding co. York, 7 miles N.W. of Hawes.

LITHEWELL, or LUDWELL, a chplry. in the par. of Dawlish, hund. of Exminster, co. Devon, 1 mile S.W. Chudleigh. The chapel is in ruins.

LITTER, or CASTLE-HYDE, a par. in the bars. of Condons, Clangibbon, and Fermoy, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles N.W. of Fermoy, its post town. It is 3 miles long by 1½ mile broad. It is situated along the bank of the Blackwater, and the road from Fermoy to Mallow traverses the interior. The surface consists generally of a good soil. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Cloyne, val. £295, in the patron. of the bishop and T. Gollock, Esq. The church was built at the expense of the late John Hyde, Esq. There are two day schools. Castle-Hyde is a very fine demesne.

LITTER. See LETTERLUNAR, King's County, Ireland.

LITTLE ABINGTON. See ABINGTON, LITTLE, co. Cambridge; and the like for other places having a similar distinguishing prefix.

LITTLEBOROUGH, a chplry. in the par. of Rochdale, and tnshp. of Blatchinworth, co. Lancaster, 3½ miles N.E. of Rochdale. It is a station on the eastern section of the Lancashire and Yorkshire railway, which passes a little to the E. of the village, and then enters a tunnel of 2,869 yards in length. The Rochdale canal and the Roman road from Manchester to York traverse the district. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £200, in the patron. of the Vicar of Rochdale. The church, dedicated to St. James, formerly belonged to Whalley Abbey, but was rebuilt about 1815. There is a place of worship for Wesleyans. Many Roman antiquities have been found in the immediate vicinity.

LITTLEBOROUGH, a par. in the wap. of Bassetlaw, co. Nottingham, 8 miles E. by N. of East Retford. It is supposed to have been the site of the Roman station Agelocum, or Segelocum, where foundations of buildings, altars, urns, and numerous coins, have been found. The village, which consists of a cluster of farmhouses, is situated at the ferry on the river Trent. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1822. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £65. The church is a very ancient structure, recently restored and beautified. In the walls are many Roman bricks, and part of the masonry is in the herring-bone style.

LITTLEBOURN, a par. in the hund. of Downhamford, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, 4 miles E. of Canterbury. It is situated on a branch of the river Stour, on the bank of which is an extensive corn-mill. In the village, which is considerable, are a brewery and tan-yard. The greater part of the land is arable, with a considerable extent of orchards and hop-grounds. The surface is well wooded, and the soil very productive. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £278, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Vincent, is an ancient structure. There is a place of worship for Calvinistic Methodists. The charities produce £18 per annum. A fair is held on the 5th July, chiefly for pleasure.

LITTLEBURY, a par. in the hund. of Uttlesford, co. Essex, 2 miles N.W. of Saffron-Walden, its post town, and 2 N. of the Audley End station on the Great Eastern line of railway. It is situated on the old Roman highway Icknield Street. The river Granta flows through the parish. The hmlt. of Littlebury Green, formerly called Stretley, lies to the S.W. of the village. The manor was bestowed by Elizabeth upon Sutton, who founded the Charterhouse in London, and afterwards passed to the earls of Bristol. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1801. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £205, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is an ancient stone structure standing on the site of a Roman camp, and has several brasses dating back to the early part of the 16th century. The charities produce nearly £90 per annum, £75 of which is the endowment of the free school founded by Mrs. Bradbury in 1585. In this parish Winstanley, the builder of the first Eddystone lighthouse, in the destruction of which, by a most violent storm in 1703, he lost his own life, had a residence, containing numerous specimens of his mechanical skill. At Chapel Green formerly stood a chapel-of-ease.

LITTLE-COMMON, a hmlt. in the the tnshp. of Ecclesall-Bierlow, par. of Sheffield, West Riding co. York, 4 miles S.W. of Sheffield, within which borough it is included.

LITTLECOTE, a hmlt. in the par. of Stewkley, co. Bucks, 4 miles S.E. of Winslow.

LITTLECOTT, a tythg. in the par. of Enford, co. Wilts, 3 miles N.W. of Hungerford. It is situated on the river Kennett, under Knyghton Camp. The principal residence is Littlecott Park, built by the Dayrells in the 15th century, and subsequently the seat of Judge Popham, in whose family it still remains. It contains a hall, 46 feet by 25, hung with ancient armour, and a picture gallery 110 feet long.

LITTLEDALE, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par of Lancaster, hund. of Lonsdale South of the Sands, co. palatine of Lancaster, 5 miles N.E. of Lancaster, its post town. It is joined to the tnshp. of Caton, and lies near the river Lune, of which it commands a view, celebrated by the poet Gray. Coal and slate are found. Many of the inhabitants are engaged in the neighbouring cotton and flax mills. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £48, in the gift of the vicar of the parish. The church is a small stone edifice dedicated to St. Anne, built in the last century. The Dissenters have a place of worship here, and there is a parochial school.

LITTLEDEAN, a border tower in co. Roxburgh, Scotland, near Maxton. It is situated on the river Tweed, and was formerly a stronghold of the Kers. It is now the property of Lord Polwarth, of Mertoun.

LITTLEFIELD, a hund. in the lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent. It is situated in the western part of the county, and includes the pars. of Mereworth and West Peckham, comprising an area of 1,150 acres.

LITTLEFORD, a vil. in the bar. of Skreen, co. Meath, Ireland, 1 mile E. of Navan.

LITTLE FRANCE, a vil. in co. Edinburgh, Scotland, 2 miles S.E. of Edinburgh. It consists of a cluster of houses adjoining the ruin of Craigmillar Castle, or Petit France, as it was named by Mary Queen of Scots, who restored the ancient castle, which had been burnt by the Earl of Hertford in 1544, and made it her favourite seat. The ruin includes a square keep, reception hall, and Queen Mary's room, a small chamber only 7 feet by 5, with part of the machicolated wall and towers.

LITTLEHAM, a par. in the hund. of Shebbear, co. Devon, 2 miles S. of Bideford, its post town and railway station, and 5 N.W. of Torrington. It is situated on the road from Bideford to Buckland-Brewer, and adjoins the par. of Monkleigh. It is watered by the two small rivers Torridge and Yeo. This place, anciently a royal manor, formed part of the dower of Queen Matilda, wife of William the Conqueror, and afterwards passed to the Stapleton, Buteler (earls of Ormond), St. Leger, Leigh, and Basset families, from which last it was purchased by the father of the present proprietor. Hops are grown of a superior quality, and for the most part used on the spot in the brewing of a particular kind of beer, the water used in its production possessing medicinal properties. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £190. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £208. The church, dedicated to St. Swithin, is an ancient stone structure containing a richly carved screen, antique font, and several monuments. The windows are of stained glass. There is a parochial school for both sexes. Miss Anthony is lady of the manor, and resides at Littleham Park.

LITTLEHAM, a par. in the hund. of East Budleigh, co. Devon, 2 miles E. of Exmouth, its post town, and 5 S.E. of Topsham. It is situated on the sea-coast, and the London and South-Western railway has a station at Exmouth, a considerable portion of which town is in this parish. There is a tongue of land stretching out into the sea called Straight Point. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. with the cur. of Exmouth annexed, £184, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Exeter. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, or, according to others, to the Holy Trinity, is an ancient stone edifice with a square tower. There is a place of worship for Dissenters. The charities consist of Drake's almshouses for decayed schoolmasters, and a lectureship endowed with property producing about £476. There are also several bequests for the poor, realising £23 per annum. The trustees of the late Lord Rolle are the lords of the manor.

LITTLEHAM, a hmlt. in the par. of Abbotsham, hund. of Shebbear, co. Devon, 2 miles S.W. of Bideford. It is situated near the bay and the mouth of the river Torridge.

LITTLEHAMPTON. See HAMPTON, LITTLE, co. Sussex.

LITTLE ISLAND, a par. in the bar. of Barrymore, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles E. of Cork. It is 2 miles long by 1½ mile broad, and contains the vil. of Clashavodig. It has a station on the Cork and Youghal railway. The surface lies within an expansion of the river Lee, known as Lough Mahon. There is a day school.

LITTLE ISLAND, in the river Suir, co. Waterford, Ireland, 3 miles below Waterford. On the island stands a castle belonging to the Purcells.

LITTLE-MILL, a vil. in the par. of Old Kilpatrick, co. Dumbarton, Scotland, 9 miles E. of Dumbarton. It is situated near Erskine Ferry, on the river Clyde, not far from Antonine's wall.

LITTLE MILL, a junction station of the West Midland section of the Great Western railway, where the Monmouthshire line branches off.

LITTLE MILL, a hmlt. in the par. of Alnwick, ward of East Coquetdale, co. Northumberland, 17 miles N. of Newcastle. It is a station on the North-Eastern railway.

LITTLEMOOR, a lib. in the pars. of St. Mary-the-Virgin and Iffley, partly within the libs. of the city of Oxford, and partly in the hund. of Bullingdon, co. Oxford, 3 miles S.E. of Oxford, its post town. It is a station on the Oxford and Maidenhead section of the Great Western railway. It was formerly a hamlet of St. Mary's parish, but is now a separate district. In the reign of Henry II. a nunnery of Benedictines was founded here, which in 1524 was bestowed upon Cardinal Wolsey. Its revenue at the Dissolution was £33 6*s.* 8*d.* Here is situated the Oxford and Berks county lunatic asylum. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1817. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £180, in the patron. of Oriel College, Oxford, and C. Crawley, Esq. The church is a modern edifice with a tower. There is a parochial school.

LITTLEMOSS, a vil. in the district of Audenshaw, co. palatine of Lancaster, about 3 miles from Ashton-under-Lyne.

LITTLEOVER, a chplry. in the par. of Mickleover, hund. of Morlaston, co. Derby, 2 miles S.W. of Derby, its post town. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic.* of Mickleover, in the dioc. of Lichfield. The chapel contains a marble monument to one of the Harpur family. A short distance from the village is situated the county lunatic asylum, on an elevated spot from which there is an extensive prospect.

LITTLEPORT, a par. in the hund. and Isle of Ely, co. Cambridge, 5 miles N.E. of Ely, its post town, and 13 S. of Downham. It is situated on the river Ouse, and is a station on the Great Eastern line of railway. The par., which is of large extent, includes the hmlts. of Apshall and Old Bank, with several small places. The land is fenny, but productive. The village is on the road from Ely to Lynn, and a considerable traffic is carried on by the river in corn and coal. The impropriate tithes, belonging to Clare Hall, Cambridge, have been commuted for a rent-charge of £248, and the vicarial for £1,931; the impropriate glebe comprises 81 acres, and the vicarial 79 acres. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £1,487, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. George, is an old edifice with a lofty embattled tower. The register commences in 1761. The parochial charities, chiefly arising from land, produce about £260 per annum. The Baptists, Independents, Lady Huntingdon's Connexion, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists, have each a chapel. There is a National school for boys and girls.

LITTLEROE, a small island lying off the W. coast of the mainland of Shetland, coast of Scotland. It is in the par. of Delting, and is occupied by one family LITTLETHORPE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Whitcliffe-with-Thorpe, par. of Ripon, West Riding co. York, 2 miles S. of Ripon. It is near the bank of the river Ure.

LITTLETHORPE, a hmlt. in the pars. of Cosby and Narborough, co. Leicester, 5 miles S.W. of Leicester. It is situated near the river Soar.

LITTLETON, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Buddlesgate, co. Hants, 3 miles N.W. of Winchester, its post town and nearest railway station, on the London and South-Western line. The village is small and wholly agricultural. Here large numbers of race-horses are trained—the stables for which are on an extensive scale. The impropriate tithes, belonging to the Dean and Chapter of Winchester, have been commuted for a rent-charge of £703. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £76, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church is dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene.

LITTLETON, a tythg. and chplry. in the par. of Steeple-Ashton, hund. of Whorwelsdown, co. Wilts, 2 miles S.E. of Melksham, and 3 N.E. of Trowbridge. The Avon and Kennet canal passes through the tything. The hamlet consists of a few farmhouses.

LITTLETON, a tnshp. in the par. of Christleton, lower div. of Broxton hund., co. palatine of Chester, 2 miles E. of Chester. The Crewe railway passes through the township. Littleton Hall is a handsome seat.

LITTLETON, a par. in the hund. of Spelthorne, co. Middlesex, 3 miles S.E. of Staines, and 2 N.E. of Chertsey, its post town. It is situated on the N. bank of the Thames, within a short distance of Chertsey Bridge. The surface is flat, and the lands bordering on the river are subject to partial inundation. The land is divided between arable and pasture, a considerable portion of which has only recently been enclosed. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of London, val. £320, chiefly arising from land. The church, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene, is an ancient structure. It contains a brass of the 16th century, and several monuments. The parochial charities produce about £21 per annum, nearly half of which is the endowment of Harwood's school. Littleton Manor House, which once belonged to Cardinal Wolsey, is the residence of General Wood, who is lord of the manor and owner of the parish.

LITTLETON, a hmlt. in the par. of Compton Dundon, co. Somerset, 2 miles N. of Somerton.

LITTLETON, a tythg. in the par. of Dundry, co. Somerset, 5 miles S.W. of Bristol. It is situated under Dundry Beacon, which is about 700 feet above the sea-level, and commands a view of the Malvern, Welsh, and Quantock hills.

LITTLETON, a hmlt. in the borough of Guildford, hund. of First Woking, co. Surrey, 2 miles S.W. of Guildford. It is situated under the chalk downs called the Hog's Back.

LITTLETON, a vil. in the par. of Twomileborris, bar. of Eliogarty, co. Tipperary, Ireland, 10 miles N.E. of Cashel.

LITTLETON DREW, or ST. ANDREW, a par. in the hund. of Chippenham, co. Wilts, 8 miles S.W. of Malmesbury, and 8 N.W. of Chippenham, its post town, and nearest railway station on the Great Western line. It is situated on the line of the ancient highway Ackman Street. The village is small and wholly agricultural. The soil is a cold clay. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £120. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £141, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is a very old edifice dedicated to All Saints. Traces of ancient burial-places exist, also the remains of a cromlech. The Duke of Beaufort is lord of the manor.

LITTLETON HIGH, a par. in the hund. of Chewton, co. Somerset, 8 miles S.W. of Bath, its post town, and 10 S.E. of Bristol. The par. includes the hmlt. of Hallatrow. A large proportion of the people are employed in the collieries. The village is considerable. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £199, and the vicarial for £13 6*s.* 8*d.* The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £120. The church of the Holy Trinity is an ancient stone edifice with a tower. It contains monuments of the Mogg and Hodge families dating back to the 15th century. The charities consist of Jones's bequest for the poor, producing about £16 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. The Wesleyans have a place of worship.

LITTLETON, a manor in the par. of Langton-Long-Blandford, co. Dorset, 1 mile S.E. of Blandford. It was once a separate parish, but is now the private demesne of W. Donaldson, Esq.

LITTLETON, NORTH, a par. in the hund. of Upper Blackenhurst, co. Worcester, 4 miles N.E. of Evesham, its post town and railway station on the West Midland line of railway. It is situated on the river Avon, and includes the tnshp. of Middle Littleton. This place formerly belonged to the Lyttletons, and is now the property of Earl Northwick. Ragstone is found. The tithes were commuted for land and corn rents under an Enclosure Act in 1811. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to that of South Littleton. The church, which is at Middle Littleton, is a stone structure in the early English style of architecture. The charities produce about £12 per annum. There is a National school. Near the village are remains of a churchyard cross and of an ancient barn, in which the tithes paid to Evesham Abbey were deposited.

LITTLETON-PANNELL, a tythg. in the par. of West Lavington, hund. of Potterne, co. Wilts, 5 miles S. of Devizes, and 1 mile W. of East Lavington. This place contains nearly 600 inhabitants, and was formerly a market town. Lord Radnor is lord of the manor.

LITTLETON, SOUTH, a par. in the hund. of Upper Blackenhurst, co. Worcester, 1 mile S.W. of North Littleton, and 4 miles N.E. of Evesham. It is the property of the Earl of Coventry. The village is small and wholly agricultural. The tithes were commuted for land and corn rents under an Act of Enclosure in 1811. The impropriation belongs to the Dean and Canons of Christchurch, Oxford. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. with that of Middle Littleton annexed, £258, in the patron. of Christchurch, Oxford. The church, dedicated to SS. Mary and Nicholas, is a stone edifice of the Gothic order, now in a decayed state. The charities amount to £16 annually. There is a National school.

LITTLETON ST. ANDREW. See LITTLETON DREW, co. Wilts.

LITTLETON-UPON-SEVERN, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Langley, co. Gloucester, 3 miles W. of Thornbury, and 10 N. of Bristol. Almondsbury is its post town. It is situated on the eastern bank of the river Severn. The village is small and wholly agricultural. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £52. The church, dedication unknown, is an ancient stone structure with a tower. There is a parochial school. R. C. Lippincott, Esq., is lord of the manor.

LITTLETON, WEST, a parochial chplry. in the par. of Tormarton, hund. of Lower Grumbald's Ash, co. Gloucester, 2 miles N.W. of Marshfield, and 9 N.E. of Bath. Bristol is its post town. It is a small agricultural place. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect. of Tormarton. The church of St. Mary, originally a small building and of ancient date, has recently undergone enlargement and repairs. It is an object of interest to the antiquarian. There is a parochial school for boys and girls. The Duke of Beaufort is lord of the manor.

LITTLE-TOWN, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Liversedge, par. of Birstall, West Riding co. York, 3 miles N.W. of Dewsbury, and 9 S.W. of Leeds. The inhabitants are employed in the manufacture of blankets, carpets, and woollen cloths.

LITTLEWINSOR, a tythg. in the par. of Broadwinsor, co. Dorset, 3 miles N.W. of Beaminster.

LITTLEWORTH, a hmlt. in the par. of Budbrooke, co. Warwick, 1 mile N.W. of Warwick. It is situated on the Birmingham canal.

LITTLEWORTH, a vil. in the co. of Lincoln, 4 miles N.E. of Market Deeping. It situated in the vicinity of Deeping Fen, and is a station on the Great Northern line of railway.

LITTLEWORTH, a hmlt. in the par. of Horsepath, co. Oxford, 4 miles S.E. of Oxford.

LITTLEWORTH, a hmlt. in the par. of Green's Norton, co. Northampton, 1 mile N.W. of Towcester.

LITTLEWORTH, a hmlt. in the par. of Stone, co. Bucks, 2 miles S.W. of Aylesbury.

LITTLEWORTH, a hmlt. in the par. of Wing, co. Bucks, 3 miles S.W. of Leighton Buzzard.

LITTLEWORTH, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Monk Bretton, and par. of Roystone, West Riding co. York, 2 miles N.E. of Barnsley. It is situated near the line of the North Midland railway.

LITTLEWORTH, an ext. par. place, in the middle div. of the hund. of Dudstone, co. Gloucester, 1 mile N. of Nailsworth, and 4 S. of Stroud. The Wesleyans have a chapel here. Mugmore House is the principal residence.

LITTLEWORTH, two hmlts. in the pars. of Minchinhampton, and St. Owen, co. Gloucester, 1 mile N.W. of the city of Gloucester, of which it is a suburb.

LITTLEWORTH, a hmlt. and ecclesiastical district, in the par. of Great Farringdon, hund. of Shrivenham, co. Berks, 1 mile N.E. of Farringdon, its post town, 12 miles W. of Abingdon, and 5 from the Farringdon Road station on the Great Western railway. Part of the land is in hop-grounds. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £75, in the patron. of the bishop. The church of the Holy Ascension is a modern structure. Oriel College, Oxford, gave £1,000 towards its endowment. There is a village school.

LITTLINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Armingford, co. Cambridge, 3 miles N.W. of Royston, its post town, and 3 N.E. of the Ashwell railway station. The village, which is small, is situated between the ancient Icknield Street and the Roman way to Cambridge. Many Roman cinerary urns and a tesselated pavement were found here in 1822, and were sent to Clare Hall library. The soil is a light white loam and gravel, on a substratum of chalk, and has been much improved by drainage. The great tithes, belonging to Clare Hall, Cambridge, have been commuted for a rent-charge of £550, and the vicarial for £225. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £141, in the patron. of Clare Hall, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Catherine, has a tower containing 5 bells. The church has several ancient tombs. The register dates from 1662. The parochial charities produce about £17 per annum. There is a newly erected National school: also places of worship for the Independents and Primitive Methodists.

LITTLINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Longbridge, rape of Pevensey, co. Sussex, 3 miles N.E. of Seaford, and 9 S.E. of Lewes, its post town. The river Cuckmere bounds the parish on the W., separating it from the parish of Alfriston. The village is small and chiefly agricultural. The surface is undulating and adorned with thriving plantations. The principal residence is Clapham House. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £100. The church, dedication unknown, is a small ancient structure with a small spire springing from the western gable. It contains some ancient stalls and a piscina.

LITTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Arncliffe, western div. of the wap. of Staincliffe, West Riding co. York, 6 miles N.W. of Kilnsey, and 9 N.E. of Settle. It is situated in the valley of Litton-Dale, on the banks of the river Wharfe. The village stands on the Skirfare rivulet, one of the feeders of the Wharfe. There are a few charities belonging to the township. The Hon. Mrs. Ramsden is lady of the manor.

LITTON, a par. in the hund. of Wells Forum, co. Somerset, 6 miles N.E. of Wells, its post town, and 9 N.W. of Shepton Mallet. The hmlts. of Greendown and Sherborn are included in this par. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £160. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £250, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, or, according to others, to St. Peter, is a stone structure of the 15th century, with a square tower. The register commences in 1587. The parochial charities amount to about £13 per annum. General Lowth is lord of the manor.

LITTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Tideswell, hund. of High Peak, co. Derby, 1 mile S.E. of Tideswell, and 6 miles N.W. of Bakewell. It lies in the Dale of Litton Frith, near Monsal Dale. There are lead mines, in which some of the people are employed, but the neighbourhood is chiefly agricultural. Many of the females are engaged in stocking knitting. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have places of worship. There are a few small charities. This was the birthplace in 1628 of William Bagshaw, the celebrated Nonconformist divine called the "Apostle of the Peak."

LITTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Presteign, hund. and co. of Radnor, 3 miles N.W. of Presteign, and 7 N.E. of Radnor. It is situated near the river Lug, and is joined with Cascob.

LITTON CHENEY, a par. in the hund. of Uggscombe, Dorchester div. of co. Dorset, 6 miles S.E. of Bridport, and 10 W. of Dorchester, its post town. This place was formerly a market town. The par. includes the hmlts. of Ashby, Higher Egerton, Nether Coombe, and Stancombe. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £800. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient stone structure, with a tower surmounted by battlements and pinnacles. It contains an antique font, a monument of the Dawberry family, and several brasses. The register commences in 1624. The parochial charities produce about £32 per annum, £25 of which is the endowment of Thornhill's free school. In 1771 Thomas Hollis gave two acres of land and a house for the schoolmaster's residence.

LIVERMERE MAGNA, a par. in the hund. of Thedwestry, co. Suffolk, 5 miles N.E. of Bury St. Edmund's, its post town, and railway station on the Great Eastern line. It is a small agricultural place. The surface is generally level and the soil fertile though light. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. with that of Little Livermere annexed, £443. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a small edifice with a thatched roof. The charities, amounting to nearly £40 per annum, are derived from land, and applied to the relief of widows. Livermere Hall, is the principal residence. Sir W. F. F. Middleton, Bart., is lord of the manor.

LIVERMERE PARVA, a par. in the hund. of Blackbourn, co. Suffolk, 1 mile N.W. of Livermere Magna, and 6 miles N.E. of Bury St. Edmund's. The village is small and wholly agricultural. The living is a discharged rect. annexed to that of Livermere Magna. The church is a structure of brick dedicated to St. Peter. There are small charities of about £1 per annum. Sir W. F. F. Middleton is lord of the manor.

LIVERPOOL, a par., seaport, market town, municipal and parliamentary borough, having separate jurisdiction, but locally in the hund. of West Derby, southern div. of the co. palatine of Lancaster. It stands on the right bank near the mouth of the river Mersey, in lat. 53° 23′ N., and long. 2° 59′ 30″ W., 32 miles W. by S. of Manchester, 49 S. by W. of Lancaster, and 210 from London by rail, or 206 by road. The name of this town was anciently Lyrpoole, or Litherpoole, and is probably a corruption of the Welsh Llerpwll, "the place on the pool," though the popular idea is that the first part of the word is the name of the bird which is still seen on the arms of the town, and which, it is said, was once abundant on the pool which formerly covered the neighbourhood of Whitechapel and Church-street. The town originated in a castle built on the spot by Roger of Poictiers, to whom William I. granted the country between the Ribble and the Mersey. This building was enlarged by King John, subsequently dismantled by order of parliament in 1659, and, after being rented by the town for some years, was finally destroyed in 1715. St. George's church now stands on its site. The town first began to be used as a port after the conquest of Ireland in 1172. In the following year Henry II. granted the first charter, which was confirmed by John in 1207; and in 1227 Henry III. constituted the town a free borough for ever. Its progress, however, was small; for in 1272 it only consisted of 168 houses, and during the following centuries it decreased both in size and prosperity, till, in 1561, the number of houses was reduced to 138, and the merchants of the town only owned twelve ships. The town contributed one ship only to serve in the French wars of Edward III. During the reign of that king the Stanleys, who owned land in the neighbourhood, built a tower, where Water-street now ends, for the defence of the town. This was used as a residence for a considerable period, then as an assembly room, and finally as a gaol till 1819, when it was pulled down to make room for new buildings. In 1361 and 1548 Liverpool was visited by plagues. The present series of docks was commenced in the reign of Elizabeth, by the formation of a mole to protect the shipping during the winter, and a quay for loading and unloading their cargoes; but for long the commerce of the town was of very inferior importance, as is shown by the amount of ship-money levied by Charles I. here, which was £25, while Bristol was rated at £1,000. During the commencement of the Civil War, Liverpool was in the hands of the parliamentary party, but was taken by Prince Rupert in 1644. It was soon, however, recovered by the opposite army. A considerable portion of the town was burnt during the sieges, and the corporation petitioned parliament in 1645 for compensation; when the ferry-boats were granted to them, with a sum of £10,000 to indemnify the inhabitants for their losses, and 500 tons of timber for repairs, from the parks of the Earl of Derby, Lord Molyneux, Sir William Norris, Robert Blundell, Robert Molyneux, Charles Gerard, and Edward Scaresbrick. The fortifications were destroyed about the same time. Towards the end of the 17th century the inhabited portion consisted of Castle-street, and a few other streets on the N. and N.E.; but during William III.'s reign the population increased so rapidly that it was found necessary to constitute Liverpool a distinct parish from Walton.—In 1709 the first wet dock was constructed on the old pool, but was filled up in 1831, and the custom-house and post-office now stand on its site. At present the docks cover 203 acres, and possess 15 miles of quay. They consist of wet docks, which are filled with water permanently, and are used for the discharging of the cargoes from foreign merchantmen; dry docks, which are affected by the ebb and flow of the tide, and are made use of chiefly by coasting vessels; and graving docks, for the repair of vessels. The names and sizes of the principal ones are as follows, commencing from the N.:—The Canada dock, about 400 yards by 180; the Huskisson, about 1,600 feet by 400, in front of which stands a small fort; the Sandon, 930 feet by 450, with six graving docks 500 feet in length, and a basin connecting it with the river; the Wellington, 800 feet by 400, and the Wellington half-tide, 800 by 400; the Bramley Moore, 1,050 feet by 400; the Nelson, 870 feet by 400; the Salisbury, 300 feet by 500; the Collingwood, 1,500 feet by 480; the Stanley, 340 feet by 80. These three form a chain of basins, and are connected with the Leeds canal. The North Graving docks and basin are about 600 feet long; the Clarence dock and basin, built in 1830, 250 yards by 135, is appropriated to the steam vessels serving between Liverpool and other ports of Great Britain; the Trafalgar, Victoria, and Waterloo, opened 1836. Their united area is 30,674 square yards. Prince's basin and Prince's dock, opened on the day on which George IV. was crowned, 19th July, 1821, 500 yards by 106. There is an entrance to this dock at each end—that on the N. leading into the basin, that on the S. into George's basin. Sheds for the stowage of merchandise extend along the dock, and there is a dwelling-house at each end for the masters of this dock and George's, respectively. The basin contains a "gridiron," a contrivance for lifting ships requiring repair so that the keel and adjacent parts may be inspected. George's dock and basin, 246 yards by 100, was built in 1767, and enlarged in 1825. A range of warehouses run along the E. side, and the W. side forms an extensive parade, and contains the public baths. The seamen's church is moored in this dock. A landing-stage projects from the parade, whence steamers start continually for Birkenhead, New Brighton, Seacombe, Eastham, and other places on the

Mersey. The Manchester dock is a small irregularly-shaped basin, where flats from Manchester load and unload. The Canning dock, 500 yards in length, was originally a dry dock, but has been lately converted into a wet one. It was built in 1738, and is chiefly used by vessels from the N. coast. Two graving docks and a half-tide dock are connected with it. The Salthouse dock was opened in 1753. The place where it stands was originally occupied by saltworks, from which it has taken its name. Its size is 720 feet by 290. Ships are laid up in the upper end, and the remainder is used by vessels employed in the Levant, Irish, and coasting trades. The Albert dock, between the Salthouse and the river, was opened by Prince Albert in 1846. Its size is 700 feet by 400, and it is surrounded by fireproof warehouses. The Duke's dock is a small dock built by the late Duke of Bridgewater for the use of canal boats. Wapping Dock is about 270 yards by 50, and is connected with a basin. Below this is the King's dock, 270 yards by 95, opened in 1788. It is adjacent to the Queen's Tobacco Warehouse, and is the only place where ships laden with tobacco are allowed to unload. A floating chapel for seamen is moored in the N.W. corner. The Queen's dock, 445 yards by 100, was opened in 1796, and is used by timber ships, and Dutch, Baltic, and West India merchants. It communicates on the N. with the Queen's basin, to which are attached two graving docks, and at the S. with the Union and Coburg docks. Near the graving docks there are large ship-building yards. Adjoining the Union is the Brunswick dock, 430 yards by 140, opened in 1832, and used exclusively for the timber trade. A half-tide dock connects it with the river, and there are two graving docks and a ship-building yard at the southern end. Near this is the Toxteth dock, about 200 yards in length, and higher up the river the Harrington and Egerton, both about the same size as the Toxteth. They are used for rafting timber from the Baltic and from America. A dock master is appointed to superintend each dock, with a body of dock police under him, and there are two harbour masters who exercise a general supervision over the shipping. The affairs of the harbour are managed by a committee of 21 persons, called the Mersey Docks and Harbour Board, who meet weekly, or oftener if requisite. It consists of 13 trustees, elected by the common council, and 8 ratepayers, resident in Liverpool, elected by the merchants and shipowners. In October, 1862, this board agreed to apply hydraulic power to the gates at the Wellington half-tide dock, the Huskisson locks, the Sandon dock entrance, and the outer storm gates at the two last-named docks, and also to provide two hydraulic capstans on the pier heads of Sandon basin, at an estimated cost of £9,205. It was found that great advantage would result to the working of the trade of these docks by the application of hydraulic power; that the gates by this means could be opened or closed in three minutes, whereas by the old system half an hour was occupied in the performance of this operation; and that after hydraulic power was applied to the gates they could be kept open for the admission of shipping for twenty minutes longer than at present. —The harbour, as defined by a royal commission, 8th November, 1723, extends "from the Redstones in Hoylake, at the point of Wirral, southerly, to the foot of the river called Ribble water, in a direct line northerly, and so upon the S. side of the river to Hesketh bank easterly, and to the rivers Astland and Douglas there, and so all along the sea-coasts of Meols and Formby, unto the river Mersey, and all over the rivers Mersey, Irwell, and Weaver." The entrance to the harbour is much obstructed by shifting sandbanks, which are marked out by buoys and lightships. There are also lighthouses on Formby point, and at Crosby, on the Lancashire coast, at Bidstone and Leasowe in Cheshire, and one called the Rock lighthouse at the entrance to the river, also on the Cheshire side. The number and size of the docks enumerated above will give some idea of the extent of the commerce carried on at Liverpool. The trade with America, in cotton, tobacco, and sugar, is the chief staple of the port, but there is a very large trade with all parts of the world for every article of merchandise. The value of the exports is about one-half that of the exports of the United Kingdom, and the amount of cotton imported is greater than that imported at all the other ports. The manufactures are principally connected with shipping, but there are in addition extensive sugar refineries, tobacco and soap manufactories, potteries, glass-staining works, iron and brass foundries, and mills for grinding corn, colours, and dyers' wood. Chronometers and watches are also made in great numbers both at Liverpool and Prescot. The streets of Liverpool are mostly broad and well paved; and in the centre of the town, as Dale-street, Lord-street, Castle-street, Church-street, and Bold-street, the building and decorations of the shops are equal to the best streets of the metropolis. The district nearer the river is occupied by extensive warehouses and offices. The neighbourhood of Prince's Park, as well as Everton, Wavertree, and Aigburth, and the more remote suburbs, abound with country houses. The town is well supplied with cabs and omnibuses, and the road which runs along the side of the docks is provided with a tramway for the use of omnibuses.—Liverpool possesses some very handsome public buildings. St. George's Hall, in Lime-street, is unequalled in England. It contains a large hall used for concerts, public meetings, balls, &c., a smaller concert room, two rooms used for the crown and assize courts, and numerous offices and other apartments. The size of the whole building is 500 feet in length by 175 in breadth, and 112 in height. The form is rectangular, and the style adopted is the Corinthian. The S. façade, facing St. John's-lane, is a portico consisting of twelve columns, 45 feet in height by 4½ in diameter, in two rows of eight and four. These are surmounted by a pediment containing a group of symbolical colossal figures, designed by Cockerell, and executed by W. G. Nicholls. On the entablature below the following inscription is chiselled: —"Artibus Legibus Consiliis locum Municipes constituerunt. Anno Domini MDCCCXII." A flight of stone steps leads up to the portico. The eastern façade, facing the Lime-street railway station, is 420 feet in length. A row of pilasters is carried along the entire front, while a projecting colonnade of 17 columns occupies the central space of 200 feet. The N. front projects in the form of a semicircle, containing the concert room already mentioned. This room measures 86 feet by 70, and is 42 feet high. The stage will accommodate sixty performers, and there is space in the room for an audience of 1,200. The panels of the wall are painted to imitate rich wood, and are divided by gilding. Mirrors also form an important part of the decoration. The great hall is 169 feet by 74, and 84 in height. The vault of the roof is decorated in panels, and intersected at the sides by lateral arches, supported by columns of porphyry 31½ feet in height and 3 feet in diameter, the spaces between which will be occupied by statues. The floor is composed of tiles, designed for the hall, consisting chiefly of local devices, and is raised a few inches for a considerable width round the edge of the room; but when the hall is used for dancing the centre thus sunk is brought to the same level as the circumference by covering it with a boarded floor. The largest organ in England stands in a gallery at the N. end. This instrument was built by Willis of London, under the superintendence of Dr. Wesley, organist at Winchester Cathedral. A steam engine of six horse-power works the bellows. The ventilation of the hall is very perfect, and is carried out by means of perforations in the floor, connected with a system of pipes 7 miles in length, through which either hot or cold air can be introduced. The crown and nisi prius courts are fine rooms, measuring 55 feet by 50, and 45 in height. The fittings and wainscot are of oak. The foundation stone of the hall was laid on the 28th of June, 1838, and the public opening took place on September 18, 1854. The townhall, situated at the junction of Dale-street, Castle-street, and Water-street, was built in 1749, but partially destroyed by fire in 1795, when it was rebuilt, at a total cost of £110,000. It is built in the Grecian style, and is surmounted by a dome 106 feet in height. The tablets between the capitals of the columns are decorated with bas-reliefs, but the pediment of the portico is plain. The interior arrangements are as follows:—The ground floor is occupied by committee rooms, rooms for magistrates and juries, for the general sessions, rotation office, and the offices for the town surveyor, treasurer, &c. The grand staircase, which is lighted by the dome, leads to a suite of apartments used by the mayor for receptions, balls, &c., and which consist of a saloon, 30 feet by 26; a drawing-room, 33 feet by 26; two ball-rooms, one 90 feet by 42, the other 66 feet by 30; a card-room, 33 feet by 26; a tea-room, 33 feet by 22; and a refreshment-room, 50 feet by 30. The decorations are in Scagliola marble, and the ceilings are richly panelled. The saloon contains the portraits of George III., by Lawrence, George IV., by Hoppner, and the Duke of Clarence. On the first landing of the staircase there is a statue of Canning, by Chantrey, and a colossal figure of Britannia crowns the dome. The custom-house, which includes offices for the postal service, the excise, and the docks, is situated in Canning-place, on the site of the old dock. The site, worth £90,000, was given by the corporation, who erected the present buildings at a total cost of £300,000. An arrangement was made to hand over the buildings to government in twenty years, on payment of the sum of £150,000 by annual instalments of £25,000. The ground plan is in the shape of the letter I, the E. end being occupied by the post-office, the W. by the custom-house, while the centre is occupied by the offices for the collection of other branches of the revenue. The "long room," which occupies the centre of the building, is 146 feet in length by 70 in width, and 45 in height. The style of architecture is the Ionic. A dome stands in the centre. The total size of the building is 467 feet by 95. The foundation stone was laid in 1828. The exchange buildings were erected in 1803, and form three sides of a square, which is completed by the N. side of the town-hall. The quadrangular area thus enclosed is 197 feet by 178, and is used by merchants as an exchange. A bronze statue of Nelson, by Westmacott, stands in the centre. The E. wing contains a newsroom, 95 feet by 51, where telegrams relating to shipping are exhibited. Above this is the underwriters' room. The N. and W. sides are occupied by countinghouses and warehouses, and by the offices of the Liverpool and American Chambers of Commerce. The corn exchange is a plain Grecian building in Brunswick-street similar to that in Mark-lane. Its size is 116 feet by 60. Other public buildings are—the county court, Ranelagh-street; the sessions-house, Rumford-street; the police court, Hatton-garden; the parish offices, Brownlow-hill; the bankruptcy court, South John-street; and the prison at Kirkdale. There is an astronomical observatory on the Marine-parade, where chronometers are rated. In addition to the statutes already mentioned, there is one by Westmacott of George III. in the London-road, and a monument to Huskisson in St. James's cemetery. Water and gas are supplied to the town by several companies. The former is brought from a lake called Rivington Pike, a distance of several miles.—According to the provisions of the Municipal Corporation Act, Liverpool consists of 16 wards, the names of which are as follows:—Scotland, Vauxhall, St. Paul's, Exchange, Castle-street, St. Peter's, Pitt-street, Great George's, Rodney, Abercromby, Lime-street, St. Anne's, Everton, West Derby, and North and South Toxteth. The last four are new wards, beyond the parish, included by the boundary commissioners in 1835. The borough has returned two members to the House of Commons since the reign of Edward I. The corporation consists of a mayor, 16 aldermen, and 48 town councillors, elected by the above wards. The mayor is by virtue of his office justice of the peace during his term of office and the succeeding year. The recorder, appointed by the crown, acts as judge at the general quarter sessions for the borough. There are also a stipendiary magistrate, who attends daily at the police court, a town clerk, coroner and other officers. The corporation regulates the lighting and cleansing of the town, the police, hackney coachmen, &c. Their income is about £370,000. The police force was formerly divided into 16 districts, each with its captain, but since the Municipal Act the whole force has been united, and is under the control of the watch committee, which consists of a body of aldermen. The fire brigade is noted for its efficiency. The total annual cost of the whole body, including the fire and dock police, is £40,000. Liverpool possesses a court of record, called the "Court of Passage," for civil cases. This was established by prescription, but has been regulated by several Acts in the present and the last reigns. The officers are as follows:—The assistant barrister, who acts as assessor, with a salary of £500; a chairman; a registrar, with £2,000, as town clerk, clerk of the peace, and parliamentary solicitor; a sergeant-at-mace, £350; with a clerk, a crier, a water bailiff, who is also harbour master to the port, a deputy water bailiff, and two sub-bailiffs. The water bailiff has no salary, and the inferior officers receive from £20 to £25. The mayor acts as judge, but the assistant barrister holds the courts for trial of issues and hearing motions for new trials and special arguments. The registrar transacts other business. The court has jurisdiction in all personal actions and in some actions of ejectment between landlord and tenant, and it extends over the borough, and the Mersey from Warrington and Frodsham bridges to a certain distance at sea beyond the mouth of the river. The proceedings are in the same form as those in the superior courts at Westminster. The Court of Requests has jurisdiction over the whole borough in actions of debt not exceeding £5. It was established in the year 2 George II. The officers are—the assistant barrister, with a salary of £700; two clerks, £700 each; a treasurer, £200; two assistant clerks, a summons clerk, two execution, two assistant, and four summons officers. The recorder, the stipendiary magistrate, the assessor of the Court of Passage, and the town clerk, are also commissioners, but only act in the absence of the assistant barrister. Petty sessions are held daily by the borough magistrates, and quarter sessions are also held. The justices number 30, 15 being members of the council. The assizes for West Derby hundred now meet at Liverpool instead of at Lancaster as formerly. The population of the borough in 1851 was 375,955, and in 1861, 443,938. The 2nd Royal Lancashire militia have their headquarters here. Liverpool gives the title of earl to the family of the Jenkinsons, whose peerage dates from the year 1796.—Before the dissolution of the monasteries Liverpool was a chapelry to Walton, comprising four chantries; but in 1699 the town and borough were constituted a distinct parish, the living to be a rectory in two medieties, in the diocese and archdeaconry of Chester, and the patronage to be vested in the mayor and corporation. The old chapel-of-ease, dedicated to St. Nicholas, was then constituted the parish church, and another church, dedicated to St. Peter, was built in what is now Church-street—it was commenced in 1699, and consecrated in 1704. The annual value of each of these churches is £615. St. Nicholas was first built in 1361, and rebuilt 1774, in the Gothic style. The tower and spire fell on the 11th February, 1810, during the ringing of the bells, killing twenty-eight persons, and destroying the organ, the western gallery, and much of the pewing in the body of the church. The present tower is about 40 yards in height, and supports an open lantern of 20 yards, which was subsequently added. The following perpet. curs. were in the patron. of the corporation previous to 1835:—St. George's, val. £250, built in 1732 on the site of the castle, and subsequently rebuilt by Foster—this church is used by the corporation; St. Thomas's, in Park-lane, val. £138, in the patron. of trustees, built 1750, with a steeple 80 yards high; St. Paul's, near the Exchange railway station, two curs., val. £220 and £180—the church was built in 1769; St. Anne's, at the end of St. Anne-street, val. £99; St. John's, behind St. George's Hall, val. £270; St. Michael's, Cornwallis-street, two curs., val. £250 each—this church has a steeple 201 feet high, and cost £45,267; St. Luke's, at the top of Bold-street, two curs., val. £254 each—the church was built in 1811 by Foster, and is the handsomest in the town; St. Martin's, Great Oxford-street, Vauxhall-road, val. £530, built in 1828 by Foster, with a spire of 198 feet; Trinity, St. Anne-street, val. £270, built in 1792; St. Andrew, Renshaw-street, built by Sir J. Gladstone, Bart., in 1815, val. £295; St. Bridget's, Catharine-street, val. £305, in the patron. of trustees; St. Catharine's, Abercrombie-square, built by Foster, val. £250; Christ Church, Hunter-street, built by gift of Mr. Houghton, val. £105, in the patron. of trustees; St. David's, Brownlow Hill, val. £203, in the patron. of trustees; St. Mark's, Upper Duke-street, val. £350, in the patron. of trustees; St. Matthew's, Hill-street, val. £107, in the patron. of trustees; St. Stephen's, Old Haymarket, val. £300, in the patron. of the rector; St. Philip's, Hardman-street, built in 1822 by J. Cragg, Esq., two curs., val. £200 each. Other churches are:—St. Barnabas, Parliament-street, St. Silas, Pembroke-place, St. Bartholomew, Naylor-street, curs., in the patron. of trustees; St. Matthias, Great Howard-street, a cur., val. £300, in the patron. of the rector; St. Simon, near Copperas Hill, a cur., val. £150, All Saints, Great Nelson-street North, a cur., val. £130, both in the patron. of the crown and bishop. Also All Souls, Eaton-street, Vauxhall-road; St. Aidan's, Victoria-road, Kirkdale; St. Alban's, Limekiln-lane; St. Augustine's, Shaw-street, Everton; Christ Church, Great Homer-street; St. Chrysostom, Audley-street, Everton; St. Clement's, Stanhope-street, Toxteth Park; St. George's, Everton; Holy Innocents', Myrtle-street South; Holy Trinity, Walton Breck; St. James's, Parliament-street; St. John the Baptist, Park-road, Toxteth Park; St. Jude's, Everton; St. Mark's district, Leveson-street; St. Mary's, Edgehill; St. Mary's, Kirkdale; St. Mary's, for the blind, Hope-street; St. Matthew's, Scotland-road; North Shore Chapel, Derby-road; St. Paul's, Prince's Park; St. Peter's, Johnson-street, Everton; St. Saviour's, Huskisson-street; St. Stephen Martyr's, Crown-street; and St. Thomas-in-the-Fields, Grafton-street. There is also a church for mariners, a cur. in the patron. of trustees, held in the Tees man-of-war, in George's Dock. There are 14 Roman Catholic chapels, the principal ones being—St. Anne's, Edgehill; St. Anthony's, Scotland-road; St. Francis Xavier's, Salisbury-street; St. Nicholas's, Copperas Hill, and St. Patrick's, Park-place. There are 8 Independent chapels, the principal one being in Great George-street. It was built in 1811, and rebuilt in a more commodious and handsome style for Dr. Raffles in 1841. There are Baptist chapels in Myrtle-street and Pembroke-place, and 7 others of less size. The Presbyterians have 9 places of worship—in Oldham-street, Rodney-street, Myrtle-street, and elsewhere. The Unitarians have 3—in Hope-street, Renshaw-street, and Toxteth Park-road. The Wesleyan Methodists have 20 places of worship—in Moss-street, Mount Pleasant, Pitt-street, Grove-street, &c.; the Primitive Methodists 3, in Maguire-street, Prince William-street, and Walnut-street. There are 14 Welsh chapels, belonging to the Baptists, Independents, and Methodists. The chapels of the first-named sect are situated in Athol-street, Great Crosshall-street, Great Howard-street, and Stanhope-street; those of the Independents in Bedford-street and Great Crosshall-street; and the Methodist places in Bedford-street, Burlington-street, and elsewhere. There is a German church in Sir Thomas's Buildings, Dale-street; Jewish synagogues in Seel-street and Hope-place; a Friends' meeting-house in Hunter-street; and a few other miscellaneous places of worship. More than half of the population of the town are said to belong to the Roman Catholic and other Dissenting bodies.—Liverpool possesses the following educational institutions:—The Collegiate Institution, in Shaw-street, a building in the Tudor style, from the designs of Lonsdale Elmes, the architect of St. George's Hall. The front, including the wings, measures 280 feet. The porch in the centre is beneath a lofty arch, and above it rise oriel windows, which are continued through two stories. The statues of Lord Derby and the late Earl of Ellesmere stand in niches on each side. The building contains 48 school-rooms, a museum, library, picture and sculpture gallery, 218 feet in length, a laboratory, an octagonal lecture-hall, which will hold 2,300 persons, and a music-room, opening from the lecturer's platform, fitted with rising seats for 300 performers, and containing a fine organ. The first stone was laid in 1840, and the college was opened in January, 1843. Three distinct day-schools for the upper, middle, and lower classes are held here, as well as evening classes for adults. The Historical Society of Lancashire and Cheshire meets in the lecture-room. The Bishop of Chester is the visitor. The Queen's College, in Mount-street, is under the control of the Council of the Liverpool Institute, and was founded in connection with the University of London. The deaf and dumb school, in Oxford-street East, was founded in Wood-street, near Slater-street, in 1825, to give gratuitous instruction to the poor thus afflicted; but there are many pupils who pay for their education. The blind school was founded in 1791, at the corner of Duncan-street, in the London-road; but within the last few years has been transferred to Hardman-street. It has room for over 100 pupils, who are taught spinning and the manufacture of baskets, floor-cloth, mats, hearthrugs, sash-line, and other goods, which bring in nearly £2,000 annually to the institution. Music also is taught, and several pupils have been trained for and obtained situations as organists. The chapel of the school was built by Foster, and contains a painting by Hilton of "Christ giving Sight to the Blind." The blue-coat school, in School-lane and Hanover-street, was founded in 1709 as a charity day-school for the education of 40 boys and 10 girls; but in 1726 the present school was built, with sufficient room for the boarding of 250 boys and 150 girls. With a few exceptions the children are fatherless. They are received at nine years of age, and on leaving the school are either apprenticed to some trade or placed out at service. The school is open to inspection by strangers on Sunday afternoons. There is also an orphan school in Myrtle-street, for children of both sexes, founded by the late Mr. Harmood Banner. Among other schools may be mentioned the two corporation free schools, founded in 1827; two Church free schools, founded in 1837; two Old Church schools, founded in 1789; Waterworth's school, in Hunter-street; the Welsh school, founded in 1804; and an industrial school at Kirkdale. Besides these most of the churches and chapels have Sunday-schools, and many have day-schools in connection with them. The Royal Institution, in Colquitt-street, was set on foot by Roscoe in 1814, and incorporated by royal charter in 1822. It is conducted by a president and committee elected annually. The building contains a laboratory, lecture-rooms, class-rooms for classical, commercial, and medical schools, and a museum celebrated for its collection of British birds, to which visitors are admitted daily for 1*s.* each. The Academy of Design, the Literary and Philosophic, Natural History, Philomathic, and Polytechnic Societies hold their meetings in the lecture-rooms. The Mechanics' Institute was founded in 1825; and ten years after Lord Brougham laid the foundation-stone of a new building—which, however, was burnt soon after its completion. It was quickly rebuilt in the Ionic style, covering about an acre of land, presented by the corporation. It contains a lecture-room, holding 1,500 persons, a sculpture-gallery, a museum, a library of 6,000 volumes, which are lent out to read, and school-rooms for the "lower day," or commercial school, and the "high school," where a good classical education is given. Evening classes in almost every subject for both sexes are also held in the institute. The Medical Institution, at the corner of Hope-street and Oxford-street South, was built by subscription, the corporation contributing £1,000. It contains a lecture-room in the shape of a fan, capable of holding about 400 persons, and a library of medical works. There is also a medical school in Dover-street. Other educational Institutions are:—the Church of England Institute, in Bold-street; The Jewish, in Hope-street; the Tuckerman Institute, in Bedford-street; and the Roman Catholic, in Hope-street. St. Edward's College, near the St. Domingo-road, Everton, also belongs to that sect. The Athenæum, in Church-street, was opened in 1799, and was the first institution of the kind in the country. It contains a library of 14,000 volumes, many of them very rare and curious. Among them is a copy of the treatise by Henry VIII. against Luther. There is also a club room supplied with newspapers and periodicals; the subscription is two guineas and a half. The Lyceum, in Bold-street, contains a spacious room, supplied with newspapers, magazines, maps, &c., and a library, a large circular room, with a collection of 39,000 volumes. The subscription to this institution is one guinea. There is also a law library in South John-street, and numerous circulating libraries, the principal one being the free library built by Sir William Brown, M.P., in 1857. This was commenced in 1851, in connection with the zoological collection which the Earl of Derby left to the town on condition of its being kept as a free museum. Sir W. Brown first offered to contribute very largely to the building of a suitable edifice, and finally undertook the whole expense, which was about £30,000. The books may be either consulted at the library or taken home to read. The building is in Shaw's Brow, near St. George's Hall. There is a gallery of art in Slater-street, containing some pictures by ancient masters, a statue of Roscoe by Chantrey, and a good collection of casts from celebrated statues. Periodical exhibitions of paintings are held at the Academy, in Church-street. There is a museum of antiquities in Colquitt-street. The theatres and other places of amusement are as follows:—The Theatre Royal, Williamson-square; the Adelphi, Christian-street, formerly used for equestrian performances; the Royal Amphitheatre, Great Charlotte-street, principally for equestrianism, but also employed for public meetings; the Park Theatre, in Parliament-street. The Philharmonic Hall, in Hope-street, is the handsomest concert room in the town, and will accommodate 300 performers and 2,000 auditors. The Wellington Rooms, Gill-street, Mount Pleasant, consist of a ball room, card room, and supper room: they were built in 1815. The Concert Hall, Lord Nelson Street, is used for public meetings and entertainments for the working classes, which are managed by a committee of gentlemen. The Rotunda, Bold-street, was built for the exhibition of panoramas, but is now converted into a billiard-room. Other such rooms are the Brunswick Hall, Mill-street; the Clarendon Rooms, Lord-street; the Freemasons' Hall, St. John's-lane; Hope Hall, Hope-street; Odd-Fellows' Hall, St. Anne-street; Queen's Hall, Bold-street; Royal Assembly Rooms, Great George-street; the Teutonic Hall, Lime-street; and Toxteth Hall, Mill-street. There is a botanic garden in Edge-lane, occupying about 11 acres, and containing a conservatory 240 feet long. The zoological gardens, in the West Derby-road are tastefully laid out, and there is a good collection of animals. There is also a music hall on the grounds, and fire-works, &c., are frequently exhibited. Prince's Park is situated at the end of Prince's-road. Part of it is enclosed as a garden, admission to which is restricted, but the remainder is public. There is a race-course at Aintree, about 6 miles to the N.E. of the town, where races are held in July.—Liverpool is well supplied with hospitals and other charities. The Royal Infirmary in Brownlow-street is an Ionic building three stories in height. The cost of building was £27,800, and the annual expenditure is more than £5,000. The two upper stories are fitted up for patients, and contain 234 beds. The charity is managed by a committee of twenty-six gentlemen. The Northern Hospital in Great Howard-street was built by Mr. Welch in the Tudor style. It is not of great size, but is one of the best arranged in the kingdom. At the Southern and Toxteth Hospital, in Parliament-street, medicines are dispensed to the poor, as well as in-patients received. The Lock Hospital, in Ashton-street, was opened in 1834, and has room for 60 patients. In addition to these, there is a fever hospital at Mount Pleasant; a general hospital in the West Derby-road; two medical dispensaries for the poor, for the N. and S. portions of the town, in Vauxhall-road and Great George-street; a lying-in-hospital in Pembroke-place; an eye and ear infirmary in Mount Pleasant; a night asylum for the houseless poor in Naylor-street; the Lancaster County Refuge for females liberated from the county prison; a female penitentiary in Falkner-street for reclaiming prostitutes; the children's infirmary in Great George-street; the Charitable Institution House in Slater-street; the almshouses in Cambridge-street, and the Liscensed Victuallers' Institution at Everton. The Lunatic Asylum on Brownlow Hill was built in 1830. It contains accommodation for sixty general patients, in addition to a few private patients for whom a payment is made. The Merchant Seamen's Hospital is an asylum for aged and decayed sailors from the town, and supports also their widows and children. Every seaman leaving the port is obliged, by Act of Parliament, to subscribe 6*d.* a month from his wages to this charity, which possesses also a fund of about £37,000 unclaimed prize money. The Sailors' Home in Canning-place was opened in 1850 for providing lodging for seamen on shore. It contains a chapel, library, savings-bank, and a nautical school, besides the dormitories, &c. There are also two Emigrants' Homes conducted on the same principle. The Roman Catholics have an orphanage in Mulberry-street, and a convent of sisters of mercy in Mount Vernon-street. The Liverpool parish workhouse is on Brownlow Hill, and the West Derby union workhouse in the Mill-road. There are numerous societies for dispensing charity, as the Welsh and Liverpool Charitable, the Humane, the Strangers' Friend, the District Provident, and other societies. The principal cemetery is St. James's Cemetery, Upper Duke-street, the site of which was originally a stone quarry. It was opened in 1829. Many of the monuments are handsome, particularly that of Mr. Huskisson. The Necropolis at Low Hill was opened in 1825. It covers about 5 acres. A cemetery was opened in 1856 in Smithdown-lane, Toxteth Park, and at Anfield Park is the Burial Board Cemetery for the Established Church, Protestant Dissenters, and Roman Catholics. The parochial cemetery is at Walton. The Roman Catholic burial-ground is at Ford, and the Jewish in Dean-street. The corporation built public baths on George's Pier in 1829, and since that time other baths and washhouses have been opened in Cornwallis-street and Paul-street.—Among the celebrated natives of Liverpool may be mentioned Jeremiah Horrox, the astronomer, who lived from 1619 to 1640. He discovered the transit of Venus over the disc of the sun, and a new theory of lunar motions. Roscoe, the author, 1752 to 1831, who lived at Mount Pleasant. A large portion of his library is now at the Athenæum. Mrs. Hemans, Stubbs, the animal painter, Leigh Richmond, Deare, the sculptor, Gregson, the antiquary, and Houlston, the physician, were also born here.—The following newspapers are published:—Daily Post, Journal, Liverpool Albion, Chronicle, Courier, General Advertiser, Mail, Mercantile Gazette, Mercury, Standard, and Times. The last mentioned paper was commenced in 1756.—Three railways enter Liverpool—the Liverpool and Manchester branch of the London and North-Western, the Lancashire and Yorkshire and East Lancashire, and the Garston and Warrington. The passenger station of the London and North-Western is in Lime-street, opposite St. George's Hall, and was built in 1837. From the Edgehill station the way passes under the town in a tunnel 2,230 yards in length, through which the train is drawn by fixed engines. The line was opened to London in 1848. There are two goods stations in connection with the same line—one at Wapping; the other, called the Waterloo Station, in Great Howard-street. The Lancashire and Yorkshire station is in Tithebarn-street, and is known as the Exchange station. The North Dock station, a goods station belonging to the same line, is in Great Howard-street. Passengers can also come to Liverpool by the Great Western railway, viâ Birkenhead, whence they are conveyed to Liverpool by ferry. The Leeds and Liverpool canal has one terminus here.—The following gentlemen's seats are in the vicinity:—Knowsley, the Earl of Derby; Croxteth Hall, Earl of Sefton, the lord-lieutenant of Lancashire; Childwall Hall, Marquis of Salisbury; Ince Blundell, the Blundell family; Speke Hall, R. Watt, Esq.; Hale Hall, J. Blackburne, Esq., and others.—The market days are Wednesday and Saturday, but the provision markets are open daily. The largest market in the town is St. John's, in Great Charlotte-street, which covers 8,235 square yards, being 183 yards by 45. It is divided by cast-iron pillars into five avenues, which are filled with stalls for the display of provisions of all kinds, while the sides are lined by shops. It was built in 1820 at a cost of £36,813, which was defrayed by the corporation. St. Martin's, in the Scotland-road, is a handsomer building than St. John's, but in size is less, being only 213 feet by 135. It also is divided into five avenues, and a portion is set apart for the sale of fish. St. James's, in Great George-street, is a brick building covering about £3,000 yards, and, like the other two, is a general market. The hay-market, where horses are also sold, is in Great Nelson-street North. The fish and oyster market is in Great Charlotte-street, and a pedlar's market for small wares in Elliot-street. The corn market is held in the corn exchange on Tuesdays or Fridays. There are also small markets in Cleveland-square, Pownall-square, near Tithebarn-street, and in Gill-street; in the last pigs are sold. Horse and cattle fairs are held on the 25th July and 11th November.

LIVERSEDGE, a tnshp. in the par. of Birstall, wap. of Morley, West Riding co. York, 5 miles N.W. of Dewsbury, and 11 W. of Leeds, its post town. It is a station on the Huddersfield and Bradford branch of the East Lancashire and Yorkshire line of railway. The place was anciently the property of the Neville family, lords of the manor, of whose ancient mansion, Liversedge Hall, there are some slight remains. In 1812 it was the scene of serious disturbances on account of the introduction of machinery, when the mill of William Cartwright was attacked by the mob, but was successfully defended by its spirited proprietor, and several persons lost their lives in the attempt. The township, which is not extensive, is studded with numerous villages and hamlets, built on the declivities of a valley watered by a stream flowing towards the S.E. through Heckmond Wike. It includes the hmlts. of High Town, Little Town, Robert Town, the Heights, and Millbridge. The last named village is situated on the road from Leeds to Huddersfield, with Little Town to the N.W., and both, like the other villages of this township, are inhabited by persons employed in the manufacture of carpets, cloths, machine cards, blankets, chemical and mechanical works, and other branches of industry. In the vicinity are extensive collieries. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £150, in the gift of the vicar of the parish. The church, styled Christ Church, was erected in 1816, at a cost of £7,000. There is also a district church at Robert Town. The Independents, Wesleyans, Primitive and Reformed Methodists, and New Connexion Wesleyans, have places of worship in the several hamlets. There are schools in each on the National system, and Sunday-schools in connection with the several denominations.

LIVERTON, a chplry. in the par. of Easington, E. div. of the lib. of Langbaurgh, North Riding of co. York, 2½ miles W. of Easington, and 6 E. of Guisborough. Redcar is its post town. The village is inconsiderable. The living is a cur. consolidated with the rect.* of Easington. The church is a small edifice, of ancient date, partly in the Norman style. There is a school for the children of the district. Viscount Downe is lord of the manor.

LIVESEY, a tnshp. and ecclesiastical district in the par. and lower div. of the hund. of Blackburn, co. palatine of Lancaster, 3 miles S.W. of Blackburn, and 8 S.E. of Preston, its post town. It includes the hmlts. of Feniscowles and Waterloo, with other small places. There are large cotton mills, collieries, flour mills, tannery, and works for the manufacture of drain pipes and articles made from fire-clay, &c. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £150, in the gift of the vicar of the parish. The church is a Gothic edifice, called Emmanuel's. The Independents have a chapel, to which is attached a day school. There is a good National school for both sexes; also Sunday-schools. In this township are Mill Hill House, Park House, and several other good residences. John Fielden, Esq., is lord of the manor.

LIVET, or LIVAT WATER, a river of co. Banff, Scotland. It rises under Cook's Cairn, and flows through Glenlivet to the Aven at Drummin Castle.

LIVINGSTONE, a par. in the co. Linlithgow, Scotland, 16 miles from Edinburgh. It is a railway station on the Edinburgh and Bathgate line. The par. contains a vil. of its own name, and also a portion of the vil. of Blackburn. It stretches from 5 to 6 miles along the left bank of the Briech water, which separates it from the co. of Edinburgh by a breadth of from 3 to 4 miles. One of the roads from Edinburgh to Glasgow intersects the parish. The surface is much diversified, and at Dechmont-law attains a height of 686 feet above the sea-level. Coal, limestone, and whinstone are extensively worked; and there is a sandstone quarry in the neighbourhood. The parish is in the presb. of Linlithgow and synod of Lothian and Tweedale. The minister's stipend is £189. The parish church was erected in 1732. There is a Free church, and also an Independent chapel. Until 1730 this parish included the present parish of Whitburn. In this parish there formerly stood an ancient stronghold, known as the Peel of Livingstone. Fairs are held on the first Tuesday in May, and the first Thursday after the second Tuesday in September, for cattle, horses, and hiring farm servants.

LIVINGSTONE, a vil. in the par. of Balmaghie, co. Kirkcudbright, Scotland, 5 miles N.W. of Castle Douglas.

LIXNAW, a vil. in the par. of Clanmaurice, co. Kerry, Ireland, 6 miles S.W. of Listowel. In the village, which stands on the river Brick, are the ruins of a church and of a castle, built by the Fitzmaurices in the 14th century, which was taken by Wilmot in 1600.

LIZARD POINT, the most southerly point of England, in co. Cornwall, 10 miles S. of Helston. It lies in N. lat. 49° 58′, and W. long. 5° 12′, and is the point from which foreign-bound vessels take their departure. It was the Promontorium Damnonium of the ancients, and consists chiefly of serpentine cliffs, on which are two lighthouses, put up in 1751, which are built of white stone, 222 feet high, with fixed lights, visible for 20 miles. To the N.W. is Kynance Cove, and off the coast are the Stags, and other rocks.

LLACHARN, or LLAUGHARNE (pronounced Larne), a par., post and small market town, in the hund. of Derllys, co. Carmarthen, 9 miles S.W. of Carmarthen, 12 S.E. of Narberth, and 230 from London. The St. Clear's and Whitland stations on the South Wales line of railway are each of them about 3 miles distant from the town, which stands on the right bank, and at the mouth of the Tâv, across which is a ferry. A castle was built here by the Normans, which was taken and destroyed by Llewellyn ap Jorwerth in 1215, but was rebuilt by Sir Guido de Brian. In 1645 it was taken by Cromwell, after a siege of three weeks, when its fortifications were destroyed. It is at present inhabited, and not shown to strangers. A charter of incorporation was granted to the town by John, which was confirmed by Edward III., and enlarged by Edward VI. The local government is vested in a portreeve, aldermen, and other officers, who hold courts leet and baron. This is a place of very little trade, and of late years has very much gone down, though frequented during the summer months as a watering place. It exports a small quantity of produce to Bristol. The town consists chiefly of one long street. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. with the rect. of Llansadwrnen annexed, £411, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Winchester. The church is an ancient cruciform structure, dedicated to St. Martin. In it are preserved a set of priest's robes, presented by Sir Guido de Brian, who bequeathed lands to the parish. The charities, including an endowment to the school of industry, produce rather over £90 per annum. The Independents, Welsh, and Wesleyan Methodists have each a chapel; and there is a National school. This was the birth-place of Dean Tucker. Friday is market day. Fairs are held on the 6th May, and 10th November.

LLAETHBWLCH, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanfihangel, co. Montgomery, 5 miles S.W. of Llanfyllin. It is situated near the Roman way called Caer Sws, and anciently formed part of Gwynva, in the principality of Powysland.

LLAETHWRYD, a tnshp. in the par. of Cerrig-y-Druidion, co. Denbigh, 12 miles S.W. of Ruthin.

LLAITHFANN, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanelian, hund. of Isdulas, co. Denbigh, 4 miles S.W. of Abergele. It is situated in a dreary spot under the Cradle Mountain.

LLAN, a hmlt. in the par. of Llanfihangel-Aberbythych, co. Carmarthen, 4 miles S.W. of Llandilo-fawr. This prefix to many Welsh places designates churches of British origin.

LLAN, a hmlt. in the par. of Llangendeirne, co. Carmarthen, 4 miles S.E. of Carmarthen. The stream called Little Gwendraeth flows through the hamlet. In the neighbourhood are traces of an ancient camp.

LLAN, a tnshp. in the par. of Bryn-Eglwys, co. Denbigh, 5 miles N.W. of Llangollen.

LLAN, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanarmon, co. Denbigh, 5 miles S.E. of Ruthin.

LLAN, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanelian, hund. of Isdulas, co. Denbigh, 4 miles S.W. of Abergele, and 5 E. of Conway. It is situated near the line of the Holyhead railway.

LLAN, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanelidan, hund. of Ruthin, co. Denbigh, 5 miles S. of Ruthin. It is situated at the head of the vale of the Clwyd.

LLAN, a tnshp. in the par. of Llangwm, hund. of Isaled, co. Denbigh, 7 miles W. of Corwen. It is situated on a branch of the river Dee, and consists for the most part of waste hills.

LLAN, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanrhaidr-in-Kinmerch, co. Denbigh, 3 miles S.E. of Denbigh. It is a demesne of the see of Bangor.

LLAN, a tnshp. in the par. of Llansaintffraid, hund. of Isdulas, co. Denbigh, 2 miles S.E. of Conway. It is situated on the river Conway.

LLAN, a tnshp. in the par. of Cilcen, hund. of Coleshill, co. Flint, 4 miles N.W. of Mold. It contains the town of Cilcen, celebrated for its church, which has the most beautiful carved oak roof in the principality, supposed to have been removed from Basingwerk Abbey.

LLAN, a tnshp. in the par. of Dymeirchion, hund. of Rhuddlan, co. Flint, 3 miles S.E. of St. Asaph. It is situated in the Vale of Clwyd.

LLAN, a tnshp. in the par. of Gwaenysgor, hund. of Prestatyn, co. Flint, 4 miles N.E. of Rhuddlan, and 7 N.W. of Holywell. The surface is hilly, and abounds in coal and lead.

LLAN, a tnshp. in the par. of Nannerch, co. Flint, 3 miles S.W. of Holywell.

LLAN, a tnshp. in the par. of Llan-fawr, hund. of Penllyn, co. Merioneth, 4 miles N.E. of Bala. It is situated near the lake of the river Dee.

LLAN, a tnshp. in the par. of Guilsfield, hund. and borough of Pool, co. Montgomery, 3 miles N. of Welshpool. It is situated near the Montgomery canal and the river Severn. The village of Guilsfield is in this township.

LLAN, a tnshp. in the par. of Hirnant, hund. of Llanfyllin, co. Montgomery, 6 miles N.W. of Llanfyllin.

LLAN, a tnshp. in the par. of Llandrinio, hund. of Deythur, co. Montgomery, 8 miles N.E. of Welshpool, and 9 E. of Llanfyllin. It is situated at the junction of the rivers Severn and Vyrnwy, and near the Montgomery canal and Offa's Dyke. The land is generally fertile.

LLAN, a tnshp. in the par. of Llansaintffraid, hunds. of Pool and Deythur, co. Montgomery, 5 miles E. of Llanfyllin. It is situated near the rivers Vyrnwy and Tanat. The Roman roads, Watling Street and Caer Sws military way, passed in the vicinity.

LLAN, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanwddyn, co. Montgomery, 10 miles W. of Llanfyllin.

LLANABER, a par. in the hund. of Ardudwy, co. Merioneth, 1½ mile N. of Barmouth, its post town, and 8 miles E. of Dolgelly. It is situated at the mouth of the river Man, overlooking Cardigan Bay. The par. includes the town of Barmouth, and the hmlts. of Isymynydd and Uchmynydd. It is extensive and for the most part hilly, abounding in copper and lead. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Bangor, val. with the cur. of Barmouth annexed, £213. The church, dedicated to St. Bôdvan, is a structure of the 13th century, in the mixed Norman and early English style of architecture. It had so far gone to ruins that service could not be performed in it, but is now restored from designs by Mr. Boyce. It contains an ancient font, and a curious old chest for the reception of the public offerings. The charities amount to about £5 per annum. A friary, called Egyrn, is now occupied as a farm.

LLANAELHAIARN, a par. in the hund. of Uwch-Gorfai, co. Carnarvon, 5 miles N.W. of Nevin, and 6 N. of Pwllheli. It lies at the foot of Yr Eivel or Rivel, a lofty hill 1,866 feet high. In the vicinity are the ancient British camp, Tre'r Caeri, and the pass known as Vortigern's. Small portions of copper and manganese have been found. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Bangor, val. £225, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, an ancient structure built in the form of a cross, stands on the cliffs overlooking Carnarvon Bay. It is dedicated to St. Aelhaiarn. The parochial charities produce about £7 per annum.

LLAN-AFAN, a par. in the hund. of Upper Ilar, co. Cardigan, 8 miles S.E. of Aberystwith. It is situated on the river Ystwith. Part of the parish is a wild, dreary common. Lead has been obtained. The village consists of a few scattered houses. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. with that of Trawsgoed annexed, £88. The church, dedicated to St. Avan, is an ancient edifice. It contains an antique screen, octagonal font, and an ancient silver communion dish presented by the earls of Lisburne. Cross-Wood Park, the seat of the Earl of Lisburne, is an old mansion surrounded by a well-wooded park, and situated on the right bank of the river Ystwith.

LLAN-AFAN-FAWR, a par. in the hund. of Builth, co. Brecon, 5 miles N.W. of Builth, its post town. It is situated on a tributary of the river Wye, and contains the hmlt. of Llysdinam. The parish is large, hilly, and mostly used as pasture. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. with the curs. of Llanafan-Fechan, Llanvihangel-Abergwissin, and Llanvihangel-Bryn Pabuan, annexed, £273, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Avan, whose monument it contains. The charities consist of a share of Powell's at Brecon.

LLAN-AFAN-FECHAN, or LLANFECHAN, a par. in the hund. of Builth, co. Brecon, 3 miles S. of Llanafan-fawr. Builth is the post town. It is situated on the river Irvon. Slate is obtained, and the surface of the land is very irregular. A little to the right are Cefn-y-bedd and Cwm Llewellyn, places endeared to the hearts of most Welshmen from the fact of their being the scene of the death and burial of Llewellyn-ap-Gruffydd, the last of the Welsh princes, in 1282. The living is a cur. annexed to Llan-afan-fawr. A farm here now occupies the site of the ancient seat of Gwarafog.

LLANALLGO, a parochial chplry. in the hund. of Twrcelyn, co. Anglesey, 6 miles E. of Llanerchymedd, its post town, and 7 N. of Llangefni. It is situated on the northern part of Red Wharfe Bay, overlooking the Irish Sea. At a place here called Moelfre marble of good quality is obtained. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect. of Llaneugrad. The rude little church of Llanallgo is a cruciform structure, dedicated to St. Gallgov. It has attained a melancholy celebrity as the burialplace of the corpses washed on shore after the loss of the Royal Charter steam clipper, on 26th October, 1859. There are remains of a chapel, said to have been built about the 7th century, and dedicated to St. Alltgo. Close to it is a holy well. At Moelfre is a cromlech of rather unusual size, resting upon seven supports. It is in contemplation to erect a column on the rocks above the bay to commemorate the loss of the Royal Charter.

LLANANNERCH, a hmlt. in the par. of Aberporth, co. Cardigan, 6 miles N.E. of Cardigan.

LLANANNO, a par. in the hund. of Knighton, co. Radnor, 9 miles N.W. of Rhayader, and 12 W. of Knighton. Newton Montgomery is its post town. It is situated on the river Ithon. Here is a spring of chalybeate water. A large portion of the parish is open common. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. with that of Llanbadarn-Vynydd annexed, £150, in the patron. of the chancellor of the Collegiate Church at Brecon. The church is dedicated to St. Wonno. In the neighbourhood are some traces of Castle Dynbod, a fortress of great strength, reduced to ruins by Llewellyn-ap-Gruffydd, in 1240, also Fort Ty-yny-Bwlch.

LLANARMON, or LLANARMON-IN-YALE, a par. in the hund. of Yale, co. Denbigh, 5 miles S.E. of Ruthin, and 9 N. of Llangollen. Flint is its post town. It is situated on the river Alen, near the pass of Bwlch Agricla and Fort Tommen-y-Vardra. The par. includes the tnshps. of Erryrys, Llan, and several others. Lead is obtained in some parts. The vale here becomes enlarged and cultivated, and hence the term Dyffryn Ceiriog. The surface is mountainous and rugged, lying amidst the "wild hills of Yale." The lofty peak of Cyrny-brain rises to the height of 1,857 feet. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £282, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is an ancient structure dedicated to St. Garmon, or Germanus, Bishop of Auxerre, who, with St. Lupus, led the Christians against the Picts and Saxons at Mold, and gained a complete victory. It contains several effigies—one of an abbot of Valle Crucis Abbey, and monuments of the Lloyd family; also a curious brass chandelier, thought to have belonged to the above abbey. There is a school endowed with property producing £33, also other charities amounting together to about £54 per annum. There are many tumuli or mounds in this neighbourhood.

LLANARMON, a par. in the hund. of Evionydd, co. Carnarvon, 4 miles N.E. of Pwllheli, its post town, and 16 S. of Carnarvon. The village is very small, consisting of a few farmhouses. In the vicinity is the conical eminence of Carn Pentyrch and the village of Llangybi, where there is a mineral well. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Bangor, annexed to that of Llangybi. The church is dedicated to St. Garmon. There are charities producing about £5 per annum.

LLANARMON-DYFFRYN-CEIRIOG, a par. in the hund. of Chirk, co. Denbigh, 7 miles S.E. of Llandrillo, and 8 W. of Oswestry, its post town. It is situated on the river Ceiriog, and includes the tnshps. of Llowran and Llowarch. The village is considerable. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £250, in the patron. of the Bishop of Llandaff. The church is dedicated to St. Germanus. Here are traces of a strongly-fortified camp. Fairs are held on the first Monday after the 11th April, 13th August, and 19th October.

LLANARMON-MYNYDD-MAWR, a par. in the hund. of Chirk, co. Denbigh, 3 miles S.W. of the above. Llanfyllin is its post town. The village is a small agricultural place, situated near the river Ceiriog. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £64, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Garmon.

LLANARTH, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Ragland, co. Monmouth, 2½ miles N.W. of Ragland, its post town, and 5 S.E. of Abergavenny. It is situated on a tributary of the Usk, and includes the hmlt. of Clytha. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. with the perpet. cur. of Bettws-Newydd annexed, £285, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church is dedicated to St. Teilaw. There is a Roman Catholic chapel. The parochial endowments produce nearly £60 per annum. Llanarth Court is the seat of the Herberts.

LLAN-ARTHNEY, a par. in the hund. of Iskennen, co. Carmarthen, 6 miles S.W. of Llandilo-Fawr, and 8 E. of Carmarthen, its post town. The village, which is considerable, is situated at the foot of Mynydd Mawr, on the banks of the river Towy, which is here crossed by a bridge. The par. includes the hmlt. of Llanllyan and several other small places. There are limestone quarries and collieries. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £336, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. David, is much decayed, and has an ancient stone cross. There are two Calvinistic Methodist chapels. In the neighbourhood are the castles of Dryslwyn and Dynevor, also Grongar Hill, and other places of interest. Here is a chalybeate spring. Middleton Hall is the principal residence.

LLANARTH, NORTH AND SOUTH, a par. in the hund. of Moyddyn, co. Cardigan, 4 miles S.W. of Aberayron. Carmarthen is its post town. It is situated on the river Lethi, and includes the hmlts. of Llyffannog, Mochros, Wern, and several others. Henry VII. was received here by the Lloyds previous to the battle of Bosworth. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. with that of Llanina annexed, £114, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Vylltyg, and has some curious monuments. In the churchyard is an inscribed stone bearing a cross with four circular holes. Here are traces of ancient camps. Noyadd Llanarth is the seat of Lord Kensington. Fairs are held on 12th January, 12th March, 17th June, 22nd September, and 27th October, for the sale of cattle and live stock.

LLANASA, or LLAN-ASAPH, a par. in the hund. of Prestatyn, co. Flint, 6 miles N.E. of Dyserth, and 6 N.W. of Holywell, its post town. It is situated on the W. bank, and near the mouth of the river Dee, in the vicinity of Offa's Dyke. The Chester and Holyhead railway passes through the neighbourhood. Corseddau, or Llanasa Hill, is an eminence about 700 feet high, with a signal tower on its summit. The par. includes the tnshps. of Axton, Picton, and several others. The people are mostly employed in the quarries, coal, iron, and lead mines, which abound in this locality. The workhouse of the Holywell Poor-law Union is in this parish. At the point of Ayr, near the mouth of the river Dee, is a lighthouse containing two fixed lights—one 49 feet above high-water mark, which can be seen at the distance of 11 miles in clear weather; and the other light, intended for the navigation of vessels over the sands, only 12 feet above the water. The tithes were commuted in 1839. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £297, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is a commodious edifice rebuilt about the middle of the last century. It is dedicated to SS. Asaph and Kentigern, and has windows of stained glass said to have been brought from Basingwerk Abbey, also several old monuments. There is a school endowment of £22, and other charities, amounting to about £15 per annum. Gyrn, Golden Grove, Talacre, are the principal residences.

LLANBABO, a par. in the hund. of Tal-y-Bolion, co. Anglesey, 2 miles N.W. of Llanerchymedd, its post town, and 11 from Holyhead. It is a small agricultural place. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect. of Llandeusant, in the dioc. of Bangor. The church is dedicated to St. Pabo, one of the early princes of Wales, who is said to have founded a church here in 460, upon the site of which the present one is built. His tomb is still pointed out in the church.

LLANBADARN-FAWR, a par. in the hunds. of Geneur Glynn and Upper Ilar, co. Cardigan, 1 mile E. of Aberystwith, its post town. It is situated on the rivers Ystwith and Rheidol, and the Roman road Sarn Helen, which may be traced from Loventium (now Llanio), to Penallt, near Machynlleth. The par., which is about 15 miles in length by 6 in breadth, includes the chplry. of Aberystwith, and the tnshps. of Broncastellan, Clarach, Cwmrheidol, Elerch, Melin-dwr, Parcel-Canol, Trefewrig, Uchayn-y-dre, Vainor-Uchaf, Vainor-Issa, and Yn-y-drê-Issa, and the hmlts. of Llanbadarn-y-Croyddin, Isaf and Uchaf. It was formerly a market town, but the market was afterwards removed to Aberystwith, which is in this parish. It was also an episcopal see established by St. Paternus, prior to St. Augustine's mission—the then bishop being one of the seven who held conference with that monk. A monastery or college was founded here about the same time, which in the 12th century was given to Gloucester Abbey, and afterwards transferred to that of Vale Royal, in Cheshire. Two churches here were destroyed by the Danes—one in 987 and the other in 1038. The old town of Llanbadarn is said to occupy the site of a Roman city, and although now superseded by Aberystwith, is an attractive spot surrounded by verdant meadows, and sheltered by a range of hills backed by the stupendous Plinlimmon. The only building of any importance is the old church. In the centre of the village is an immense stone, which has been split by lighting a bonfire upon it. In the vicinity are several lead mines, which have been worked for a time. About 8,000 acres of land are mere waste; but the valley of the Rheidol is very rich, the land being chiefly meadow and pasture. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £170, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is a commodious cruciform edifice of the 11th century, with a massive square tower supported by arches resting on four substantial piers. It is dedicated to St. Paternus, and contains two carved screens of elaborate workmanship, probably erected about the time of Henry VII., also a number of monuments of the Powel, Pryse, and other families. In the chancel is a flat stone bearing the name of Lewis Morris, a celebrated antiquary of the last century, who wrote several works. On the S. side of the church are two ancient stone crosses; one of them stands in a reclining position, and is inscribed with Runic characters and circles; the other, in the shape of a Greek cross, is probably of greater antiquity. In addition to the parish church there are four district churches—viz. Aberystwith, in the patron. of the bishop; Bangor, val. £148, in the gift of the vicar; Yspytty-Cenfyn, val. £104, in the gift of the landholders; and Llangorwen, in the gift of trustees—all perpet. curs. There is a free school, with an endowment of £20, and other charities producing a total of about £35 per annum. The Calvinists and Independents have each a chapel in the village, and there are Dissenting places of worship in other parts of the parish. This was the birthplace of Davydd-ap-Gwillim, the poet. There are traces of several British entrenched camps; the most remarkable is Pen-y-Dinas, near Aberystwith. There are several good seats and residences in the neighbourhood. Fairs are held on Easter-Monday and the Saturday preceding the 13th November.

LLANBADARN FAWR, a par. in the hund. of Cefnllys, or Kevenlleece, co. Radnor, 8 miles S.E. of Rhayader, 10 N.E. of New Radnor, and 3 from Penibont, its post town. It is situated on the river Ithon, and includes the tnshps. of Brinhyfedd Cellws and Penybont. It was formerly a seat of the Severn family. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £268, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Padarn, or Paternus, Bishop of Llanbadarn, who was one of the three principal saints of the Welsh calendar. There are small charities of about £1 a year.

LLANBADARN FYNYDD, a par. in the hund. of Knighton, co. Radnor, 8 miles S. of Newtown, its post town, and 12 N.W. of Knighton. It is situated in a hilly district for the most part barren, with tracts of pasture land. The rivers Ithon, Teme, and Aran flow through it. Near the village, which is small, is Cammant Bridge, across the Ithon, leading into Montgomeryshire. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to that of Llananno, in the dioc. of St. David's. The church is dedicated to St. Padarn. The charities amount to about £2 per annum. In the vicinity are the remains of a very strong fortress, called Castle Dynbod, demolished by Llewellyn-ap-Grufydd in 1240.

LLANBADARN-ODWYN, a par. in the hund. of Penarth, co. Cardigan, 3 miles W. of Tregaron, its post town, and 8 N.E. of Lampeter. It is situated on the small river Ayron, or Aëron, which falls into Cardigan Bay at Aber-Ayron, about 7 miles lower down, and is intersected by several streams falling into the Teifi, which bounds it on the W. All these streams abound with salmon, salmon-trout, sewin, &c., and in the lake is a red-bellied trout called ingoch. The village, which is small, stands on a high and bleak eminence commanding a prospect of the fertile vale of Ayron. Its suffix Odwynne (very white), seems to be descriptively applied, as it may be seen for many miles round. The living is a cur. annexed to the perpet. cur. of Llandewi-Brefi, in the dioc. of St. David's. The church, which stands on a hill, is dedicated to St. Padarn. There is a Calvinistic Methodist chapel.

LLANBADARN-TREF-EGLWYS, or LLANBADARN-FACH, a par. in the hund. of Lower Ilar, co. Cardigan, 3 miles N.E. of Aberayron, and 10 N.W. of Lampeter, its post town. It is situated on the river Arth. The latter part of the name signifies the three churches, of which two have entirely disappeared. The village is considerable. The tithes were commuted in 1839. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £45, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Padarn. There are two Calvinistic Methodist chapels.

LLANBADARN-Y-CROYDDIN, UPPER and LOWER, tnshps. in the par. of Llanbadarn-Fawr, hund. of Upper Ilar, co. Cardigan, 2 miles E. of Aberystwith, its post town, and 18 from Machynlleth.

LLANBADARN-Y-GARREG, a parochial chplry. in the hund. of Colwyn, co. Radnor, 5 miles S.E. of Builth, its post town, and 8 S.W. of New Radnor. It is situated on the river Edw, a branch of the Wye. There is no village, only a few scattered houses. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the rect. of Cregrina, in the dioc. of St. David's. The church is dedicated to St. Padarn. There are charities producing about £13 per annum.

LLANBADDOCK, or LLANBADOG, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Usk, co. Monmouth, 1½ mile S. of Usk, its post town, and 5 miles E. of Pontypool. The river Usk, which flows through the parish, is here crossed by a stone bridge leading to the town of Usk. The village is situated on the road from Caerleon to Usk, which for some distance occupies the space between the river bank and a wooded precipice. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £72. The church is dedicated to St. Madocus. The charities, including £8 to Hughe's school, produce about £15 per annum. There is a Sunday-school. In the vicinity are traces of the old Roman road Julia Strata.

LLANBADRIG, a par. in the hund. of Tal-y-Bolion, co. Anglesey, 3½ miles W. of Amlwch, its post town, and 7 N.W. of Llanerchymedd. It is situated at the head of a small creek on the coast, opening to the Irish Sea. The par. includes the tnshp. of Clygyrog and the little port of Cemmaes, which is visited by small vessels laden with coal and corn. There are extensive quarries of limestone and serpentine marble. Small quantities of yellow ochre and copper ore have been found. The village is considerable, and some of the inhabitants are engaged in fishing and in the coasting trade. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Bangor, val. £169. The church, dedicated to St. Patrick, is an ancient structure built on the same spot as one said to have been founded in 440 by that saint. It stands close to the sea-shore, opposite an island named Ynys Badrig, from a circumstance recorded in the legendary life of the great Irish apostle. There is a free school endowed with £24, and other charities producing in all about £37 per annum. In the neighbourhood are two cromlechs, one mutilated.

LLANBADRIG. See LLANBEDROG, co. Carnarvon.

LLANBEBLIG, a par. in the hund. of Is-Gorfai, co. Carnarvon, 7 miles S.W. of Bangor, and 1 mile from Carnarvon, its post town. It is situated on the river Seiont and the south-western shore of the Menai Strait. The par., which is very populous, includes the borough of Carnarvon and the tnshps. of Bont-Newydd, Castell-mai, and Treflan. The workhouse of the Carnarvon Poor-law Union is in this parish. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Bangor, val. with the curs. of Carnarvon and Waenfawr annexed, £330, in the patron. of the Bishop of Chester. The church, dedicated to St. Publicius, is a spacious cruciform structure with several stained-glass windows. It contains a monument of alabaster to one of the Griffiths, and an ancient brass. The chapel of St. Mary, formerly the garrison chapel, is situated in the town of Carnarvon, in which the services are in English. The Calvinistic Methodists have two chapels in the parish.

LLANBEDER, a chplry. in the par. of Llangstone, co. Monmouth, 5 miles N.E. of Newport, its post town, and 12 from Chepstow. Here are ruins of an old church called St. Peter's.

LLAN-BEDR, a par. in the hund. of Crickhowell, co. Brecon, 2 miles N.E. of Crickhowell, its post town, and 6 N.W. of Abergavenny. It is situated at the foot of the Sugar-Loaf Hill. The river Grwny, a tributary of the Usk, flows through the parish, which includes the parcels of Bysych and Graigwen. Iron ore is obtained here. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. with the cur. of Partrishow annexed, £154. The church is an ancient edifice, dedicated to St. Peter. The tower is of older date than the body of the church. The parochial charities produce about £38 per annum, chiefly arising from a bequest by Mrs. Herbert, in 1728, for school purposes. Bishop F. Godwin once held this living. Moor Park is the principal residence.

LLANBEDR, a par. in the hund. of Ardudwy, co. Merioneth, 2 miles S.E. of Harlech, its post town, and 10 N.W. of Dolgelly. It is situated on the banks of the river Artro, and is a favourite resort of fishing parties, being considered, next to Tal-y-Llyn, the best fishing station in Merionethshire. The par. includes the tnshp. of Gwyn Fryn. Manganese is obtained in the hills. Llanbedr is a little wood-embosomed village, containing a roadside inn called the Victoria, much frequented by tourists. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect. of Llandanwg, in the dioc. of Bangor. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. The parochial endowments produce about £46 per annum, the principal of which is for Parry's school. There are remains of two cromlechs.

LLANBEDR. See LAMPETER-PONT-STEPHEN, co. Cardigan.

LLANBEDR-DYFFRYN-CLWYD, a par. in the hund. of Ruthin, co. Denbigh, 2 miles N.E. of Ruthin, its post town, and 11 N.W. of Llangollen. It is situated at the base of Moel Fammau, and is watered by the river Clywd. The tnshps. of Bodelgar, Llwynedd, Rhiwia, and Treganol are included in this parish. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £340, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. The parochial charities produce about £35 per annum. Llanbedr Hall and Berth are the principal residences.

LLANBEDR-GOCH, a parochial chplry. in the hund. of Tyndaethwy, co. Anglesey, 6 miles S.E. of Llanerchymedd, and 6 N.W. of Beaumaris, its post town. It is situated on the S.W. side of Red Wharfe Bay, where there is a small port communicating by a tramroad with the first named town. Limestone and marble are obtained here. The living is a cur. annexed to the district perpet. cur. of Pentraeth, in the par. of Llanddyvnan and dioc. of Bangor. The church is dedicated to St. Peter.

LLANBEDROG, or LLANBADRIG, a par. in the hund. of Gafflogian, co. Carnarvon, 4 miles S.W. of Pwllheli, its post town, and 10 from Nevin. It is situated on the coast N. of St. Tudwall's Bay, in a rude, uncultivated region. The surface is rocky, and part of the parish is unenclosed. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bangor, val. with the curs. of Llanfihangel-Bachelleth and Llangian annexed, £385, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Petroc. Wern Vawr is the principal residence.

LLANBEDR PAINSCASTLE, a par. in the hund. of Painscastle, co. Radnor, 6 miles N.W. of Hay, its post town. It is situated on the river Bachwy, a tributary of the Wye. A castle was built here by the De Paines, which afterwards came to the Mortimers; there are still some traces of the keep and moat. Here is a lake of about a mile in circumference. The village is a small rustic hamlet, but was once a market town, and is still a polling place for the county elections. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £68, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. Fairs are held on the 12th May, 22nd September, and 15th December for horses and live stock.

LLANBEDR-Y-CENNIN, a par. in the hund. of Isaf, co. Carnarvon, 5 miles S. of Conway, its post town, and 6 N.W. of Llanrwst. It is situated on the W. bank of the river Conway, and includes the tnshps. of Aidda, Dol-y-Garrog, Llanbedr, and Tal-y-Cafnd; at the latter place there is a ferry. Many of the people are employed in the mines obtaining copper ore. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bangor, val. with the vic. of Caerhun annexed, £289, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. The parochial endowments realise about £44 per annum. There are remains of an ancient British camp. A fair is held on the 3rd October.

LLANBERIS, or LLANPERIS, a par. in the hund. of Is-Gorfai, co. Carnarvon, 10 miles S.E. of Carnarvon, its post town, and 8 from Bangor. It is situated in the mountainous district of Snowdon, the village being at the entrance of the gloomy valley of the Pass of Llanberis, surrounded on allsides by lofty heights. It was visited by the queen in 1832, then the Princess Victoria, and is considered the starting-point for making the ascent of the different peaks. A new village has sprung up, principally supported by the tourists. The par. includes the mountains of Glyder Vawr, Llyder Vawr, Moel Eilio, Carnedd Igyn, and others, varying in height from 2,300 to 3,300 feet, also a part of Snowdon, which bounds the pass on the W. In the bosom of the valley are two small lakes, one of which, fed by the river Afon-Hwch, has a cataract, 60 feet in height. The inhabitants, for the most part, are employed in the copper mines and slate quarries, which are numerous in this parish. The products are conveyed in flats along the lakes to the terminus of the railway which has been constructed from the neighbourhood of the mines to port Denorwig. The river Seiont flows through the parish. In the middle of the Pass is the ancient castle of Dolbadarn, which was for upwards of twenty years the prison of Owen Goich, brother of Llewellyn, the last prince of Wales. The tithes were commuted in 1839. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Bangor, val. £182, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Peris, is a singular looking building. It has a curious timber roof, which some compare to the keel of a ship turned upside down, and is supposed to have been built about the 15th century. It has lately been restored. There are remains of a fortress and of a Roman camp. Many plants of the alpine species, crystals, and fossils, are constantly met with in the mountains.

LLANBETHERY, a hmlt. in the par. of Llancarvan, co. Glamorgan, 3 miles S.E. of Cowbridge.

LLANBEULAN, a par. in the hunds. of Llyfon and Malltraeth, co. Anglesey, 6 miles W. of Llangefni, and 8 E. of Holyhead, its post town. The North-Western railway, through Crewe and Chester, passes through the neighbourhood, and has a station at Bodorgan, about 2 miles from the village. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bangor, val. with the curs. of Ceirchiog, Llanvaelog, and Llêchylched annexed, £793, in the patron. of the bishop. The church dedicated to St. Penlan, is an ancient edifice, erected on the same spot as one founded in the 7th century. There is also the district church of Tal-y-Llyn, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £62.

LLANBISTER, a par. in the hund. of Knighton, co.

Radnor, 8 miles N.E. of Rhayader, and 10 from New Radnor. It is situated in a hilly district, on the river Ithon, and includes the tnshps. of Bronllis, Caroge, Cevenpawl, or Church, Cwmlechwedd, Cwmgaist, Gollan, and Llanbister, and is divided into Upper and Lower Llanbister. The village, which is considerable, is neatly built. The tithes of Upper Llanbister were commuted in 1839. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £148, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Kynlog. There is also the district church of Abbey-cwm-hir, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £60. The Baptists have a chapel in the village. The charities amount to about £8 per annum. One of the schools has an endowment of £4 per annum. There is a spring of chalybeate water in the neighbourhood.

LLAN-BLAENYNIS, a hmlt. in the par. of Llangathen, co. Carmarthen, 3 miles W. of Llandilo-fawr.

LLAN-BLETHIAN, or LLANBLEIDDIAN, a par. in the hund. of Cowbridge, co. Glamorgan, 1 mile S. of Cowbridge, its post town, 5 miles from the Cowbridge Road railway station, and 8 S.W. of Cardiff. It is situated on the banks of the river Thaw, commanding a view over the vale and town of Cowbridge. The par. includes the tnshps. of Aberthin and Treinghill. A castle was built here by the St. Quentin family, of which there are some ruins, consisting principally of the chief gateway, with its lofty ivy-mantled towers. Limestone is obtained here. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. with the curs. of Cowbridge and Welsh St. Donatts annexed, £279, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Gloucester. The church is an ancient edifice, dedicated to St. Bleddian, and contains several very old monuments. The Independents have a chapel, and there is a village school. The parochial endowments produce about £45 per annum, besides £20 left by Sir. Leoline Jenkins to be distributed every fourth year among the poor. The principal residences are Llanblethian Castle, built near the ruins of the ancient seat, Marlborough Grange, Crossways Lodge, and Newton House.

LLANBOIDY, a par. in the hund. of Derllys, co. Carmarthen, 12 miles N.W. of Carmarthen, and 7 from St. Clears, its post town. It is situated on the Roman road Via Julia. A tributary of the river Taff flows through the parish, which is divided into Upper and Lower, and includes the tnshps. of Rigwm and Whitland. Iron is found, but not extensively worked. The village is considerable, and neatly built. The tithes were commuted in 1839. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £136, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is a small ancient structure. There is also the district church of St. David's, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £66. At Dôl Wilym in this parish are a barrow, cromlech, and Druidical circle, 60 feet in diameter. At Cilymaenllwyd Camp several silver coins of Roman origin were discovered in Camden's time. A fair is held on the 18th September. The principal residence is Maes Gwynne, a seat of the Powell family.

LLANBRYNMAIR, a par. in the hund. of Machynlleth, co. Montgomery, 8 miles E. of Machynlleth, its post town, and 15 N.W. of Newtown. It is a station on the Aberystwith and Welsh Coast, and Newtown and Machynlleth railways. It is situated on a tributary of the river Dyfi. The par. includes the tnshps. of Dolgadfan, Pennant, Rhiewsaison, Tirymynach, and Trefolwern. The district is mountainous, and there are two waterfalls, one of 130 feet. A large portion of the land is pasture. There is a lead mine. It belongs to the families of Conroy and Wynn. The manufacture of coarse woollens and flannel has been carried on to some extent for several years, but the inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agricultural pursuits. The tithes were commuted in 1839. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Bangor, val. £330, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. Here are two endowed schools, one founded by Dr. Williams, with £36 per annum, and one called Lloyd's school, with £18 per annum. In the neighbourhood are several Druidical circles. Fairs are held on the Friday before the 10th March, 31st May, 16th September, and 25th November, for the sale of live stock.

LLANCADWALLADR, a par. in the hund. of Chirk, co. Denbigh, 7 miles S.W. of Chirk, and 8 from Oswestry, its post town. It lies in a hilly district, watered by the river Ceiriog. The village is wholly agricultural. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £55, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Cadwalladr. The charities produce about £2 per annum.

LLANCAICH, a station on the Taff Vale Extension line of railway, 9 miles from Merthyr.

LLANCARVAN, a par. in the hund. of Dinas Powis, co. Glamorgan, 5 miles S.E. of Cowbridge, its post town, and 9 S.W. of Cardiff. It is situated near the coast of the Bristol Channel, and includes the hmlts. of Treguss, Llancastle, and the ext. par. district of Llan-Oethin. The Sitsyllt family were the early possessors of the soil, from whom it passed to the De Mapes. A monastery was founded here about the 6th century by St. Cadoc, or Caradoc, called the Wise. Limestone is abundant, and there is a spring of chalybeate water. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £254. The church, dedicated to St. Cattwg, appears to have been built sometime about the 12th century. This was the birthplace of the Welsh historian, Caradoc, who wrote a history of Cambria, from the reign of Cadwalladr down to his own time. It was first published, with additions, by Dr. David Powel, in 1684, since which time other editions have appeared.

LLANCILLO, a par. in the hund. of Ewyas-Lacy, co. Hereford, 4 miles S. of Abbey Dore, 8 from Abergavenny, and 13 S.W. of Hereford, its post town. The Pontrilas station on the West Midland railway is 2 miles N.E. of the village. It is situated on the river Monnow. There is no village, only a few farmhouses. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £105. The church is an ancient stone edifice, dedicated to St. Peter. There are small charities of about £1 per annum. Colonel Scudamore is lord of the manor.

LLAN-CIWG. See LLANGUICK, co. Glamorgan.

LLANCYNFELIN, a par. in the hund. of Geneur Glynn, co. Cardigan, 6 miles N.E. of Aberystwith, its post town. It is situated near the estuary of the river Dovey, or Dyfi, and includes the tnshp. of Tre Talyasin. The people are chiefly employed in the limestone and marble quarries, and coal pits. There are also iron and lead mines. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £90. The church is a plain edifice, consisting simply of a nave, with porch and pointed arch. It is dedicated to St. Cynfelin, and is believed to occupy the site of one built in the 6th century. There are remains of an ancient carved screen.

LLAN-CYSTENYN. See LLANGWSTENNIN, co. Carnarvon.

LLANDAFF, a par. and city in the hund. of Kibbor, co. Glamorgan, South Wales, 3 miles N.W. of Cardiff, and 162 from London. It is a station on the South Wales railway. The situation of this titular city is one of uncommon beauty, on the steep slope of a declivity close to the southern bank of the river Taff, which is here crossed by a stone bridge. The par. is intersected by the Glamorganshire and Cardiff canal, and comprises, besides the city of Llandaff, the hmlts. of Canton, Ely, Fairwater, and Gabalva. Llandaff, though called a city by courtesy, because the site of a cathedral, and the town from which a bishop's see derives its title, is, in fact, nothing more than a straggling village, interspersed with a few good houses. Land for building purposes fetches a very high price. There was formerly a market, but it has fallen into disuse. Petty sessions are held in the town. The principal object of attraction is the cathedral, which is said to have been originally founded in the 5th century by King Myric or St. Tewdric the Martyr. This building, which was only 28 feet by 15, was destroyed at the Conquest. In 1120 the present structure was begun by Bishop Urban, a great benefactor of the see, and was finished in 1200.

It was enlarged by Bishop John of Monmouth, in 1296, and was anciently more extensive than at present, a new front having been built in 1751 across the nave, and the old front allowed to perish. The more ancient part of the building is of Saxon architecture, with an occasional intermingling of Norman, but the prevailing style is early English. The western front is ornamented with some fine lancet windows of various sizes; and over the principal entrance at this end is a projecting tablet, with the figure of a bishop, supposed to represent one of the earlier bishops of the see, probably St. Dubritius, or St. Teilo. On the N. side is a massive tower, with heavy buttresses, built in 1485, by Jasper Tudor, Duke of Bedford, who received from Henry VII. the lordship of Glamorgan. The building, after having been much disfigured by the incongruous intermixture of Grecian architecture, has been partly restored since 1839, mainly through the exertions of Dean Knight, after designs by Prichard and Wyatt. The restoration of the nave has just been completed, and produces an admirable effect. The length of the whole structure is 270 feet, and its greatest breadth 65 feet, or 80 including the chapels. A new organ, built by Gray and Davison, has lately been opened. At the eastern end of the cathedral is St. Mary's, or the Welsh chapel, 58 feet by 25, lately restored, where Divine service is occasionally performed in Welsh; and on the S. side stands the chapter-house, a square room, the roof of which is supported by a single pillar, from which arches diverge to the several sides of the apartment. It contains monuments of bishops Dubritius, William de Braose, Bramfeld, John of Monmouth, Pascal, and several of the Matthews family of Llandaff Court, now the bishop's palace, and called Bishop's Court. Adjoining the church is the gateway of Bishop Urban's palace, which was damaged by Owain Glyndwr, and now belongs to the Romilly family. Houses of residence have been built for the dean, the canons residentiary, and the minor canons. Two registry offices, one for civil, the other for ecclesiastical purposes, have been built from designs of Mr. Prichard, and greatly ornament the city. New National schools, also from designs of the same architect—one for 30 orphan girls, another for 30 boarders and day scholars—have been built from the funds of the Howell charity, administered by the trustees, at a cost of £20,000. In the village is an ancient stone cross. The cathedral serves as the parish church, and is dedicated to St. Peter, or, according to others, to St. Teilo. Llandaff gives name to a diocese, archdeaconry, and deanery. The first includes the greater part of Glamorgan and Monmouthshire, and is comprised within the province of Canterbury. This see was once filled by Marcluith, the composer of Howel Dha's code, Bledri the Wise, Morgan, who translated the Bible into Welsh, and Watson. The chapter consists of a dean, four residentiary canons, chancellor, precentor, treasurer, five non-residentiary canons, and two minor canons. There are several Dissenting places of worship, and three schools. A pleasure-fair is held on Whit-Monday.

LLANDAIN-FACH, a vil. in the par. of Nantcwnlle, co. Cardigan, 7 miles N. of Lampeter.

LLANDANWG, a par. in the hund. of Ardudwy, co. Merioneth, 2 miles S. of Harlech, its post town, and 13 N.W. of Dolgelly. It is situated on the western coast, close to the mouth of the small river Artro. The par., which is hilly, includes the tnshp. of Harlech. The soil generally is barren and wild. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Bangor, val. with the cur. of Llanbedr, £194, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Tanwg, stands close to the shore, but is now in a very ruinous state. There is a school, founded by one Ellis, with an endowment of £13 per annum.

LLANDAWKE, a par. in the hund. of Derllys, co. Carmarthen, 1 mile W. of Laugharne, its post town, and 14 from Tenby. It is situated near the mouth of the river Taff. There is no village, only a few scattered houses. The tithes were commuted in 1839. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of St. David's, to which that of Pendine is annexed. The church is dedicated to St. Margaret.

LLANDDANIEL-FAB, a parochial chplry., in the hund. of Menai, co. Anglesey, 6 miles S.W. of Beaumaris. Llangefni is its post town. It is situated in the vicinity of the Holyhead railway, near the shore of the Menai Straits. The land is fertile and well cultivated. The village is small and chiefly agricultural. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Llanidan, in the dioc. of Bangor. The church is an ancient structure, erected on the site occupied by a former one built in the early part of the 7th century. It is dedicated to St. Daniel Vab. The charities amount to about £10 per annum. There are remains of an ancient chapel called Capel Cadwaladr, standing, as its name implies, in an entrenchment.

LLANDDAROG, or LLANDAVOG, a par. in the hund. of Iskennen, co. Carmarthen, 6 miles S.E. of Carmarthen, its post town, and 10 S.W. of Llandilo-Fawr. The hmlts. of Cellay, Cynnillfawr, Llwynswch, and Tregwn are included in this parish, which is watered by a small stream called Gwendraeth Fawr. Here are coal-pits and limestone quarries. The tithes were commuted in 1839. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £81, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Twrog. The Calvinistic Methodists have two chapels. There are traces of ancient chapels. Llether llestry is the principal seat.

LLANDDAUSAINT, or LLANDEUSANT, a par. in the hund. of Tal-y-Bolion, co. Anglesey, 5 miles N.W. of Llanerchymedd, and 7 N.E. of Holyhead. Gwindy is its post town. It is watered by the river Allo. The vil. of Treffynon is in this par. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Bangor, val. with the curs. of Llanbabo and Llanvair-ynghornwy annexed, £615, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to SS. Marcellus and Marcell, is an ancient structure.

LLANDDAUSAINT, LLANTHOYSAINT, or LLANDOYSAINT, a par. in the hund. of Perfedd, co. Carmarthen, 6 miles S.E. of Llandovery, 9 N.E. of Llandilo-Fawr, and 5 from Llangadock, its post town. The hmlts. of Blaensawthe, Gwidre, Llandoysaint, and Maesfynnon are included in this par. The village is situated near the foot of Mount Ban Sîr Gaer, at the source of the river Usk. The low lands are watered by a small stream called Swathe, which has its source in a lake here. The surface is hilly but well cultivated. The living is a vic. annexed to that of Llangadock, in the dioc. of St. David's. The church is dedicated to SS. Simon and Jude. The Calvinistic Methodists have a chapel.

LLANDDEINIOL, a par. in the hund. of Lower Ilar, co. Cardigan, 6 miles S.W. of Aberystwith, its post town, and 12 from Tregaron. Its ancient name appears to be Carog. It is situated near Cardigan Bay on the western coast. It is a small agricultural village. The tithes were commuted in 1839. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £66. The church is dedicated to St. David. It contains an ancient octagonal font.

LLANDDEINIOLEN, a par. in the hund. of Is-Gorfai, co. Carnarvon, 4 miles N.E. of Carnarvon, its post town, and 6 from Bangor. It is situated at the head of the vale of the Cegid to the N.W. of Snowdon, and E. of the Menai Straits. The par., which is very populous, includes the vils. of Clwt-y-Bont, Ebeneza, and Penisarwain. The old Roman road passes through it. The people are mostly employed in the Dinorwig slate quarries. There are several mineral springs. The tithes were commuted in 1839. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bangor, val. £305, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is a small ancient structure. The parochial charities produce about £6 per annum. In the neighbourhood are some objects of antiquarian interest, including a rocking stone, a Druidical circle, and cyttian, the ruins of the palace of Llewelyn ap Grufydd, the last of the princes of North Wales, at Llys Dinorwig, and the pass of Nant-y-Garth, through which it is said Archbishop Baldwin and Giraldus passed in 1118. Near the church are some ancient yew trees, one of which is nearly 30 feet in girth, and a little to the N.E. is the famous camp of Dinas Dinorwig, supposed to be of Roman origin, and the largest fortified post in Carnarvonshire. It is surrounded by a double entrenchment, with a lofty bank between the ditches, and is of an oval shape. Here, too, is the Flynon Cegin Arthur well, at the Cegin's head. At Penllyn lived Margaret Uch Evan, "the queen of the lakes," a woman celebrated in Welsh story as the best hunter, fisher, wrestler, and musician in all Wales. Brintirion and Vaenol are the principal seats.

LLANDDERFEL, a par. in the hund. of Penllyn, co. Merioneth, 5 miles N.E. of Bala, and 7 S.W. of Corwen, its post town. It is situated on the northern bank of the river Dee, which is here crossed by a bridge at the base of the Berwyn mountains. The par. includes the tnshps. of Nantfrayer, Selwrn, and six others. The people are employed in flannel weaving and in agriculture. The hills afford good pasture for sheep. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £260, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is a spacious stone edifice built about the reign of Henry VIII. It contains several stained-glass windows, and a remarkably good screen. It is dedicated to St. Derval Gadarn, of whom there was formerly a large wooden image, which was sent to London in 1538 and burned with Dr. Forest in Smithfield; the saint's horse and staff are still preserved, and used to be held in great veneration. The parochial benefactions produce about £46 per annum, part of which is paid to Raglan. Fairs are held on 17th August and 16th October for the sale of cattle and live stock.

LLANDDEVENNY, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Bride Netherwent, lower div. of the hund. of Caldicott, co. Monmouth, 6 miles S.E. of Newport.

LLANDDEWI, or LLANDEWY, a par. in the hund. of Swansea, co. Glamorgan, 13 miles S.W. of Swansea, and 5 from Penrice, its post town. It is situated to the E. of Rhosili Bay. A castle formerly stood here. The village consists of a few farmhouses, The living is a vic. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £71, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. David.

LLANDDEWI ABERARTH, a par. in the hund. of Lower Ilar, co. Cardigan, 13 miles N.W. of Lampeter, its post town, 16 from Aberystwith, and 21 N.E. of Cardigan. It is situated on the coast of Cardigan Bay, lying between the two rivers Ayron and Arth. It includes the town and port of Aberayron. The land is under good cultivation, though hilly. The workhouse for the Poor-law Union is in this parish. The tithes were commuted in 1839. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £100, in the patron. of the bishop. The parish church is an ancient edifice dedicated to St. David. There is also the district church of St. Alban's, the living of which is a perpet. cur. in the gift of the proprietors of the Ty-Glyn estate. The charities consist of an endowment to Jones's school producing £7 per annum. Near the shore are remains of a fortified camp called Castell Cadwgan. Fairs are held on the 5th July and 11th December.

LLANDDEWI-ABER-GWESSIN, a par. in the hund. of Builth, co. Brecon, 13 miles N.W. of Builth, its post town, and 15 from Rhayader. It is situated at the confluence of the rivers Gwessin and Irvon. There is a lead mine worked in the parish. The neighbourhood is barren and thinly populated. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Llangammarch, in the dioc. of St. David's. The church is a small ancient structure.

LLANDDEWI-BREFI, a par. in the hund. of Penarth, co. Cardigan, 3 miles S.W. of Tregaron, and 7 N.E. of Lampeter, its post town. It is situated on the river Teifi, and has within its limits the tnshps. of Blaenpenal, Garthely, Llanio, and several others. The hamlet of Llanio occupies the site of the ancient Loventium of the Romans, through which the highway Sarn Helen passed, and where several Latin inscriptions and coins have been found. This place is conspicuous in ecclesiastical history as the spot where a synod was held in 519, to condemn the Pelagian heresy, and by which Dubritius resigned the archbishopric of Caerleon to St. David. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. with the cur. of Llanbadarn-Odwynne annexed, £146. The church, dedicated to St. David, is a commodious edifice, and has been recently restored. There are also two district churches, viz. Blaenpenal and Garthely. The livings of both are perpet. curs., val. respectively £84 and £60. There is a stone pillar of about 7 feet in height called St. David's Staff. The charities consist of an endowment to Thomas's school, producing about £10 per annum. Bishop Beck founded a college here in 1187. There are ruins of an old mansion called Plâs Llanfair. Foelall is the principal seat. Fairs are held on the 7th May, 24th July, 9th October, and 13th November.

LLAN-DDEWI-'R-CWM, a par. in the hund. of Builth, co. Brecon, 2 miles S.W. of Builth, its post town, and 14 from Brecon. It is situated on the small river Duhawn-wg, or Dihonw, a tributary of the Wye. The village is a small agricultural place. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £81. The church is dedicated to St. David. The parochial charities produce about £6 per annum.

LLANDDEWYFACH, a par. in the hund. of Painscastle, co. Radnor, 5 miles N.W. of Hay, its post town, and 14 from Brecon. It is situated on a tributary of the river Wye, called the Bachwy. The village is a small rustic place. The living is a vic. annexed to that of Llowes, in the dioc. of St. David's. The church is dedicated to St. David.

LLANDEWY VELFREY, a par. in the hunds. of Narberth and Dungleddy, co. Pembroke, 3 miles N.E. of Narberth, its post town, and 7 from Tenby. It is situated on the river Tâff and includes the hmlt. of Henllan. The village is considerable. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £260, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. There is also a sinecure rect., val. £200, in the patron. of St. David's College, Lampeter. The church is dedicated to St. David.

LLANDEWY YSTRADENNY, a par. in the hunds. of Cefnllys and Knighton, co. Radnor, 11 miles S.W. of Rhayader, its post town, and 15 from Pen-y-bont. It is situated in a valley watered by the river Ithon. From various points are obtained views of mountain scenery. The par. includes the tnshps. of Llanfihangel-Rhydithon, Mystyrrhoesllowdy, and Church. The road here crosses the Ithon by a stone bridge. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. with that of Llanfihangel-Rhydithon, £112, in the patron. of the Chancellor of Brecon. The church is dedicated to St. David. The charities amount to £2 per annum. Here are ruins of a Norman castle called Castell Cymaron, which anciently belonged to the Mortimers, earls of Chester, and on an eminence nearly opposite to it are British earthworks called the Gaer.

LLANDDOGET, a par. in the hund. of Isdulas, co. Denbigh, 2 miles N.E. of Llanrwst, its post town, and 9 W. of Llansannan. It is situated near the eastern bank of the river Conway. It is a small agricultural village. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £187, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Donovan. It contains monuments of the Wynne and other families. The manor formerly belonged to the bishop of the diocese. Belmont and Plâs Madoc are the principal residences.

LLANDDONA, a par. in the hund. of Tyndaethwy, co. Anglesey, 3 miles N.W. of Beaumaris, its post town, 7 from Bangor, and 7 N.E. of Llangefni. It is situated on the eastern side of Red-Wharfe Bay. The ground near the shore is of a rocky nature, but the soil is mostly well adapted for agriculture. Many of the people are engaged in the herring fishery. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Bangor, val. £87. The church, dedicated to St. Dona, is rather ancient, and occupies the same spot as one built in the early part of the 12th century. There is a Calvinistic Methodist chapel. The charities produce about £2 per annum. Here are traces of a camp and some defences believed to be Danish. From the hill called "Arthur's Round Table" there is an extensive prospect.

LLANDDULAS, a par. in the hund. of Isdulas, co. Denbigh, 2½ miles W. of Abergele, and 9 E. of Conway. Rhyl is its post town. It is situated on the northern coast, and is watered by the river Dulas, which here falls into the Irish Sea. The Chester and Holyhead railway passes through the parish, and has a station here. It was at a pass in this parish that the Earl of Northumberland placed a band of men to seize Richard II. and deliver him over to Bolingbroke, who was then at Flint. Limestone is obtained, and transmitted from the quarries to the sea side by a tramroad of about 7 miles in length. From Lysfaen Hill is a view of the mountains in the neighbourhood of Conway. On the summit of the hill was a semaphore signal, it being an intermediate station in the Holyhead and Liverpool telegraphic line, but now superseded by the electric wires. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £160, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is a small structure dedicated to St. Cynbryd. It contains a very ancient circular arch. There are four almshouses not endowed. The charities produce about £2 per annum. Gwrch Castle and Bryndulas are the principal seats.

LLANDDWYN, or LLANDDWYNWEN, an ancient par. and island, now part of Newborough, in the hund. of Menai, co. Anglesea, 9 miles from Carnarvon, 20 from Beaumaris, its post town, and 3 from the Bodorgan station on the Crewe and Chester section of the London and North-Western railway. It is situated in a wild spot near the coast, at the extremity of Newborough Warren, and on Llanddwyn Point stands the Carnarvon lighthouse. In ancient times it had an oratory to St. Dwynwen, the daughter of Brychan Urth, the patron saint of lovers; also a Benedictine cell adjoining the Ffynnon, or St. Mary's Well, which was visited by contrite persons, who munificently contributed to the support of the monks. On the small island of the same name, at the mouth of Maltraeth Bay, stood the abbey, which when intact was a cruciform church, 70 feet in length, but now only a portion of the E. end and part of the side walls of the choir are left standing. In the time of Owain Glyndwr this shrine was considered exceedingly wealthy, and its revenues in the time of Henry VIII. constituted the richest prebend in Bangor Cathedral. The greater part of the island has since been overwhelmed with a mass of sand, blown over from the opposite coast of Arvonia. It is famed in history as the spot where Dean Kyffin, and other adherents of the Earl of Richmond, carried on their intrigues against King Richard.

LLANDDWYWE, a par. in the hund. of Ardudwy, co. Merioneth, 5 miles N.W. of Barmouth, its post town, 9 from Dolgelly, and 6 from Harlech. It is situated on the coast of Cardigan Bay, and includes the hmlts. of Is-craig and Uwch-craig. In this parish is the wild and rough pass of Ardudwy. It is watered by the small river Ysgethin, which communicates with the lake of Llyn Irddin, on the W. slopes of Llawlech. The village is a small place with several modern houses. Near Llyn Irddin are traces of two ancient encampments. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect.* of Llanenddwyn, in the dioc. of Bangor. The church, dedicated to St. Dwywan, is an old structure, and has adjoining it a mortuary chapel containing monuments of the Vaughan and Mostyn families. The parochial charities produce about £10 per annum. This neighbourhood abounds with ancient barrows, cairns, Druid circles, cromlechs, and the remains of a British town, which probably had a connection with the fortified eminence of Craig-y-dinas. The principal residence is Corsygedol, the ancient seat of the Vaughan family (now extinct). It is a mansion situated on an eminence commanding sea-views of Cardigan Bay, and is approached by a long avenue of lime-trees. The gateway is one of Inigo Jones's works of the 17th century. The house has been untenanted for some years, but is the property of Lord Mostyn. Fairs are held on 18th April, 12th August, and 9th November.

LLANDDYFNAN, a par. in the hund. of Tyndaethwy, co. Anglesey, 2 miles W. of Pentraeth, its post town, 3 N.E. of Llangefni, and 7 from Beaumaris. It is situated to the S.W. of Red-Wharfe Bay, and includes the tnshp. of Pentraeth. Limestone abounds, and is quarried chiefly for agricultural purposes. The land is mostly under cultivation. The village, which is considerable, contains several good houses. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Bangor, val. with the cur. of Llanvair-Mathavar-neithâv, £280, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Dyvnan, was rebuilt in 1847. It contains over the S. doorway a sculpture of the Crucifixion. There is also a district church at Pentraeth. There are traces of a Roman road, and a large maenhir stands near the church. Llanddyfnan Place is the principal residence.

LLANDEBIE, or LLANDYBIE, a par. in the hund. of Iskennen, co. Carmarthen, 4 miles S. of Llandilofawr, its post town, and 14 S.E. of Carmarthen. The Llanelly and Vale of Towy railway has a station here. It lies at the foot of Mynydd Du, on the river Loughor, and contains the hmlts. of Glyntag, Blayne, and about six others. The inhabitants are employed in the limestone quarries, coal mines, and in the manufacture of woollen goods. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £99, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Tybie. The Independents, and Calvinistic and Wesleyan Methodists have chapels. The charities amount to about £3 per annum. There are several good seats in the neighbourhood. In the grounds of that called Glynhîr is a waterfall of about 30 feet. Fairs are held on Easter-Wednesday and on the first Wednesday in July.

LLANDECWYN, a par. in the hund. of Ardudwy, co. Merioneth, 3 miles S.W. of Maentwrog, and 4 N.E. of Harlech. Tan-y-Bwllch is its post town. It is situated on the southern bank of the river Traeth-Bach. The neighbourhood is very undulating. There are lead mines and stone quarries. The village is a small place perched high up on the mountains, about midway between the two lakes called Llyn Tecwyn Uchaf and Isaf. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to that of Llanfihangel-y-Traethau, in the dioc. of Bangor. The church is dedicated to St. Tecwyn. The charities amount to about £5 per annum. Maes-y-Neuadd is the principal residence.

LLANDEFAILOG-FACH, a par. in the hund. of Merthyr, co. Brecon, 3 miles N.E. of Brecon, its post town, and 11 from Builth. It is situated on the banks of the small river Honddu, and the old Roman road Sarn Helen, which passes through the parish. It includes the tnshp. of Llanfihangel-Fechan. The ground, though hilly, is well adapted for agriculture. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £368, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Tyvaelog, was, with the exception of the old tower, rebuilt in 1831. It contains the monuments and tombs of the Powel, Watkins, and other families. There is also the district church of Llanfihangel-Fechan, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £65. The charitable endowments produce about £12 per annum. Llandefailog House and Glan Honddu are the principal residences.

LLANDEFAILOG-TRE-GRAIG, or LLANDEFAILOG-TREYR-GRAIG, a par. in the hund. of Penkelly, co. Brecon, 3 miles S.W. of Talgarth, and 5 N.E. of Brecon, its post town. The parish is watered by the small river Llynvi, a tributary of the Wye. There is no village, only some half-dozen farmhouses. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect.* of Llanvillo, in the dioc. of St. David's. The church is dedicated to St. Tyvaelog.

LLANDEFALLEY, NORTH AND SOUTH, a par. in the hund. of Talgarth, co. Brecon, 5 miles N.E. of Brecknock, its post town, and 6 S.W. of Glasbury. The par. forms two divs., known as North and South Llandefalley. The village, which is considerable, is situated a little to the S.W. of the river Wye. In the vicinity is a medicinal spring impregnated with sulphur. The living is a vic. annexed to that of Crickadarn, in the dioc. of St. David's. The church, dedicated to St. Matthew, is a spacious structure with stained-glass windows and a timbered roof. It contains monumental effigies of two prelates. The charities produce about £8 per annum. There are traces of an ancient camp. Trebarried and Trebris are the names of former seats, now in ruins.

LLANDEFEILOG, or LLANDYVEILOG, a par. in the hund. of Kidwelly, co. Carmarthen, 5 miles S. of Carmarthen, its post town. It is situated E. of the river Towy, and includes the hmlts. of Cilmarch, Cloggin, and others. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £64, in the patron. of the Prebendary of Warthacwm. The charities amount to about £4 per annum.

LLANDEGAI, a par. in the hund. of Uchaf, co. Carnarvon, 1 mile E. of Bangor, its post town and nearest railway station, and 10 miles from Carnarvon. It is situated near the coast, to the N.W. of Snowdon, and includes the tnshps. of Coed-y-Park, Port Penrhyn, and Trer-Garth. The surface is mountainous, including the peaks of Carnedd Llewelyn and Carnedd Davydd, above 3,000 feet high. In 1648 a battle was fought near this spot between Sir John Owen, of Clenenney, and Colonel Mytton, at the head of the parliamentary army, in which the former was taken prisoner. The Bangor and Holyhead line of railway here crosses the valley of the Ogwen, a little to the left of the village, on a lofty viaduct. In this parish are extensive quarries of roofing-slate, employing above 2,000 workmen; they have been wrought for nearly a century; and in other parts are minerals, including copper, iron, lead, manganese, zinc, &c. The village, which is a model of rustic architecture, takes its name from St. Tegais, son of Ithel Hael, who came over about the close of the 5th century from Armorica, with Cadran, and founded a church near this spot. The cottages are all neat and well kept, each forming part of a design, and are clustered round the church, which stands on a slight eminence embosomed in trees, and approached by a densely thick avenue of yews. Near the entrance into the village is a Norman gateway leading into Penrhyn Park, the seat of the Pennants, built of Anglesey marble by the late Hon. E. G. Douglas Pennant, M.P., brother of the Earl of Morton, who on marrying the heiress of the house of Pennant, in whose possession the lands have been since the reign of Henry VI., assumed the name of Pennant. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Bangor, val. £114, in the patron. of the bishop. The parish church, dedicated to St. Tegais, is a cruciform structure of the 14th century, and has been completely restored by Colonel Pennant. It contains a mural monument of Archbishop Williams, the unfortunate lord-keeper of Charles I., and an alabaster altar tomb of great beauty brought from the monastery of Llanfaes. The charities amount to about £5 per annum. The Wesleyans have a chapel, and there are National schools for both sexes.

LLANDEGFAN, a par. in the hund. of Tyndaethwy, co. Anglesey, 2 miles S.W. of Beaumaris, its post town, and 4 from Bangor. It is situated on the Menai Straits, and is included within the borough of Beaumaris. Near the village is the ferry station for the Straits. The tower of the old church, which stands on a hill to the left, serves as a conspicuous landmark. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bangor, val. with the cur. of Beaumaris annexed, £366. The church, formerly the mother church of Beaumaris, is a modern edifice built about 1811, and is dedicated to St. Tegvan. The parochial charities, including £8 to Lady Bulkeley's school, produce nearly £60 per annum. The Calvinistic Methodists have a chapel.

LLANDEGLA, a par. in the hund. of Yale, co. Denbigh, 7 miles S.E. of Ruthin, its post town, and 8 from Llangollen. It is situated on the river Alyn, which rises in this parish, at the foot of the lofty hill called Cyrn-y-Brain. The par. includes the tnshps. of Trer-Llan and Trefydd Bycharn. Near the village is a holy well, supposed to be efficacious in the cure of epilepsy. In the neighbourhood is the old house of Plas Bodidris, an ancient seat of the Vaughans of Corsygedol. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £95, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Tecla. Fairs are held on the 10th March, 6th May, 23rd June, 4th August, and 26th October, for the sale of cattle, &c.

LLANDEGLEY, a par. in the hund. of Cefnllys, borough and co. of Radnor, 6 miles N.W. of New Radnor, and 10 S.E. of Rhayader, its post town. It is situated on the borders of Radnor Forest, which attains an altitude of 2,168 feet, and is watered by a tributary of the river Ithon. The par. includes the tnshps. of Llanvihangel-Nantmellan, Swydd, with Graig and Tynlan. Lead is obtained from the hills, and in some places quartz crystals. Here is a spring strongly impregnated with sulphur, which is much frequented in summer for drinking and bathing. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £120, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Tecla. The charities consist of an endowment of £22 to William's free school, and other bequests, producing altogether about £43 per annum.

LLANDEGVETH, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Usk, co. Monmouth, 3 miles N. of Caerlon, its post town, 4 S.W. of Usk, and 5 from Pont-y-pool. A tributary of the river Usk flows through the parish, which is of small extent, and wholly agricultural. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £164. The church is dedicated to St. Thomas. There are charities of about £2 per annum.

LLANDEGWNING, a par. in the hund. of Commitmaen, co. Carnarvon, 7 miles S.W. of Pwllheli, its post town, and 10 from Nevin. It is situated to the E. of Portniull Bay. The land is fruitful. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect.* of Llaniestyn, in the dioc. of Bangor. The church is dedicated to St. Tegonwy. There are charities amounting to about £3 per annum.

LLANDELOY, or LLANDYLWYF, a par. in the hund. of Dewisland, co. Pembroke, 9 miles N.W. of Haverfordwest, its post town, and 8 from St. David's. It is a small rustic village. The living is a discharged vic. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. with that of Llanhowel, £140, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church is dedicated to St. Teilaw.

LLANDENNY, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Ragland, co. Monmouth, 3 miles N.E. of Usk, its post town, 3 S. of Ragland, and 9 from Monmouth. It is traversed by the Olway brook and the Monmouthshire line of railway, which has a station here. It is a small agricultural village. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £50. The church is dedicated to St. John. The parochial endowments produce about £45 per annum, besides six cottages for the poor.

LLANDEVAND, a hmlt. in the par. of Llanmartin, co. Monmouth, 6 miles S.E. of Usk. Here are some ruins of an old church.

LLANDEWY. See LLANDDEWY.

LLANDILO, a par. in the hund. of Kemess, co. Pembroke, 7 miles N. of Narberth, its post town. It lies at the base of Mount Precelly, near the river Cleddau. The parish is for the most part hilly, and abounds with slate. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to that of Llangolman, in the dioc. of St. David's. The church is dedicated to St. Teilo.

LLANDILO ABERCOWIN, a par. in the hund. of Derllys, co. Carmarthen, 3 miles S.E. of St. Clear, its post town, and 7 S.W. of Carmarthen. It is situated at the confluence of the rivers Cywyn and Taff. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £54. The church is dedicated to St. Teilo. Here are the remains of what was a hospital for pilgrims.

LLANDILOFAWR, a par. and market town in the hunds. of Cayo, Perfedd, and Iskennen, co. Carmarthen, 14 miles N.E. of Carmarthen, 14 S.W. of Llandovery, and 203 from London. The Llanelly and Vale of Towey railway has a station here. It is situated on the side of a hill sloping precipitously down to the N. bank of the river Towey, which is here crossed by a marble bridge of 150 feet span. The par. includes the chplries. of Cwmamman and Taliaris, with the hmlts. of Manorfabon, Tregib, and about a dozen other small places.

The numerous small streams which water this parish empty themselves into the Towey, after turning several mills for grinding corn. The town, which contains about 2,000 inhabitants, consists chiefly of one long street, rather irregular, but has some good modern-built houses. It contains a townhall, in which the county court is held monthly, a commercial bank, savings-bank, and a mechanics' institute. It is a polling place for the county elections, and the county quarter sessions for July are held here. The workhouse for the Poor-law Union is situated in this parish. There are several springs possessing medicinal properties. Woollen cloth is manufactured, and tanning is carried on to a considerable extent. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £512, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Teilo, was rebuilt in 1848, but retaining the old steeple. It has one of the finest organs in the principality, and contains the tomb and baptistry of its patron saint. In addition to the parish church, there are two district churches, viz. Cwmamman and Taliaris, the livings of both which are perpet. curs., val. respectively, £150 and £133, the former in the gift of the bishop. The parochial charities produce about £33 per annum. The Independents, Baptists, and Calvinistic and Wesleyan Methodists have chapels. There is a National school, also one belonging to the Independents, and a school called Warner's, having an endowment of £9 annually. The rocks around the town consist of a coarse slate of a dark colour, frequently calcareous, and in part true limestone, which abound with trilobites, particularly the Asaphus and Ogygia Buchii, with many lower Silurian forms of shells, and other fossils characteristic of the Llandilo flags. A number of mansions meet the eye in every direction. The principal of these are Dynevor Castle, belonging to Lord Dynevor, and Golden Grove, the seat of Earl Cawdor. Upon a headland at a short distance from the modern mansion stand the ruins of the ancient fortress, the real Dynevor Castle, once the residence of the princes of South Wales, consisting of a square and round tower overhanging the precipice, and some battlemented walls, part of the original enclosure said to have been constructed by Roderic the Great. The Bishop of St. David's is lord of the manor. Saturday is market day, for provisions, &c., and during the summer a market is held on Tuesdays for sheep and wool. Fairs are held on the 20th February, Monday before Easter, 5th and 12th May, 21st June, 23rd August, 28th September, 12th and 22nd November, and on the Monday previous to Christmas Day.

LLANDILO GRABAN, a par. in the hund. of Painscastle, co. Radnor, 5 miles S.E. of Builth, its post town, and 8 N.W. of Hay. It is situated in a secluded spot surrounded by hills, and is watered by the river Wye. A large beech tree on the outskirts of the parish is conspicuous for a long distance. The tithes were commuted in 1839. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £72, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Teilo. The parochial charities produce about £20 per annum.

LLANDILO-TALYBONT, a par. in the hund. of Swansea, co. Glamorgan, 6 miles N.E. of Llanelly, its post town, and 7 N.W. of Swansea. It is situated on the river Llwchwr, and the Llanelly and Vale of Towey railway passes through the neighbourhood. The par. includes the hmlts. of Briskedwin, Glynloughor, Gwenlais, Tyr-y-Brenin, and Ynislougher. Coal is obtained in large quantities. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £140. The church is dedicated to St. Teilo. The Independents and Calvinistic Methodists have places of worship. The charities produce about £3 per annum. The Welsh bard Jeuan Lawdden was a native of this place. Near the banks of the river are traces of an ancient camp. A fair is held on the first Monday after Christmas day (old style).

LLANDILOVANE, LLANDEILO-ARFAN, or LLANDILOR-FANE, a par. in the hund. of Merthyr, co. Brecon, 8 miles E. of Llandovery, and 10 N.W. of Brecknock, its post town. It is situated in a hilly district on the river Ciliene, a tributary of the Usk. A portion of this parish was a demesne of the abbey of Strata Florida. The village, which is considerable, is divided into Upper and Lower. The tithes were commuted in 1839. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £83. The church is dedicated to St. Teilo. Llandilo Hall is the principal residence.

LLANDINABO, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Wormelow, co. Hereford, 6 miles N.W. of Ross, its post town, and 7½ S. of Hereford. It is situated in the vicinity of the river Wye. The Fawley station on the Great Western railway is 3½ miles E. of the village. The main road from Ross to Hereford passes through it. There is no village, only a few farmhouses. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £104. The church, dedicated to St. Dinebo, is a stone structure, somewhat ancient, with a western tower. There are charities of about £3 per annum. Sir Hungerford Hoskyns is lord of the manor.

LLANDINAM, a par. in the hund. of Llanidloes, co. Montgomery, 5 miles N.E. of Llanidloes, its post town, and 6 S.W. of Newtown. It is a station on the Cambrian and Welshpool line of railway. It lies at the base of the Llandinam mountains, which rise to the height of 1,895 feet, and is watered by the river Severn. The par. includes the tnshps. of Banhaglog, Dethynydd, Hengynwydd, and several others. Many of the people are employed in flannel weaving, and in the coarse woollen manufacture. The village is situated on the brink of a cliff overhanging the river. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Bangor, val. £270, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Llonio, possesses a singular wooden belfry. There is also the district church of Banhaglog, the living of which is a perpet. cur. in the patron. of the bishop. On the summit of Cefn Carnedd is an ancient camp called Caer Sws, about 200 yards in diameter. The charities amount to about £18 per annum. There are traces of several entrenchments.

LLANDINGAT, a par. in the hunds. of Perfedd and Cayo, co. Carmarthen, 12 miles N.E. of Llandilofawr, and 1 mile from Llandovery, its post town. It is situated on the rivers Bren and Towey, and includes the borough of Llandovery, and the hmlts. of Forest, Telych, and Ystrad. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. with Llanvair-ar-y-bryn, £254, in the patron. of the bishop. The parish church, dedicated to St. Dingal, stands on the site of an old Roman camp. There is also the district church of Ystradffyn, a perpet. cur., val. £59. The charities amount to £2 per annum. Coins an other Roman remains have been found here.

LLANDINIR, a tnshp. in the par. of Berriew, co. Montgomery, 4 miles N.W. of Montgomery.

LLANDISILIO GOGO, or GOGOFAU (UPPER AND LOWER), a par. in the hund. of Moyddyn, co. Cardigan, 7 miles S.W. of Aberayron, and 18 from Lampeter, its post town. It is situated on the western coast, near Cardigan Bay, and includes the vils. of Capel Cynon and Penybont. This was formerly a possession of the Ap Harrys family. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £303, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Tysilio, is an ancient edifice. It contains a screen, piscina, and an octagonal font. There is also the district church of Capel Cynon, a perpet. cur., val. £100, in the patron. of the bishop. Here are remains of ancient entrenchments. Cwm Tydwr is an old seat of the Tudors.

LLANDISSILIO, a par. in the hunds. of Dungleddy and Derllys, cos. Pembroke and Carmarthen, 4 miles N. of Narberth, its post town, and 20 from Carmarthen. It is watered by the river Cleddau. The village is considerable. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £144, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Tysilio. The parochial charities amount to about £9 per annum. In the church are some old inscriptions, recently found. In the neighbourhood are traces of ancient camps and a Druidical circle.

LLANDOGO, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Ragland, co. Monmouth, 6 miles S.E. of Monmouth, its post town, and 7 N. of Chepstow. It is situated at the foot of Beacon Hill, on the W. bank of the river Wye, which here makes a bend. The tide flows up to about this point. The village is remarkably neat, consisting of cottages rising one above another, interspersed with gardens and orchards, and backed by woods. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. with the cur. of Whitebrook annexed, £112, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Dochoe. The charities produce about £1 per annum.

LLAN-DOUGH, or LLANDOCH, a par. in the hund. of Cowbridge, co. Glamorgan, 2 miles S. of Cowbridge, its post town, 7 from Cowbridge Road railway station, and 12 E. of Cardiff. The river Cowbridge flows through it. Limestone is obtained. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. with that of St. Mary's church annexed, £325. The church is dedicated to St. Dochdwy, and has monuments to the Walche family. Walters, who compiled the Welsh dictionary, once held this living. Here are remains of Llan-dough Castle; a modern seat bearing that name is the principal residence.

LLANDOUGH-JUXTA-PENARTH, a par. in the hund. of Dinas Powis, co. Glamorgan, 3 miles S. of Cardiff, its post town, and 11 from Llantrissant. It is situated on the N. shore of the Bristol Channel, near the mouth of the river Taff; and the river Ely flows through it. Here are limestone quarries. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Leckwith, in the dioc. of Llandaff. The church is dedicated to St. Dochdwy, and has the remains of an ancient cross. There are charities of about £2 per annum. A farm here was formerly the seat of the Herbert family.

LLANDOVERY, a municipal borough and market town in the par. of Llandingat, hund. of Perfedd, co. Carmarthen, 21 miles S.E. of Lampeter, 24 N.E. of Carmarthen, and 192 from London. It has a station on the Llanelly and Vale of Towey railway. It is situated near the confluence of the rivers Bran and Gwdderig. The whole neighbourhood is well watered by streams abounding with fish. The Roman highway Sarn Helen, on which there was a station, passed in the vicinity. The town consists of one main street, and eight smaller ones branching from it. It contains a spacious market-house recently erected, and the shell of a castle built about the 12th century, which, after passing through several families, was destroyed by Cromwell's orders. At the E. end of the town is a curious old house, built in 1620 by Vicar Pritchard, the bard. The town was incorporated in the reign of Richard III.; and its present government is vested in a mayor, 4 aldermen, and 12 common councilmen, but with no magisterial functions. Petty sessions for the hundred are held weekly, and a county court monthly. It is a polling-place for the county elections. The workhouse for the Llandovery Poor-law Union is in this parish. There are lead mines and corn-mills, but no manufactures are carried on. The trade is chiefly local, being connected with the markets and fairs, and the supply of the summer visitors. The living is a vic. annexed to that of Llandingat. The church, called Llanfairarybryn, stands on rather high ground, in the middle of the old Roman station. The Independents, Baptists, Calvinistic and Wesleyan Methodists, have chapels. There are National and British schools for boys and girls; also the Welsh collegiate institution, founded in 1849, by Thomas Phillips, Esq., of London, for the purpose of imparting to young men of the principality a sound classical and mathematical education, in addition to a thorough knowledge of their mother tongue. The building is in the Tudor style of architecture, and complete in all its departments. In the neighbourhood there are remains of the ancient castle, and proceeding up the river, which is here crossed by a bridge, the country presents a somewhat rugged appearance. Earl Cawdor is lord of the manor. There are many good residences. Market days are Wednesday and Saturday. Fairs are held on 17th April, 5th June, 2nd August, 22nd October, and 16th November, for the sale of horses, cattle, and live stock.

LLANDOW, or LLANDWR, a par. in the hund. of Ogmore, co. Glamorgan, 3 miles S.W. of Cowbridge its post town, and 6 S.E. of Bridgend. It is a small rustic place. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £266, in the patron. of Jesus College, Oxford. The church is an ancient structure, dedicated to the Holy Trinity.

LLANDOWROR, a par. in the hund. of Derllys, co. Carmarthen, 2 miles S.W. of St. Clears, its post town, and 4 N.W. of Laugharne. The river Taff flows through the neighbourhood, which yields stone suitable for building purposes. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £132. The church is dedicated to St. Cringat, and has a monument to a former rector, named Jones, placed here by Mrs. Bevan, who founded the Welsh circulating schools.

LLANDRE, a hmlt. in the par. of Llangwnnor, co. Carmarthen, in the vicinity of the town of Carmarthen.

LLANDRILLO, a par. in the hund. of Edernion, co. Merioneth, 5 miles S.W. of Corwen, its post town, and 7 N.E. of Bala. It is situated in a vale at the foot of the Berwyn mountains, near the pass known as Milltir Gerrig, and is watered by the river Dee. The par. includes several tnshps., of which Cilan and Dinam are the principal, and the glen of the Afon Dinam. Slate quarries are worked. The tithes were commuted in 1840. The rectorial tithes are vested in the ecclesiastical commissioners. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £302, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is an ancient edifice, dedicated to St. Trillo. The charities amount to about £3 per annum. Here is a cromlech and other Druidical remains. Fairs are held on 25th February, 3rd May, 29th June, 28th August, and 14th November.

LLANDRILLO-YN-RHOS, a par. partly in the hund. of Creuddyn, co. Carnarvon, and partly in that of Isdulas, co. Denbigh, 3 miles N.E. of Conway, its post town, and 8 W. of Abergele. The Colwyn station on the Chester and Holyhead line of railway is about 2 miles S.E. of the village. It is situated on the northern coast, near Little Orme's Head, and W. of Abergele Bay. The par. includes 7 tnshps., of which Colwyn and Eirias are the principal. The inhabitants are mostly engaged in the fisheries. During the summer months steamers from Liverpool, and occasionally from Carnarvon and Beaumaris, call at the landing-stage of Llandudno. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £343, in the patron. of the bishop. There is also the district church of St. Catherine, Colwyn, a perpet. cur., val. £170, in the gift of the vicar. The church, dedicated to St. Trillo, has a tower, remarkable for having double-stepped battlements. It contains some stained-glass windows, and an ancient Norman font. The Wesleyans have a chapel. The parochial charities produce about £14 per annum. Here are the remains of an ancient seat of the Conways. About half a mile distant from the village is Capel Trillo, a rude little building, asserted by tradition to be earlier than the Norman Conquest, but, according to the Rev. H. L. Jones, not older than the 16th century.

LLANDRINDOD, a par. and small watering-place in the hund. of Cefnllys, co. Radnor, 6 miles N. of Builth, its post town, and 8 W. of New Radnor. It is situated on the river Ithon, surrounded by open common. This has been a watering-place since about 1696, famous for its springs possessing chalybeate, saline and sulphurous properties. There are two good hotels, the Pump-house and Rock-house, for the accommodation of visitors to the spa. In this parish is an ancient lead mine, supposed by some to have been worked by the Romans. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £48, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to the Holy Trinity. The charities amount to about £2 per annum. In the vicinity are numerous entrenchments and tumuli, showing that this must have been a considerable Roman station.

LLANDRINIO, a par. in the hund. of Deythur, co. Montgomery, 9 miles E. of Llanfyllin, 9 S. of Oswestry, its post town, and 13 from Shrewsbury. It is situated on the northern bank of the Severn, at the confluence of the river Vyrnwy. Offa's Dyke and the Montgomery canal pass through the par., which includes the tnshps. of Llan and Trederwen. The soil is productive, and the land well cultivated. The tithes were commuted in 1840. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £580, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Trinio, is an old structure, recently restored. The Baptists have a chapel, built in 1829, and there is a place of worship for Wesleyans. The parochial endowments amount to about £15 per annum. Llandrinio Hall is the principal residence.

LLANDRYGARN, a par. in the hund. of Llyfon, co. Anglesey, 2 miles from Gwyndy, 4 miles S.W. of Llanerchymedd, and 6 N.W. of Llangefni, its post town. The par. includes the hmlt. and chplry. of Gwyndu. It is a small agricultural place. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Bangor, val. with that of Bodwrog annexed, £125, in the patron. of Jesus College, Oxford. The church is dedicated to St. Trygan. There are small charities of about £2 per annum. Here are some remains of the old seat of Rhys ap Llewelyn, who assisted Henry VII. at Bosworth.

LLANDUDNO, a par. and watering-place in the hund. of Creuddyn, co. Carnarvon, 4 miles N. of Conway, its post town, and 12 N.W. of Abergele. It is a station on the Chester and Holyhead railway, which has a branch line to Llanrwst. There are two tnshps., upper and lower, abounding in copper, lime, &c. The village, which is considerable, is situated under the promontory called Great Orme's Head. Until within the last twenty years it was an insignificant village, resorted to only by a few families for the sake of its delicious western breezes, but since the opening of the railway it has vastly increased in prosperity, and may be styled the Welsh Brighton, not only from the abundance, but the excellent quality of its accommodations offered to the visitors. Its main features are a crescent following the sweep of the bay, with parallel streets running across from it to the Conway Sands, thus possessing the peculiar advantage of two different aspects, enabling persons to bathe in almost any weather. The neighbourhood abounds with walks and scenery, both inland and by the seashore, attractive to the naturalist, the antiquary, and the pleasure seeker. The cliffs are the resort of various kinds of sea fowl. The only drawbacks are the want of vegetation that characterises the scenery, and the very high price of lodgings, but this latter defect will probably pass away as soon as the novelty of a new and fashionable watering-place has worn off. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Bangor, val. with the cur. of St. Tudno, £363, in the patron. of the Archdeacon of Merioneth. The church is a modern structure, dedicated to St. Tudno. The parochial charities amount to about £14 per annum. Near the ruins of the old church on the cliffs is a semaphore signal, which until recently formed part of the Holyhead and Liverpool telegraph, but all these stations are now disused, having given place to the electric wires which follow the course of the high roads. Quantities of Roman remains have been found here, and in the vicinity of Dinas Fort is a logan stone called Cryd Tudno.

LLANDUDWEN, a par. in the hund. of Dinlaen, co. Carnarvon, 6 miles W. of Pwllheli, its post town, and 10 from Nevin. The village is very small, containing only a dozen cottages. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect.* of Rhiw, in the dioc. of Bangor. The church is dedicated to St. Tudwen.

LLANDULAS. See LLANDDULAS, co. Denbigh.

LLANDULAS, or NEW CHURCH IN TYR ABBOT, a par. in the hund. of Builth, co. Brecon, 13 miles S.W. of Builth, its post town, and 14 N.W. of Brecon. It is situated at the foot of the lofty hill Nynydd Epynt, and is watered by a tributary of the river Wye. The Roman road, Via Julia Montana, passes through it. Rhys ap Gruffydd gave it to the Abbey of Strata Florida, which he founded. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £43. The church is a small structure.

LLANDULPH. See LANDULPH, co. Cornwall.

LLANDURY. See CAPEL-LLANDURY, co. Carmarthen.

LLANDWROG, UPPER AND LOWER, a par. in the hund. of Uwch-Gorfai, co. Carnarvon, 4 miles S.W. of Carnarvon, its post town, and 14 from Nevin. It is situated near the northern extremity of Carnarvon Bay, and includes the vils. of Bethesda and Tylon. The neighbourhood yields copper and slate. A large number of the people are employed in the slate quarries, from whence there is a tramroad to Carnarvon. Edward I. is said to have once made a stay here. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bangor, val. £314, in the patron. of the Bishop of Llandaff. There is also the district church of St. Thomas. The parish church, dedicated to St. Twrog, has recently been restored. Here is an hospital, or almshouse, founded by Mrs. Glynne, for the reception of twelve ladies of reduced circumstances, and endowed with property producing £200 per annum. There are other charities amounting to about £18. The Roman road Sarn Helen passed through this district, and overlooking the sea is Dinas Dinlle, a strongly fortified camp with a double range of escarpments, said to have been connected with Segontium. Lord Newborough is lord of the manor, and sole proprietor.

LLANDYFEILOG. See LLANDEFEILOG, co. Carmarthen.

LLANDYFEISANT, or LLANDEFEYSON, a par. in the hund. of Cayo, co. Carmarthen, 1 mile W. of Llandilofawr, its post town, and 13 miles E. of Carmarthen. It is a small agricultural village. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's. The church is said to have been built on the site of a Roman temple. Near this spot coins and other relics relating to that period have been found. Here is a spring which rises and falls twice daily, called by the people Nant-y-Rheibis, or the charmed spring. Some ruins of Dynevor Castle are to be seen, near which is Newton Park, the seat of Lord Dynevor.

LLANDYFNAN. See LLANDDYFNAN, co. Anglesey.

LLAN-DYFODOG, a par. in the hund. of Ogmore, co. Glamorgan, 6 miles N.E. of Bridgend, its post town, and 6 N.W. of Llantrissaint. It is situated on a tributary of the river Ogmore, and includes the vils. of Blackmill and Pantyrid. Coal and iron are obtained here. There are chalybeate springs. The manor belongs to the Duchy of Lancaster, and the inhabitants are free from all tolls at markets and fairs in England, except those of Oxford and Cambridge. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £89. The church is dedicated to St. Tyvodwg. The charities amount to about £3 per annum.

LLANDYFRIOG, a par. in the hund. of Troedyraur, co. Cardigan, 2 miles E. of Newcastle-in-Emlyn, its post town, and 10 from Cardigan. The par. includes the tnshp. of Adpar, with the vils. of Aber and Penddol. The village, which is considerable, is situated on the N. bank of the river Teifi. The tithes were commuted in 1839. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. with the rect. of Llanvair-Trelygen, £147, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Tyvriog.

LLANDYFRYDOG, a par. in the hund. of Twrcelyn, co. Anglesey, 1 mile N.E. of Llanerchymedd, its post town, and 5 from Amlwch. It is situated on the river Dulas. Copper is obtained here. Many of the people are employed in the celebrated copper mines on Parys Mountain. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bangor, val. with the cur. of Llanfihangel-Tre-r-Beirdd annexed, £457, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Tyvrydog, is an ancient structure, standing on the same spot as one founded in the 5th century. There are charities of about £8 per annum. The Calvinistic Methodists have a chapel. In the neighbourhood are two wells held in reverence by the superstitious.

LLANDYGWIDD, a par. in the hund. of Troedyraur, co. Cardigan, 4 miles S.E. of Cardigan, and 5 N. of Newcastle-in-Emlyn, its post town. It is situated on the river Teifi, within a short distance of what is called the Salmon Leap. The bishop of the diocese formerly had a palace here, now belonging to the Griffith family. The tithes were commuted in 1839. The living is a perpet.

cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £130, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Dygwydd. Blaenpant, Noyadd Trevawr, Llwnduris, Manarifed, and Stradmore Vale, are the principal seats.

LLANDYNAM, a tnshp. in the par. of Llandysilio, co. Denbigh, 2 miles N.W. of Llangollen. The river Dee flows through it.

LLANDYRNOG, a par. in the hund. of Ruthin, co. Denbigh, 4 miles N. of Ruthin, and 5 S.E. of Denbigh, its post town. It lies at the base of Bryn-y-Cloddiau, in the vale and near the banks of the river Clwyd. The par. includes five tnshps. of which Astrad and Bauker are the principal. The tithes were commuted in 1839. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, in the patron. of the Bishop of St. David's. The church is dedicated to St. Tyrnog. There are charities amounting to about £7 per annum. Vron Iw, formerly a seat of the Williams family, is now a farm.

LLANDYSIL, a par. in the hund. of Newtown, co. Montgomery, 2 miles S.W. of Montgomery, and 12 from Welshpool, its post town. It is situated near the banks of the river Severn, and includes the tnshps. of Bolbro, Bryntalch, Bronywood, and Rhandir. Woollen weaving is carried on to some extent. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £373, in the patron. of the Bishop of Llandaff. The charities belonging to the parish amount to about £10 per annum. There are the remains of British camps in the neighbourhood.

LLANDYSILIO, a parochial chplry. in the hund. of Tyndaethwy, co. Anglesey, 3 miles S.W. of Beaumaris. Bangor is its post town. It is situated within a short distance of the Menai bridge, and the Llanfair station on the Chester and Holyhead railway. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect.* of Llanvair-Pwllgwyngyll, in the dioc. of Bangor. The church, dedicated to St. Tysilio, is built on the little peninsula Ben Glâs, and at flood tide is separated from the main land.

LLANDYSILIO, a par. in the hund. of Deythur, co. Montgomery, 7 miles E. of Llanfyllin, and 6 from Oswestry, its post town It is situated near the rivers Severn and Vyrnwy, across which latter is a stone bridge. The Montgomery canal and Offa's Dyke, now forming the turnpike road, pass through the parish. It includes six tnshps., of which Domgay and Haughton are the principal. Petty sessions are held here. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £430, in the patron. of the Bishop of St. David's. The church is dedicated to St. Tisilio.

LLANDYSILIO, or LLANTYSILIO, a par. in the hund. of Yale, co. Denbigh, 2 miles N.W. of Llangollen, its post town, and 7 E. of Corwen. It is situated on the northern bank of the river Dee, and includes the tnshps. of Coedwrg, Cymmo, Llandynam, and Maesrychen. Lime and slate are obtained, and some of the people are employed in the woollen manufacture. The village is considerable. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £115. The church is dedicated to St. Tisilio. In this parish are the ruins of the Cistercian Abbey of Llan-Ggwst, also the Eliseg pillar. Llantysilio Hall is the principal residence.

LLANDYSSIL. See LLANDYSIL, co. Montgomery.

LLANDYSSIL, or LLAN-DYSSUL-YWCH-KERDIN, a par. in the hunds. of Troedyraur and Moyddyn, co. Cardigan, 7 miles E. of Newcastle-in-Emlyn, and 11 S.W. of Lampeter, its post town. It is a station on the Carmarthen and Cardigan branch of the South Wales railway. It is situated on the northern bank of the river Teifi, which is here crossed by a bridge. The par. includes the tnshps. of Borthin, Capel-Ddewi, Fairdref, and three others. There were formerly four chapels in the parish, but they are all now in ruins. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. with the cur. of Capel Dewi, £150, in the patron. of the bishop. There is also a sinecure rect., val. £400, in the gift of Jesus College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Tysilio, is for the most part in the early English style of architecture. The Independents and Wesleyan Methodists have chapels. Here are some ancient barrows, and remains of two old castles, belonging to the Humphreys, Maelgwms, and others. Thursday is market day; and fairs are held on 11th February, Thursday previous to Palm Sunday, 21st June, 19th September, and 11th November.

LLANEDARN, a par. in the hund. of Kibbor, co. Glamorgan, 4 miles N.E. of Cardiff, its post town, and 7 S.W. of Newport. It is situated on the river Rumney. The living is a vic. annexed to that of St. Mellon's, in the dioc. of Llandaff. The church is dedicated to St. Edlyrn. The charities of the parish amount to about £5 per annum. Cevn and Ruperra are the principal residences.

LLANEDWEN, a par. in the hund. of Menai, co. Anglesey, 6 miles S.W. of Beaumaris, 6 N.E. of Newborough, and 5 from Carnarvon, its post town. The Llanfair station on the Chester and Holyhead line is about 3 miles N.E. of the village. It is situated on the western coast of Menai Strait, where the Roman general, Suetonius Paulinus, effected a landing, and was one of the sacred spots of the Druids. In the reign of Edward I. an English knight, with some followers, landed here, but was defeated. There is a ferry at Porthamal, near this place. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Llanidan, in the dioc. of Bangor. The church is built on a bank, which gently slopes to the water's edge, and the graves in the churchyard are each set round with box plants, which are trimmed into a compact form resembling a sarcophagus. In the church is a monument to the author of "Mona Antiqua," Rev. H. Rowlands, who was at one time vicar. The charities produce about £5 per annum. Plâs Newydd is the modern seat of the Marquis of Anglesey; Plâs Coch is another residence.

LLANEDY, a par. in the hund. of Carnwallon, co. Carmarthen, 7 miles N.E. of Llanelly, its post town, and 10 from Llandilofawr. It is situated on the river Llwchwr, and the line of railway to Llandilofawr passes through the neighbourhood. Coal is found in this district. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £258. The church is dedicated to St. Edith. The Independents and Calvinistic Methodists have chapels. This was the birthplace of Walters, compiler of a dictionary of the Welsh language. A fair is held on the 8th November, for horses, cattle, and pedlery.

LLANEGRYN, a par. in the hund. of Talybont, co. Merioneth, 7 miles N.W. of Aberdovey, and 10 S.W. of Dolgelly. It is situated in the valley of the Dysynni, near the coast of the Irish Sea. The par. is bounded on the W. by Cardigan Bay, and on the E. by the river Dysynni. It contains the tnshps. of Peniarth and Rhydyrhiw. The neighbourhood abounds with hills, and from several points are obtained good views of Cadr Idris. Slate is obtained here. This was an old seat of the Wynne family. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Bangor, val. £82. The church is dedicated to St. Egryn. It contains a rood-loft, said to have been brought from Cymmer Abbey, a curious Norman font, and several monuments to the Owen family. There is an endowed school (Owen's) with an annual income of £105.

LLANEGWAD, a par. in the hunds. of Cathinog and Elvet, co. Carmarthen, 8 miles S.W. of Llandilofawr, its post town, and 9 from Carmarthen. It is situated at the confluence of the rivers Cothi and Towy, and includes eight hmlts., the principal being Hernin and Monachty. The soil is fertile, and copper is obtained. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £259, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Egwad. The Calvinistic Methodists have a chapel. The parochial endowments produce about £100 per annum.

LLANELIAN, a par. in the hund. of Twrcelyn, co. Anglesey, 2 miles E. of Amlwch, its post town, and 6 N.E. Llanerchymedd. It is situated on the north-eastern part of the coast, the village being about three-quarters of a mile from Lynas Point, where there is a lighthouse and telegraph station, which, previous to the introduction of electric wires, communicated by semaphore with Holyhead and Puffin Island. The par. includes the tnshp. of Rhôsbeirio. Much of the copper ore extracted from the Parys Mountain is exported from this place.

The village is considerable, and many of the inhabitants are engaged in the mines. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Bangor, val. with the curs. of Coedanna and Rhôsbeirio annexed, £400, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Elian, has a steeple, an architectural addition unusual in Wales. It is said to stand on the same spot as one built by the saint in the 5th century; and close to it is the ancient chapel, containing a wooden altar of the 15th century, and chest to receive the people's offerings. There are still some superstitious observances connected with the chapel. The Calvinistic Methodists have a place of worship. The charities produce about £20 per annum. This was at one time a sanctuary. The saint's holy well, once much resorted to by pilgrims, is now nearly dried up. A wake is held on the first Friday in August.

LLANELIAN, a par. in the hund. of Isdulas, co. Denbigh, 5 miles E. of Conway, and 5 W. of Abergele, its post town. The par. includes the tnshps. of Llan, Llaithfaun, and Twnan. The Chester and Holyhead railway passes through the neighbourhood, and has a station at Abergele. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £249, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Hilarus. The charities amount to about £8 per annum. There is a Calvinistic Methodist chapel. Fairs are held on the first Monday after Easter week, 26th July, 5th October, and 6th December, for cattle.

LLANELIDAN, a par. in the hund. of Ruthin, co. Denbigh, 5 miles S. of Ruthin, its post town, and 8 N.W. of Llangollen. It is situated in the Vale of Clwyd, being watered by a tributary of that river. The par. includes the tnshps. of Bryncume, Garthyneuvedd, Llan, Nantclwyd, and Trewyn-Bodlowgd. The village is considerable. The tithes were commuted in 1839. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £252, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Elidan, and contains monuments to the Lloyd and other families. The parochial charities produce about £30 per annum. The Calvinistic Methodists have a place of worship. A fair is held on the Thursday before Palm Sunday.

LLANELIEU, a par. in the hund. of Talgarth, co. Brecon, 5 miles S.W. of Hay, its post town, and 7 N.E. of Brecknock. It is situated at the foot of the Cradle Mountain. The surrounding scenery is somewhat of a gloomy cast. The village consists of a few scattered houses. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £90. The church is dedicated to St. Ellyw. This parish shares in a fund left by Mr. Rice Powell for apprenticing children. An ancient flint spear head and other remains have been found here. There are several old seats, for the most part converted into farms.

LLANELLEN, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Abergavenny, co. Monmouth, 2 miles S. of Abergavenny, and 8 from Pontypool. It is situated on the western bank of the river Usk, and is crossed by the Brecon canal. It is a small agricultural village. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £105. The church is dedicated to St. Helen. The charities produce about £7 per annum.

LLANELLTYD, a par. in the hund. of Ardudwy, co. Merioneth, 1 mile N.W. of Dolgelly, its post town, and 8 from Barmouth. It is situated under Cadr Idris, at the confluence of the rivers Maw and Wnion, surrounded by scenery the most beautiful of any to be found in Wales. In this spot are the remains of Cymmer Abbey, an establishment of the Cistercian order, founded here near the close of the 12th century by the two sons of Conan, Meredydd, and Gruffydd. At the dissolution of the monasteries the income was valued at £58 15*s.* 4*d.* The ruins indicate that the building was not very extensive. Copper is obtained, and the neighbourhood furnishes a supply of peat. Some of the hills present a barren appearance. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Bangor, val. £62. The church is dedicated to St. Illtyd. There is a Calvinistic Methodist chapel.

LLANELLY, a parochial chplry in the hund. of Crickhowell, co. Brecon, 2 miles S. of Crickhowell, and 5 W. of Abergavenny, its post town. It is situated on the rivers Clydach and Usk, and the Brecon canal passes through it. It includes the parcels of Aberbaidan and Maesgwartha, and two waterfalls. Coal and lime are obtained, and iron ore is smelted at the Clydach and Llyndach iron-works. A tram road passes by the side of the river, under the canal aqueduct to the Beaufort works. The tithes were commuted in 1839. The living is a perpet. cur.* The church is dedicated to St. Ellyw. The parochial charities amount to about £30 per annum. The Independents, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists have chapels.

LLANELLY, a par., seaport, market town, and borough in the hund. of Carnwallon, co. Carmarthen, South Wales, 13 miles S.E. of Carmarthen, and 224½ from London by the South Wales section of the Great Western railway, on which it is a station. The town, which has grown up since the commencement of the present century, is now a thriving port, with a population of near 16,000. It is situated on an estuary, formed by the river Loughor and the sea, called Burry creek, and is intersected by the Llanelly railway, which, after traversing the rich mineral district from near Llandilofawr, runs down to the docks and floating basin, which has 24 feet water, and admits ships of 600 tons register. The graving dock of the railway is admirably constructed, and a breakwater extends from one end of it, which enables vessels to lie at all times in smooth water. Each dock has a scouring reservoir attached to it, and there is besides a reservoir of great capacity for scouring the harbour and the channel. The par., which is of large extent, comprising above 18,000 acres, contains, besides the town of Llanelly, the hmlts. of Berwick, Glyn, Hengoed, and Westfa or Westoac. It is a borough by prescription, being nominally governed by a portreeve, burgesses, town officers, &c., who have an income of about £500 a year, but how or when they acquired their corporate capacity is not satisfactorily determined. It is also a parliamentary borough, contributory under the Reform Act to Carmarthen, in returning one member to parliament, and is a polling-place for the county elections. The town, which is irregularly built, has undergone great improvement of late years, the old and dilapidated dwellings of the ancient village having been superseded by excellent dwelling-houses and good ranges of shops. It contains a townhall, convenient market-house, custom-house, branch of the South Wales Bank, savings-bank, union poorhouse, and the smelting-house of the Cambrian Copper Works, belonging to the firm of Neville & Co., with a chimney 231 feet high, which is a conspicuous object for miles around. It has risen into considerable commercial importance from the mineral treasures in its vicinity, and its ready access to the sea, which renders it an outlet for a large part of the South Wales coal-field. The principal article of export is coal, in the working of which more than 1,000 persons are constantly employed. The coal is of a fine quality, called anthracite, and besides being largely supplied coastwise for home consumption, is sent to Malta, Marseilles, Odessa, Constantinople, Suez, Bombay, and other distant ports, for the supply of steam vessels recoaling at those ports. The other commerce of the place consists in the export of iron, culm, copper-cake, and sheating, fire-clay and ironstone, and in the importation of copper ore and grain for the supply of the surrounding district. There are several foundries, iron, copper, tin, and lead works, and a pottery. In the vicinity of the town are several handsome mansions, as Llangrannick House, of the Earl of Warwick; Llanelly House, of W. Chambers, Esq., whose hounds hunt round here; Stradey of D. Lewis, Esq.; and Glanmor, of R. Neville, Esq. Its sub-ports are, Carmarthen, St. Clear, Laugharne, and Pembrey. Llanelly Poor-law Union comprises seven parishes, six in Carmarthen and one in Glamorgan. It also the head of a superintendent registry, and of a new County Court district. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. with the curs. of St. John and Trinity annexed, £100. The church is an old structure situated near the centre of the town, remarkable for having two towers, one of which terminates in an embattled parapet, the base being much broader than the top, while the other tower is surmounted by a steeple. There are also two new churches, one of which is in the Wern district, and another at Velin-foel. The living of St. Paul's district church is a perpet. cur., val. £150, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately. The Baptists, Independents, Wesleyans, Roman Catholics, and Primitive Methodists have places of worship. There are National and other schools. Market days are Thursday and Saturday. Fairs are held on Holy Thursday and 30th September.

LLANELWEDD, a par. in the hund. of Colwyn, co. Radnor, 1 mile N. of Builth, its post town, and 11 miles S.W. of New Radnor. It is situated on the river Wye, and is under good cultivation. The village consists of a few scattered houses. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £100. The church is dedicated to St. Matthew. The charities consist of a free school endowment of £17 per annum. Here are traces of camps, and other remains. Llanelwedd Hall, a former seat of the Gwynne family, Wellfield, and Pen-y-Cerig, of the Thomases, are the principal residences.

LLANELWY. See St. Asaph.

LLANENDDWYN, a par. in the hund. of Ardudwy, co. Merioneth, 1 mile from Harlech, 9 miles N.W. of Dolgelly, and 5 from Barmouth, its post town. It is situated on the coast of Cardigan Bay. Flannel is manufactured here, and manganese is obtained. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bangor, val. with the cur. of Llanddwywe annexed, £350, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is an ancient structure dedicated to St. Enddwyn. There is a chapel belonging to the Calvinistic Methodists. The charities amount to nearly £20 per annum. Jones, one of the judges who sat on the trial of Charles I., was buried here.

LLANENGAN, a par. in the hund. of Commitmaen, co. Carnarvon, 7 miles S.W. Pwllheli, its post town. It is situated on the south-eastern coast, having Porth Nigel, or "Hell's Mouth" bay on the W., and St. Tudwall's islands lying off the eastern side. The neighbourhood is hilly. Lead is obtained here. In 1839 the Transit was wrecked on the E. side of the bay. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bangor, £450, in the patron. of the Bishop of Llandaff. The church, dedicated to St. Einion, is a structure of the 16th century, recently restored by Mr. Kennedy. It contains a richly carved screen, which for beauty of design is unequalled in Wales. The charities amount to about £6 per annum. Here are remains of ancient camps, and on St. Tudwall's island ruins of an old chapel.

LLANERCHAYRON, a par. in the hund. of Troedyraur, co. Cardigan, 2 miles S.E. of Aberayron, and 10 N.W. of Lampeter, its post town. It is situated on the bank of the river Ayron. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £73. The church is dedicated to St. Non. Llanerchayron House, formerly a seat of the Parry family, is the principal residence.

LLANERCHFYDDA, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanmawddwy, hund. of Talybont, co. Merioneth, 4 miles N.E. of Dinas-Mowddwy.

LLANERCHGOEDIOG, a tnshp. in the pars. of Talyllyn and Towyn, co. Merioneth, in the vicinity of Towyn.

LLANERCHILA, a tnshp. in the par. of Llansaintffraid, hund. of Deythur, co. Montgomery, 4 miles N.E. of Llanfyllin.

LLANERCHROCHWELL, a tnshp. in the par. of Guilsfield and borough of Welshpool, co. Montgomery, 2 miles from Welshpool, and 7 from Llanfair.

LLANERCHYDOL, a tnshp. in the par. of Welshpool, co. Montgomery, 1 mile W. of the town of Welshpool.

LLANERCHYMEDD VILL, a parochial chplry. and small market town in the hund. of Menai, 13 miles N.W. of Beaumaris, and 15 N.E. of Holyhead. Bangor is its post town. The Gaerwen station on the Chester and Holyhead railway is about 8 miles from the village. It is situated within about 6 miles distance from the Irish Sea, and the main road from the Menai Bridge to Amlwch passes through the town, which consists of two main streets crossing each other at right angles. The principal trade is in the manufacture of snuff, for which it is somewhat famous, and in connection with the numerous cattle fairs. Rope making and hide curing afford some employmet. Petty sessions are held monthly. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Bangor, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has been recently restored, and has a heavy embattled tower. The Independents, Baptists, and Calvinistic Methodists have chapels. There is a National school. Wednesday is market day. Fairs are held on 1st January, 10th March, 4th April, 6th May, 23rd June, 14th August, 2nd October, and 13th November, for the sale of cattle, &c., and on the Wednesday following the last named, one for the hiring of servants.

LLANERCHYMRIS, a tnshp. in the par. of Llansaintffraid, co. Montgomery, 6 miles E. of Llanfyllin. It is situated near the river Vyrnwy.

LLANERFYL, a par. in the hund. of Methrafel, co. Montgomery, 5 miles from Llanfair, 9 S.W. of Llanfyllin, and 12 W. of Welshpool, its post town. It is situated on the banks of the river Bann. The Roman road Sarn Sws crosses one part of the parish, which includes the tnshps. of Crane, Cefn-llys-isaf, Cefn-llys-uchaf, and Llyssin. There are traces of copper. The village is very considerable. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £435, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is an old edifice in the early English style of architecture, dedicated to St. Erval. Here is a well called after the saint, and a very old stone bearing an inscription. The charities consist of an endowment to Foster's school, producing about £32 per annum. Here are traces of ancient camps and barrows, remains of old seats, and several pools. A fair is held on the 7th May.

LLANEUGRAD, or LLANEIGRAD, a par. in the hund. of Twrcelyn, co. Anglesey, 5 miles E. of Llanerchymedd, 5 N. of Llangefni, and 9 from Gwindy, its post town. It is situated on the north-western coast of Red Wharfe Bay, and includes the chplry. of Llanallgo and the tnshp. of Bryngola. In 803 a battle was fought here between the Britons and the Danes, in which the latter were defeated. Marble and limestone abound. Near the village is an ancient manor-house and park with a curious Elizabethan pigeon house. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bangor, val. with the cur. of Llanallgo annexed, £135, in the patron. of the Bishop of Llandaff. The church is dedicated to St. Eugrad. The parochial charities amount to about £7 per annum.

LLAN-FABON, a par. in the hund. of Caerphilly, co. Glamorgan, 5 miles N.W. of Caerphilly, and 8 S.E. of Merthyr-Tydvil. It is situated on the rivers Romxey and Taff. The Taff Vale railway and the Merthyr-Tydvil canal pass in the vicinity. The hmlts. of Garth and Glyn-rumney are included in this parish. The village is very considerable. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £120, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church is dedicated to St. Mabon. There are small charities of about £2 per annum.

LLANFACHRETH, a par. in the hund. of Tal-y-Bolion, co. Anglesey, 5 miles E. of Holyhead, its post town and nearest railway station, and 9 from Llanerchymedd. It is situated on the small river Alaw, south of Holyhead Bay. This is an agricultural district. The village is a small rustic place. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bangor, val. with the curs. of Llanenghenedl and Llanfigael, £557, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Mackraeth. There are charities of about £2 yearly value.

LLANFACHRETH, a par. in the hund. of Talybont, co. Merioneth, 3 miles N.E. of Dolgelly, its post town. It is situated in a hilly neighbourhood, watered by a tributary of the river Maw, and abounds with good pasturage. The par. includes the tnshps. of Isafon and Uwchafon-Nannaw. Copper is obtained here. The village is situated at the N. foot of Moel Orthrwm, in the valley of the Mawddach. Here is a romantic pathway called the Precipice Walk. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Bangor, val. £92. The church is dedicated to St. Mackreth, and was restored partly at the expense of the patron in 1820. The Calvinistic Methodists have two chapels. The parochial charities produce about £9 per annum. This was the birthplace of Rice Jones, the Welsh bard. Fairs are held on the 22nd April, 30th June, 15th August, and 23rd October.

LLANFAELOG, a parochial chplry. in the hund. of Llyfon, co. Anglesea, 3 miles N.W. of Aberffraw, and 6 from Gwindy, its post town. The Ty Croyes station on the Chester and Holyhead railway is within a short distance of the village. It is situated N. of Carnarvon Bay, and includes the hmlt. of Pengornisiog, Many of the inhabitants are engaged in the fishery. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect.* of Llanbeulan, in the dioc. of Bangor. The church, dedicated to St. Maelog, is a modern structure, said to have been erected on the same spot as one built about the 7th century. The Calvinistic Methodists have a place of worship. There are charities of about £2 per annum. There are two cromlechs in this parish.

LLAN-FAELRHYS, a par. in the hund. of Commitmaen, co. Carnarvon, 4 miles from Bardsey Isle, and 12 S.W. of Pwllheli, its post town. It is situated on the W. coast of Porthniull Bay. Here are mines yielding manganese. The village is situated on high, rugged ground, overlooking the sweep of Porth Nigel, or Hell's Mouth, where the Transit was wrecked in 1839. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the vic. of Aberdaron, in the dioc. of Bangor. The church is dedicated to St. Maelrhys. The parochial endowments produce about £9 per annum.

LLANFAENOR. See LLANVANOS, co. Monmouth.

LLANFAES, a par. in the hund. of Tyndaethwy, and borough of Beaumaris, co. Anglesey, 1 mile N. of Beaumaris, its post town, and 5 miles S.W. of Bangor, is situated on the coast of Beaumaris Bay. A conflict between the Saxons, under Egbert, and the Welsh, took place here, when the latter were defeated. Llewellyn founded a friary of the Franciscan order about the 13th century, which suffered greatly during the wars of Owain Glyndwr, and afterwards came to the Whyte and Brownlow families, by whom the monuments have been removed to Beaumaris, Penmynydd, Llandegai, and Llanbeblig. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Bangor, val. with that of Penmon annexed, £180. The church, dedicated to St. Catherine, is a modern structure, with a broach spire, rebuilt in 1845, on the site of one built in the 14th century. It contains monuments of the Whyte family. The charities consist of Lady Bulkeley's bequest, producing about £38 per annum. A stone coffin, that for about 200 years had been used as a horse-trough, was discovered to have been that of the Princess Joan, and is now preserved. The fort of Castell aber Llienawg has been in military occupation on two occasions, the last being in 1645. On the wooded heights above the village is Henllys, the seat of Captain Lewis Hampton, where the bedstead of Owen Tudor is still preserved. Near the shore is Tre'r-castell, a modern structure, incorporated with an old mansion of the time of Edward I., formerly a seat of the Tudors.

LLANFAETHLY, a par. in the hund. of Tal-y-Bolion, co. Anglesey, 6 miles N.E. of Holyhead, its post town and railway station. It is situated on the eastern side of Holyhead Bay. Here was a station of the Liverpool and Holyhead semaphore telegraph line. Fullers' earth is obtained. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bangor, val. with the cur. of Llanvwrog annexed, £636, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Maethlu. The parochial charities produce about £9 per annum.

LLANFAGLAN, a par. in the hund. of Is-Gorfai, co. Carnarvon, 2 miles S.W. of Carnarvon, its post town, and 2 from Pontnewydd, where there is a station of the Nantlle railway. It is situated on the S.W. shore of Menai Strait. On the sandy beach many rare marine plants are found. At the extreme point of the bay is Belan, a miniature fort and bathing-place of Lord Newborough, guarding the entrance of the Menai. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Llanwda, in the dioc. of Bangor. The church, dedicated to St. Baglan, contains a stone, inscribed "Lovernus Fil."

LLANFAIR. See LLANVAIR.

LLANFAIRARYBRYN, a par. in the hund. of Perfedd, co. Carmarthen, 1 mile N. of Llandovery, its post town and railway station on the Llanelly and Vale of Towey line, and 15 miles from Lampeter. The river Bran flows on the E. and the Towey on the W. of the par., which includes the hmlts. of Randir Abbot, Randir Canol, Randir Isaf, and Randir Uchaf. The Romans had a station here on Sarn Helen, which passes through the parish. Lead is found here. The tithes were commuted in 1839. The living is a vic. annexed to that of Llandingat, in the dioc. of St. David's. The church is dedicated to St. Mary, and, as the name of the place indicates, stands on a hill, being within the limits of the ancient camp. Roman coins and other remains have been found here.

LLANFAIR-CAEREINION, a par. and small market town in the hund. of Mathrafel, co. Montgomery, 10 miles N.W. of Montgomery, and 8 from Welshpool, its post town. The par. which is watered by the three rivers Banwy, Einion, and Vyrnwy, includes 12 tnshps., the principal of which are Llanlodian, Penarth, Pentyrch, and Rhewhirieth. The town contains a town-hall. Petty sessions are held here, and it is a polling place for the country elections. Flannel-weaving is carried on. The streams abound with fish. Some of the people are very dexterous in spearing them. This is the centre of the excise district for Mid Wales. The parish derives the suffix to its name from the Castell Caer Einion, about 3 miles to the E. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £358, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. It contains the effigy of a knight. The charities amount to about £6 per annum. The Dissenting bodies have five chapels here. Coins and numerous Roman remains were found here about the middle of last century. Wednesday is market day. Fairs are held on Shrove Tuesday, Saturday before the 18th May, 26th July, 3rd October, 1st November, and the Friday previous to Christmas Day, for cattle, &c.

LLANFAIR-CLYDOGAU, a par. in the hund. of Moyddyn, co. Cardigan, 3 miles N.E. of Lampeter, its post town, and 7 S.W. of Tregaron. It is situated on the river Teifi, here crossed by a bridge. Copper and lead ore are found here. The tithes were commuted in 1839. The lead mines of Llanfair, the property of Lord Carrington, have yielded a large quantity of silver. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £65. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The whole of this parish, and the neighbouring one of Cellan, are very rich in monumental stones, cairns, and camps, all betokening the proximity of the ancient highway Sarn Helen, a junction apparently taking place at this point between the Roman road which led from Maridunum, and that from the station of Llanfair-arybryn. The Earl of Lisburne and Lord Carrington are lords of the manor.

LLANFAIR DYFFRYN CLWYD, a par. in the hund. of Ruthin, co. Denbigh, 2 miles S.E. of Ruthin, its post town. It is situated in Clwyd Vale, on the banks of that river, and includes the tnshps. of Derwen-Llanerch, Euarch, Faynol, and Garthgynam. The Bishop of Bangor for the time being is the owner of the soil. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £300, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is in the later English style of architecture, dedicated to St. Mary. It has some very old monuments. In addition to the parish church there is Jesus chapel, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £60. The parochial endowments produce nearly £90 per annum. There are remains of an entrenched camp.

LLANFAIR-FECHAN, a par. in the hund. of Uchaf, co. Carnarvon, 6 miles E. of Bangor, and 7 W. of Conway, its post town. It is situated on the coast of Beaumaris Bay, and is a station on the Chester and Holyhead line of railway. On the E. is Penmaen Mawr, 1,540 feet in height, with the remains of an old camp on its summit. The land is mostly used for pasture. Adjoining this par. are the Lavan Sands, comprising 96 square miles, which have apparently been inundated by the sea. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bangor, val. £305, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. There are charities amounting to about £2 per annum.

LLANFAIR-IN-BUILTH. See BUILTH, co. Brecon.

LLANFAIR-IS-GAER, a par. in the hund. of Is-Gorfai, co. Carnarvon, 2 miles N.E. of Carnarvon, its post town, and 7 from Bangor. It is situated on the shore of the Menai Strait, and includes the tnshp. of Brynffynon and port of Dinorwig. The Roman general, Agricola, crossed over to Anglesey at this point. Copper is obtained here, and slate is shipped at the above port. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Bangor, val. £77, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is close to the water's edge. This place takes the suffix to its name—Gaer, signifying a fort, or place for defence—from the old Roman camp. The seats are Plas Llanfair, and on the opposite bank, Plas Llanidand, the estate of Lord Boston.

LLANFAIR-JUXTA-HARLECH, a par. in the hund. of Ardudwy, co. Merioneth, 1 mile S. of Harlech, and 8 miles N.E. of Barmouth, its post town. It is situated on the western coast, looking over St. George's Channel. It is a small agricultural village. The tithes were commuted in 1839. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Bangor, val. £165, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The charities amount to about £5 per annum.

LLANFAIR-MATHAFARN-EITHAF, a parochial chplry. in the hund. of Tyndaethwy, co. Anglesey, 5 miles from Llanerch-y-med, 7 miles N.W. of Beaumaris, its post town, and the same distance from the Llanfair railway station. It is situated on the N.W. shore of Red Wharfe Bay. It abounds with fine marbles of different varieties, and stone used for corn mills. The village is considerable. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect. of Llanddyvnan, in the dioc. of Bangor. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. In the churchyard is a mutilated cross and a modern carnedd, composed of a rude heap of stones, forming a cavern, the mouth of which is closed by a large stone after the ancient Jewish fashion, and is at present the burial-place of the Wynne famiiy. The charities produce about £3 per annum. This was the birthplace of Goronwy Owen, the linguist and bard.

LLANFAIR-NANT-GWYN, a par. in the hund. of Kemess, co. Pembroke, 6 miles S. of Cardigan, its post town, and 7 E. of Newport. The quartz rock which abounds here gives origin to the name Nant-Gwyn, signifying "white vale." It is a small rustic place. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £70. The church is dedicated to St. David. The charities amount to about £2 per annum.

LLANFAIR-NANT-Y-GOF, a par. in the hund. of Dewisland, co. Pembroke, 3 miles S. of Fishguard, and 10 N. of Haverfordwest, its post town. The river Gwayne flows through it. The village is small. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect.* of Letterston, in the dioc. of St. David's. The church is dedicated to St. Mary.

LLANFAIR-ORLLWYN, a par. in the hund. of Troedyraur, co. Cardigan, 4 miles E. of Newcastle-in-Emlyn, its post town, and 14 S.W. of Lampeter. It is watered by the river Teifi, which bounds it on the S. The soil is fertile. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £155, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Mary.

LLANFAIR-PWLLGWNGYLL, a par. in the hund. of Tyndaethwy, co. Anglesey, 5 miles S.W. of Beaumaris, and 3 from Bangor, its post town. It is situated on the western coast of Menai Strait, in the vicinity of the eddy known as the Swelly Rocks whirlpool. The latter half of the name of this place signifies the "raging pool." The village is situated on the turnpike road near the line of the Holyhead railway, which has a station here. Stone for building purposes is quarried and shipped at the tiny port of Pwl-fanog. To the right of the road is the Anglesea column, 100 feet high, which was erected to commemorate the prowess of the late Marquis of Anglesey at the battle of Waterloo. It was crowned with a colossal statue in bronze by Noble in 1860, and stands on a rock 260 feet high, called Craig-y-dinas, from the summit of which is obtained one of the finest panoramic views in Wales. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bangor, val. with the cur. of Llandysillio annexed, £250, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, stands close to the water's edge on the Anglesey side, and has been partially rebuilt, retaining a portion of the former edifice. It has a remarkable broach spire. There are small charities amounting to about £2 per annum. Within a short distance of the village is Plâs Newydd, the seat of the Marquis of Anglesey, but at present occupied by the Dowager Lady Willoughby de Broke. It is surrounded by hills, and is noted for having been the temporary residence of George IV., who paid a visit to the Marquis of Anglesey on his way to Ireland, and subsequently of the Queen, who, while Princess Victoria, spent a summer here in 1832. Within the grounds, which are sheltered on all but the river side by hanging woods, are two cromlechs, one, the most perfect in the principality, being 12 feet long by 10 broad. Rather nearer to the village of Llanfair is Plâs Llanfair, the seat of Lord Clarence Paget.

LLANFAIRTALHAIARN, a par. in the hunds. of Isdulas and Isaled, co. Denbigh, 5 miles S.W. of Abergele, its post town, and 8 N.W. of Denbigh. It is situated at the confluence of the rivers Aled and Elwy, and includes about 12 tnshps., of which Barog and Botreal are the principal. One of the princes of the ancient Britons had a fortified residence here. On the opposite bank of the Elwy is the wooded park of Garthewin, the property of the Wynnes. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £326, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Talhaiarn, and has monuments of the Wynne and other families. There is an endowed school and other charities amounting to about £22 per annum.

LLANFAIR-TREF-HELYGEN, a par. in the hund. of Troedyraur, co. Cardigan, 4 miles N.W. of Newcastle-in-Emlyn, and 10 miles N.E. of Cardigan, its post town. The village, which is small, consists of a few scattered houses. The living is a rect. annexed to the vic.* of Llandyfriog, in the dioc. of St. David.'s. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has long been in a ruinous state.

LLANFAIR-YN-ENBWLL, a chplry. in the par. of Rhôscolyn, hund. of Llyfon, co. Anglesey, 4 miles S.E. of Holyhead its post town, and 12 from Llangefni. The land is under good cultivation. The Chester and Holyhead railway passes through the neighbourhood. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect.* of Rhôscolyn, in the dioc. of Bangor. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. There are charities of about £2 per annum.

LLANFAIRYNHORNWY, a parochial chplry. in the hund. of Tal-y-Bolion, co. Anglesey, 7 miles N.W. of Llanerchymedd, and 8 N.E. of Holyhead. It is situated to the E. of Bulkley's Bay, and contains quarries of soapstone, verd antique, &c. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect. of Llandeusant, in the dioc. of Bangor. The church is partly in the Norman style of architecture, and has monuments of the Williams and other families. In the neighbourhood are traces of a Danish camp and other remains.

LLANFAIRYNYCWMMWD, a chplry. in the par. of Llanidan, and hund. of Menai, co. Anglesey, 2 miles N.E. of Newborough, its post town, 4 from Carnarvon, and 6 from Bangor. It is situated on the river Brain. It is of small extent, and contains only a few farmhouses and cottages. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Llanidan, in the dioc. of Bangor. The church is dedicated to St. Mary.

LLANFALLTEG, a par. partly in the hund. of Dungleddy, co. Pembroke, and partly in the hund. of Derllys, co. Carmarthen, South Wales, 4 miles N.E. of Narberth, its post town, and 8 N.W. of St. Clears. It is situated on the river Taff, and includes the hmlt. of Hyreth. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £205, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Mallteg.

LLANFAWR, or LLANFOR, a par. in the hund. of Penllyn, co. Merioneth, 2 miles N.E. of Bala, and 20 from Llangollen. Corwen is its post town. It is situated on the northern bank of the river Dee, in the vicinity of a lake, and includes the tnshps. of Bettws, Garn, Penmaen, and Rhlwaedog. The Welsh, under the aged chief, Llywarch-Hên, had an encounter with the Saxons near this place. The princely bard, having lost most of his friends in the engagement, retired to a hut at Aber-Ciog, now called Dôl-Giog, where his harp discoursed mournfully his woes. He died about the year 634, aged nearly 105, and was buried at Llanfawr. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £224, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Deiniol. There are also two district churches, viz. Fron Goch and Trinity, the livings of both perpet. curs. val. respectively, £125 and £100, in the patron. of the bishop. The charities produce altogether about £70 per annum. Fairs are held on the 20th May and 14th August.

LLANFECHAN. See LLAN-AFAN-FECHAN, co. Brecon.

LLANFECHAN, a par. in the hund. of Pool, co. Montgomery, 3 miles E. of Llanfyllin, and 8 S.W. of Oswestry, its post town. It is situated on a tributary of the river Severn, and includes five tnshps., the principal of which is Bodyvol. The tithes were commuted in 1839. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £530, in the patron. of the Bishop of Llandaff. The church is dedicated to St. Garmon. The charities amount to about £12 per annum. There are traces of ancient camps, and remains of several old seats. Bryngwyn is the principal residence.

LLANFECHAN, a tnshp. in the par. of Tregynon, co. Montgomery, 4 miles N. of Newton.

LLANFECHAN, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanwrin, co. Montgomery, 3 miles N.E. of Machynlleth. It is situated in the vale of Dovey.

LLANFECHELL, a par. in the hund. of Tal-y-Bolion, co. Anglesey, 3 miles W. of Amlwch, 5 N.W. of Llanerchymedd, and 9 from Gwindy, its post town. It is situated on the coast, and includes the tnshp. of Tregele. Soap-stone, and the valuable serpentine marble called verd antique, are obtained here. The village, which is considerable, was once a market town. Some of the people are employed in flannel-weaving, and others in the copper mines of the Parys Mountain. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bangor, val. £300, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Mechel. The charities amount to about £11 per annum, besides several cottages for the poor. Here are a broken cromlech, and other remains of antiquity. Fairs are held on Holy Thursday, 5th August, 6th and 21st September, 5th and 26th November.

LLANFEDDIGED, a tnshp. in the par. of Llangelynin, co. Merioneth, 4 miles N. of Towyn.

LLANFEDW, a hmlt. in the par. of Michaelstonfedw, co. Glamorgan, 6 miles from Cardiff, and 7 from Newport.

LLANFERRAS, a par. in the hund. of Yale, co. Denbigh, 4 miles S.W. of Mold, its post town, and 5 N.E. of Ruthin. It is situated in the vale of the river Alyn, which here winds through a glen. There are mines yielding abundance of lead. From the range of hills at the back of the village a view of the vale and the town of Ruthin is obtained. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £313, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Berres, and has recently been restored. The parochial charities amount to about £20 per annum. This was the birthplace of Davies, a weaver's son, who compiled the Welsh and Latin Dictionary while rector of this parish in 1630.

LLANFFINAN, a par. in the hund. of Menai, co. Anglesey, 2 miles E. of Llangefni, 2 from the Llanfair station on the Crew and Chester section of the North-Western railway, and 7 from Bangor, its post town. Limestone is obtained here. The living is a cur. annexed to the perpet. cur. of Llanfihangel-Esceifiog. The church is a modern edifice, dedicated to St. Finnan. Close by the village is Plâs Penmynydd, a very ancient mansion, built in 1370, and the birthplace of Owen Tudor, who married Queen Catherine, widow of Henry V.

LLANFFLEWYN, a parochial chplry. in the hund. of Tal-y-Bolion, co. Anglesey, 5 miles N.W. of Llanerchymed, 8 from Holyhead, its post town, and 9 from Gwindy. The village is a small rustic place. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect.* of Llanrhyddlad, in the dioc. of Bangor. The church is very ancient. In this parish are traces of ancient camps.

LLANFFYD. See LAMPHEY, co. Pembroke.

LLANFIGAEL, or LLANFUGAIL, a parochial chplry. in the hund. of Tal-y-Bolion, co. Anglesey, 6 miles S.W. of Llanerchymedd, and 7 from Holyhead, its post town. The river Alaw flows through it. There is no village, only a few farmhouses. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect.* of Llanfachreth, in the dioc. of Bangor. There is no church. The Calvinistic Methodists have a chapel.

LLANFIHANGEL, a hmlt. united with Cilwr, in the par. of Talley, co. Carmarthen, 5 miles N.W. of Llangattock.

LLANFIHANGEL, a hmlt. in the par. of Llanfihangel-Bryn-Pabuan, hund. of Builth, co. Brecon. 5 miles N.W. of Llangattock.

LLANFIHANGEL, or LLANFIHANGEL-YN-GWYNFA, a par. in the hund. of Llanfyllin, co. Montgomery, 4 miles S.W. of Llanfyllin, its post town, and 7 N.W. of Welchpool. It is situated on the old Roman highway Caer Sws. The par. is divided into Upper and Lower, and includes 12 tnshps., of which Dolwar, Fachwen, and Llywdiarth are the principal. This parish was formerly included in Gwynva, within the principality of Powysland. The neighbourhood is hilly, and much of the land unenclosed. The village is considerable. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £334, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is dedicated to St. Michael, who has given name to the parish, Llan-mihangel signifying the "church of St. Michael the Archangel." There are also two district churches, viz. Pont Dolanog and Fachwen, the livings of both which are perpet. curs., val. respectively, £84 and £216, the former in the patron. of the bishop. The charities consist of an endowment by Mrs. Strangeways for the relief of clergymen's widows, producing about £140 per annum, also Vaughan's school endowment worth £18, and other charities, amounting in all to about £166 per annum. A fair is held on the 9th May.

LLANFIHANGEL. See LLANVIHANGEL.

LLANFIHANGEL-ABERBYTHYCH, a par. in the hund. of Iskennen, co. Carmarthen, 3 miles S.W. of Llandilofawr, its post town, and 11 E. of Carmarthen. It is situated on the S. bank of the Towey, near the confluence of the two rivers Bythie and Towey. The Llanelly and Vale of Towey railway passes through the neighbourhood, and has a station at Llandilo. The par. includes the hmlts. of Berrach, Calliver, and several others. Limestone is quarried. The manor forms part of the Duchy of Lancaster. The tithes were commuted in 1839. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £72. The church is dedicated to St. Michael, and was built in the early part of the 17th century by the Vaughan family. Within a short distance are the seats Dynevor Castle, Gronger Hill, and Dryslwyn.

LLANFIHANGEL-ABERCOWIN, a par. in the hund. of Derllys, co. Carmarthen, 2 miles N. of Laugharne, and 9 S.W. of Carmarthen its post town. It is situated on the northern bank of the Taff, near the confluence of that river with the Cowyn, and includes the hmlt. of Pentre. The village is considerable. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Mydrim, in the dioc. of St. David's. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. There are places of worship belonging to the Calvinistic and Wesleyan Methodists. In the churchyard are three ancient tombs called the "Pilgrims' tombs." The charities amount to about £10 per annum. Fairs are held on 12th May and 10th October.

LLANFIHANGEL-ABERGWESSIN, a par. in the hund. of Builth, co. Brecon, 12 miles N.W. of Builth, its post town, and 13 S.W. of Rhayader. It is situated at the foot of Drugarn Mountain, near the junction of the rivers Gwessin and Irvon. Lead and salt are found here. The village is a small rustic place. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Llanafan-fawr, in the dioc. of St. David's. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. The parochial charities produce about £13 per annum. Lwyn Madoc is the principal residence.

LLANFIHANGEL-AR-ARTH, a par. in the hund. of Cathinog, co. Carmarthen, 9 miles E. of Newcastle-in-Emlyn, and 10 S.W. of Lampeter, and 14 from Carmarthen its post town. It is situated on the southern bank of the river Teifi, which is here crossed by a bridge. The par. includes the hmlts. of Cwm-Arlloes, Fro, Gwydderûg, Gwyddil, and Pencader. It was here that Grufydd ab Llewellyn defeated Hywel in 1059, and Henry II. received the submission of Rhys-ab-Grufydd in 1162. The village is a well-built and prosperous place. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £127. The church is dedicated to St. Michael, and has some monuments. In this parish are traces of ancient burial-places.

LLANFIHANGEL-BACHELLAETH, a par. in the hund. of Gafflogian, co. Carnarvon, 5 miles W. of Pwllheli, its post town, and 5 S.E. of Nevin. It is situated at the foot of Carn Fadrin, and was formerly a seat of the Gwynedds. The village consists of a few farmhouses. The tithes were commuted in 1839. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect.* of Llanbedrog, in the dioc. of Bangor. The church is dedicated to St. Michael.

LLANFIHANGEL BEGUILDY. See BEGUILDY, co. Radnor.

LLANFIHANGEL-BRYN-PABUAN, a par. in the hund. of Builth, co. Brecon, 5 miles N.W. of Builth, its post town, and 7 S. of Rhayader. It is watered by the rivers Wherwi and Wye, which abound with trout. The par. includes the hmlts. of Llanfihangel and Rhosferig. This place is somewhat resorted to for its medicinal springs. There is a pump-room on a small scale. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Llanafan-fawr, in the dioc. of St. David's. The church is dedicated to St. Michael.

LLANFIHANGEL-CASTELL-GWALTER. See LLANFIHANGEL-GENEUR-GLYNN, co. Cardigan.

LLANFIHANGEL-CILFARGEN, a par. in the hund. of Cathinog, co. Carmarthen, 4 miles N.W. of Llandilofawr, its post town and railway station, and 10 N.E. of Carmarthen. The river Dulas, a tributary of the Towey, flows through the parish. There is no village, only a few scattered houses. The tithes were commuted in 1839. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £113. The church is dedicated to St. Michael.

LLANFIHANGEL-CWMDU, a par. in the hund. of Crickhowell, co. Brecon, 4 miles N.W. of Crickhowell, its post town, and 7 S.E. of Brecknock. It is situated at the base of the Black mountains, and is watered by a tributary of the river Usk. The Roman road Via Julia Montana passed through the par., which includes the tnshps. of Blayney, Cenol, Cilwych, and Tretower. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £340. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is a modern structure (1830), occupying the spot on which the ancient one stood. There is also a district church at Tretower, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £64. Here are traces of British and Roman camps; also coins and other relics, testifying to Roman occupation, have been found. Penniyarth is the principal residence.

LLANFIHANGEL-ESCEIFIOG, or LLANFIHANGEL-PENTRE-BERW, a par. in the hund. of Menai, co. Anglesey, 2 miles S.E. of Llangefni, 7 N.E. of Newborough, and 7 from Bangor, its post town. It is situated on the river Cefni, and includes the tnshp. of Gaeriben. Here are collieries, from whence there is a tramroad of about 7 miles to Red Wharfe Bay. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Bangor, val. with the cur. of Llanffinan annexed, £120, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Michael, and is of ancient date. The charities, including £5 to Jones's school, produce about £9 per annum.

LLANFIHANGEL-FACH. See LLANFIHANGEL-HELYGEN, co. Radnor.

LLANFIHANGEL-FECHAN, a chplry. in the par. of Llandefailog-Fach, hund. of Merthyr, co. Brecon, 5 miles N. of Brecknock, its post town. It is situated on the banks of the river Hhondu, across which there is a bridge. There are some good views here, especially from the site of the old British camp. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the rect.* of Llandefailog-fâch, in the dioc. of St. David's. The church is dedicated to St. Michael, and contains monuments to the Powell family, of Castle-Madoc, by whom it was built.

LLANFIHANGEL-GENEUR-GLYNN, or LLANFIHANGEL-CASTELL-GWALTER, a par. in the hund. of Geneur-Glynn, co. Cardigan, 4 miles N.E. of Aberystwith, its post town, and 10 from Machynlleth. It is a station on the Newtown and Machynlleth and Aberystwith and Welsh Coast railway. It is situated on the coast of Cardigan Bay, S. of the river Dovey. The Roman way Sarn Helen passes through it. The par. includes the tnshps. of Caelan-y-Maesmor, Cyfoeth-y-Brenin, and five others. A castle was built here by Walter Longsword in the 12th century, of which there are still some remains. Lead is obtained in the hills. The village is very considerable, and some of the inhabitants are engaged in the flannel manufacture. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £221, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is built in the form of a cross, and is dedicated to St. Michael. There is a Calvinistic Methodist chapel in the village; also a school with an endowment producing £5 per annum. Here is a cromlech popularly known as Gwely Taliesin, i.e. "Taliesin's bed," and several Druidical remains. Gogerthan is the principal residence.

LLANFIHANGEL-GLYN-Y-MYFYR, a par., partly in the hund. of Isaled, co. Denbigh, and partly in that of Edernion, co. Merioneth, 6 miles N.W. of Corwen, its post town, 2 from Cerrig, and 12 S. of Denbigh. It is situated on the river Allwen, and includes the tnshps. of Cefnnpost, Gysulog, Llysan, and Maesyr-Odyn. The country is hilly and mostly devoted to pasture. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £215, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St Michael. The Calvinistic Methodists have a chapel. There are small charities of about £1 per annum. Jones, the archæologist, takes the title of his work, "Myvyrian Archæology," from this place. A fair is held on the 16th February.

LLANFIHANGEL HELYGEN, or LLANFIHANGEL-FACH, a par. in the hund. of Rhayader, co. Radnor, 5 miles S.E. of Rhayader, its post town, and 7 from Builth, and 10 W. of New Radnor. It is watered by the rivers Ithon and Dulais, and the land is under good cultivation. There is no village, only a few farm houses and cottages. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. with that of Llanyre annexed, £250, in the patron. of the bishop and Vicar of Nantmel alternately. The church is dedicated to St. Michael.

LLANFIHANGEL-LLEDROD, or LLANFIHANGEL-LLETHYR-TROED, a par. in the hund. of Upper-Llar, co. Cardigan, 6 miles N.W. of Tregaron, and 9 S.E. of Aberystwith, its post town. It is situated on the river Ystwith, and includes the tnshps. of Upper and Lower Lledrod. The village is neatly built. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £112, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Michael, and has a monument to Evan Evans, the poet. There is a school with a small endowment. The ancient seat of the Lloyds, called Ffos-y-Bleddeiad, is now a farm. A fair is held on the 7th October.

LLANFIHANGEL-NANTBRANE, UPPER AND LOWER, a par. in the hund. of Merthyr, co. Brecon, 8 miles N.W. of Brecknock, its post town, and 13 from Builth. It is situated on the river Bran, a tributary of the Usk. It is a small village. The tithes were commuted in 1839. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £66. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. There is a Calvinistic Methodist chapel.

LLANFIHANGEL-PENBEDW, a par. in the hund. of Kilgerran, co. Pembroke, 4 miles S.E. of Cardigan, and 5 S.W. of Newcastle-in-Emlyn, its post town. It is situated at the source of the river Nevern. The land is under cultivation. The village is a small rustic place. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £89. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. The principal seat is Kilrhue.

LLANFIHANGEL-PENTRE-BERW. See LLANFIHANGEL-ESCEIFIOG, co. Anglesey.

LLANFIHANGEL-RHOS-Y-CORN, a par. in the hund. of Cathinog, co. Carmarthen, 9 miles N.W. of Llandilofawr, and 12 N.E. of Carmarthen, its post town. It is situated on a tributary of the river Cothi. The flannel manufacture is carried on here to a small extent. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic.* of Llanllwny, in the dioc. of St. David's. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. The charities amount to about £2 per annum. The Rudd family had a seat here, called Forest, now a farm.

LLANFIHANGEL RYDITHON, a par. in the hund. of Cefnllys, or Kevenlleece, co. Radnor, 7 miles N.W. of Radnor, and 10 S.W. of Knighton, its post town. The rivers Ithon and Aron flow through the neighbourhood. This parish was formerly a forest, and much of the land is still unenclosed. The village, which is a small agricultural place, is situated to the E. of the river Ithon. The tithes were commuted in 1839. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to that of Llandewiystradenny, in the dioc. of St. David's. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. There are charities producing about £2 per annum.

LLANFIHANGEL-TAL-Y-LLYN, a par. in the hund. of Talgarth, co. Brecon, 4 miles E. of Brecknock, its post town, and 9 N.W. of Crickhowell. It is situated, as its name implies, on a lake called Llyn Savaddan. This property has been held successively by the families of Walwyn, Wynter, Phillips, and others, and is now possessed by that of Bold. The village consists of a few farm-houses. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £158. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. The charities are about £2 per annum. The lake abounds with perch, pike, &c.

LLANFIHANGEL-TRE-'R-BEIRDD, a parochial chplry. in the hund. of Twrcelyn, co. Anglesey, 2 miles E. of Llanerchymedd, its post town, 5 N. of Llangefni, and 11 from Beaumaris. This place was formerly a favourite retreat of the Welsh bards, and hence it received its distinctive appellation. The village, which is small, lies about 5 miles distant from Moelfre Bay. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect.* of Llandyfrydog, in the dioc. of Bangor. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is a very small structure with a single aisle. The charities amount to about £2 per annum. On Bodafon Hill is "the shapely cromlech" mentioned by Rowlands, the table stone of which measures 10 feet in length by 8 in breadth; it is commonly named among the natives "y-maen-Llwydd." At some distance, near a place called Barras, is another small cromlech, now in ruins.

LLANFIHANGEL-TYN-SYLWY, a parochial chplry. in the hund. of Tyndaethwy, co. Anglesey, 3 miles N. of Beaumaris, its post town. It is situated on the northern coast, and is included in the borough of Beaumaris. Limestone is quarried. There is no village, only about a dozen houses. The living is a cur. annexed to the perpet. cur. of Llangoed, in the dioc. of Bangor. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. In the neighbourhood coins of some of the Roman emperors, and other remains, have been found. Here is also an ancient British fort called Dinas Sylwy, and part of a stone circle, commonly called "Arthur's Round Table."

LLANFIHANGEL-UWCH-GUILLY, a chplry. in the par. of Abergwilly, co. Carmarthen, 5 miles N.E. of Carmarthen. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £75, in the gift of the vicar of the parish. The church is dedicated to St. Michael.

LLANFIHANGEL-Y-CROYDDIN, UPPER AND LOWER, a par. in the hund. of Upper Ilar, co. Cardigan, 7 miles S.E. of Aberystwith, its post town, and 10 N.W. of Tregaron. It is situated in a locality watered by the three rivers Mynach, Rheidol, and Ystwith. Within a short distance of the village is the Devil's bridge and waterfall. There are several lead mines. The village, which is very considerable, is neatly built. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £126, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. There is a Calvinistic Methodists' chapel. Hafod is the principal residence.

LLANFIHANGEL-YN-HOWYN, a par. in the hund. of Llyfon, co. Anglesey, 5 miles S.E. of Holyhead, its post town, and 9 from Llangefni. It is situated on the coast of Cymmyran Bay. The village is a small rustic place. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect.* of Rhôscolyn, in the dioc. of Bangor. The church is an ancient structure, dedicated to St. Michael. There are small charities of £1 per annum. A fair is held on 10th October for hiring servants.

LLANFIHANGEL-Y-PENNANT, a par. in the hund. of Evionydd, co. Carnarvon, 5 miles N.W. of Tremadoc, and 13 S. of Carnarvon, its post town. It is situated at the foot of Moel Hebog, and includes the hmlt. of Cenin. The village is a small place, situated among the hills. The tithes were commuted in 1839. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Bangor, val. £127, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. The charities produce about £3 per annum. Brynkir is the principal residence.

LLANFIHANGEL-Y-PENNANT, a par. in the hund. of Estimauer, co. Merioneth, 7 miles S.W. of Dolgelly, its post town, and 9 N. of Aberdovey. It is situated at the foot of Cader Idris, and includes the tnshps. of Cedris, Llanllwydan, Maestrefnant, and Uwchygarreg. The surface is hilly, and only partially enclosed. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Bangor, val. £46, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Michael, and has an ancient font. There are small charities of about £1 per annum. A fort stood here in early times. Caerberllan Hall is the principal residence.

LLANFIHANGEL-YSTRAD, a par. in the hund. of Moyddyn, co. Cardigan, 6 miles S.E. of Aber-Ayron, and 5 from Lampeter, its post town. It is situated on the western bank of the river Ayron, and includes the tnshp. of Capel. The village is considerable. The tithes were commuted in 1839. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £96, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is an ancient edifice, dedicated to St. Michael, and has an antique font. The Independents have a place of worship. In the neighbourhood are the remains of a Runic column.

LLANFIHANGEL-Y-TRAETHAU, a par. in the hund. of Ardudwy, co. Merioneth, 3 miles N. of Harlech, 6 S.W. of Maentwrog, and 7 from Tan-y-bwllch, its post town. It is situated on the S. side, and at the mouth of the river Dwyryd. The parish is partly hilly, and near the river the soil is marshy. Towards the latter part of the 11th century this place was the scene of a battle between the Welsh chieftains. The workhouse for the Festinog Poor-law Union is situated in this parish. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Bangor, val. with that of Llandecwyn annexed, £250, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Michael, and has a monumental stone to the founder of the first church. There is also a district church at Penryhyn Dendraeth. The charities are worth about £3 per annum. There are two chapels belonging to the Calvinistic Methodists.

LLANFOIST, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Abergavenny, co. Monmouth, 5 miles S.W. of Abergavenny, its post town, and 5 N.E. of Aberystwith. It is situated on the river Usk, which bounds it on the N. and E., and is crossed by the Brecon canal. The village is considerable, and commands a view of Abergavenny, the Skyrrid, and the Sugar Loaf. The Monmouthshire hounds are kennelled here. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the mines. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £174. The church is styled St. Faith's. Llanfoist House is the principal residence.

LLANFORDA, a tnshp. in the par. of Oswestry, co. Salop, in the vicinity of the town of Oswestry, and 17 miles N.W. of Shrewsbury. It is situated near Offa's Dyke and the Shrewsbury and Cheshire railway. Lord Avonmore has a seat here.

LLANFRENE, a hmlt. in the par. of Llandyssil, co. Cardigan, 7 miles E. of Newcastle-in-Emlyn. The hamlet, which is considerable, is situated near the bridge over the river Teifi.

LLANFROTHEN, a par. in the hund. of Ardudwy, co. Merioneth, 3 miles N.W. of Maentwrog, and 8 N.E. of Harlech. Port Madoc is its post town. It is situated N. of the river Traeth Mawr, near the point where much land has been reclaimed from the sea. The village is considerable, and many of the inhabitants are engaged in the lead mines. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bangor, val. £115, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Brothen. There is a Calvinistic Methodist chapel, and a school. The charities are worth about £2 per annum. In the neighbourhood of Ynys Gwyddel some Roman remains have been found.

LLANFWROG, a parochial chplry. in the hund. of Tal-y-Bolion, co. Anglesey, 3 miles N.E. of Holyhead, its post town. It is situated at the N. side of Holyhead Bay. The village is small, and is chiefly agricultural. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect.* of Llanfaethly, in the dioc. of Bangor. The church is an ancient structure, dedicated to St. Mwrog. There is a Calvinistic Methodist chapel, also several small charities of about £1 per annum.

LLANFWROG, a par. in the hund. of Ruthin, co. Denbigh, 1 mile W. of Ruthin, its post town, and 8 miles S.E. of Denbigh. It is situated on the river Clwydd, and forms part of the borough of Ruthin. The par. includes the tnshps. of Bodlyngharad, Caltegfa, Cily-Groestwyd, and Pen-y-Coed, with part of the town of Ruthin. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £429, in the patron. of the Bishop of St. David's. The church, which is double-bodied like most in this district, contains some rather singular arcades. There is a hospital for ten poor persons, founded by Lady Jane Bagot, which has a revenue of £164, besides other charities, producing in all about £173 per annum. The principal residences are Poole Park, the seat of Lord Bagot, a modern structure in the Elizabethan style of architecture, Woodlands, and Plasnewydd.

LLANFYLLIN, a hund., one of the subdivisions of the co. Montgomery, North Wales, situated in the northern part of the co. It includes the pars. of Hirnant, Llanfihangel, Llanfyllin, Llangynog, Llanwddyn, Meifod, Pennant, and a portion of Llanrhaiadryn-Mochnant.

LLANFYLLIN, a par. and market town in the hund. of Llanfyllin, co. Montgomery, 14 miles S.W. of Oswestry, 15 N.W. of Montgomery, and 180 from London. It is the terminus of the Llanfyllin branch of the Cambrian railway. The parish is situated in a valley, surrounded by lofty hills, and watered by two streams, called Cain and Abel, tributaries of the Vyrnwy. The Roman way, Caer Sws, passes through a part of this par. which includes 12 tnshps., of which Bachie, Bodfach, and Bodyddan are the principal. The town was first incorporated by Llewellyn ap Grufydd, in the reign of Edward II. The government is vested in a high steward, recorder, two bailiffs, fourteen burgesses, a townclerk, and two serjeants-at-arms. It, with other towns, unites with Montgomery in returning one member to parliament. The town contains a townhall, in which petty sessions are held, a commercial bank, savings-bank, union workhouse, and a prison. Malting, tanning, and brewing are the principal sources of employment. In the vicinity are several corn-mills. The road between Bala and Shrewsbury passes through the main street of the town, which is celebrated for its excellent "cwrw," or ale; hence the proverb, "Old ale fills Llanfyllin with young widows." Llanfyllin is the seat of a Poor-law Union, new County Court, and superintendent registry districts. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £650, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Myllin, was rebuilt at the beginning of the last century. It is celebrated for its peal of bells. The parochial endowments, including £133 to Vaughan's school, produce nearly £160 per annum. The Independents, Baptists, Calvinistic and Wesleyan Methodists, have each a chapel. There are National and British schools. Thursday is market day. Fairs are held on the Wednesday before Easter, 24th May, 28th June, 10th August, 5th October, and 8th December, for the sale of horses, cattle, and general live stock.

LLANFYNYDD, a chplry. in the par. of Hope, co. Flint, in the vicinity of Caergwrle. Mold is its post town. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £250, in the gift of the vicar of the parish.

LLANFYNYDD, a par. in the hund. of Cathinog, co. Carmarthen, 6 miles N.W. of Llandilofawr, its post town, and 10 N.E. of Carmarthen. It is situated on the E. bank of the Cothi, a tributary of the river Towey, and includes about 12 hmlts., the two principal being Briskin and Cathilas. This is a prebend to Brecon College. The tithes were commuted in 1839. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £150, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Egwad. The parochial charities, including an endowment to Jones's school of £37, produce about £50 per annum. There are remains of a camp in the neighbourhood. Fairs are held on the 6th May, 5th July, 28th September, and 19th November.

LLANFYRNACH, or LLANVERNACH, a par. in the hund. of Kemess, co. Pembroke, 9 miles S.W. of Newcastle-in-Emlyn, 11 S.E. of Newport, and 8 from Cardigan, its post town. It is situated at the foot of the hills, in the vicinity of Precelly Mountain, and is watered by the river Taff. Lead is obtained here, and there are several chalybeate springs. The tithes were commuted in 1839. The village is considerable. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £176. The church is dedicated to St. Brynach. There are tumuli and other remains in the neighbourhood.

LLANGADFAN, a par. in the hund. of Mathrafel, co. Montgomery, 7 miles N.W. of Llanfair, its post town, and 10 S.W. of Llanfyllin. It is situated on the rivers Banw and Vyrnwy, and includes seven tnshps., the principal being Cyffin and Moelfeliarth. There was founded here a religious house in connection with the abbey of Strata Florida. A riot took place here in 1645, when Vavasour Powell came to sequester the benefices of the Montgomeryshire clergy. The Eira, a considerable stream, flows from the hills on the S. Copper, lead, and other ores, are found here. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £299, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Cadvan, the patron saint of Towyn. The parochial charities produce about £7 per annum. Here are a great many ancient remains, consisting of entrenchments, burial-places, a cromlech, &c. Llwydiarth Hall is the seat of Sir W. W. Wynn, Bart.

LLANGADOCK, a par. and small decayed town in the hund. of Perfedd, co. Carmarthen, 7 miles S.W. of Llandovery, and 7 N.E. of Llandilofawr. The Lanelly and Vale of Towey line of railway has a station here. It is situated in a vale, at the foot of the Black mountains, between the river Sefni and the Sawdde, a tributary of the Towey. The par. includes the hmlts. of Above-Sawthe, Dyffrun-Cidrich, and Gwynfe Quarter Bach. There formerly was a castle here, the site of which was afterwards occupied by Bishop Beck's college. In the wars of Edward I. the church was plundered by the English soldiers. Here are collieries and lime works, in which the people are mostly employed. The river is here crossed by a stone bridge. The Roman Via Julia Montana passed through the neighbourhood. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. with that of Llanthoysaint annexed, £267, in the patron. of the bishop. The parish church stands on gently rising ground. There is also the district church of Gwynvai, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £107, in the gift of the vicar. The Independents, Wesleyans, and Calvinistic Methodists, have each a chapel. There is a British school, also one supported by Mr. Lloyd. Slight traces of iron and lead have been found. Glansevins and Tan-yr-Allt are the two principal residences. About 3 miles S.W. of the town, on the summit of a detached hill, called Garn-Gôch, is a Roman encampment, in the form of a regular parallelogram, the walls of which are still in some places from 20 to 30 feet high, formed of large and shattered blocks, giving a cyclopean appearance to those desolate and venerable ruins. Thursday is market day. Fairs are held on 16th January, 12th March, last Thursday in May, 9th June, first Thursday after the 11th September, second Thursday after old Michaelmas Day, and 11th December.

LLANGADWALADR, or EGLWYSAEL, a par. in the hund. of Malltraeth, co. Anglesey, 2 miles E. of Aberffraw, its post town, 4 N.W. of Newborough, and 1 mile from the Bodorgan railway station. It is situated within a short distance of the S. coast. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. The principal residences are Bodowen, an ancient seat of the Owens, and Bodorgan, the seat of F. O. Meyrick, Esq., which at one period was celebrated for possessing the finest gardens in Wales. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bangor, val. £245, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Cadwaladr, stands on the site of one built in the 7th century, and was formerly a sanctuary. Over the S. doorway is a very ancient inscribed stone, which has been, thus deciphered:—"Catamanus Rex sapientissimus opinatissimus omnium regum;" and in the church is a punning monument to Owen Wood. Adjoining the church are the Owen and Meyrick chapels, with an E. window of stained glass. A full account of this window, which has been restored by Wilmeshurst, is given by Browne Willis, in his History of Bangor Cathedral. The parochial charities produce about £16 per annum. There is a village school.

LLANGAFELACH, a hund., one of the subdivisions of the co. Glamorgan. It is situated in the western part of the co., and includes the pars. of Llangafelach, Llanguick, and Llansamlet.

LLANGAFELACH, a par. in the hund. of the same name, co. Glamorgan, 3 miles N. of Swansea, its post town, and 7 W. of Neath. It is situated in the vicinity of the river Tawe, and includes the tnshps. of Morriston, Mawr, Penderry, and Rhyndwy Clydach, and the hmlt. of Close. The South Wales railway has a station at Swansea. A battle was fought here in 990, in which Howel, Prince of South Wales, was defeated. This was formerly a demesne of Brecon College, and is a very populous parish, containing above 10,000 persons. Numerous copper-works and colleries give employment to the inhabitants. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. with the cur. of Gorseinon annexed, £300, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Cyvelach, is a modern edifice, affixed to the tower of the former one. It has monuments to the Llewellyn family. There are also two district churches, the one at Clydach, and the other at Morriston; the livings of both are perpet. curs., val. respectively, £150 and £85. The Independents, Wesleyans, and Calvinistic Methodists, have places of worship. The parochial charities amount to nearly £30 per annum. In the neighbourhood some Roman remains have been met with. A fair is held on the 1st March.

LLANGAFFO, a par. in the hund. of Menai, co. Anglesey, 4 miles N.W. of Carnarvon, its post town, and 4 S. of Llangefni. It is situated in the vicinity of the Chester and Holyhead railway, the Gaerwen station being a short distance from the village. The place is marshy, and mats are manufactured from the sea-weed. In the parish are slight remains of Bodwyr, an old house of the 16th century. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect. of Llangeinwen, in the dioc. of Bangor. The church, dedicated to St. Caffo, is a modern structure, with a spire, built in 1845. The charities produce about £4 per annum. In the vicinity are views of the Snowdonian mountains, terminating in the W. with the abrupt precipices of Yr Eifl.

LLANGAIN, a par. in the hund. of Derllys, co. Carmarthen, 3 miles S.W. of Carmarthen, its post town, and 6 N. of Kidwelly. The river Towey flows through the parish, the village being situated near the western bank. It is a small agricultural place. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £85. The church is dedicated to St. Synin.

LLAN-GAMMARCH, or LLWYNCADWGAN, a par. in the hund. of Builth, co. Brecon, 7 miles S.W. of Builth, its post town, and 13 N.W. of Brecknock. It is a small village, situated at the confluence of the rivers Gammarch and Irfon. The par. includes the hmlts. of Penbuallt and Treflis. There is a spring of mineral water. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. with the curs. of Llanwrtyd and Llanddewi Abergwessin annexed, £209, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Gammarch. The parochial endowments, including that to Jones's school, produce about £24 per annum. There are remains of a British camp, 240 feet in circumference. Caerau and Llancadwgan are ancient seats, the first belonging to the Lloyds, and the latter to the Cadogans, and on the banks of the Gammarch is Llwyn-Madoc, the seat of H. Thomas, Esq. Several persons eminent in literature have been born here, including Jones, the historian of Brecknock; T. Evans, author of "Drŷch-y-Prŷf Oesoedd," or History of the Britons; James Howel, author of "Familiar Letters."

LLANGAN, a par. partly in the hund. of Derllys, co. Carmarthen, and partly in that of Dungleddy, co. Pembroke, 6 miles N.E. of Narberth, its post town, and 20 W. of Carmarthen. It is situated on the river Tâf, and includes the hmlt. of Camvelin. In the vicinity is Whitland Abbey, founded in the 12th century. The village is small. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £86, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Canna. There is a village school.

LLANGAN, or LLANGANNA, a par. in the hund. of Ogmore, co. Glamorgan, 5 miles S.E. of Bridgend, and 4 N.W. of Cowbridge, its post town. It is situated on the rivers Canna and Ewenny, and includes the vil. of Treves. There are limestone quarries, and lead is obtained. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £244. The church is dedicated to St. Canna. It contains two crosses, one of ancient date. The charities amount to about £6 per annum.

LLANGANHAFAL, or LLANGYNHAVAL, a par. in the hund. of Ruthin, co. Denbigh, 3 miles N.E. of Ruthin, its post town, and 7 W. of Mold. It is situated in a hilly district at the foot of Moel Famman, and includes the tnshps. of Gales, Hendre-Wydd, Nant-y-Nef, and Rhos. Until recently a singular practice existed here, for the elders of families to sit in chairs before the communion table, whilst the rest of the congregation sit in their pews to perform their devotions. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £407, in the patron. of the Bishop of Llandaff. The church is dedicated to St. Cynhaval. There is a Calvinistic Methodist chapel.

LLANGANTEN, a par. in the hund. of Builth, co. Brecon, 2 miles N.W. of Builth, its post town, and 3 N.E. of Llangammarch. It is situated on the bank of the Chweffru, which falls into the Yrfon, a tributary of the Wye. Llewellyn was killed in this neighbourhood. The Yrfon is crossed by a bridge a short distance above its junction with the Wye. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £64, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Catherine, and stands on the brink of the stream. The charities amount to about £5 per annum.

LLANGAR, a par. in the hund. of Edernion, co. Merioneth, 1 mile S.W. of Corwen, its post town, and 10 miles N.E. of Bala. It is situated at the confluence of the rivers Alwen and Dee, and includes the hmlts. of Bryn, Cymmer, and Gwynodl. A large portion of the parish is barren. The village, which is small, stands on the road from Corwen, by the Vale of Edeyrnion. The Dee is crossed by a bridge about a mile distant at Cynwydd. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £160, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is a small structure. This parish enjoys a share of the charities with Corwen. There are traces of an entrenchment.

LLANGARREN, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Wormelow, co. Hereford, 5 miles S.W. of Ross, its post town, and 6 N. of Monmouth. It is situated on Garren Brook, a tributary of the river Wye. The par., which is extensive, includes the tnshps. of Kilreague, Llangunnock, Langstone, Trecilla, Tredoughan, Tretilla, the hmlt. of Llangrove Common, and several small places. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Hereford, to which is annexed the cur. of St. Weonard's, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church is an ancient edifice of the Anglo-Norman period, with a tower and spire. It has undergone thorough repair, and has been much enlarged. It is dedicated to St. Deinst, and contains several monuments. The charities produce about £4 per annum, besides a share in Mrs. F. Scudamore's benefaction for apprenticing poor children. The Independents and Wesleyans have chapels in the several tnshps. There is a good National school for both sexes. The par. contains several manors.

LLANGASTY-TAL-Y-LLYN, a par. in the hund. of Penkelly, co. Brecon, 5 miles S.E. of Brecknock, and 7 N.W. of Crickhowell, its post town. The lake, or llyn, known as Llangorse, is partly in this parish. Some portion of the land is under tillage, but the greater part is in pasture. The road passes to the E. of the lake. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £207. The church, dedicated to St. Gastyn, is a small structure, and has lately been restored. It has a peal of bells. Here are the remains of an ancient camp.

LLANGATHEN, a par. in the hund. of Cathinog, co. Carmarthen, 3½ miles W. of Llandilofawr, its post town, and 10 E. of Carmarthen. It is situated in the vale of Towey, on the N. bank of the river, within a short distance of Grongar Hill, from which is a view celebrated by the poet Dyer, who was born in the mansion of Aberglasney. The par., which is of considerable extent, includes about ten hmlts., the principal of which are Berthlwyd and Brynhafod. Here are limestone quarries and lead mines. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £130, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Cathan, and has monuments to Bishop Rudd and others. The endowments belonging to the parish produce about £12 per annum. Cwrt Henry is a seat here. There are some views in this neighbourhood, and traces of ancient camps. A ferry across the river leads from this to "Golden Grove," a seat of the Earl of Cawdor, inherited by him from the Vaughans, earls of Carberry. This mansion is modern, and in the Elizabethan style of architecture, the old house having been burnt down. In the interior are some portraits of the Vaughans, and one of Lady Dorothy Sidney, the "Sacharissa" of the poet, also a Canaletti and a Luca Giordano.

LLANGATTOCK, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Usk, co. Monmouth, 2 miles N.E. of Newport. It is situated on the river Usk, and near the line of the Newport, Abergavenny and Hereford railway. The par. includes the tnshp. and vil. of Caerleon, its post town. On the other side of the river, opposite the village, is the seat of Lord Llanover, built under the shadow of the Blorenge Mountain. Graig Hill, an isolated wooded eminence, is a conspicuous feature in the landscape. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £296, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church is a small primitive looking edifice. The charities consist of an endowment to Morgan's almshouses amounting to £10 per annum.

LLANGATTOCK, a par. in the hund. of Crickhowell, co. Brecon, 1 mile W. of Crickhowell, its post town, and 11 miles S.E. of Brecknock. It is situated on the banks of the river Usk, opposite the town of Crickhowell, a bridge connecting the two parishes. The Brecon canal passes through this par., which includes the parcels of Penallt, Prisk, and Kille. In 728 the Saxons, under Ethelbald, were defeated by the Britons in this neighbourhood. Here are collieries, and the extensive Beaufort iron works, affording employment to many of the people, as well as limestone quarries. The workhouse for the poor-law union is in this parish. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. with the curs. of Llangeney and Llanelly annexed, £1,123. The parish church, dedicated to St. Catwg, is an ancient structure in various styles of architecture. The bishops Lloyd and Davies were rectors of this parish. The Independents have a chapel. Here is a cistvaen. Llangattock Place, Glanusk Villa, and Dan-y-Park are the principal residences.

LLANGATTOCK LLINGOED, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Abergavenny, co. Monmouth, 5 miles N.E. of Abergavenny, its post town, and 12 from Monmouth. It is situated on the river Trothy. The village consists of a few scattered houses. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £144. The church is dedicated to St. Cadocus. The charities are worth about £6 per annum.

LLANGATTOCK-NIGH-USK, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Abergavenny, co. Monmouth, 3 miles S.E. of Abergavenny, and 2 from Usk, its post town. The river Usk flows through the parish. The village is a small rustic place. The tithes were commuted in 1840. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £274. The church, dedicated to St. Cadocus, has monuments to the Evans family. The charities amount to about £5 per annum.

LLANGATTOCK-VIBON-AVEL, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Skenfreth, co. Monmouth, 4 miles N.W. of Monmouth, its post town, and 11 from Abergavenny. It includes the chplry. of Llanvanair, and the hmlt. of Newcastle, where are the remains of an ancient castle, and an oak said to have been planted by Owain Glyndwr. Limestone is quarried here for conversion into lime. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. with the perpet. curs. of Llanvanair and St. Maughan annexed, £365. The church is dedicated to St. Cadocus. The parochial charities amount to about £25 per annum. The principal residence is The Hendre, the seat of the late J. E. Welch Rolls, Esq., deputy-lieutenant of the county.

LLANGEDWYN. See LLANGLYDWEN, co. Carmarthen.

LLANGEDWYN, a par. in the hund. of Chirk, co. Denbigh, 4 miles N.E. of Llanfyllin, and 7 S.W. of Oswestry, its post town. It is situated on the river Tanat, here crossed by a bridge, and includes the tnshp. of Scrwgan. There are slate quarries. The tithes were commuted in 1839. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £130. The church is dedicated to St. Cedwyn. The charities produce about £13 per annum. Llangedwyn Hall, the seat of Sir W. W. Wynn, Bart., M.P., is the principal residence. It is at present occupied by C. W. W. Wynn, Esq. Brynygwalian is also a residence in this parish, belonging to the Maurice family.

LLANGEFNI, a par. and market town in the hund. of Menai, co. Anglesey, North Wales, 7 miles N. of Newborough, 8 W. of Beaumaris, and 4½ S. of the Gaerwen station on the Chester and Holyhead line of railway. It is situated in a vale, watered by the river Cefni, which is here crossed by a bridge of two arches. The main road between Bangor and Holyhead passes through it, as well as the old Roman road. The little town of Llangefni is a bustling and prosperous place, with a population of about 1,800. It contains a markethouse, a commercial bank, and one for savings. Petty sessions are held in the town. It unites with Beaumaris and others in returning one member to parliament. The chief employments of the people are leather dressing, malting, and the woollen manufacture. There are corn mills on the stream. In the last century it was only a small hamlet. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bangor, val. with the cur. of Tregayan annexed, £446, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is a modern structure dedicated to St. Cyngar. It contains a stone bearing the inscription, "Culidon jacit secundo." The charities amount to about £2 per annnum. About a mile from the town is Tregarnedd, once the seat of Ednyfed Fychan, the friend and minister of Llewelyn, and ancestor of the Tudor family, but now a farmhouse. A grandson of the above nobleman was executed by Edward I. at Rhyddlan Castle, for having fortified his castle of Tregarnedd. Thursday is market day. Fairs are held on the 14th March, 17th April, 10th June, 17th August, 15th September, and 23rd October, also every Thursday for six weeks before Christmas for the sale of cattle, &c.

LLANGEINOR, a par. in the hund. of Ogmore, co. Glamorgan, 5 miles N. of Bridgend, its post town, and 9 W. of Newbridge. The par. is watered by the rivers Ogmore and Garw, and includes the vils. of Abergarw, Newmill, and Roughmill. Coal, iron, and limestone is obtained in large quantities. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £71. The church is dedicated to St. Gwinear. The parochial endowments produce about £12 per annum.

LLANGEINWEN, a par. in the hund. of Menai, co. Anglesey, 1½ mile E. of Newborough, and 3 miles N.W. of Carnarvon, its post town. It is situated on the river Brain, close to the Menai Strait, across which there is a ferry. Here are limestone quarries. The tithes were commuted in 1839. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Bangor, val. with the cur. of Llangafo annexed, £664. The church is dedicated to St. Ceinwen, and was rebuilt about 1812. There is a Calvinistic Methodist chapel. The charities amount to £6 per annum.

LLANGEITHO, a par. in the hund. of Penarth, co. Cardigan, 4 miles W. of Tregaron, and 8 N.E. of Lampeter, its post town. It is situated at the foot of some hills, and is watered by the river Ayron. The tnshp. of Bonteyen is in this par. The village is a small rustic place. The tithes were commuted in 1839. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £106, in the patron. of the bishop. The present church is a modern structure, built on the site of a former one about 1821, and dedicated to St. Ceitho. It contains a monument to the Rev. — Rowland, once rector of this parish, and founder of the sect of "Rowlandites." The parochial endowments, including that left by Griffiths for the aid of teachers, produce about £50 per annum. There is a Calvinistic Methodist chapel.

LLANGELER, UPPER AND LOWER, a par. in the hund. of Elvet, co. Carmarthen, 4 miles E. of Newcastle-in-Emlyn, its post town. It is situated on the river Teifi, near the head of the valley under the Penboyr hills. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £136, in the patron. of the bishop. There is also a sinecure rect., val. £244, in the gift of St. David's College. The church is dedicated to St. Celert, and near it is a spring called after the name of the saint. Llys-Newydd and Dolhaidd-fach are the principal residences.

LLANGELYNIN, a par. in the hund. of Isaf, co. Carnarvon, 2 miles S.W. of Conway, its post town, and 10 E. of Llandegai. It is situated at the foot of the hill called Pen-maen-fach, and includes the tnshps. of Cae-Gorlan, Cymryd, Glynn, and Pen-Raelt. The Saxons, under Edred, were defeated here by the Britons in 880. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bangor, val. £225, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Celynin. There are charities amounting to about £5 per annum. On the hills are several antiquities, including cairns, tumuli, &c.

LLANGELYNIN, a par. in the hund. of Talybont, co. Merioneth, 5 miles N.W. of Towyn, and 12 S.W. of Dolgelly. Barmouth is its post town. It is situated on the coast of Cardigan Bay, and includes the tnshps. of Bodgadfan, Crogennant, Llanfeddiged, and the large vil. of Llwyngwril. It is said that Eduowain-ab-Bradwen, chief of one of the 15 tribes, had a seat here. The country in the vicinity is bleak and uninteresting. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Bangor, val. £400. The old parish church, dedicated to St. Celynin, but now deserted, stood on the coast-road to Towyn, about 2 miles S. of the present one, which has been built in the village of Llwyngwril. The charities, including an endowment to Morgan's school, produce about £20 per annum. A cave is shown in which it is said Owain Glyndwr secreted himself; and on the hill to the W. of the village is a camp called Castell-y-gaer.

LLANGENDEIRNE, a par. in the hund. of Kidwelly, co. Carmarthen, 5 miles S.E. of Carmarthen, its post town, and 6 N.E. of Kidwelly. The par. includes 7 hmlts., of which Cilcarw and Glynn are the principal. Coal, iron ore, and limestone abound, and marble of good quality is also found. The village is very considerable. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. with the cur. of Pontyates annexed, £88. The church is dedicated to St. Cyndeyrn. There are a Calvinistic Methodist chapel, and an endowed school called Goldfrap's. The charities produce £22 per annum, chiefly the endowment of the school. A fair is held on the 5th August for horses, cattle, and pedlery.

LLANGENNECH, a par. in the hund. of Carnwallon, co. Carmarthen, 4 miles N.E. of Llanelly, its post town, and 8 N.E. of Swansea. The Llanelly and Vale of Towey railway has a station here. It is situated on the river Llwchwr, or Lloughor, which here becomes a sluggish mud-banked stream. Coal of good quality is found, and worked for exportation. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £82. The church is dedicated to St. Gwynog. Llangennech Park is the principal residence. A fair is held on the 23rd October.

LLANGENNITH. See LLANGENYDD, co. Glamorgan.

LLANGENNY, a parochial chplry. in the hund. of Crickhowell, co. Brecon, 2 miles E. of Crickhowell, its post town, 9 from Abergavenny, and 13 S.E. of Brecknock. It is situated at the confluence of the rivers Grwyney and Usk. Iron founding and paper-making are carried on in this parish. The village is small. The tithes were commuted in 1840. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect.* of Llangattock, in the dioc. of St. David's. The church is dedicated to St. Cenew. The charities amount to about £2 per annum. A bell was found here in 1809, supposed to have formerly belonged to the oratory of the saint. There is a holy well, to which certain virtues were ascribed, and near it a stone pillar of about 13 feet in height. Cwrt-y-Gollen is the principal residence.

LLANGENYDD, or LLANGENNITH, a par. in the hund. of Swansea, co. Glamorgan, 14 miles W. of Swansea, its post town. It is situated on the coast of Rhossili Bay. A priory was founded here in the reign of Stephen, in connection with Evreux Abbey, which was given by Henry VI. to All Souls' College, Oxford. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £71. The church, dedicated to St. Cenydd, formed part of the old priory. It is the largest in Gower, having a side tower and a blocked Romanesque arch on its eastern side, and contains some very old monuments. Just off the coast is Holmes Island, where was formerly a chapel belonging to this parish, and 2 miles beyond is Llanmadoc, where is a bone-cave on the coast.

LLANGERNIEW, UPPER AND LOWER, a par. in the hund. of Isaled, co. Denbigh, 6 miles N.E. of Llanrwst, and 8 S.E. of Conway, its post town. It is situated in a hilly district watered by the river Elwy, and includes nine tnshps., of which Bodrach and Dwy-Afon are the chief. Copper and lead are found. Five miles to the S. is the secluded little village of Gwytherin, at the foot of the lonely Hiraethrog hills, celebrated for the nunnery of St. Winifred. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £275, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is dedicated to St.

Digain, and contains monuments of the Lloyd family. The parochial endowments produce about £23 per annum. Hâvodunos is a seat of the above family, the mansion being in the Elizabethan style of architecture. Fairs are held on 29th March, 16th May, 28th June, 29th September, and 29th November.

LLANGEVIEW, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Usk, co. Monmouth, 1 mile E. of Usk, its post town, and 12 from Monmouth. The village is very small, consisting of a few scattered farmhouses. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £81. The church is dedicated to St. David. The only charities are a share in Usk school.

LLANGIAN, a par. in the hund. of Gafflogian, co. Carnarvon, 6 miles S.W. of Pwllheli, its post town, and 6 N.E. of Llanfaelrhy. It is situated N.E. of Hellsmouth Bay, and W. of St. Tudwall's road. The people are mostly engaged in the fishery. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect.* of Llanbedrog, in the dioc. of Bangor. The church is dedicated to St. Cian. In the churchyard is an ancient inscribed stone surrounded by a curious sunken pavement. There are charities amounting to about £3 per annum. Nanhoron is the principal residence. A fair is held on 28th June.

LLANGIBBY, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Usk, co. Monmouth, 2 miles S. of Usk, its post town, and 5 from Caerleon. It is situated in the vicinity of the old Roman road, and is bounded on the E. by the river Usk. The Llangibby hounds hunt round here. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £477. The church is dedicated to St. Cuby. There is a chapel for Independents. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. Here are some remains of Tregreg Castle. Llangibby House, built by Inigo Jones, is the principal residence.

LLANGINNING, a par. in the hund. of Derllys, co. Carmarthen, 10 miles S.W. of Carmarthen. St. Clear's is its post town. It is situated near the rivers Cynin and Taff. The village is a small agricultural place. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £80. The church is dedicated to St. Cynin.

LLANGIRRIG, or LLANGWRIG, a par. in the hund. of Llanidloes, co. Montgomery, 4 miles S.W. of Llanidloes, its post town, and 10 N.W. of Rhayader. It is situated near the foot of Plinlimmon, and in the vale of the river Wye, which here begins to lose somewhat of its early impetuous character. The par. includes 6 tnshps., of which Glynbrochan and Llanyfyny are the principal. Some of the people are employed in the woollen manufacture. The village is small, but much visited by tourists. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Bangor, val. £175, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is an ancient edifice dedicated to St. Curig.

LLANGLYDWEN, or LLANGEDWYN, a par. in the hund. of Derllys, co. Carmarthen, 8 miles N.E. of Narberth, and 12 from St. Clear's, its post town. It is watered by the river Taf. Lead is obtained here. The village consists of a few farmhouses. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £96. The church is dedicated to St. Cledwin. Dôlwylim is the principal residence.

LLANGOED, or LLANGOWRDA, a parochial chplry. in the hund. of Tyndaethwy, co. Anglesey, 2 miles N. of Beaumaris, its post town, and 6 from Bangor. It is situated near the south-eastern extremity of the county, having Beaumaris Bay on the S., and the Irish Sea on the N. Excellent marble as well as limestone is obtained. The road skirts an elevated range of hills. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Bangor, val. with the curs. of Llaniestyn and Llanfihangel-Din-Sylwry annexed, £130. The church is dedicated to St. Cawrdav. The parochial charities produce about £10 per annum. There is a Calvinistic Methodist chapel.

LLANGOEDMORE, or LLANGOEDMAWR, a par. in the hund. of Troedyraur, co. Cardigan, 1 mile E. of Cardigan, its post town, and 8 miles N.W. of Newcastle-in-Emlyn. It is situated in a woody locality on the E. bank of the river Teifi. It was formerly a possession of the Langley, Lewis, and other families, but now belongs to the Lloyds. Here are slate quarries. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £329. The church is a modern structure erected on the site of the old one, and dedicated to St. Cynllo. Not far from the church is a cave and a holy well. In the neighbourhood are some Druidical remains. Llangoedmore Place and Trevorgan are the principal residences.

LLANGOLLEN, a par. and market town in the hund. of Chirk, co. Denbigh, North Wales, 18 miles S.E. of Denbigh, and 184 from London. It is the terminus of the Llangollen Vale branch of the Great Western railway. It is situated in the Vale of Llangollen, or Glyndwrdwy, which extends about 8 miles under the mountains from the Eglwyseg rocks, which form the geological boundary of the North Wales coalfield, to the hanging woods of Wynnstay and the Waterloo Tower, erected to commemorate that event.—The par., which is of large extent, contains, besides the town of Llangollen, the chplry. of Trevor, and the tnshps. of Llangollen Abbots, Fawr, Fechan, with 15 others. It is watered by the river Dee, "which brawls over its bed of rock, making perpetual loud music," and occasionally rises, as if swollen by heavy rains, even in the driest weather. This phenomenon is said to be occasioned by certain winds blowing over the surface of the lake Bala, which produces an extraordinary efflux of water into the river Dee. The river is here crossed by a singular bridge of four pointed arches, the two smallest being in the middle, built, as is said, before 1345, by John Trevor, Bishop of St. Asaph, and famed in story as one of the three wonders of North Wales. On the right bank stands the town of Llangollen, a pleasant little place of about 3,000 inhabitants. The streets are clean, and the houses in general small, but well arranged, presenting an air of general activity and prosperity. It is chiefly famed for its brewery, and hotels, the Hand and King's Head, both much frequented by tourists, who make this their centre before starting on the tour of North Wales. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the flannel trade, woollen mills, collieries, and limestone quarries. A townhall and a large market-hall are now in process of erection. At a short distance from the town, which is embosomed in hills, are two of the greatest engineering works of the day—the viaduct of the Chester and Shrewsbury railway, which is 1,531 feet long, and the aqueduct of the Ellesmere canal, constructed by Talford in 1805, at a cost of £47,018. This gigantic work conveys the canal across the ravine of the Dee, here 2,600 feet wide, at the height of 126 feet. This is effected by an earthen embankment 1,500 feet long, excavated from the S. side of the valley, and connected with the opposite side by 18 light piers of sandstone, 121 feet high, supporting a cast-iron trough 1,007 feet long, through which the canal passes. Though inferior in grandeur to several railway bridges, this aqueduct is much admired as a work of modern art not surpassed by any similar structure of antiquity, exceeding both in height and the quantity of water conveyed any aqueduct built by the Romans.—Other objects of interest in the vale are, Eliseg pillar, 8 feet high; the ruins of Vale Crucis Abbey; a tower near Crow Castle; Landyssilio Hall; Trevor Hall; Pengwern, an ancient seat of the Mostyn family, built in the 14th century; Plas y Pentre; and Plas Newydd, a small cottage ornée, at which dwelt the "maids of Llangollen," Lady Eleanor Butler and Miss Ponsonby, who, influenced by a romantic attachment to each other, came hither from Ireland in 1779, in the heyday of their youth and charms, and refusing the proffers of all suitors, dwelt together till their death, which took place respectively in 1829 and 1831, at very advanced ages.—Llangollen is the head of a deanery in the archdeac. and dioc. of St. Asaph. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £436, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to a saint with the extraordinary name of Collen-ap-Gwynog-ap-Clyddwg-ap-Cowrda-ap-Caradoc-Freichfras-ap-Llyr-Merini-ap-Einion-Ysth-ap-Cunedda-Wledig, and contains a good carved oak roof in the later perpendicular style, said to have been brought from the neighbouring abbey of Valle Crucis. It is now (1865) undergoing enlargement by the addition of a chancel and south aisle, at a cost of £2,500. There are also two district churches, viz. Pontfadog and Trevor, the livings of both which are perpet. curs. val. respectively £150 and £87. There are six chapels for Dissenters, also several schools. The charities produce about £60 per annum.—Sychnaint, or Sycharth, is said to have been the seat of Owain Glyndwr, and on a precipitous hill, which rises abruptly from the bank of the river to the height of 910 feet, are the scanty remains of a castle called Castell Dinas Bran, a stronghold of the lords of Gale, which sustained an attack under Owain Glyndwr. Saturday is market day. Fairs are held on the last Friday in January, 17th March, 31st May, 21st August, and 22nd November, chiefly for horses, cattle, pigs, and cheese.

LLANGOLLEN-TRAIAN, a div. in the par. of Llangollen, hund. of Chirk, co. Denbigh.

LLANGOLMAN, a par. in the hund. of Kemess, co. Pembroke, 8 miles N. of Narberth, its post town, 12 S.E. of Fishguard, and the same from Cardigan. It is situated at the foot of Precelly Mountain, and is watered by the Cleddy, a tributary of the Taf. Slate is obtained here. The tithes were commuted in 1839. The village consists of a few farmhouses. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. with that of Llandilo annexed, £97. The church is dedicated to St. Golman.

LLANGONOYD, a par. in the hund. of Newcastle, co. Glamorgan, 7 miles N.W. of Bridgend, its post town, and 9 S.E. of Neath. It lies among the hills, and near the source of the river Ogmore. The par. includes three hmlts., called Higher, Middle, and Lower Llangonoyd, also that of Cwmdu. Here are collieries, iron mines, and lime works, from which there is a tramroad of about 17 miles to Porthcawl. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. with the curs. of Baidan and Maesteg annexed, £135. The church is dedicated to St. Cynwyd. A fair is held on the 3rd May.

LLANGORSE (UPPER AND LOWER), a par. in the hund. of Talgarth, co. Brecon, 6 miles E. of Brecknock, its post town, and 7 N.W. of Crickhowell. It is situated on the river Llynvi, within a short distance of Llangorse Lake, sometimes called Llyn Savaddan, which abounds with fish. The lake is about 5 miles in circumference, and ranks as the second lake in Wales after Bala. The tramroad to Hay passes through the parish. The neighbourhood, especially in the vicinity of the lake, is much frequented for the sake of its pike fishing, and in winter for its wild fowl shooting. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £170, in the patron. of the Dean and Canons of Windsor. The church, dedicated to St. Palinus, has a good cradle roof. The parochial charities amount to about £5 per annum. Here are remains of an establishment called Cwrt-y-Prin, formerly belonging to Brecon priory, also the ruins of Blaen-lyffni Castle.

LLANGORWEN, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanbadarn-Fawr, co. Cardigan, in the vicinity of Aberystwith. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, in the patron. of trustees.

LLANGOVEN, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Ragland, co. Monmouth, 6 miles S.W. of Monmouth, and 4 from Ragland, its post town. The village consists of a few farmhouses. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. with that of Pen-y-Clawdd, £120, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church is dedicated to St. Goven. The parochial charities amount to about £13 per annum.

LLANGOWER, a par. in the hund. of Penllyn, co. Merioneth, 2 miles S.W. of Bala, its post town, and 15 N.E. of Merioneth. It is situated on the eastern side of Lake Bala, at the foot of the Berwyn mountains. The par. includes the tnshps. of Llangower Isafon, and Llangower Uwchafon. The hills here are somewhat barren, and on the other side of the lake is the Arenig, which towers up to the height of 2,809 feet, very little inferior to that of Cader Idris. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £136, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Gwyr, has a tower. On an eminence called Caer Gai, where tiles have been found, are traces of a Roman fort.

LLANGRANOG, a par. in the hund. of Moyddyn, co. Cardigan, 10 miles N. of Newcastle-in-Emlyn, and 9 N.E. of Cardigan, its post town. It is situated on the coast of Cardigan Bay, and includes the vil. of Rhydmanleg. Many of the people are engaged in the fishery. This place is resorted to in summer for sea bathing. The tithes were commuted in 1840. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £270, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Caranog, stands on the cliff. Here is a barrow, and a rock somewhat resembling a chair, called Yr-Eisteddfa. Pigeonsford and Cwm Owen are the principal residences. A fair is held on the 27th May.

LLANGRISTIOLUS, a par. in the hund. of Malltraeth, co. Anglesey, 1 mile S. of Llangefni, and 4 miles N. of Newborough. Bangor is its post town. The river Cefni flows through the parish. Here are collieries and quarries. The road to Amlwch here branches off to the right. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bangor, with the cur. of Cerregceinwen annexed, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Cristiolus, occupies the site of one built in the early part of the 7th century. The charities are some cottages for the poor. This was the birthplace of Maurice, the Margaret professor of divinity at Oxford.

LLAN-GRWYDDON, or LLANYGWYRYFON, a par. in the hund. of Lower Ilar, co. Cardigan, 7 miles S.E. of Aberystwith, its post town. It is situated at the foot of the hill called Mynydd Bach, and is watered by the river Wyrai. Turbary is found here. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £176. The church, dedicated to St. Ursula, has an ancient pillar cross.

LLANGSTONE, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Caldicott, co. Monmouth, 4 miles N.E. of Newport, its post town. It includes the hmlt. of Llanbeder. It is a small agricultural parish. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £158.

LLANGUA, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Skenfreth, co. Monmouth, 9 miles N.E. of Abergavenny, its post town, and 13 from Monmouth. It is situated on the river Monnow, and the Hereford railway passes near it. A monastery was founded here in early times. There is no village, only a few scattered cottages. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £120. The church is dedicated to St. James.

LLANGUICK, or LLAN-CIWG, a par. in the hund. of Llangafelach, co. Glamorgan, 6 miles N.W. of Neath, its post town, and 8 N.E. of Swansea. It is situated on the river Tawe, and the Swansea canal passes through it. The par. includes the hmlts. of Alltgreig, Blaenegel, Caegurwain, and Mawr. Here are collieries and ironstone mines, and also anthracite and culm are obtained. It is a large and thriving village. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £103. The church is dedicated to St. Ciwg.

LLANGUNIDER, or LLANGYNIDER, a par. in the hund. of Crickhowell, co. Brecon, 4 miles N.W. of Crickhowell, its post town, and 8 S.E. of Brecknock. It is situated near the foot of the Bwlch mountains on the river Usk and the Brecon canal. The Trivel tramroad passes through it. The par. includes the tnshps. of Blainey, Duffryn and Fro Collieries, quarries, and the Clydach ironworks are the chief sources of employment. In the neighbourhood of the village are Duffryn, Crownan, and Buckland Mill. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £418. The church is dedicated to St. Cynydr. The parochial charities produce about £8 per annum. Fairs are held on 20th April, 7th October, 1st December, and on the Wednesday previous to Christmas day.

LLANGUNLLO, a par. in the hund. of Troedyraur, co. Cardigan, 3 miles N.E. of Newcastle-in-Emlyn, its post town, and 13 W. of Lampeter. This is a small agricultural place. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £148, in the patron. of the freeholders. The church is dedicated to St. Cynllo. Gernôs and Bronwydd are the principal residences.

LLANGUNLLO, a par. in the hund. of Knighton, co. Radnor, 5 miles W. of Knighton, its post town, and 7 N. of New Radnor. It is situated on the river Lug, and consists of two tnshps., Upper and Lower, with the vil. of Heyop. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £98, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Cynllo. The charities of the parish amount to about £8 per annum.

LLANGUNNOC, a tnshp. in the par. of Llangarren, hund. of Wormelow, co. Hereford, 5 miles S.W. of Ross, and 6 N. of Monmouth.

LLANGUNNOCK, or LLANGYNNOG, a par. in the hund. of Derllys, co. Carmarthen, 6 miles S.W. of Carmarthen, its post town, and 8 from Kidwelly. The village is small, and mostly belongs to the Morris family of Cwm. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to that of Llanstephan, in the dioc. of St. David's. The church is dedicated to St. Cynog. The parochial charities produce about £36 per annum, including £25, the endowment of Vaughan's free school.

LLANGUNNOR, or LLANGYNYR, a par. in the hund. of Kidwelly, co. Carmarthen, 1 mile E. of Carmarthen, its post town. It is situated on the banks of the river Towey, and includes five hmlts., Credgain being the principal. The village, which is small, is built on the left bank of the river, nearly opposite the Training School for South Wales, a building erected by the Welsh Educational Committee in 1847, at a cost of £8,000. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £221, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Cynyr, is a primitive little building, with a monument to Sir R. Steele, who was buried here in the vault of the Scurlock family. The churchyard commands a view of the Towey, and is shaded by some grand old yew-trees. The charities amount to about £5 per annum. There is a racecourse in the vicinity. At a farmhouse, called Ty-gwyn, Steele is said to have written his "Constant Lover."

LLANGURIG. See LLANGIRRIG, co. Montgomery.

LLANGWM, or LLANGWYN, a par. in the hund. of Isaled, co. Denbigh, 6 miles N. of Bala, and 7 W. of Corwen, its post town. It is situated on a tributary of the river Dee, and includes nine tnshps., the principal of which are Cefn-Cymer and Disgarth. In the 10th century a conflict took place here between the rival princes, Eidwal and Meredydd, in which the latter was defeated. Stockings are made here. The tithes were commuted in 1840. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £264, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Hierom. The charities produce about £8 per annum. Fairs are held on the 8th March, 18th April, and 11th August, for the sale of cattle and live stock.

LLANGWM, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Usk, co. Monmouth, 3 miles S.E. of Usk, its post town, and 7 from Chepstow. In the 12th century a religious house was founded here as a cell to Lyra Abbey, Normandy. It contains the tnshps. of Llangwm Icha, and Llangwm Ucha. The village consists of a few farmhouses. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Llanduff, val. £83, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Hierom. This place shares in the benefit of Usk school.

LLANGWM, a par. in the hund. of Roose, co. Pembroke, 4 miles S.E. of Haverfordwest, its post town, and 5 N. of Pembroke. It is situated on the W. of Milford Haven. Many of the people are engaged in the oyster fishery. There are collieries in the neighbourhood. Here is a ferry to the opposite shore of the haven. The tithes were commuted in 1840. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £100. The church, dedicated to St. Hierom, is in the early English style of architecture, and contains monuments of the Roche family.

LLANGWNADLE, a par. in the hund. of Commitmaen, co. Carnarvon, 11 miles W. of Pwllheli, its post town. It is situated on the coast of Carnarvon Bay, and is a fishing village. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Bangor, val. £50. The church, dedicated to St. Gwynodl, is a triple-aisled structure, containing a sculptured font. The charities amount to about £8 per annum. On Mynydd Cefn Amwlch is a very perfect cromlech, remarkable for its peak-shaped superincumbent stone.

LLANGWSTENNIN, or LLAN-CYSTENYN, a par. in the hund. of Creuddyn, co. Carnarvon, 2 miles N.E. of Conway, its post town and railway station on the Chester and Holyhead line, and 7 from Abergele. The village, which is small, is situated on the northern coast, and the river Conway flows through the parish. Here are copper mines, in which a large proportion of the people are employed. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £145, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Constantine, is erected on the site of a former one, which tradition says was founded by the Emperor Constantine in the early part of the 4th century. The parochial charities produce about £16 per annum.

LLANGWYFAN, a parochial chplry. in the hund. of Malltraeth, co. Anglesey, 1 mile W. of Aberffraw, and 9 miles S.E. of Holyhead. Bethel is its post town. It is situated on the coast of Carnarvon Bay. Marble and limestone are obtained here, and mats are manufactured from the sea-weed. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect.* of Trevdraeth, in the dioc. of Bangor. The church, situated on a small island, which the sea is fast demolishing, is dedicated to St. Cwyvan. In former times the service was adapted to the state of the tide, but the narrow causeway which connects the island with the mainland is now so frequently flooded as to render the performance of service impossible. The parochial endowments produce about £25 per annum.

LLANGWYFAN, a par. in the hund. of Ruthin, co. Denbigh, 5 miles E. of Denbigh, its post town, and 6 N. of Ruthin. It is situated at the foot of the lofty hill, Moel Arthur, and is watered by a tributary of the river Clwyd. The par. includes the tnshps. of Cefn-y-gwrdy, Coydiog, Gales, and Plas. The neighbourhood is hilly. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £209, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Cwyvan. Glanywern is the principal residence.

LLANGWYLLOG, a par. in the hund. of Menai, co. Anglesey, 2½ miles N.W. of Llangefni, 3 S.E. of Llanerchymedd, and 2 from Gwindy, its post town. It is situated on the river Cefni. The village consists of a few farmhouses. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Bangor, val. £185. The church is dedicated to St. Cwyllog. There are small charities of about £1 per annum. Roman coins of the reign of Nero, and other remains, have been discovered here.

LLANGWYN. See LLANGWM, co. Denbigh.

LLANGYBI, a par. in the hund. of Evionydd, co. Carnarvon, 5 miles N. of Pwllheli, its post town, and 12 W. of Llanfrother. It is a small village. There are slate quarries. The tithes were commuted in 1839. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Bangor, val. with that of Llanarmon annexed, £600, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Cybi. An Independent chapel was founded here in 1660. The charities produce about £27 per annum, including the endowment of the almshouses erected in 1760 by W. Price. Near the church is a holy well.

LLANGYBY, a par. in the hund. of Moyddyn, co. Cardigan, 4 miles N.E. of Lampeter, its post town, and 7 S.W. of Tregaron. It is a small rustic place. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £60. The church is dedicated to St. Cybi. An Independent chapel was founded here in 1772. There are also two Calvinistic Methodist chapels. In the vicinity are remains of an ancient British camp.

LLANGYNHAVAL. See LLANGANHAFAL, co. Denbigh.

LLANGYNIDER. See LLANGUNIDER, co. Brecon.

LLANGYNIEW, or LLANGYNYW, a par. in the hund. of Mathrafel, co. Montgomery, 2 miles N.E. of Llanfair, and 6 N.W. of Welshpool, its post town. It is situated on the river Einion, and near the line of the Roman road Caer Sws. The par. includes the tnshps. of Cynhynfa, Gwaenynogisaf, and Malthyrafel. The princes of Powys and the Viponts had a seat here, which was burnt in the reign of John. Woollen goods are manufactured, and turbary is found here. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £504, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Cyniw, is in the early English style of architecture, and contains some monuments. The charities amount to about £7 per annum. Above the village is the circular camp of Pen-y-Castell.

LLANGYNLLO, a par. in the hund. of Knighton, co. Radnor. See LLANGUNLLO.

LLANGYNOG, a par. in the hund. of Llanfyllin, co. Montgomery, 6 miles N.W. of Llanfyllin, its post town, and 10 S.E. of Bala. It is situated at the foot of Llangynog rock, in the Berwyn mountains, and is watered by the river Tanat, which is famous for its trout. The par. includes the tnshps. of Tre-y-Llan and Tre-Rhiwarth. The village is chiefly inhabited by miners, lying at the confluence of the Tanat and at the Eiarth, above which on the N. towers the enormous hill of Craig Rhiwarth, and on the S. an equally lofty though less abrupt range. The geological formation appears to belong to the age of the Llandilo rocks, and abounds in minerals, chiefly lead. A very rich mine called the Craig-y-Mwyn was opened in 1692, and worked for many years, yielding an annual revenue of £20,000 to the Powis family, but was suddenly drowned by an irruption of water. It has again been opened by a company, who have worked it with varying success. There are several other lead mines, besides quartz and good blue slate for roofing. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £126, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Cynog. The charities amount to about £3 per annum. Here are remains of an old chapel dedicated to St. Monocella. Llechweddgarth is the principal residence. A railway has been proposed from Shrewsbury and Llanfyllin to Llangynog, from which place it was intended to tunnel through the Berwyns to Llandrillo, and from thence to Bala.

LLANGYNOG, a par. in the hund. of Builth, co. Brecon, 3 miles S.W. of Builth, its post town, 4 S.E. of Llanganmarch, and 11 from Brecon. It is situated at the base of the Mynydd Epynt mountains. There is no village, only a few farmhouses. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £69, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Cynog.

LLANGYNYW. See LLANGYNIEW, co. Montgomery.

LLANHAMLACH, a par. in the hund. of Penkelly, co. Brecon, 3 miles S.E. of Brecknock, its post town, and 9 N.E. of Crickhowell. It is situated on the river Usk, and near the line of the Roman road Via Julia Montana. The Brecon canal passes through the parish, which includes the hmlt. of Llecfaen. This was the patrimony of the Wallbeoffe family, who inherited it from Bernard Newmarch. About 2 miles from the village the Usk is crossed by two bridges, one carrying the road which leads from Brecon to Tallybont and Llangynder, and the other the Brecon and Pontypool canal. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of St. David's. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is shaded by some magnificent yew trees. The charities produce about £5 per annum. There is a cromlech or cistvaen called Ty-iltid in the grounds of Mannest Court.

LLAN-HARAN, a par. in the hund. of Cowbridge, co. Glamorgan, 3 miles W. of Llantrissant, 3 from the Bridgend railway station, and 5 N. of Cowbridge, its post town. It is situated on the river Ewenny. Here are collieries, limestone quarries, and iron and lead mines. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect.* of Llanilid, in the dioc. of Llandaff. The church is dedicated to SS. Julius and Aaron. The parochial charities produce about £10 per annum. Llanharan House is the principal residence, where hounds are kept for hunting in this neighbourhood.

LLAN-HARY, a par. in the hund. of Cowbridge, co. Glamorgan, 3 miles S.E. of Llantrissant, and 3½ N. of Cowbridge, its post town. Coal is obtained here, and recently a bed of iron ore has been discovered, 5 feet in thickness, together with remains of Roman workings and pottery, showing that the Romans were well acquainted with the mineral treasures of South Wales. Some of the inhabitants are engaged in the neighbouring hæmatite iron mines of Cornel and Mwyndy, in which the ore is worked opencast like a quarry. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £120. The church is dedicated to St. Aran. The charities of this parish produce about £10.

LLANHENNOCK, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Usk, co. Monmouth, 4 miles N.E. of Newport, its post town, and 8 from Pontypool. It is situated on the banks of the river Usk. The village consists of a few farmhouses. The tithes were commuted in 1839. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £64, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church is dedicated to St. John the Baptist.

LLANHIDDEL, or LLANHILLETH, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Abergavenny, co. Monmouth, 4 miles N.W. of Pontypool, its post town, and 12 from Usk. It is situated on the river Ebwy. The Aberbeeg station of the Western Valleys line of railway is about 1 mile N.W. of the village. Coal is obtained here. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £109. The church is dedicated to St. Iltyd. The Independents and Baptists have each a chapel. Here are some very ancient yew trees, also traces of a British camp and other remains.

LLANHOWELL, a par. in the hund. of Dewisland, co. Pembroke, 4 miles N.E. of St. David's, and 11 N.W. of Haverfordwest, its post town. It is a small rustic place. The living is a vic. annexed to that of Llandeloy, in the dioc. of St. David's. The church is dedicated to St. Hoel.

LLANIDAN, a par. in the hund. of Menai, co. Anglesey, 4 miles N.E. of Carnarvon, its post town. It is situated on the shore of Menai Strait, and includes the tnshp. of Brynshenkin. The Roman general Suetonius effected a landing in A.D. 60 at a spot between Porthamel and the river, about 1 mile from the village of Llanidan, still called Bryn Beddau, or the "hill of graves," from the number of the slain. The same passage was chosen a few years later by Agricola, who here dealt the death-blow to Druidic superstition, as related by Tacitus, who gives a graphic account of the engagement. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Bangor, val. with the curs. of Llanddaniel-Fab, Llanedwen, and Llanfair-y-Cwmmwd, £292. The ancient church belonged to the priory of Beddgelert, but having a few years since fallen into decay, it was demolished, and a new one erected at Bryn Siencyn. In the old church were preserved an antique font, and a stone called Maen Morddwyd, to which miraculous powers were ascribed. The charities amount to about £3 per annum. Here are traces of a Roman road, and of a station called Caer-leb; also numerous relics connected with the Druids, as Tre'r Driw, the residence of the Arch-Druid, traces of which existed in Pennant's time; Bryn-gwyn, a circular hollow supposed to have been the tribunal of the Druids; semi-circular dykes at Gwydryn and Castell Edris; and two large cromlechs at Bodowy and Perthu-Duon. Rowlands, the antiquary, who was once vicar of this parish, has given a full account of its antiquities in his "Mona Antiqua." Fairs are held on the 11th March, 14th April, 13th September, 12th October, and 12th November.

LLANIDLOES, a hund. or subdivision of co. Montgomery, situated in the southern part of the co. It includes the pars. of Carno, Llandinam, Llangirrig, Llanidloes, Llanwnog, Penstrowed, and Tref Eglwys.

LLANIDLOES, a par., market town, and municipal borough, in the hund. of the same name, co. Montgomery, 12 miles N. of Rhayader, 19 S.W. of Montgomery, and 188 from London. There is a railway from here to Newtown, and thence to Oswestry, which has been extended through Rhayader to Builth and Brecon, thus completing an uninterrupted chain of communication between North and South Wales. There is also another line in course of construction (1865) from Llanidloes to Pencader, called the Manchester and Milford Haven railway. It is situated in a valley, being nearly surrounded by lofty hills, and at the confluence of the rivers Clywedog and Severn, the latter being crossed by two bridges. Plinlimmon is about 9 miles to the W. The par. includes the tnshps. of Brithdir, Cilmachalet, Croeslwybr, Glyntrafren, Hengynwydd, Manledd, Morfodion, Troflyn, and Ystradynod. The town mainly consists of four good streets, through which pass the roads between Rhayader and Machynlleth, and Aberystwith and Newtown. The local government is vested in a mayor, 4 aldermen, and 12 common council, being first incorporated in the reign of Edward I. It unites with other towns to Montgomery in returning one member to parliament. Petty sessions are held monthly on the last Thursday, and a county court fortnightly. There is a good townhall, in which the wool market is held. The place was much celebrated for its manufacture of flannel, which is still a considerable branch of industry. There are slate and stone quarries, and on the streams mills for carding wool, spinning, and grinding corn. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Bangor, val. £151, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, was rebuilt in the early part of the 17th century, but retains the old tower. The roof is of richly carved oak, which, with other portions of the interior, were brought from Abbey-cwm-hŵr. The aisle is separated from the nave by six pointed arches, supported by piers, having the capitals ornamented with carved palm leaves. The Independents, Baptists, Calvinistic and Wesleyan Methodists, have chapels. There is a National school for boys and girls. From various points in the neighbourhood, are fine views, but especially around Llyn Ebyr, a pool of about 40 acres, situated 3 miles N. of the town, and abounding in perch and pike. Sir W. W. Wynn, Bart., is lord of the manor. There are several good residences. Saturday is market day, for corn, wool, provisions, &c. Fairs are held on the first Tuesday in February, first Saturday in April, 11th May, 22nd June, 17th July, the second Saturday in September, the first Friday in October, 22nd of the same, and 14th December, for the sale of wool, horses, cattle, and live stock, also a statute fair on the third Saturday in April.

LLANIESTYN, a par. in the hund. of Tyndaethwy, co. Anglesey, 3 miles N.W. of Beaumaris, and N.E. of Llangefni. Gwindy is its post town. It lies a little to the E. of Red Wharfe Bay, or as it is locally called, Traeth Coch. The living is a cur. annexed to the perpet. cur. of Llangoed, in the dioc. of Bangor. The church, dedicated to St. Jestyn, occupies the site of one which formerly belonged to the priory of Llanfaes. It contains a curious font of the 12th century, a slab of the 14th, supposed to commemorate St. Jestyn, and a painting of St. Catherine. At a short distance from this are remains of Brwydd Arthur, or Arthur's Round Table, the largest camp in Anglesey.

LLANIESTYN, a par. in the hund. of Dinlaen, co. Carnarvon, 5 miles S.E. of Nevin, and 7 S.W. of Pwllheli, its post town. It is situated at the foot of a steep hill, on the summit of which is Carn Fadrin camp. Lead is worked here. The village is considerable. The tithes were commuted in 1840. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bangor, val. with the curs. of Llandegwning and Penllêch annexed, £595, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Jestyn, is an ancient structure chiefly in the Norman style of architecture. The parochial charities produce about £20 per annum. Cevin Amwlch is the principal residence.

LLANIGON, a par. in the hund. of Talgarth, co. Brecon, 2 miles S. of Hay, its post town, and 5 N.E. of Talgarth. It is situated near the banks of the river Severn, and includes the hmlts. of Glynfach and Twyn-y-Beddau. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £202, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is dedicated to St. Eigion. The charities consist of an endowment to Watkins's free school, producing £10 per annum. Llanigon House, formerly a seat of Earl Ferrers, is the principal residence.

LLAN-ILAR, a par. in the hund. of Upper Ilar, co. Cardigan, 8 miles from Aberystwith, its post town, and 10 from Tregaron. The par. includes the tnshps. of Lower and Upper Llan-Ilar. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £95, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Hilary. The parochial charities produce about £14 per annum.

LLAN-ILID, a par. in the hund. of Cowbridge, co. Glamorgan, 5 miles N.W. of Cowbridge, its post town, 5 N.E. of Bridgend, and 4 from the Cowbridge Road railway station. The river Ogmore flows through the neighbourhood. Coal is obtained here. The village is very small, containing only a few scattered cottages. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. with the cur. of Llanharan annexed, £324, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Ilid. The charities amount to about £3 per annum.

LLANILLTERNE, or LLANILLITERN, a parochial chplry. in the hund. of Dinas Powis, co. Glamorgan, 6 miles N.W. of Cardiff, its post town, and 5 from Caerphilly. A tributary of the river Ely flows through this parish. There is no village, only a few farmhouses and cottages. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect.* of St. Fagan, in the dioc. of Llandaff. The church is dedicated to St. Fagan. It is situated near the remains of the former one now converted into a barn.

LLAN-ILLTYDD. See ILSTON, co. Glamorgan; and LANTWIT, co. Glamorgan.

LLANINA, a par. in the hund. of Moyddyn, co. Cardigan, 4 miles S.W. of Aber-Ayron, and 12 N.W. of Lampeter, its post town. It is situated on the S. side of New Quay Bay, and includes the tnshp. of Cydblwyf. This was a possession of the Gwyn family. The living is a vic. annexed to that of Llanarth, in the dioc. of St. David's. The church is dedicated to St. Ina. Llanina House is the principal residence.

LLANIO, a tnshp. in the par. of Llan-ddewi-brefi, hund. of Penarth, co. Cardigan, 2 miles S.W. of Tregaron. It is situated on the turnpike road between Lampeter and Tregaron, near the bank of the Teifi. The Roman road Sarn Helen runs from Maridunum to Machynlleth, and had a station called Loventium, near the site of the farmhouse of Llanio. Three stones, one of which is used as a seat at the farm door, are mentioned by Sir S. Meyrick, inscribed, "Caii artis manibus primus," "Overioni," and "Cohors Secundæ Augusta fecit quinque passus," as discovered here in a field called Caer Castell, where the foundations of a building, bricks, coins, fragments of pottery, and other remains have been found.

LLAN-ISHEN, or LLANISAN, a par. in the hund. of Kibbor, co. Glamorgan, 3½ miles S. of Caerphilly, and 4 N. of Cardiff, its post town. The village is small. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £46. The church is dedicated to St. Isan. The parochial charities, including an endowment to Lewis's school, produce about £33 per annum.

LLANISHEN, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Ragland, co. Monmouth, 6 miles S.W. of Monmouth, its post town, and 7 from Chepstow. The village consists of a few farmhouses. The tithes have been commuted. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £64. The church is dedicated to St. Dennis. The parochial charities produce about £22 per annum.

LLANITHEON, a tnshp. in the par. of Bettws, co. Montgomery, 4 miles N. of Newtown.

LLANITHOG, an ext. par. place, in the upper div. of the hund. of Wormelow, co. Hereford, in the vicinity of Ross.

LLANKILKEN, a tnshp. in the par. of Cilcen, co. Flint. It is situated at the foot of the Moel Arthur mountain.

LLANLLAWDDOG, a par. in the hund. of Elvet, co. Carmarthen, 7 miles N.E. of Carmarthen, its post town. It includes the vil. of Rhydyrgane. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. with that of Llanpympsaint, £150. The church is dedicated to St. Llawddog. There is a Calvinistic Methodist chapel.

LLANLLAWER, a par. in the hund. of Kemess, co. Pembroke, 2 miles S.E. of Fishguard, its post town, and 5 S.W. of Newport. It is situated in a mountainous district S. of Fishguard Bay, and is watered by the river Gwayn. Here is a mineral spring. The village consists of a few farmhouses. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect. of Llanychllwyddog, in the dioc. of St. David's. There are many remains of antiquity in this neighbourhood.

LLAN-LLECHID, a par. in the hund. of Uchaf, co. Carnarvon, 4 miles S.E. of Bangor, its post town, and 10 N.E. of Carnarvon. It is situated on the river Ogwen, and includes seven hmlts., the principal being Bethesda and Tal-y-bont. The mountains Carnedd Llewellyn and Carnedd Davydd are nearly 3,500 feet in height. This is considered one of the largest parishes in the principality. There are several extensive slate quarries. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bangor, val. £471, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Llechid. There is also the district church of Glanogwen, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £180. The charities, including a small school endowment, produce about £28 per annum. Côchwillan was the birthplace of Bishop Williams, and the residence of Archbishop Williams. A fair is held on the 29th October.

LLAN-LLEON-VEL, a par. in the hund. of Builth, co. Brecon, 2 miles N. of Llangammarch, and 6 W. of Builth, its post town. It is situated on the rivers Dulas and Irvon, and includes the tnshp. of Gwarafog. Near here runs the Roman road Caer Sws, a branch road of the Sarn Helen connecting Bannium with Deva and Maridunum. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £60, in the patron. of the bishop. The church contains mural monuments of the Gwynne family, whose seat was Garth, now a farm.

LLANLLIBIO, a parochial chplry. in the hund. of Llyfon, co. Anglesey, 3 miles S.E. of Holyhead, and 5 from Gwindy, its post town. This is rather a hamlet than a village, and is situated in a desolate part of the country. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect.* of Llantrisaint, in the dioc. of Bangor. There is no church.

LLANLLOWELL, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Usk, co. Monmouth, 2 miles S.E. of Usk, its post town, and 12 from Chepstow. It is situated on the eastern bank of the river Usk. There is no village, only a few farmhouses. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £130. The church is a small primitive edifice.

LLANLLUGAN, a par. in the hund. of Newtown, co. Montgomery, 7 miles N.W. of Newtown, and 10 S.W. of Welshpool. Shrewsbury is its post town. It is situated on the river Rhiw. A nunnery of the Cistercian order was founded here in the early part of the 13th century, which afterwards came to the D'Arcy family. No traces of the nunnery now remain. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £60, in the patron. of the lord of the manor. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is in the early English style of architecture.

LLANLLWCHAIARN, a par. in the hund. of Moyddyn, co. Cardigan, 5 miles S.W. of Aberystwith, and 15 N.E. of Cardigan. It is situated at New Quay Bay, where there is a small port. The people are mostly engaged in the fishery. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £256, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Llanllwchaiarn.

LLANLLWCHAIARN, a par. in the hund. of Newtown, co. Montgomery, 1¼ mile N.E. of Newtown, its post town, and 6 miles S.W. of Montgomery. It is situated on the banks of the river Severn, which is here crossed by a bridge of three arches, and is partly within the borough of Newtown. The Montgomery canal passes through the par., which includes the tnshps. of Aberbechan, Gwestydd, Hendidley, and Kilcowen. Woollen cloth and superior flannel is manufactured here. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £355, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Llwchaiarn, is a structure of the present century, erected on the site of the former one. There are some traces of a Roman road. Newydd Fraith is the chief seat.

LLANLLWNY, a par. in the hund. of Cathinog, co. Carmarthen, 7 miles S.W. of Lampeter, and 14 N.E. of Carmarthen, its post town. It is situated on the river Teifi. The village is small, but neatly built. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. with the cur. of Llanfihangel-Rhôsycorn annexed, £103, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Llonio. In the neighbourhood are remains of monastic establishments, also a barrow. Maes Criggie and Perthyberllan are the principal residences.

LLANLLWYDAN, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanfihangel-y-Pennant, co. Merioneth, 7 miles S.W. of Dolgelly.

LLANLLYAN, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanarthney, co. Carmarthen, 7 miles W. of Llandilofawr. It lies at the foot of the Myndd Mawr Mountain.

LLANLLYFNI, a par. in the hund. of Uwch-Gorfai, co. Carnarvon, 6 miles S. of Carnarvon, its post town, and 13 N.E. of Nevin. It is situated to the W. of Snowdon, and is watered by the river Llyfni, which rises in Lake Nanlle, flows through here, and empties itself into Carnarvon Bay. Here are copper and manganese mines, also slate quarries, which afford employment to the people. There is a tramroad to Carmarthen, for the transit of the products of the mines. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Bangor, val. £240, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Rhedyw, is an ancient edifice built in the form of a cross. In this parish is an old house built on the site of one inhabited by Edward I., who is said to have made a stay here in 1284. There are remains of dwellings supposed to have been those of the first inhabitants, also of an ancient camp by the river.

LLANLODIAN, ISAF and UCHAF, tnshps. in the par. of Llanfair-Caereinion, co. Montgomery, in the vicinity of the tower of Llanfair.

LLANMADOCK, a par. in the hund. of Swansea, co. Glamorgan, 13 miles W. of Swansea, its post town. It is situated at the extreme W. of the county, between Bury river and Rossilli Bay. Limestone is obtained here. The village consists of a few farmhouses. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £112. The church is dedicated to St. Madoc. On the Llanmadock Hill are the remains of a circular Roman camp, and from this point there is an extensive prospect. A few years back many bones of extinct animals, as also some of the human species, were found here in a bone-cave on the coast.

LLAN-MAES, a par. in the hund. of Cowbridge, co. Glamorgan, 3 miles S.W. of Cowbridge, its post town, and 7 S.E. of Bridgend. It is situated in a very healthy spot near the S. coast. There are remains of a castle, which anciently belonged to the Melifont family. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £294. The church is dedicated to St. Cadocus. In the parish register are entries of the deaths of Joan and Elizabeth Yorath—the former died in 1621 at the age of 180, and the latter in 1668 at the age of 177. The charities produce about £1 per annum.

LLANMARTIN, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Caldicott, co. Monmouth, 5 miles E. of Newport, its post town and railway station, and 10 from Chepstow. It includes the hmlt. of Llandevand. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. with that of Wilerick annexed, £250. The church is dedicated to St. Martin. There is a Calvinistic Methodist chapel. The parish is entitled to send two pensioners to the almshouses at Chepstow.

LLANMEREWIG, or LLANMAREWIC, a par. in the hund. of Newtown, co. Montgomery, 3 miles N.E. of Newtown, its post town, and 5 S.E. of Montgomery. It is situated on the south-eastern bank of the river Severn. The Montgomery canal passes through this neighbourhood. The tithes were commuted in 1840. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £133, in the patron. of the Bishop of Llandaff. The church is dedicated to St. Llwchaiarn. Here are traces of a Roman camp and road.

LLANMIHANGEL, a par. in the hund. of Cowbridge, co. Glamorgan, 2 miles S.W. of Cowbridge, its post town, and 5 S.W. of Bridgend. The parish is of small extent. There is no village, only a few detached houses. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £142. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. Llanmihangel Place, the seat of Earl Dunraven, was formerly the residence of Judge Franklin.

LLANNEFYDD, or LLAN-UFYDD, a par. in the hund. of Isaled, co. Denbigh, 6 miles N.W. of Denbigh, its post town, and 5 from St. Asaph. It is situated in the vicinity of the river Elwy, on the Aled brook. The par. includes ten tnshps., of which Benaighn and Berron are the principal. The village is considerable. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £228, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Nevydd. Fairs are held on the 18th March, 12th May, 14th August, and 20th November for cattle.

LLANNON, a par. in the hund. of Carnwallon, co. Carmarthen, 6 miles N.E. of Llanelly station, on the South Wales section of the Great Western railway, 8 E. of Kidwelly, and 16 from Swansea, its post town. There is a tramroad to the first-named town. The par. includes the tnshps. and hmlts. of Bleyne, Glyn, Goytre, Ismorlais, and Poleyne. The people are mostly employed in the collieries and in agriculture. There are some valuable iron and coal mines in the parish. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £86. The church is dedicated to St. Non. The charities produce about £3 per annum. Fairs are held on the 6th July and 10th December for horses, cattle, and pedlery.

LLANNON, a hmlt. in the par. of Llansaintffraid, co. Cardigan, 5 miles N.E. of Aber-Ayron. It is situated near the coast.

LLANNOR, or LANFAUR, a par. in the hund. of Dinlaen, co. Carnarvon, 3 miles N.W. of Pwllheli, its post town, and 4 S.E. of Nevin. It is situated in a hilly district. The village is considerable. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Bangor, val. with the cur. of Denio, or Pwllheli, annexed, £195, in the patron. of the bishop. The church of the Holy Cross is an ancient structure. There are two Calvinistic Methodist chapels. The parochial endowments produce about £14 per annum. Bôdgroes is the principal residence. Here are some curious inscribed stones. Fairs are held on the 12th April, 18th and 29th October.

LLANOVER, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Abergavenny, co. Monmouth, 4 miles S.E. of Abergavenny, its post town, and 7 from Pontypool. It is situated on the river Usk, near the Brecon canal. The par. includes the tnshp. of Blaenavon, where there are iron-works. The village is very considerable. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £300, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church is dedicated to St. Bartholomew. There is also the district church of Blaenavon, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £114. The charities produce about £3 per annum. The Independents and Calvinistic Methodists have places of worship here. Llanover Court is the seat of Lord Llanover, who takes his title from this place. Lady Llanover supports a free school at her own expense; and there is another endowed by the late Mrs. Sarah Hopkins, with the interest of £3,000 government stock.

LLANPUMPSAINT, a par. in the hund. of Elvet, co. Carmarthen, 6 miles N. of Carmarthen, its post town. It is a station on the Carmarthen and Cardigan railway. The parish is of large extent, but sparsly inhabited. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to that of Llanllawddog, in the dioc. of St. David's. The charities produce about £3 per annum. The name of this place signifies "church of five saints."

LLANRHAIDR-IN-KINMERCH, a par. in the hund. of Isaled, co. Denbigh, 3 miles S.E. of Denbigh, its post town, and 4 N.W. of Ruthin. It is a station on the Vale of Clwyd and Denbigh, Ruthin, and Corwen railway. It is situated on the Clywedog, a tributary of the river Clwyd, and includes eight tnshps., of which Cader is the chief. Here are small veins of copper, and limestone and silex abound. Agates are also found in the neighbourhood. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £609, in the patron. of the bishop. There is also the district church of St. James's Prion, val. £150, also in the patron. of the bishop. The parish church is rather a large edifice, dedicated to St. Dyvnog. It has a good timbered roof, and an E. window of stained glass, containing the genealogy of our Saviour from Jesse, said to have been brought from Basingwerk Abbey. Here is a hospital or almshouse for eight inmates, founded by Mrs. Jones, with an income of £160; also a school endowment of £7. The total amount for charitable purposes is about £230 per annum. From the eminence called Groladus's Chair, is a fine view, and near it is a spring bearing the saint's name, formerly esteemed holy. Llanrhaidr Hall is the principal residence; and on the other side of the stream is Bachymbyd, a seat of Lord Bagot.

LLANRHAIADR-YN-MOCHNANT, a par. partly in the hund. of Chirk, co. Denbigh, and partly in that of Llanfyllin, co. Montgomery, 4 miles N.W. of Llanfyllin, and 4 S.W. of Llanarmon. Oswestry is its post town. It is situated in a vale, on the banks of the Rhaiadr, an affluent of the Tanat, which takes its rise a little higher up in a small tarn, called Llyn Caws, lying in a deep cwm at the foot of Cader Berwyn. The par. is large, embracing seventeen tnshps., among the principal of which are Cefn Coch and Gartheryr. The district is mountainous, and the people are chiefly employed in the collieries, slate quarries, and in flannel-weaving. About 4 miles from the village, which is small, containing one inn, the Wynnstay Arms, is a waterfall, called Pistyll Rhaiadr. This is said to be the most lofty cataract in North Wales, having a fall of upwards of 240 feet in height. For about two-thirds of this space the water slides down the flat face of a naked rock; it then rages through a natural arch, and passing between two prominent sides, falls into a basin. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £520, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Dogvan. This living has been held by bishops Morgan and Lloyd, and by Dean Powell, the first of whom translated the Welsh Bible. The parochial endowments, including £20 to Powell's school, produce about £110 per annum. Fairs are held on the first Friday in March, 5th May, 24th July, 28th September, and 8th November.

LLANRHIDIAN, a par. in the hund. of Swansea, co. Glamorgan, 10 miles W. of Swansea, its post town, and 7 from Lloughor. It is situated in the vicinity of the river Burry, and includes the tnshps. of Killibion, Penclawd, and Waterstone. Here are collieries, copper and iron mines, and limestone and freestone quarries, in which the people are employed. On an eminence overlooking the Burry stand the ruins of Weobly Castle. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. with the cur. of Penclawd annexed, £99. The church is dedicated to St. Illtyd. There is a chapel-of-ease at Penclawd. In this parish is Arthur's Stone, a huge mass of rock, weighing about 20 tons, raised upon supporters about 5 feet in height, and beneath there is a well, which ebbs and flows with the tide. A fair is held on Palm Monday.

LLAN-RHIN-BEBYL, a tnshp. in the par. of Llandyrnog, co. Denbigh, 4 miles E. of Denbigh.

LLANRHWYDRYS, a parochial chplry. in the hund. of Tal-y-Bolion, co. Anglesey, 8 miles N.W. of Llanerchymedd, 14 from Holyhead, and 12 from Gwindy, its post town. It is situated on the north-western coast, in the vicinity of Camlyn Bay and the Skerries lighthouse. The village consists of a few farmhouses and cottages. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect.* of Llanrhyddlad, in the dioc. of Bangor.

LLANRHYCHWYN, a par. in the hund. of Nant-Conway, co. Carnarvon, 1 mile N.W. of Llanrwst, and 11 miles E. of Llanberris. It is situated in a vale surrounded by hills, and watered by the river Conway.

Here are slate quarries and a lead mine. The village is a rude and primitive place, adjoining the wood of Gwydir. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect.* of Trêvriw, in the dioc. of Bangor. The church is dedicated to St. Rhychwyn. The charities amount to about £1 per annum. The Welsh bard, Taliesin, resided at Llyn Gerrionydd, in this neighbourhood.

LLANRHYDD, a par. in the hund. of Ruthin, co. Denbigh, 1 mile E. of Ruthin, its post town, and 7 miles S.W. of Mold. It is situated within a short distance of the river Clwyd, and has a chalybeate spring. The workhouse for the Llanrwst Poor-law Union is in this parish. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Ruthin-Wardenship, in the dioc. of St. Asaph. The church, dedicated to St. Mengan, has been recently restored through the munificence of G. Johnson, Esq., of Plâs Llanrhydd. It contains an interesting monument to the Thelwall family. The parochial charities amount to about £6 per annum. In the immediate neighbourhood are Bathafarn Park, a seat of Lord Bagot, and Cefn Coch.

LLANRHYDDLAD, a par. in the hund. of Tal-y-Bolion, co. Anglesey, 5 miles N.E. of Holyhead, its post town, and 8 N.W. of Llanerchymedd. It is situated at the foot of the hill Moel Rhyddlad, near the coast of Holyhead Bay. Copper and manganese are obtained here. It is a small fishing village. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bangor, val. with the. curs. of Llanfflewin and Llanrhwydrys, £530, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Rhyddlad. There is a Calvinistic Methodist chapel. The parochial endowments produce nearly £35 per annum. This was the birthplace of S. Williams, Speaker of the House of Commons, whose father was for some time rector.

LLANRHYSTYD, a par. in the hund of Lower Ilar, co. Cardigan, 8 miles S.W. of Aberystwith, its post town, and 12 N.W. of Tregaron. It is situated at the mouth of the Gwyre, near the coast of Cardigan Bay, and includes the tnshps. of Haminiog and Mefenydd. A monastery was founded here in early times. The Danes effected a landing in 988. Dinerth Castle, which stood here in the 12th century, frequently changed hands. It was finally taken and destroyed by Maelgwn-ap-Rhys about 1199. The cliffs on the coast are very precipitous, and abound in caves and fissures. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £140, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Rhystyd, is a new structure. Ystrad is a seat of the Lloyds, and Mabus of J. L. Phillips, Esq. Fairs are held on the Thursdays before Easter and Christmas.

LLANRIAN, a par. in the hund. of Dewisland, co. Pembroke, 11 miles S.W. of Fishguard, its post town, and 5 from St. David's. It is situated on the sea-coast, in the north-western part of the county. It includes the small vil. of Trevine, and is a prebend of St. David's cathedral. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £105, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Rheanus. Here are remains of a Druidic circle.

LLANRITHAN, a par. in the hund. of Dewisland, co. Pembroke, 10 miles N.W. of Haverfordwest, its post town, and 9 from St. David's. The soil is very productive. The village consists of a few scattered houses. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £86, in the patron. of the vicars-choral of St. David's Cathedral.

LLANROTHALL, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Wormelow, co. Hereford, 5 miles N.W. of Monmouth, its post town, 9 from Ross, and 15 S. of Hereford. The road between the two towns passes through the village, which is very small. It is watered by the river Monnow. A college or religious fraternity was founded here in the 6th century by St. Dubricius. There are still to be seen some traces of the old edifice. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £206. The church is a small edifice. The charities produce about £4 per annum.

LLANRUG, or LLANFIHANGEL-IN-RUG, a par. in the hund. of Is-Gorfai, co. Carnarvon, 2 miles E. of Carnarvon, its post town. It is situated on the river Seiont, and includes the tnshp. of Cwm-y-Glo. Here are small veins of copper. Most of the people are employed in the slate quarries. In the grounds of the vicarage is an inscribed stone. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Bangor, val. £166, in the patron. of the Bishop of Llandaff. The church, which stands on a hill, is dedicated to St. Michael, and is an ancient structure in the form of a cross. The charities amount to about £1 per annum. Here are remains of an ancient camp, and houses of the early inhabitants. Glangwnna and Plâs Tirion are the principal residences.

LLANRWST, a par. and market town in the hund. of Isdulas, co. Denbigh, and hund. of Nant-Conway, co. Carnarvon, 10 miles S. of Conway, 16 S.W. of Denbigh, and 218 from London. The Conway and Llanrwst branch of the Chester and Holyhead railway has its terminus here. It is situated on the river Conway, which is here crossed by a steep bridge of three arches, built under the direction of Inigo Jones about 1636. The par. includes 7 tnshps., Garth-Garmon and Tre-y-dre being among the principal. The town, which is nearly surrounded by mountains, has of late years undergone great improvements, both in the buildings and general appearance of the place. There is a good town-hall, in which the county court sits monthly, a market-place, and a branch bank. It is a polling-place for the county elections. The trade of the place is of no great extent, consisting chiefly of woollens, stockings, tanning, and malting. There are several corn mills. In the neighbourhood are stone-quarries, also coal and iron mines. Formerly Llanrwst was famous for the manufacture of the Welsh harp. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £720, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Grwst, is a modern structure, adjoining which is the Gwydir chapel, built by Inigo Jones in 1633, no longer used for service, but containing many curious monuments and some good carving. Much of the interior fittings, such as the carved roof, rood-loft, stalls, &c., are said to have been brought from Maenan Abbey. It contains numerous monuments, effigies, and a brass of the 17th century, to Sarah Wynn; also the stone coffin of Llewelyn-ap-Iorworth, son-in-law of John, King of England, and the stone effigy of Howell Coetmore ap Gruffydd Vychan ap Dafyd. There are also two district churches —viz. St. Mary's and Capel Garmon, the livings of both which are perpet. curs. in the patron. of the rector. The charities produce about £75 per annum, including £36, the endowment to the free school and Jesus' Hospital. The Independents, Baptists, and Calvinistic Methodists have each a chapel. In addition to the free grammar school there are National, British, and denominational schools. Sir W. W. Wynn, Bart., is lord of the manor. Gwydir is the seat of Lord Willoughby D'Eresby. Tuesday and Saturday are the market days. Fairs are held on the first Tuesday in February, 8th March, 25th April, 21st June, 10th August, 17th September, 25th October, and the second Tuesday after 11th December.

LLANSADWRN, a par. in the hund. of Tyndaethwy, co. Anglesey, 2 miles W. of Beaumaris, and 4 E. of Llangefni. Bangor is its post town. The village, which is small, is situated at a short distance from the coast, about 4 miles from the Menai Bridge. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Bangor, val. £381, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Sadwrn. Here are some Druidic remains.

LLANSADWRN, a par. in the hund. of Perfedd, co. Carmarthen, 5 miles S.W. of Llandovery, and 8 N.E. of Llandilofawr, its post town. It is situated in a hilly district on the banks of the river Towy. The village is considerable. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. with the cur. of Llanwrda annexed, £165. The church is dedicated to St. Sadwrn. An almshouse was founded here in 1731, for four maiden gentlewomen, by Lady Letitia Cornwallis, who endowed it with property now producing £308 per annum. The other charities produce about £11 per annum. There is a school with a small endowment.

LLANSADWRNEN, or LLANSADWRN, a par. in the hund. of Derllys, co. Carmarthen, 1 mile N.W. of Laugharne, its post town, and 4 S. of St. Clears. It is situated near the river Taff. Limestone is quarried for building purposes, and for burning into lime. The village is small. The living is a rect. annexed to the vic.* of Laugharne, in the dioc. of St. David's. The church is dedicated to St. Sadwrn. Judge Powell, before whom the seven bishops were tried, had a seat here called Broadway. It is now a ruin.

LLANSAINT, a tnshp. in the par. of St. Ishmael, co Carmarthen, 1 mile N.W. of Kidwelly. The river Gwendraeth-fawr flows through the tnshp.

LLANSAINTFRAED, a par. in the hund. of Penkelly, co. Brecon, 6 miles S.E. of Brecknock, its post town, and 7 N.W. of Crickhowell. It is situated on the river Usk and the Roman Via Julia Montana. The Brecon canal intersects the par., which includes the vil. of Skethiog, formerly a possession of the princes of Powys. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £295. The church is dedicated to St. Fread, or Fried. It contains monuments of the Jones family, and of Vaughan, a former rector, chemist, and astrologer. The parochial charities produce about £6 per annum. In this parish is a mansion called Buckland, long the residence of a branch of the Gwynne family, now of Mrs. Gwynne Holford; also Skethiog House and Noyadd.

LLANSAINTFRAED, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Abergavenny, co. Monmouth, 4 miles S.E. of Abergavenny, its post town, and 10 from Monmouth. It is situated to the N. of the river Usk. There is no village, and only about half a dozen houses. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £73. The church has a barn-like appearance. Llansaintfraed House is the only residence.

LLANSAINTFFRAID, or LLANSANTFFREAD, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Ilar, co. Cardigan, 4 miles N.E. of Aber-Ayron, its post town, and 11 N.W. of Tregaron. It is situated on the coast of Cardigan Bay, and includes the hmlt. of Llannon. This is a subport of Aberystwith. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £91, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Bridget, is a humble edifice, somewhat eclipsed by the ostentatious tomb to Colonel Gwynne Holford. There are trifling remains of what is supposed to have been a monastic establishment. The Calvinistic Methodists have a chapel.

LLANSAINTFFRAID, a par. in the hunds. of Deythur and Pool, co. Montgomery, 5 miles E. of Llanfyllin, 9 N. of Welshpool, and 7 from Oswestry, its post town. The Llanfyllin branch of the Cambrian railway has a station here. It is situated on the rivers Vyrnwy and Tanat. The par., which is of large extent, includes the tnshps. of Collfryn, Llanerchila, Trederwenfawr, and Trewillan, with several hmlts. The village, which is neatly built, is situated near the supposed site of the Roman station Mediolanum, on Watling Street, and the Caer Sws military way. The soil is generally fertile. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £230, in the patron. of the bishop. The church exhibits a few details of the 14th century, although the greater part is of the 17th. There are charities amounting to about £9 per annum. Here are remains of British and Roman camps.

LLANSAINTFFRAID-GLAN-CONWAY, or DISERTH, a par. in the hund. of Isdulas, co. Denbigh, 2 miles S.E. of Conway, its post town, and 9 W. of Abergele. It is situated on the eastern bank of the river Conway, near its mouth, and includes the tnshps. of Dennant, Llan, Trallwyn, and Tre-Bwll. There is a chalybeate spring at a place called Bryn-y-Pobty. The village is considerable. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £240, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Bridget. The charities amount to about £2 per annum. Here are the remains of a cromlech. Fairs are held on the 14th February, 1st May, 1st August, and 1st November.

LLANSAINTFFRAID-GLYN-CEIRIOG, a par. in the hund. of Chirk, co. Denbigh, 2 miles S. of Llangollen, its post town, and 8 N.W. of Oswestry. It is situated on the river Ceiriog, and includes the tnshps. of Glyn-Fechan, Nantyr, and Lavan, Isaf and Uchaf. The neighbourhood is hilly, and slate is obtained. The manufacture of flannel is carried on. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £200. The church is dedicated to St. Bridget. The charities amount to about £10 per annum. Fairs are held on 4th May and 6th October.

LLANSAINTFFRAID-GLYN-DYFRDWY, a par. in the hund. of Edernion, co. Merioneth, 2 miles E. of Corwen, its post town, and 6 W. of Llangollen. It is situated in a hilly neighbourhood on the river Dee. The village consists of a few farmhouses. At a place called Raggett a view is obtained over the valley of the Dee. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £98, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Fraid, or, according to others, to St. Bride. The charities produce about £1 per annum.

LLANSAINTFRAED-IN-ELVEL, a par. in the hund. of Colwyn, co. Radnor, 4 miles N.E. of Builth, its post town, and 8 S.W. of New Radnor. It is watered by the river Edw, which runs into the Wye at Aberedwy. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £171, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Fread or St. Bride. The charities produce about £2 per annum, besides the right of participating in Powell's charity at Brecon, for the apprenticing of poor children. Here are some remains of Colwyn Castle, a seat of the Mortimers.

LLANSAMLET, a par. in the hund. of Llangafelach, co. Glamorgan, 3½ miles N.E. of Swansea, its post town, and 4 W. of Neath. It is a station on the South Wales railway, which is here carried up a steep incline before descending into the valley of the Tawe. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Tawe and the Swansea canal. Here are collieries and copper works. The soil is naturally sterile, and the stunted vegetation is still further checked by the deleterious influence of the fluoric and arsenical acids from the numerous copper works, so that the Vale of Tawe, as far as Swansea, exhibits an unparalleled scene of desolation. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. with the cur. of Kilvey annexed, £150, in the patron. of the bishop. The parochial charities produce about £7 per annum. Glanebrane is the principal residence.

LLANSANNAN, a par. in the hund of Isaled, co. Denbigh, 7 miles W. of Denbigh, and 9 N.E. of Llanrwst. Rhyl is its post town. It is situated on the river Aled, a tributary which joins the Elwy at Pontygwiddel, and in which is abundance of fish. A large portion of the land is barren. The Lloyds were formerly the possessors. The banks of the Aled are much visited by tourists. In the upper part of its course it runs through a narrow dingle, in which are two waterfalls, Llyn-yr-Ogo and Rhaiadr Mawr, about 5 miles from the village of Llansannan. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £376, in the patron. of the Bishop of St. David's. The church is dedicated to St. Sannan. The charities produce about £3 per annum. On a hill here are traces of a British amphitheatre, called Bwrdd Arthur, or Arthur's Round Table, thus described by Leland:—"There is in the parish of Lansannan, in the side of a strong hill, a place where there be twenty-four holes, or places, in a roundel, for men to sit in, but som lesse and som bigge, cutte out of the mayn rocke by manne's hand; and ther children and young men cumming to seeke their cattele, used to sitte and play." Fairs are held on the 18th May, 17th September, 26th October, and 30th November, for the sale of wool and live stock.

LLANSANNOR, a par. in the hund. of Cowbridge, co. Glamorgan, 2 miles N. of Cowbridge, its post town. It is situated on the river Thaw. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £105. The church is dedicated to St. Senewyr. The charities are about £3 per annum. Llansannor House, formerly a seat, is now a farm.

LLANSAWEL, a par. in the hund. of Cayo, co. Carmarthen, 8 miles N. of Llandilofawr. Llandovery is its post town. It is situated on the river Cothi, and includes the hmlts. of Edwins, Ganol, Glyn, and Wen. This was formerly a market town, and is now a polling-place for the county. A very mountainous and rugged district separates this parish from the Vale of Teifi. From the elevated lands a view is commanded of the Vale of Cothi. The living is a vic. annexed to that of Cayo-Conwyl, in the dioc. of St. David's. Fairs are held on the 12th May, 15th July, 23rd October, and the first Friday after the 12th November.

LLANSILIN, a par. in the hund. of Oswestry, co. Salop, and hund. of Chirk, co. Denbigh, 4 miles S.W. of Oswestry, its post town, and 9 S. of Llangollen. It is situated on the river Cynlleth, and includes the tnshps. of Lledrode, Rhydycroesau, and nine others. The people are mostly employed in flannel-weaving. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £307, in the patron. of the bishop. The parish church is dedicated to St. Silin, and contains several monuments. There is also the district church of Rhydycroesau, a perpet. cur., val. £100, in the gift of the bishop. The parochial charities, including a school endowment of £4, produce about £24 per annum. There are several old seats. Fairs are held on Easter Tuesday, 10th July, and 2nd December, for the sale of live stock.

LLANSOY, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Ragland, co. Monmouth, 7 miles N.W. of Chepstow. Usk is its post town. It is a small agricultural place. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £170. The charities amount to about £14 per annum.

LLANSPYDDID, a par. in the hund. of Devynnock, co. Brecon, 2 miles W. of Brecknock, its post town. It is situated on the Roman Via Julia Montana, and is watered by the river Usk. The par. includes the tnshps. of Modrydd and Pen-Pont. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £100. The parish church, dedicated to St. Cattwe, is surrounded by venerable yew-trees, one measuring 9 yards in circumference. In the churchyard is a tomb, traditionally said to be that of Brychan Breichiniog. There is also the district church of Bettws Pen-Pont, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £120, in the patron. of the landholders. The charities amount to about £7 per annum. There are remains of an ancient British camp, called Gaer.

LLANSTADWELL, a par. in the hund. of Roose, co. Pembroke, 2 miles N.W. of Pembroke, and 7 S. of Haverfordwest. Milford Haven is its post town. It is situated on the N. shore of Milford Haven, and contains the vils. of Honeyborough, Neyland, Newton, and Waterson. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £94. The church is dedicated to St. Dudwall. Hayston is the principal residence.

LLANSTEPHAN, a par. in the hund. of Derllys, co. Carmarthen, 7 miles S.W. of Carmarthen, its post town. It is situated on the coast of Carmarthen Bay, and at the mouth of the river Towey. Across the river is a much-frequented ferry, where is a railway station on the South Wales line. The par. includes the hmlts. of Laques and Llan-y-bree, as well as the little vil. of Llanstephan, embosomed in trees, near the water's edge. From the pleasantness of its situation and the salubrity of the air it attracts many visitors during the summer months for sea-bathing. A castle was built here in 1138 by the sons of a Merionethshire prince, which soon afterwards fell into the hands of the Flemings and Normans, from whom it was retaken by Rhys-ap-Gruffydd, prince of South Wales, and about the middle of the following century was destroyed. It appears to have been a place of great strength, from the thickness of its walls, which are still standing, though they are a mere shell. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. with that of Llangunnock, £101. There is also the district church of Llanybri, a perpet. cur.* The parish church is dedicated to St. Stephan. The Baptists, Wesleyans, and Calvinistic Methodists have each a chapel; and there is a National school. St. Anthony's well is in this parish, to which at one time miraculous virtues were attributed. Llanstephan Cottage and Place are the principal residences. A fair is held on the 8th June.

LLANSTEPHAN, a par. in the hund. of Painscastle, co. Radnor, 6 miles W. of Hay, its post town, and 7 S.E. of Builth. It is situated on the rivers Bachwy and Wye. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £67, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Stephan. The charities amount to about £8 per annum.

LLANSTINAN, a par. in the hund. of Dewisland, co. Pembroke, 2 miles S. of Fishguard, its post town. It is an agricultural village, situated on the western stream of the Cleddy. Llanstinan House, the old seat of the Symmonses, has recently been restored. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £100. The church is dedicated to St. Justinian. Llanstinan House is the principal residence.

LLANTARNAM, a hmlt. in the hund. of Wentllooge, co. Monmouth, 2¼ miles from Newport. It is a station on the Eastern Valleys section of the Monmouthshire railway. It is situated on the right bank of the Afon Llwyd, and had formerly an abbey for six Cistercian monks. The principal residence is Llantarnam Abbey, a comparatively modern Elizabethan mansion, erected from the materials of the old abbey.

LLANTHETTY, a par. in the hund. of Pinkelly, co. Brecon, 7 miles S.E. of Brecknock, its post town. It is situated on the Roman Via Julia Montana and the river Usk. The Brecon canal passes through the parish, which includes the tnshps. of Dyffrin and Tâf-Vechan. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £344. The parish church is dedicated to St. Detta. There is also the district church of Tâf-Vechan, a perpet. cur., in the gift of the rector. Here are several good residences, the principal being Llanthetty Hall.

LLANTHEW, a par. in the hunds. of Merthyr and Penkelly, co. Brecon, 1 mile N.E. of Brecknock, its post town. The parish is watered by the river Honddu. The bishops of St. David formerly had a palace here, and it is said Archbishop Baldwin and Giraldus made a short stay here in 1188. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £89, in the patron. of the Archdeacon of Brecon. The church, dedicated to St. David, is an ancient cruciform structure.

LLANTHEWY, or LLANDDEWI VACH, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Usk, co. Monmouth, 4 miles S.E. of Pontypool. Newport is its post town. A tributary of the river Usk flows through the parish. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £77, in the patron. of Jesus College, Oxford.

LLANTHEWY-RYTHERCH, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Abergavenny, co. Monmouth, 3 miles S.E. of Abergavenny, its post town. A tributary of the river Trothy passes through it. The tithes were commuted in 1840. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £215, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. David. The charities amount to about £2 per annum.

LLANTHEWY-SKIRRID, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Abergavenny, co. Monmouth, 3 miles N.E. Abergavenny, its post town. It is situated at the foot of the hill Skirrid Fawr. The village consists of a few farmhouses. The tithes were commuted in 1839. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £187. The church is dedicated to St. David.

LLANTHONY ABBEY, or LLANDDWI-NANT-HONDDU, a chplry. in the par. of Cwmyoy, co. Monmouth, 9 miles N. of Abergavenny, its post town. It is situated in the Vale of Ewias, at the foot of the Black mountains, and is watered by the river Afon Honddu. A monastery of Austin Friars was founded here in the early part of the 12th century, subsequent to the erection of St. David's Cathedral, and was afterwards transferred to the neighbourhood of Gloucester. The ruins show it to have been cruciform, with a central and two west towers, one of which, with the prior's house, now forms the inn. A particular interest attaches to this establishment on account of the contemporary histories of Prior Betun (1131), Prior William, of Wycombe (1137), and one of its monks (1103–1203). It was described by Giraldus Cambrensis in 1188. An excellent historical account of the priory, with copious extracts from the chronicles, was published by the Rev. G. Roberts, in the Archæologia Cambrensis. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £55. There are extensive remains of the old abbey, which are very interesting, especially the church, 210 feet in length, with transepts 96 feet. The ruins belonged to the late Walter Savage Landor, Esq., who acquired them from Sir M. Wood, who had previously fitted up a portion as a shooting-box.

LLANTHOWELL, a par. in the higher div. of the hund. of Usk, co. Monmouth. See LLANLLOWELL.

LLANTILLIO-CROSSENNY, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Skenfreth, co. Monmouth, 7 miles N.W. of Monmouth, its post town. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Trothy. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £270, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Teilaw, is a spacious structure, in the decorated style of architecture, with lofty tower. Adjoining it is a large chapel, on the N. side of the presbytery. In the churchyard is an altar-tomb to the memory of Colonel Clifford's son. Here is a free grammar school, founded by Mr. Powell, and endowed with property producing £150 per annum. The other charities amount to about £40. Llantillio House is the principal residence. There are extensive remains of an ancient castle, standing on an eminence, 1½ mile to the N. of White Castle. It appears to have been a large oval building, with six bastions lighted from the inner court, but having no keep. It is said to have been the stronghold of Sir Gwyn ap Cwarthvold, at the time of the Norman invasion, and was still a renowned place in Queen Elizabeth's reign.

LLANTILLIO-PERTHOLEY, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Abergavenny, co. Monmouth, 1½ mile N.E. of Abergavenny, its post town and railway station on the West Midland line of railway. A tributary of the river Usk flows through it. The tithes were commuted in 1839. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £242, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church is dedicated to St. Teilaw or St. Theilau. The endowments produce nearly £35 per annum.

LLANTONY ABBEY. See LLANTHONY ABBEY, co. Monmouth.

LLANTOOD, or LLANTYD, a par. in the hund. of Kilgerran, co. Pembroke, 3 miles S.W. of Cardigan, its post town, and 6 N.E. of Newport. The village consists of a few farmhouses. The living is a vic. annexed to that of St. Dogmaels, in the dioc. of St. David's. The church is dedicated to St. Illtyd. There are small charities of about £1 per annum.

LLANTRISAINT, a par. in the hund. of Llyfon, co. Anglesey, 5 miles W. of Llanerchymedd, and 7 N.E. of Holyhead. Bangor is its post town. It is situated on the river Alaw, and includes the tnshp. of Gwredog. In this parish is a spot known as the tomb of Bronwen, who, according to tradition, died of grief from a blow received at the hands of her husband, King of Ireland. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bangor. val. with the curs. of Ceidio, Gwredog, Llanllibio, and Llêcheynvarwydd, annexed, £915, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to SS. Avran, Icuan, and Sanan, from which circumstance the parish took its name of Llantrisaint, signifying "church of three saints." The parochial endowments, including £9 to Wynne's school, produce about £25 per annum. Dr. Williams, from whom descend the Wynnes, of Wynnestay, was once rector of this parish.

LLANTRISAINT, a par. and small market town in the hund. of Miskin, co. Glamorgan, 6 miles N.E. of Cowbridge, 10 N.W. of Cardiff, its post town, and 171 from London. The South Wales line of railway has a station at a short distance to the S. of the town, and crosses the parish to the S. of the croppings of the coal measures. The Ely Valley railway is opened to Dinas, which is at the northern extremity of the parish, and runs into the Llantrisaint station of the South Wales railway. The Ely Valley railway is on the northern side of the parish. The Taff Extension (Llantrisaint) branches from the South Wales railway station to the E., and joins the Taff in the Rhomada Valley, and it runs on to Cowbridge southerly from the station of the South Wales railway. It is situated among the hills near the river Ely; and the par. includes the tnshps. and hmlts. of Cymmer, Craigddu, Dinas, Storehouse, and Talygarn. The town was first chartered in the reign of Edward III. and the local government is vested in a constable, portreeve, 12 aldermen, and other officers. Petty sessions are held weekly. It is a contributory borough, with Cowbridge, to Cardiff, in returning one member to parliament. The streets of the town, which is situated on a range of hills, presenting rather a continental appearance, are narrow, and the houses somewhat ancient. There is a townhall and market-house. In the neighbourhood there are collieries, and iron and lead ore abound. About a mile to the right of the town are the hæmatite iron mines of Cornel and Mwyndy, in which the ore is worked open-cast, like a quarry. The discovery of the Llantrisaint ore, though not so rich as that brought from Whitehaven and Barrow, and more recently from Devon and Cumberland, to the South Wales smelting-works, is likely to affect materially the iron-works of the South Wales basin, being so much nearer at hand. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Llandaff, gross val. £649, in the patron. of the dean and chapter of Gloucester. The parish church is a Norman structure, dedicated to SS. Dynvog, Iddog, and Menw. There are also six district churches, three of which are in the patron. of the Vicar of Llantrisaint, the livings of which are perpet. curs. varying in val. from £47 to £256. There are two endowed chapels in the parish without cure of souls—St. John the Baptist and Talygarn chapel. The parochial endowments realise about £35 per annum. The Independents, Baptists, Calvinistic and Wesleyan Methodists, have chapels. There are two public schools for boys and girls. There are also National schools at Cymmer, and British schools at Dinas and Tongrefail. Here are remains of an ancient castle, and traces of a British camp. In the par. are Llantrisaint House, Garth Hall, and other good residences. This was the birthplace of Sir L. Jenkins, secretary of state, and a judge. Here is a meet for the Llanharran hounds. Friday is market day. Fairs are held on the 13th February, 12th May, 12th August, and 29th October.

LLANTRISAINT, or LLANTRISSENT, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Usk, co. Monmouth, 2 miles S.E. of Usk, its post town, 4 N.E. of Caerleon, and 9 from Chepstow. The village is a small place. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. with that of Pertholey annexed, £180. The church is dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul.

LLANTRITHYD, a par. in the hund. of Dinas Powis, co. Glamorgan, 3 miles S.E. of Cowbridge, its post town, and 9 S.W. of Cardiff. Here was a castle in the 12th century, belonging to Hywel ab Jestyn, who received the domain from Fitz-Hamon. The fortress was destroyed. Calamine, lead, limestone, and manganese are obtained here. The village is small. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £165. The church, dedicated to St. Illtyd, contains monumental effigies of the Basset family, to whom the old hall, a Tudor edifice, and now a heap of ruins, belonged. Llantrithyd Park is the seat of the Aubrey family, descendants of St. Aubrey, who came over with William the Conqueror.

LLANTWITVAIRDRE, or LLANTWIT MAJOR, a par. in the hund. of Miskin, co. Glamorgan, 3 miles N.E. of Llantrisaint, its post town, 3½ from Cowbridge, and 4 W. of Caerphilly. It is situated on the western bank of the river Taff and the Merthyr-Tydvil canal. The Treforest station, on the Taff Vale and Aberdare railway, is a short distance from the village. The par. includes the tnshps. of Newbridge and Treforest, where tin is obtained, in the neighbourhood of Pont-y-Prydd Bridge. Here are collieries and iron-works. In the 5th century a monastery was founded here by St. Illtyd, which became very celebrated in the Welsh Church as a school of divinity, numbering among its scholars the historian Gildas, St. David, and, as some accounts affirm, Taliesin, the chief of bards. Many of the abbots of Llantwit were bishops of Llandaff. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Llandaff, with the rect. of Llysworney annexed, val. £347, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Gloucester. The church, dedicated to St. Illtyd, is a very ancient and interesting relic of antiquity. It consists of two buildings adjoining each other, called the old and new churches. The latter, by a strange anachronism, called the New church, is apparently two centuries the oldest, having been built in the 13th century. It consists of a nave, aisles, and chancel, with a good rood-screen, in which are vacant niches once adorned with images of the twelve apostles. The old church contains some mural paintings and curious antique monuments, and has on the W. side a lady chapel about 40 feet in length. In the churchyard are the remains of a cross erected in the 6th century, a stone with a Runic inscription, and two Roman tombs. The parochial charities consist of £2 annually, the endowment of Griffith's almshouses. There are schools for boys and girls. In the vicinity are remains of a castellated house, called the Castle, and about a mile to the S.E. traces of the old seat of the Seys family, originally a grange belonging to the lords of Cardiff. Near the coast are the Castle Ditches and numerous caves in the cliffs, in one of which tradition asserts that marriages were formerly celebrated.

LLANTYSILIO. See LLANDYSILIO, co. Denbigh.

LLANUFYDD, a par. in the hund. of Isaled, co. Denbigh. See LLANNEFYDD.

LLANULID, a chplry. in the hmlt. of Cray, par. of Devynock, co. Brecon, 7 miles W. of Brecknock, its post town. Here is a church, the living of which is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £120, in the patron. of the vicar of the parish.

LLANUNDA. See LLANWNDA, co. Pembroke.

LLANUWCHYLLYN, a par. in the hund. of Penllyn, co. Merioneth, 4 miles S.W. of Bala, its post town, and 12 N.E. of Dolgelly. It is situated at the south-western extremity of Bala Lake, and is watered by the river Dwfrdwy, a tributary of the Dee. The neighbourhood is wild and mountainous. The par. includes the tnshps. of Castell, Cynllwyd, Penanlliw, and Penarran. Slate is obtained here. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £140. The church is dedicated to St. Deiniol. It contains some monumental effigies, including one of a knight in armour, whose duty it was to attend the judges in their assize journeys, and protect them from the attacks of banditti. Here are Vaughan's almshouses, with an endowment producing £42, and Williams' school, £25, and other charities amounting in all to about £95 per annum. A short distance from here is a waterfall on the river Twrch. Coins and other Roman remains have been found at Caer Gai, supposed to have been a Roman fort.

LLANVACHES, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Caldicott, co. Monmouth, 6 miles S.W. of Chepstow, and 6 N.E. of Newport, its post town. There was formerly a castle here. The village consists of a few farmhouses. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £194. The church is dedicated to St. Dubricius. The charities amount to about £10 per annum.

LLANVAIR, a hmlt. in the par. of Llandyssil, hund. of Moyddyn, co. Cardigan, 6 miles E. of Newcastle-in-Emlyn.

LLANVAIR, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanvair-Waterdine, Mainstone div. of the hund. of Clun, co. Salop, 4 miles N.W. of Knighton.

LLANVAIR-CLYDOGAU. See LLANFAIR-CLYDOGAU, co. Cardigan.

LLANVAIR-DISCOED, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Caldicott, co. Monmouth, 5 miles S.W. of Chepstow, its post town. It is situated near the forest of Wentwood, and on the road to Usk. The par. includes the hmlt. of Dinham, and the remains of Dinham Castle, now a ruin overgrown with wood. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the vic. of Caerwent, in the dioc. of Llandaff. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. Here are extensive remains of Llanvair Castle, built in the 13th century, and consisting of a square and two round towers, blended with a farmhouse. Coins, urns, and other Roman remains have been found.

LLANVAIR-KILGIDIN, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Abergavenny, co. Monmouth, 5 miles S.E. of Abergavenny, its post town. It is an occasional station on the Monmouth branch of the Taff Vale Extension railway. The village is situated on the river Usk, which is here crossed by a chain suspension bridge, only passable for foot passengers. Opposite the village is the wooded eminence of Coed-y-Bunedd, crowned by an extensive encampment 1,440 feet in circumference. The view from the summit of the hill takes in the whole range of the Blosenge, the sharp cone of the Sugar Loaf, and the Skyrrid range. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £395. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The charities produce nearly £10 a year.

LLANVAIR-WATERDINE, a par. in the hund. of Clun, co. Salop, 5 miles N.W. of Knighton, its post town, and 5 S.W. of Clunn. It is situated in the vicinity of Offa's Dyke, on the north-eastern bank of the river Teme, which divides this county from Radnorshire. The main road between Knighton and Newtown passes through the village. The par. is large, including the tnshps. of Clewilsey, Funnanvair, Maynethesney, Selly, Skyborry, and Trebert. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Hereford, val £78. The church is a modern edifice, erected on the site of a former one. It is a stone structure in the Gothic style of architecture, and dedicated to St. Mary. The parochial charities amount to £5 annually. There is a National school for children of both sexes, the building for which was completed in the year following the opening of the church (1855). The Earl of Powis is lord of the manor.

LLANVANOS, a chplry. in the par. of Llangattock-Vibon-Avel, co. Monmouth, 6 miles N.W. of the town of Monmouth. There is a church, the living of which is a perpet. cur. annexed to the parish vic.,* in the dioc. of Llandaff.

LLANVAPLEY, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Abergavenny, co. Monmouth, 4 miles E. of Abergavenny, its post town. It is situated on the western bank of the river Trothy. There is no village, only a few farmhouses and cottages. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £231. The church is dedicated to St. Mapley.

LLANVARETH, a parochial chplry. in the hund. of Colwyn, co. Radnor, 2 miles E. of Builth, its post town, and 12 from New Radnor. It is situated in a hilly district affording good pasture, and is watered by the rivers Wye and Vareth. The village, which is small, stands on the eastern bank of the Wye. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Aber-Edw, in the dioc. of St. David's. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The charities amount to about £4 per annum.

LLANVEDOW, or LLANVEAU, a hmlt. in the par. of Michaelstone, hund. of Caerphilly, co. Glamorgan, 5 miles S.E. of Caerphilly. It is situated on the banks of the river Rumney, which is here crossed by a bridge. Ruperrah and Cefn Mably are two good residences here.

LLANVERNACT. See LLANFYRNACT, co. Pembroke.

LLANVETHERINE, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Abergavenny, co. Monmouth, 4 miles N.E. of Abergavenny, its post town. It is watered by the river Trothy. The tithes were commuted in 1839. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £260. The church is dedicated to St. James.

LLANVEYNOE, a chplry. in the par. of Clodock, hund. of Ewyas-Lacy, co. Hereford, 9 miles S.E. of Hay, its post town, and 15 S.W. of Hereford. It is situated at the base of the Black mountains, and the river Monnow flows through it. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £61, in the gift of the vicar of the parish. The church is a plain, ancient edifice of stone, dedicated to St. Peter.

LLANVIGAN, or LLANFEUGAN, a par. in the hund. of Penkelly, co. Brecon, 4 miles S.E. of Brecknock, its post town, and 9 N.W. of Crickhowell. It is situated in the vicinity of the river Usk and the Brecon canal. The parish contains the hmlts. of Glynn-Collwn, and Penkelly. A castle formerly stood here, which belonged to the Mortimers. The people are mostly employed in the mines. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. with the cur. of Glynn annexed, £480. The church is dedicated to St. Vengan. The parochial endowments produce about £42 per annum. Here is a yew-tree above 9 yards in circumference.

LLANVIHANGEL. See also LLANFIHANGEL.

LLANVIHANGEL-CRUCORNEY, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Abergavenny, co. Monmouth, 4 miles N.E. of Abergavenny, its post town. It is a station on the West-Midland railway. The parish is situated at the foot of Skirrid-Fawr, and watered by the river Monnow. The hamlet of Penbiddle is included in the parish. It was anciently the property of the Arnolds, from whom it passed into the Harley family in the reign of Queen Anne, and at present belongs to Lord Rodney. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £281. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. There are charities amounting to about £4 per annum. Llanvihangel Court is an ancient seat, the property of Lord Rodney. It is chiefly remarkable for its avenue of firs, which are considered the finest in the kingdom.

LLANVIHANGEL-LLANTARNAM, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Usk, co. Monmouth, 3 miles N. of Newport. Caerleon is its post town. It is situated on the Afon Llwyd, a tributary of the river Usk. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £108. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. The endowments belonging to the parish produce nearly £30 per annum. Llanvihangel House stands upon the site of, and is partly built from, the ruins of a Cistercian abbey that formerly stood here.

LLANVIHANGEL-NANTMELLAN, a par. in the borough and co. Radnor, 3 miles S.W. of Radnor, its post town. It includes the tnshp. of Trewern. Near here is a waterfall of about 70 feet high, called Water-break-its-Neck, and the little lake of Llyn-hilyn. The village, which is remarkably small, is situated on the slope of a hill. On the other side of the hill, in the parish of Llandegley, is a strong sulphur spring, much frequented during the summer for drinking and bathing. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £142. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is in the Norman style of architecture, and is shaded by ancient yew-trees. The charities amount to about £7 per annum. Here are traces of a British camp.

LLANVIHANGEL-NEAR-ROGGIETT, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Caldicott, co. Monmouth, 6 miles S.W. of Chepstow, its post town. It is situated near the mouth of the river Severn. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Roggiett, in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £95. The church is dedicated to St. Michael.

LLANVIHANGEL-NIGH-USK, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Abergavenny, co. Monmouth, 4 miles S.E. of Abergavenny. Usk is its post town. The river Usk flows through the parish. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £123. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. The bequests for charitable purposes produce about £15 per annum.

LLANVIHANGEL-PONT-Y-MOILE, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Usk, co. Monmouth, 1 mile E. of Pontypool, its post town. The Brecon canal passes through the parish. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £87. The church is dedicated to St. Michael.

LLANVIHANGEL-TOR-Y-MYNYDD, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Ragland, co. Monmouth, 7 miles N.W. of Chepstow, its post town. There is no village, only a few farmhouses. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £89, in the patron. of the archdeacon.

LLANVIHANGEL-YSTERN-LLEWERN, a par. in the hund. of Skenfreth, co. Monmouth, 5 miles N.W. of Monmouth, its post town. It is situated on the river Trothy. It is chiefly used as grassland, and for the growth of fruit trees. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £221. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. The charities, including £9 to Thomas's school, produce about £9 per annum.

LLANVILLO, or LLANFILO, a par. in the hund. of Penkelly, co. Brecon, 3 miles W. of Talgarth, and 5 N.E. of Brecknock, its post town. It is situated on a branch of the river Wye. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. with the cur. of Llandefailog-Tre'r-Graig, £324. The church is dedicated to St. Millburg. The charities are about £1 per annum. In the neighbourhood are traces of the Alltfillo British camp.

LLANVITHIN, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Dinas Powis, co. Glamorgan, forms a part of Llancarvan, 4 miles S.E. of Cowbridge.

LLANVRECHVA, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Usk, co. Monmouth, 5 miles S.E. of Pontypool, and 2 from Caerleon, its post town. A tributary of the river Usk flows through the parish. The workhouse for the Pontypool Poor-law Union is situated here. Woollen goods are manufactured. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £85, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The charities amount to about £5 per annum.

LLANVRYNACH, a par. in the hund. of Penkelly, co. Brecon, 3 miles S.E. of Brecknock, its post town. It is situated on the banks of the river Usk and the Brecon canal. The Roman Via Julia Montana passes near this place. Brycan, Prince of Brecknock, had his seat here. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £200. The church is an ancient structure, dedicated to St. Brynach. The parochial charities produce about £6 per annum. Baths, coins, and other Roman remains were discovered here in the last century. This was the birthplace of Aubrey, the antiquary, who lived in the 17th century, and of other men of note. Maes Derwen and Ty Mawr are seats here.

LLANWARNE, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Wormelow, co. Hereford, 6 miles S.W. of Ross, its post town, 8 from Hereford, and 10 N. of Monmouth. It is situated on a tributary of the river Wye, near the Hereford, Ross, and Monmouth roads. The nearest railway station is at Ross, on the Great Western line. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £277. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is an ancient stone edifice in the Saxon style of architecture, with an embattled tower. It is commodious, and has several monuments. The charities produce about £4 per annum. The Wesleyans have a chapel in the parish, and there is a National school for both sexes. Sir Hungerford Hoskyns, Bart., is lord of the manor.

LLANWDDYN, a par. in the hund. of Llanfyllin, co. Montgomery, 10 miles N.W. of Llanfyllin, and 10 N.E. of Dinas Mowddy. Oswestry is its post town. It is situated on the river Bechan, and includes five townships, of which Rhiewargor and Sputy are the principal. Here are slate quarries. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, formerly belonged to the knights of St. John. The charities amount to about £3 per annum. Fairs are held on the 8th May and 2nd October.

LLANWENARTH, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Abergavenny, co. Monmouth, 2 miles N.W. of Abergavenny, its post town, and 9 from Crickhowell. It is situated at the foot of the Sugarloaf Hill, called here Pen-y-Foil, and is watered by the river Usk. Coal and ironstone are obtained. The village is considerable. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. with the cur. of Govilon, £470. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. The charities amount to about £4 per annum.

LLANWENLLWYFO, a parochial chplry. in the hund. of Twrcelyn, co. Anglesey, 6 miles N.E. of Llanerchymedd. Gwindy is its post town. It is situated on the N.E. coast, at the mouth of the river Dulas. Mining operations are carried on. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Bangor, in the gift of the Incumbent of Amlwch. The church is dedicated to St. Gwenllwyvo.

It contains an elaborate brass of the 14th century. Llys-Dulas is the seat of Lady Dinorben. The grounds of this mansion slope down to the water's edge, and command magnificent sea views.

LLANWENOG, a par. in the hund. of Moyddyn, co. Cardigan, 5 miles S.W. of Lampeter, its post town, and 12 N.E. of Newcastle-in-Emlyn. It is situated in the vicinity of the river Teifi, and includes the tnshp. of Cwrt. A battle was fought here in 981 between rival Welsh chieftains. The village is considerable. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £138, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Gwnog, is an old edifice with a tower. There are traces of an ancient camp and funeral mounds. High Mead and Llanvaughan are the principal residences. A fair is held on the 14th January.

LLANWERN, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Caldicott, co. Monmouth, 4 miles E. of Newport, its post town. It is a station on the South Wales section of the Great Western railway. The wooded knolls and elevations to the right of the village are frequently capped with lias. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £100. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The principal residence is Llanwern House, the seat of the Rev. Sir C. Salusbury, Bart.

LLANWINIO, a par. in the hund. of Derllys, co. Carmarthen, 9 miles S. of Newcastle-in-Emlyn, and 10 N.W. of Carmarthen, its post town. It is situated on the banks of the river Gynin. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £83. The church is dedicated to St. Gwyno. There is a Calvinistic Methodist chapel. A fair is held on the 12th November for sheep and pedlery.

LLANWNDA, a par. in the hund. of Uwch-Gorfai, co. Carnarvon, 3 miles S. of Carnarvon, its post town. It is situated on the old Roman road, and includes the tnshp. of Bont-Newydd. Slate quarries are worked. The tithes were commuted in 1839. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Bangor, val. with the cur. of Llanfaglen annexed, £270, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is a cruciform structure in the early English style of architecture, dedicated to St. Gwynday. There are two Calvinistic Methodist chapels. The charities produce about £6 per annum. There are traces of two British camps.

LLANWNDA, a par. in the hund. of Dewisland, co. Pembroke, 2 miles N.W. of Fishguard, its post town, and 14 N.E. of St. David's. It is situated on the seacoast, W. of Fishguard Bay, and includes the tnshps. of Diffrin and Goodwick. Some French convicts effected a landing here near the close of the last century. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £220, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church is dedicated to St. Gwynday. The historian Giraldus was once vicar of this parish. Here are traces of camps and some cromlechs. Fairs are held on the 29th May and 22nd November for horses, cattle, and sheep.

LLANWNEN, a par. in the hund. of Moyddyn, co. Cardigan, 3 miles S.W. of Lampeter, its post town, and 15 N.E. of Newcastle-in-Emlyn. It is situated near the confluence of the rivers Granell and Teifi. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. with the cur. of Silian annexed, £102, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Gwynin. In the neighbourhood are remains of an old fortification. Llwyn-y-Groes is the principal seat. A fair is held on the 13th December for horses, cattle, cheese, and pedlery.

LLANWNOG, a par. in the hund. of Llanidloes, co. Montgomery, 5 miles N.W. of Newtown, its post town, and 7 N.E. of Llanidloes. It is situated on a tributary of the river Severn, and includes four townships. Here are several hills, some above 1,500 feet in height, and three lakes. The old Roman road to Chester passes through the parish, and had a station called Caersws. Woollen goods are manufactured in the village, which is a considerable and well-to-do place. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Bangor, val. £220, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Gwynog. There are two Calvinistic Methodist chapels. The parochial charities amount to about £10 per annum. The workhouse for the Newton Poor-law Union is in this parish. There are some traces of British camps.

LLANWNWS. See Gwnnws, co. Cardigan.

LLANWNWAS, a hmlt. in the hund. of Dewisland, co. Pembroke, 3 miles E. of St. David's. Here are several Druidical stones.

LLANWONNO, a par. in the hund. of Miskin, co. Glamorgan, 4 miles N.W. of Newbridge, 3 from Llantrisant, and 8 S.W. of Merthyr-Tydfil. Pont-y-Pridd is its post town. It is situated on the river Taff, and includes the tnshps. of Glynconnon and Havoddryenog. The place is hilly, and there are several coal pits. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. with the cur. of St. David's, Rhondda Valley, annexed, £256, in the gift of the Vicar of Llantrisant. The church is dedicated to St. Wonno. There are charities amounting to about £5 per annum. This is a meet for the Glôg harriers.

LLANWRDDA, a par. in the hund. of Cayo, co. Carmarthen, 4 miles S.W. of Llandovery, its post town, 8 N.E. of Llandilofawr, and 2 from Glanrhyd station. It is situated in a glen watered by the river Towey, which is crossed about 2 miles from the village by a suspension bridge of 225 feet span. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic.* of Llansadwrn, in the dioc. of St. Asaph. In charities this parish shares with Llansadwrn. A fair is held on the 5th October.

LLANWRIN, a par. in the hund. of Machynlleth, co. Montgomery, 3 miles N.E. of Machynlleth, its post town, and 8 S.W. of Dinas Mowddy. It is situated on the river Dovey, and includes Llanfechan and four other townships. Here are some lofty hills. The neighbourhood abounds with slate. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bangor, val. £272, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Gwrin, is no less than 163 feet in length. The parochial charities amount to about £8 per annum. Henry VII. slept here, after landing at Milford, previous to the battle of Bosworth. At a seat called Mathavarn, which in 1644 was destroyed by fire, resided the celebrated seer and bard of the 15th century, David Llwydd. On its site now stands a farmhouse.

LLANWRTHWL, a par. in the hund. of Builth, co. Brecon, 3 miles S. of Rhayader, its post town, and 9 N.W. of Builth. The river Wye flows through the parish. Copper ore is worked here. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £85, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Wrthwl, is a small structure. The parochial charities amount to about £16 per annum, besides a share of Boughrood, Brecon. Near the church is a pillar cross, and in the neighbourhood are several Druidic remains.

LLANWRTYD, a par. in the hund. of Builth, co. Brecon, 10 miles S.W. of Builth, its post town, and 12 N.E. of Llandovery. This is a small watering-place, situated in rather a wild neighbourhood, on the river Irvon. The par. includes the hmlts. of Clawdd Madog, and Llechweddor. Here is a spring containing sulphureous properties similar to those of Harrogate, called by the people Fynnon Ddrewllyd, or "the stinking well." Woollen goods are manufactured here. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Llangammarch, in the dioc. of St. David's. The church is dedicated to St. David. The charities consist of an endowment to Jones's school, producing about £11 per annum. There are two old seats; one is now a farmhouse, and the other a lodging-house.

LLANWYDDELAN, a par. in the hund. of Newtown, co. Montgomery, 4 miles S. of Llanfair, and 6 N.W. of Newtown, its post town. It is situated in the vicinity of the Roman road Caer Sws, and the river Rhiw flows through the parish, which includes the tnshps. of Pencoed, Penymes, and Treganol. Here are hills with good pasture. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £250, in the patron. of the Bishop of Llandaff. The church is dedicated to St. Gwyddelan. There is a Calvinistic Methodist chapel. The charities amount to about £3 per annum. In the neighbourhood are traces of a British camp.

LLANYBLODWELL, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Oswestry, co. Salop, 6 miles S.W. of Oswestry, its post town, and 16 N.W. of Shrewsbury. It is situated in the north-western part of the county, on the borders of Denbighshire, in the vicinity of Offa's Dyke. The river Tanat flows through the par., which includes the tnshps. of Abertanatt, Bryn, and Llynclys, where there is a lake. Copper and lead are obtained here, and there are limestone quarries. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £271, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is built in the style prevailing about four centuries back, with Norman doorway and arches. In 1855 it was completely restored, and an octagonal tower with spire added to the building, at the sole expense of the late Rev. John Parker, one of the first of Welsh archæologists. It contains an E. window of stained glass, a Norman font, and monuments of the Bridgeman, Godolphin, and other families. The English and Welsh languages are used alternately in the performance of Divine service. The parochial charities produce about £11 per annum, mostly applied to school purposes. In addition to the endowed school, there is a National school for both sexes. The Earl of Powis is lord of the manor.

LLANYBREE, a vil. in the par. of Llanstephan, co. Carmarthen, 3 miles E. of Laugharne. Here is a church; the living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of St. David's.

LLANYBYTHER, a par. in the hund. of Cathinog, co. Carmarthen, 4 miles S.W. of Lampeter, its post town. It is situated on the banks of the river Teifi, which is here crossed by a bridge, and extends as far as the river Cothi. The par. includes, with Abergorlech, four vils. There are several hills, at the base of which are traces of the Roman road Sarn Helen, which ran from Maridunum, now Carmarthen, to Loventium, the modern Llanio. In the vicinity is a small lake, called Llyn Pencarreg. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £117. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. Fairs are held on the 21st June, 17th July, 1st and 21st November.

LLANYCEFN, a par. in the hund. of Dungleddy, co. Pembroke, 6 miles N.W. of Narberth, its post town, and 10 N.E. of Haverfordwest. It is a well-cultivated place, on the banks of the river East Cleddy. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £51.

LLANYCHAER, or LLANERCHAUR, a par. in the hund. of Kemess, co. Pembroke, 3 miles S.E. of Fishguard, its post town, and 5 S.W. of Newport. It is situated on the river Gwayne, S. of Fishguard Bay. The surface is hilly, and a considerable portion in pasture. The village consists of a few farmhouses. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £69. The church is dedicated to St. David.

LLANYCHAIARN, a par. in the hund. of Lower Ilar, co. Cardigan, 2 miles S. of Aberystwith, its post town. It is a little village, situated on the coast of Cardigan Bay, and on the river Ystwith, which is crossed by a bridge close to the village. From a steep hill, called Chancery, a view is commanded of the vale of the Ystwith, with its richly-wooded banks. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £97. The church, dedicated to St. Llwchaiarn, stands close to the left bank of the river. There are some remains of an old castle.

LLANYCHAN, a par. in the hund. of Ruthin, co. Denbigh, 3 miles N. of Ruthin, its post town, and 5 S.E. of Denbigh. It is a well-cultivated spot on the banks of the river Clwyd. The parish is of small extent, and wholly agricultural. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £170, in the patron. of the bishop, who is lord of the manor. The church is dedicated to St. Hychan.

LLANYCHLWYDOG, a par. in the hund. of Kemess, co. Pembroke, 3 miles S.E. of Fishguard, its post town, and 3 S.W. of Newport. It is situated on the banks of the river Gwayne, and is well cultivated. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. with the cur. of Llanllawer annexed, £155. The church is dedicated to St. David. Two stones mark the grave of Prince Clydawe, who was murdered, and lies buried here.

LLANYCIL, or LLANYKILL, a par. in the hund. of Penllyn, co. Merioneth, 12 miles S.W. of Corwen, 15 N.E. of Dolgelly, and 1 mile from Bala, its post town. The par. includes the market town of Bala and five other tnshps. It is situated on the western side of Bala Lake, and has the workhouse for that Poor-law Union. Many of the people are employed in stocking-knitting. The parish is of large extent, being about 9 miles in length by 4 broad. The surface is hilly, rising at Arrenig Fawr to an altitude of 2,809 feet above the sea. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £350, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Beuno. There is a free grammar school, with an endowment producing about £80, besides six scholarships, and six exhibitions at Jesus College, Oxford. There are other charities, amounting to nearly £30 per annum. Fairs are held on the 3rd June, 11th September, and 2nd October.

LLANYCRWYS, a par. in the hunds. of Cathinog and Cayo, co. Carmarthen, 4 miles S.E. of Lampeter, 5 N. of Llansawyl, and 13 from Llandovery, its post town. It is situated on the Roman road Sarn Helen, and is watered by the river Cothi. The par. includes the hmlts. of Is-Fforest and Mynachty. The surface is hilly, but the land is under good cultivation. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £60. The church is dedicated to St. David. There is an Independent chapel.

LLANYFYNY, a tnshp. in the par. of Llangerrig, co. Montgomery, 3 miles S. of Llanidloes.

LLANYGWRYFON. See LLAN-GRWYDDON, co. Cardigan.

LLANYMOWDDWY, a par. in the hund. of Talybont, co. Merioneth, 11 miles N.E. of Dolgelly, its post town. It is situated at the base of the mountain Arran Mowddy, where the river Dyfi has its source. The par. includes the tnshps. of Cowarch, Cwmceiwydd, Llanerchfydda, and Pennant. Slate is obtained, and there is a supply of peat. The pass, called Bwlch-y-Groes, is in this neighbourhood. The village of Llan-y-Mowddwy is a retired little place, embosomed in hills. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bangor, val. £235, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Tydecho, is shaded by yew-trees. The charities amount to about £6 per annum. There is a waterfall on the Pumrhyd, which flows from a cwm on the W. of Llan-y-Mowddwy.

LLANYMYNECH, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Oswestry, co. Salop, 6 miles S.W. of Oswestry, its post town, and 17 N.W. of Shrewsbury. It is situated on the borders of Denbighshire and Montgomeryshire, a small portion of the parish extending into those counties. The Cambrian railway has a station here. The river Vyrnwy, the Montgomery canal, and Offa's Dyke, traverse this neighbourhood. The tnshps. of Llwyn Tidman, Carreghova, and Treprenal, are included in the par. The district abounds with hills, from whence are obtained copper ore, ochre, and large quantities of limestone. At the quarries of Porthywaen enormous quantities of mountain limestone are extracted and transmitted to Staffordshire to be used in the smelting of iron ore. Lead and zinc have also been found here. The highest point is called Llanymynech Hill, from the summit of which there are extensive views of the surrounding country. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £394, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is a stone edifice, in the Anglo-Norman style of architecture, erected in 1845. It has an E. window of stained glass. The charities produce about £3 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. At a spot called Ogo Cavern, Roman coins of the reign of Antoninus have been found in juxtaposition with mining-tools, and several skeletons, showing that these copper-mines were worked by the Romans. In the neighbourhood may be seen traces of a British camp. The Earl of Powis and F. West, Esq., are lords of the manor. Fairs are held on the 1st April, 29th May, and 23rd September.

LLANYNGHENEDL, a parochial chplry. in the hund. of Llyfon, co. Angley, 4 miles E. of Holyhead, its post town. It is situated in the vicinity of Holyhead Bay. The land is fertile and well cultivated. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect.* of Llanfachreth, in the dioc. of Bangor. The church is an old edifice standing on the spot occupied by one built in the 7th century.

LLANYNYS, a par. in the hund. of Builth, co. Brecon, 3 miles W. of Builth, its post town, and 4 N.E. of Llanyammarch. It is situated on the river Irvon or Irion. There is no village, only a few farmhouses. A great part of the surface is mountainous and comparatively barren. The living is a discharged rect. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £101, in the patron. of the bishop. The parochial charities produce about £16 per annum.

LLANYNYS, a par. in the hund. of Ruthin, co. Denbigh, 3 miles N.W. of Ruthin, its post town, and 5 S.E. of Denbigh. It is situated on the river Clwydd. The par. is 8 miles in length by 2 broad, and includes Trefechan and Rhydonen, and four other tnshps. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. with the cur. of Cyfylliog, £415, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Saern. The charities amount to about £3 per annum. Bachymbyd is the seat of Lord Bagot.

LLANYRE, or LLANHER, a par. in the hund. of Rhayader, co. Radnor, 6 miles S.E. of Rhayader, its post town, and 10 W. of New Radnor. It is situated in the vicinity of Castell Collen, and is watered by the rivers Irthon and Wye. The par. includes the tnshps. of Kilgee and Trawscoed. The little village stands on the Roman road which ran from Caerfagn between Rhayader and Knighton to Bullæum, the modern Builth. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to that of Llanvihangel Helygen, in the dioc. of St. David's. The church is dedicated to All Saints. There are charities of about £2 per annum.

LLANYSTYMDWY, a par. in the hund. of Evionydd, co. Carnarvon, 2 miles N.W. of Criccieth. Tremadoc is its post town. It is situated near the N. coast of Cardigan Bay, and is watered by the rivers Dwyfach and Dwyfawr, which are crossed at the village. This was once the property of Howell-y-Vwyall, who took John, King of France, prisoner at Poictiers. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bangor, val. £485, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is almost hidden in ivy. The parochial charities, including £31 to Hughes's school, produce £70 per annum. Plâs Hên and Gwynvryn are the principal residences. A fair is held on the 17th April.

LLANYWARED, a tnshp. in the par. of Llangirrig, co. Montgomery, 3 miles S. of Llanidloes.

LLANYWERN, a par. in the hund. of Penkelly, co. Brecon, 4 miles E. of Brecknock, its post town, and 4 S.W. of Talgarth. This was a demesne of Brecon priory, to which it was given by Bernard Newmarch. The village consists of a few farmhouses. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £81, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Mary.

LLAUGHARNE. See LAUGHARNE, co. Carmarthen.

LLAWHADEN, a par. in the hund. of Dungleddy, co. Pembroke, 3 miles N.W. of Narberth, its post town, and 7 N.E. of Haverfordwest. It is watered by the river Cleddau or Cleddy. The village, which is considerable, is situated on rising ground. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. with the cur. of Bletherston annexed, £152, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Aidan. It contains a monument to Bishop Houghton, bearing date 1388. Here are some remains of the old castle belonging to the bishops of St. David's, also of Bishop Beck's hospital. The former, now in ruins, consists of a noble gateway, with a bold, round arch, flanked by two towers of great strength, with open buttresses overlooking the valley of the Cleddau. There are other octagonal towers, and some trefoil lancet-headed windows. Ridgeway and Talybont are the principal residences.

LLAWR-Y-DREF, a tythg. in the par. of Aberffraw, co. Anglesey, in the vicinity of the town of Aberffraw.

LLAY, a tnshp. in the par. of Gresford, hund. of Bromfield, co. Denbigh, 4 miles N. of Wrexham. It is situated on Offa's Dyke and the river Alyn.

LLECFAEN, a hmlt. in the par. of Llanhamlet, co. Brecon, 3 miles S.E. of Brecknock. It lies near the Roman Via Julia Montana, and is watered by the river Usk. The Hay line of railway passes through it.

LLECH, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanrhaidr-in-Kinmerch, co. Denbigh, 4 miles N.W. of Ruthin. This forms a part of the demesne of the see of Bangor.

LLECHAN, a tnshp. in the par. of Gyffin, co. Carnarvon, in the vicinity of the town of Conway.

LLECHCYNFARWYDD, a parochial chplry. in the hund. of Llyfon, co. Anglesey, 3 miles S.W. of Llanerchymedd, 2 from Gwindy, its post town, and 9 from Holyhead. It is a small rustic place. Near the church is a stone pillar 9 feet high. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect.* of Llantrisaint, in the dioc. of Bangor. The church is a cruciform structure dedicated to St. Cynvarwy, and stands on the same spot as one built in the 7th century. The parochial endowments are worth about £25 per annum.

LLECHFRAITH and LLECHGRON, hmlts. in the par. of Llanegwad, co. Carmarthen, in the vicinity of the town of Carmarthen.

LLECH-MAWR, a hmlt. in the par. of Lantwit-Major, co. Glamorgan, 4 miles S.W. of Cowbridge.

LLECHRYD, a parochial chplry. in the hund. of Troedyraur, co. Cardigan, 3 miles S.E. of Cardigan, its post town, and 6 N.W. of Newcastle-in-Emlyn. It is situated on the northern bank of the river Teifi, which is here crossed by a bridge. It was the scene of the Rebecca riot in 1844. A battle was fought here by contending factions of Welsh in the 11th century. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £109. The church of the Holy Cross is a small ancient structure. There is a Presbyterian chapel, built in the time of the Commonwealth.

LLECHRYD-TY-CELYN, a tnshp. in the par. of Llannefydd, co. Denbigh, 5 miles N.W. of the town of Denbigh.

LLECHWEDDOR, a hmlt. in the par. of Llanwrtyd, hund. of Builth, co. Brecon, 11 miles N.W. of Builth. It is situated near the river Irvon, and has a chalybeate spring.

LLECHYLCHED, a parochial chplry. in the hund. of Llyfon, co. Anglesey, 4 miles N.W. of Aberffraw, and 8 from Gwindy, its post town. The village is neatly built. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect.* of Llanbeulan, in the dioc. of Bangor. The church is dedicated to St. Ilched.

LLEDER, a stream rising under Mount Shabod, in co. Carnarvon, and falling into the Conway.

LLEDROD, a tnshp. in the par. of Llansaintffraid, co. Montgomery, 4 miles E. of Llanfyllin.

LLEDRODE, a tnshp. in the par. of Llansilin, co. Denbigh, 7 miles S.W. of Chirk.

LLEDROD, LOWER and UPPER, tnshps. in the hund. of Upper Ilar, co. Cardigan, 6 miles N.W. of Tregaron, situated on the river Wyrai, and including the hmlt. of Swydd.

LLETHERGELE, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanegwad, co. Carmarthen, 7 miles E. of Cardigan.

LLETTYGYNFARCH, a tnshp. in the par. of Forden, co. Montgomery, 2 miles N. of the town of Montgomery.

LLEWELL, a vil. in the hmlt. of Traian-Mawr, co. Brecon, 12 miles W. of Brecknock.

LLEWENY HALL, an ancient seat in co. Denbigh, 2 miles N.E. of Denbigh. It was anciently the seat of Prince Marchweithian, the head of one of the fifteen tribes, and about the reign of Henry III. came to the Salusburys, of whom there are portraits still remaining in the old mansion, which stands near the bank of the river Clwydd. It subsequently passed to the Cottons, the late Marquis of Lansdown, and now belongs to the Hughes family.

LLEYN, an ancient district in the south-western part of co. Carnarvon. It gives name to a deanery in the archdeac. of Merioneth, and dioc. of Bangor.

LLIDIARDE, a hmlt. in the par. of Llanykil, co. Merioneth, 4 miles N.W. of Bala.

LLIDIART-Y-GWENYN, a hmlt. in the par. of Llanllechid, co. Carnarvon, 3 miles S. of Bangor.

LLIVIOR, a tnshp. in the par. of Berriew, co. Montgomery, and 3 miles E. of the town of Montgomery.

LLONG, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Leeswood, co. Flint, 2 miles S.E. of Mold. It is a station on the Mold branch of the Chester and Holyhead railway.

LLORAN, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanarmon-Dyfryn-Ceiriog, co. Denbigh, 10 miles S.W. of Chirk.

LLORAN, a tnshp. in the par. of Llansilin, co. Denbigh. It is situated within a short distance of the above.

LLOWARCH, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanarmon-Dyfryn-Ceiriog, co. Denbigh, 10 miles S.W. of Chirk.

LLOWES, a par. in the hund. of Painscastle, co. Radnor, 2 miles W. of Hay, its post town. It is situated on the western bank of the river Wye. It is a small rustic place. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. with that of Llanddewi-Vach, £132, in the patron. of the Archdeacon of Brecknock. The church is dedicated to St. Meldig.

LLOYNDU, a hmlt. in the par. and lower div. of the hund. of Abergavenny, co. Monmouth, in the vicinity of Abergavenny.

LLWYDCOED, a tnshp. in the par. of Llandrillo-yn-Rhos, co. Denbigh, 4 miles N.E. of Conway.

LLWYDCOED, a hmlt. in the par. of Aberdare, co. Glamorgan, 5 miles S.W. of Merthyr Tydvil, in which borough it is included. It is a station on the Merthyr branch of the Vale of Neath railway. Here are collieries, and furnaces for smelting iron ore.

LLWYDIARTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanfihangel, 7 miles N.W. of Llanfair. The river Bechan flows through the township. There is a logan stone in the neighbourhood. Llwydiarth is the principal residence.

LLWYGWY, a tributary of the river Conway, rises under one of the peaks of Snowdon, called Glider Fawr, and forms the falls of Wenol.

LLWYN, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanrhaidr-in-Kinmerch, co. Denbigh, in the vicinity of the town of Denbigh.

LLWYN, a vil. in the par. of Llanegryn, co. Merioneth, 3 miles N. of Towyn; also a seat of the same name near Dolgelly.

LLWYNEGRIN, a tnshp. in the par. and hund. of Mold, co. Flint, 2 miles N.E. of Mold.

LLWYNEYROG, a vil. in the par. of Talachddu, co. Brecon, 4 miles N.E. of Brecknock.

LLWYNGWRILL, a tnshp. in the par. of Llangelynin, co. Merioneth, 5 miles N. of Towyn. It is situated on the coast of Cardigan Bay, and is a station on the Newtown and Machynlleth and Aberystwith and Welsh coast railway. The parish church, built in the present century, is in this township. Here are some Druidic remains, and traces of a camp.

LLWYN LLINON, a hmlt. in the par. of Beddgelert, co. Carnarvon, 4 miles N.E. of Tremadoc.

LLWYNSWCH, a hmlt. in the par. of Llandarog, co. Carmarthen, 6 miles S.E. of Carmarthen. This is united with Gellydy.

LLWYNTIDMAN, a tnshp, in the par. of Llanymynech, co. Salop, 5 miles S. of Oswestry. The river Vyrnwy flows through it.

LLWYN-Y-CYFIN, a tnshp. in the par. of Bodfary, co. Denbigh, 2 miles N.E. of the town of Denbigh. The river Clwydd flows through the place.

LLYDER VAWR, a ridge of Snowdonia in co. Carnarvon, near Llanberis, attaining an altitude of near 3,000 feet.

LLYFFANNOG, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanarth, co. Cardigan, 4 miles S.W. of Aberayron.

LLYFNANT, a stream rising on the borders of co. Carnarvon and Montgomery, under Llyn Penrhiadr, and forms the cascade of Pistyll-y-Llynn.

LLYFNI, a tributary of the river Wye, rises near Llyn Savaddan, in co. Brecon.

LLYFON HUNDRED, one of the subdivisions of co. Anglesey, situated in the western part of the co. It includes the pars. of Bodedern, Bodwrog, Ceirchiog, Llanbealan, Llandrygarn, Llanfaelog, Llanllibio, Llantrisaint, Llanynghenedl, Llechcynfarwydd, Llechylched, Llanfair-yn-cubwll, Llanfihangl-yn-Howyn, Trewalchmai, with some portion of Holyhead.

LLYGADOG, a tnshp. in the par. of Corwen, co. Merioneth, in the vicinity of the town of Corwen.

LLYNCHEL, a hmlt. in the par. of Bettws Evan, co. Cardigan, 4 miles N. of Newcastle-in-Emlyn.

LLYNCLYS, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanybledwell, co. Salop, 3½ miles S.W. of Oswestry. It is a station on the Cambrian railway. Here is a lake, beneath the waters of which is said to be the remains of a palace.

LLYSAN, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanfihangel Glyn-y-Myfyr, co. Denbigh, 6 miles N.W. of Corwen.

LLYSDAM-HUNEDD, or LLISDUAN-HYNEDD, a tnshp. in the par. of Cilcen, hund. of Coleshill, co. Flint, 4 miles W. of Mold.

LLYSDIMEL, a tnshp. in the par. of Llangwym, co. Denbigh, 7 miles W. of Corwen.

LLYSDINAM, a hmlt. in the par. of Llan-afanfawr, hund. of Builth, co. Brecon, 5 miles N.W. of Builth. The princes of Brecknock had a seat here.

LLYSFAEN, a par. in the hund. of Creuddyn, co. Carnarvon, 4 miles W. of Abergele, its post town, and 7 E. of Conway. It is situated on the N. coast, adjoining the co. of Denbigh, and includes, with Pant and Isallt, 5 tnshps. The Liverpool Telegraph had a station here. Limestone is obtained. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £250, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Cynvran. The charities amount to about £4 per annum.

LLYSSIN, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanerfyl, co. Montgomery, 4 miles N.W. of Llanfair.

LLYSWEN, a par. in the hund. of Talgarth, co. Brecon, 6 miles S.W. of Hay, and 7 N.E. of Brecknock, its post town. It is situated on the banks of the river Wye. The princes of South Wales had a seat here. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £145. Llangoed Castle and Dderw House are the principal residences.

LLYSWORNEY, or LLYSWERNI, a par. in the hund. of Cowbridge, co. Glamorgan, 2 miles S.W. of Cowbridge, its post town, and 6 from Bridgend. It is a small rustic place. The living is a rect. annexed to the vic. of Llantwit-Major, in the dioc. of Llandaff. The church is dedicated to St. Tudvil.

LLYS-Y-COED, a tnshp. in the par. of Cilcen, hund. of Coleshill, co. Flint, 4 miles N.W. of Mold.

LLYS-Y-FRAN, or LLYS-Y-VRANE, a par. in the hund. of Dungleddy, co. Pembroke, 7 miles N.W. of Narberth, and 8 from Haverfordwest, its post town. The village consists of a few farmhouses. The tithes were commuted in 1839. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £104. The church is dedicated to St. Meilyr. There are charities amounting to about £7 per annum.

LLYSYN, a tnshp. in the par. of Carno, co. Montgomery, 8 miles N. of Llanidloes.

LLYWELL, or LLEWYLLT, a par. in the hund. of Devynnock, co. Brecon, 11 miles W. of Brecknock, its post town, and 8 from Llandovery. It is situated in a hilly neighbourhood, on the Roman Via Julia Montana, and watered by the river Usk. The par. includes the ward of Trecastle, chplry. of Ysclydach, and the hmlts. of Traian-Glas, Traian-Hase, and Traian-Mawr. Woollen goods are manufactured here. The village is considerable. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £152, in the patron. of the bishop. The church of Llantrisaint is a small ancient structure. There is also the district church of Rhyd-y-bryw, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £145, in the gift of the vicar. The Independents have a chapel. The parochial charities amount to about £6 per annum.

LOAD AND LONG, hmlts. forming a chplry. in the par. and hund. of Martock, co. Somerset, 4 miles W. of Ilchester and 5 S.W. of Somerton. The navigable river Yeo, or Ivel, flows through the neighbourhood, and is here crossed by a bridge. The living is a cur.* annexed to the vic.* of Martock, in the dioc. of Bath and Wells. The church is dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene.

LOAN-END, a tnshp. in the par. of Norham, hund. of Norhamshire, co. Northumberland, formerly in Durham, 4 miles S.W. of Berwick-on-Tweed.

LOANHEAD, a hmlt. in the par. of Denny, co. Stirling, Scotland, 5 miles W. of Falkirk.

LOANHEAD, a vil. in the par. of Lasswade, co. Edinburgh, Scotland, 1 mile W. of Lasswade. It is chiefly inhabited by colliers. Here are a brewery and paper mills.

LOARY, a vil. in the par. of Dundonald, co. Ayr, Scotland, 5 miles N. of Ayr.

LOBB, a hmlt. in the par. of Great Haseley, hund. of Ewelme, co. Oxford, 3 miles S.W. of Thame.

LOBTHORPE, a hmlt. in the par. of North Witham, co. Lincoln, 4 miles S.W. of Corby.

LOB-WOOD, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Worsbrough, West Riding of co. York, 2 miles S. of Barnsley.

LOCHABER, a Highland district in co. Inverness, Scotland, under Ben Nevis. It is celebrated in the song of the "Braes of Lochaber."

LOCHALSH, a par. in the co. Ross, Scotland, 10 miles S.W. of Lochcarron. It includes the vil. of Plockton. It is situated between lochs Ling and Carron, opposite Skye, from which Loch Alsh (a strait about 8 miles by 3), divides it. The length of the parish, which is mountainous, is 28 miles, and its greatest breadth 8. It contains about 67,000 acres, by far the greater proportion of which consists of hilly pasture. The parish has several good fishing harbours, and also about five sailing vessels belonging to it. It is in the presb. of Lochcarron and synod of Glenelg, in the patron. of the crown. The minister's stipend is £161. The church is a modern and commodious structure. At Plockton there is a Government church and Free churches, both at Lochalsh and Plockton. The only mansion is Balmacara, the seat of — Lillingstone, Esq., the sole landowner.

LOCHANHEAD, a vil. in the par. and co. Dumfries, Scotland, 4 miles from Maxwelltown. It is a station on the Castle Douglas and Dumfries railway.

LOCHANS, a vil. in the par. of Inch, co. Wigton, Scotland, 2 miles S.E. of Stranraer.

LOCHAR WATER rises above Kirkmahoe, in co. Dumfries, Scotland, and falls into the Solway Frith at Blackness. On its banks is Lochar-Moss, a marsh about 10 miles long by 3 broad, in which a canoe, anchors, &c., have been found at the depth of 5 feet below the present surface.

LOCHARBRIGGS, a vil. in the par. and co. Dumfries, Scotland, 3 miles N. of Dumfries. It is situated on the river Lochar. The Dumfries and Lockerbie section of the Caledonian railway has a station here.

LOCHBROOM, a par. partly in the co. Ross, and partly in co. Cromarty, Scotland. It includes the vil. of Ullapool, and also a vil. of its own name, which is 28 miles N.W. of Dingwall. It is situated on the coast along which lie the Summer Isles, Martin Isle, Horse Isle, Greinord Isle, and a few islets, all of which belong to this parish. The coast line is deeply indented, and measures, in a straight line, about 20 miles, but along the windings it is almost 100 miles. The size of the parish is 36 miles by 20. It is for the most part hilly cattle walks, except the valleys, some of which are very fertile. The rivers Broom and Meikle are the chief streams. It is in the presb. of Lochcarron and synod of Glenelg. The minister's stipend is £299. The parish church is a modern and commodious edifice. There is a quoad sacra church, and a Free church, at Ullapool; and there is likewise a Free church at Coigach. About half of the inhabitants are employed in the fisheries, and the produce of the district (which comprises 43 creeks) was in 1854, as near as possible, 1,328 barrels of herrings, and 117,194 cod and ling fish. Throughout the parish are several old forts.

LOCHCARRON, a par. partly in the co. Ross, and partly in the co. Cromarty, Scotland, 225 miles from Edinburgh. It includes Jeantown, on Lochcarron. It formerly belonged to the McIans and Macdonnells, whose ancient castle is at Strom Ferry, but now is chiefly possessed by Mackenzie, of Applecross. The length of the par. is 25 miles, and its greatest breadth is about 10 miles. There are about 1,240 acres in tillage. The par. is the seat of a presb. in the synod of Glenelg, in the patron. of the crown. The minister's stipend is £158. The parish church was erected in 1751. There is a Free church. William and Alexander Mackenzie, the Gaelic poets, were natives of this place.

LOCHEARN-HEAD, a vil. in the par. of Balquhidder, co. Perth, Scotland, 29 miles W. of Perth. It is situated at the head of Loch Earn, surrounded by mountains and glens.

LOCHEE, a small post town and quoad sacra par. in the par. of Liff and Benvie, co. Forfar, Scotland. It is 1½ mile N.W. of Dundee, to which it may be regarded as a suburb. It is a station of the Dundee, Newcastle, and Forfar railway. Here are spinning and other mills, and many of the inhabitants are employed in hand-loom weaving by the manufactories of Dundee. Here are extensive sandstone quarries. The United Presbyterians and Free Church have each a place of worship, and there is a chapel-of-ease. Lochee is included within the parliamentary bounds of the burgh of Dundee.

LOCHEND, a vil. in the par. and co. of Linlithgow, Scotland, 3 miles S.E. of Linlithgow; also a small place of the same name near New Abbey, co. Kirkcudbright, and a loch about 1 mile N.E. of Edinburgh, forming part of the Leith water-works.

LOCHER WATER, a tributary of the river Gryfe, rises in Kilmalcolm Moss, co. Renfrew, Scotland.

LOCHFOOT, a vil. in the par. of Lochrutton, co. Kirkcudbright, Scotland, 5 miles S.W. of Dumfries. It is situated on Loch Rutton.

LOCHGELLY, a vil. in the par. of Aughterderran, co. Fife, Scotland, 6 miles W. of Kirkcaldy. It is a station on the Dunfermline branch of the North British railway. The village, which is chiefly inhabited by weavers, is situated at one of the sources of the river Orr, near Loch Gellie. Fairs are held on the first Thursday in April, third Wednesdays in July and September, old style.

LOCHGILPHEAD, a quoad sacra par. in the pars. of Kilmichael-Glassary and South Knapdale, co. Argyle, Scotland, 18 miles S.W. of Inverary. It is a subport to Greenock, on Loch Gilp, where the Crinan canal begins. Many of the people, who are Gaelic-speaking, are engaged in the shipping and in the fisheries. Salmon and trout are taken in considerable numbers in Loch Fyne and in the river Ad. The par. is in the presb. of Inverary, in the patron. of the crown. The minister's stipend is £120 per annum. The church was built by the Government.

LOCHGOILHEAD AND KILMORICH, an united par. in the N. of Cowal, co. Argyle, Scotland, 8 miles S.E. of Inverary. It is situated at the head of Loch Goil, between lochs Fyne and Long. The length of the parish southward is about 35 miles, and its breadth varies from 6 to 20. The surface is mountainous, with hilly pasture. There are limestone quarries, and also a vein of lead ore in the neighbourhood. The par. is in the presb. of Dunoon and synod of Argyle. The minister's stipend is £167. There are two parish churches, one at Lochgoilhead, and the other at Cairndow, in Kilmorich. There are several schools. The fisheries of lochs Fyne, Goil, and Long are very valuable. The parish enjoys daily communication with Glasgow by steamboat. Drumsaing House is the chief seat. Here are the remains of three ancient castles, viz. Carrick, Dunduranch, and Ardkinlass.

LOCH-GOIN, a hmlt. in the par. of Eaglesham, co. Renfrew, Scotland, 3 miles S.W. of Eaglesham. It is situated near Loch-Goin.

LOCH-HEAD. See CAMPBELTOWN, co. Argyle.

LOCHINDORF CASTLE, in co. Elgin, Scotland. It was besieged by Edward III. in 1336.

LOCHINVAR, a loch in co. Kirkcudbright, Scotland, 5 miles N.E. of New Galloway. It is nearly 3 miles in circumference, and has on its bank an old seat of the Gordons, Viscounts Kenmur who take from this place the title of baron.

LOCHLEE, a par. in the extreme N. of the Grampian district of the co. Forfar, Scotland. It is 18 miles N. of Forfar, and includes the hmlt. of Tarfside. It formerly belonged to the Lindsays of Penmark, but is now possessed by Lord Panmure. The size of the parish is 12 miles by 6. Its surface is mountainous, rising at Mount Keen to 3,465 feet above sea level, and at other summits between 2,000 and 3,000 feet. There are not above 1,500 acres under tillage. The rivers are the Lee, the Tarf, and the Marle, which are the head streams of the North Esk. Limestone is quarried here. The par. is in the presb. of Brechin and synod of Angus and Mearns, in the patron. of the crown. The minister's stipend is £158. There is a Free church, and also an Episcopalian chapel. This was the residence of A. Ross, the author of "The Fortunate Shepherdess."

LOCHLIN, an ancient castle in co. Ross, Scotland, 2 miles N. of Fearn. It consists of two square turreted towers, 60 feet high, and has been the property of the M'Kenzies for nearly 500 years.

LOCHMABEN, a par. about the centre of Annandale, in the co. of Dumfries, Scotland. It includes a royal burgh of its own name, together with the vils. of Greenhill, Heck, Hightae, Smallholm, and Templand. The length of the parish southward is about 10 miles, and its greatest breadth is 3½. The surface is flat, and a large proportion of it is disposed in meadow land and pasture. The district is watered by the rivers Annan, Ae, and Kinnel. There are eight lakes, the largest of which, the Castle-loch, measures over 200 acres, and contains, among other sorts of fish, the vendace, or vendise, which is peculiar to this loch, and is said not to be met with anywhere else in Britain. At Corncockle-moor red sandstone is quarried. The par. is the seat of a presb. in the synod of Dumfries. The minister's stipend is £289. The parish church, built in 1819, is a commodious structure. There is a Free church at Lochmaben, a Reformed Presbyterian church at Hightae, and an United Presbyterian church at Barrows. Throughout the parish there are six non-parochial schools. Here are the remains of two strongholds of the Bruces, which came through the Douglasses to the crown in 1487, and thence to the Murrays and Johnstones. The ruins of Woody or Dinwoody Castle are about half a mile W. of the town. There are several traces of Roman camps in the district. The chief residences are Elshieshields, Halleaths, and Broadchapel. Lochmaben is a town of considerable antiquity, a royal burgh, and a railway station on the Dumfries and Lockerbie branch of the Caledonian line. It is 8 miles E. of Dumfries, and 4 W.N.W. of Lockerby. It is encircled by lakes, and derived its name from the loch on which it is placed, the word Lochmaben signifying in the Scoto-Irish, "the lake on the white plain." The town consists of one principal street, and contains a town-house, and an ancient market-cross. The parish church is a structure in the pointed style of architecture, with a bold square tower, and was rebuilt in 1819 on the site of an ancient one burnt in 1591 by the Johnstones, when the Maxwells sought refuge in it. There is a Free church, and also an United Presbyterian church. The date of the first erection of Lochmaben into a royal burgh is unknown, but its present charter was granted by James VI., and bears date 16th July, 1612. From this it appears that the town was more than once burnt during the civil wars, and its ancient records totally lost. Although the whole of its former privileges have been regained, the place itself has never recovered its former consequence. The municipal government is vested in a provost, three bailies, a dean of guild, and a treasurer, with 15 councillors. Lochmaben unites with Dumfries, Annan, Sanquhar, and Kirkcudbright in sending a member to parliament. It is a place of narrow trade, the chief manufactures being flannel shirts and socks. Pig-feeding for the English markets is carried on throughout the parish. The National Bank has an office, and there is a savings-bank. A market is held during the winter months every fortnight for the sale of pork, &c.; and fairs on the first Tuesdays in January, April, July, and October (all old style).

LOCHMADDY, a small loch on the E. side of North Uist Island, Western Islands, coast of Scotland.

LOCHNAGAR, a mountain in co. Aberdeen, Scotland, near Balmoral, and about 12 miles S.W. of Ballater. It attains an altitude of 3,777 feet, and commands a noble view.

LOCHNAW, a castle in co. Wigton, Scotland, near Leswalt. The old tower stood on the banks of a loch, now drained.

LOCHNELLAU, a vil. in co. Inverness, Scotland, near Kinrara. It is surrounded by lofty hills, and has a five-syllabled echo near the remains of the old castle.

LOCHOW. See AWE, LOCH, co. Argyle, Scotland.

LOCHRUTTON, a par. in the co. Kirkcudbright, Scotland, 5 miles S.W. of Dumfries. It includes the vil. of Lochfort. The size of the parish is 4 miles by 3, and contains about 8,800 acres, the greater proportion of which are under tillage. The surface is hilly, and the soil is a light loam. The parish takes its name from Lochrutton, which is situated almost in its centre. Merkland well is strongly chalybeate. The par. is in the presb. and synod of Dumfries. The church was erected in 1819. There are ruins of several peel-houses, and also a Druidical circle.

LOCHS, a par. in the S.E. div. of the Isle of Lewis, partly in co. Ross, and partly in co. Cromarty, Scotland, 9 miles S.S.W. of Stornoway, its post town. It includes a number of islets, of which the Shiant Isles are the chief. It abounds with inland lakes and harbours, usually termed lochs, viz. Seaforth, Shell, Clay, Brolum, near Ushenish Point, Luerbost, Hourn, &c., and from this circumstance derives its name. Its coast, which is about 90 miles long, is generally of a very bold and rocky character. The length of the parish is about 18 miles, and its average breadth about 9. The surface is for the most part flat. There are about 2,500 acres under tillage, and 120,000 pastoral or waste. The par. is in the presb. of Lewis and synod of Glenelg, in the patron. of the crown. The minister's stipend is £158. The parish church is a modern and commodious structure. Here is a Free church, and also four non-parochial schools.

LOCHSIDE, a vil. in the par. of St. Cyrus, co. Kincardine, Scotland, 4 miles S. of Laurencekirk.

LOCHTER WATER, a tributary of the river Urie, co. Aberdeen, Scotland.

LOCHTHORN, a vil. in the par. and co. of Dumfries, Scotland, 3 miles from Dumfries.

LOCHTIE WATER, a tributary of the river Lossie, co. Elgin, Scotland.

LOCHTY, a tributary of the river Orr, rises near Kinglassie, co. Fife, Scotland.

LOCHWINNOCH, a par. in the Upper Ward of the co. Renfrew, Scotland, 12 miles S.W. of Renfrew, and 60 from Edinburgh. It is a railway station on the Glasgow and South-Western line. The par. comprises a post town of its own name, and the vils. of Howwood and Newton Beltree. Its length is 12 miles, and its average breadth 3. The outer or end portions of the parish are hilly, but the centre is occupied by a fertile valley. The hill Misty Law rises to a height of 1,240 feet above the level of the sea, and the Staik hill is a few feet higher. About 9,000 acres are in tillage, and about the same number in pasture or waste. Coal, limestone, whinstone, and sandstone, are worked in the neighbourhood. The parish is watered by the rivers Calder and White Cart. The St. Winnoch (or Castle Semple), and Queenside lochs, are within the limits of this parish. It is in the presb. of Paisley and synod of Glasgow and Ayr, in the patron. of the heritors. The minister's stipend is about £330. The parish church, erected in 1806, is a commodious structure. The United Presbyterians and Free Church have each a place of worship. Near Castle Semple are the ruins of Semple's ancient tower and chapel. Here are the ruins of the ancient castle of Barr, and also of the tower of Auchenbathie. Within the parish are remains of two hill forts. The parish is intersected by the roads between Paisley and Ardrossan. The town of Lochwinnoch is situated on the Calder water, and near the Castle Semple loch. The ancient portion is irregularly built, but the modern comprises several good streets. Here are two extensive cotton mills, a woollen mill, and two bleach-fields; also branches of the Western and City of Glasgow banks. Some of the inhabitants are employed in hand-loom weaving. The parish church, which has a steeple, the Free and an United Presbyterian church are situated in the town. Justice of peace courts are held here on the first Saturday in each month. There are two annual fairs, the first called the "trades' race" on the first Tuesday in May; and the "fair of till," on the first Tuesday in November (old style).

LOCHY, a loch in Lochaven, co. Inverness, Scotland. It is situated on the Caledonian canal, and extends above 10 miles long by 2 broad.

LOCHY, two streams of this name; one has its source in Loch Lochy, as above, and runs to Inverlochy, near Fort Augustus, on Loch Eil; the other rises near Kenmore, in co. Perth, and joins the river Dochart, near Loch Tay.

LOCKERBIE, a post town in the par. of Dryfesdale, co. Dumfries, Scotland, 10 miles N.E. of Dumfries. It is a railway station on the Caledonian line. It receives its name from an ancient fort or seat between two lakes, which are now drained. The town occupies a considerable space of ground, and the buildings have a clean and regular appearance. It contains the parish church, a Free church, and also an United Presbyterian church. It is devoid of manufactures, but the trade in articles of general and domestic consumption is good. The well-attended fairs add greatly to the prosperity of the town. A branch of the Western Bank, and also of the Edinburgh and Glasgow Bank, are established here. There are also a savings-bank and two principal inns. The market is held on Thusday, from the commencement of October till the end of April. It is extensively supplied with pork, of which there is sometimes sold in a single day from £1,000 to £2,000 worth. Fairs are held on the second Thursdays in January, February, March, April, and May, the third Thursday in June, and the second Thursday in August (all old style). The last fair, which is for lambs, is the largest lamb fair in Scotland, no fewer than from 30,000 to 50,000 lambs being usually on the ground. The remaining fairs are a cattle fair in September, the second Thursday in October for cattle and horses and the hiring of servants, second Thursday in November, and the Thursday before Christmas (all old style).

LOCKERIDGE, a tythg. and hmlt. in the par. of Overton, hund. of Selkley, co. Wilts, 3 miles S.W. of Marlborough. It is situated in the vicinity of Lockeridge Dean. Lockeridge House and Lockeridge Cottage are the principal seats; the former is a very old mansion, built with brick.

LOCKERLEY, a par. in the div. of Romsey, hund. of Thorngate, co. Hants, 5 miles N.W. of Romsey, its post town, and 7 S.W. of Stockbridge. The Salisbury and Southampton canal, and the Salisbury branch of the London and South-Western railway pass through the parish. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £370. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect. of Mottisfont, in the dioc. of Winchester. The church, dedicated to St. John, is a plain structure, situated close to the railway. The register commences in 1583. The Baptists have a chapel; and there are two schools, partly supported by the incumbent.

LOCKHAY, or LOCKO, a chplry. in the par. of Spondon, hund. of Appletree, co. Derby, 5 miles N.E. of Derby. Here was anciently a hospital of the order of St. Lazarus of Jerusalem, which, on the suppression of alien priories, was given to the Society of King's Hall, Cambridge.

LOCKING, a par. in the hund. of Winterstoke, co. Somerset, 3½ miles S.E. of Weston-super-Mare, and 6 N.W. of Axbridge. The station at the Weston-super-Mare junction on the Great Western line of railway is nearly 2 miles W. from the village. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. The great tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £44, and the vicarial for £174 10*s*. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £199, in the patron. of the merchant adventurers of Bristol, who are lords of the manor. The present church, dedicated to St. Catherine, is for the most part modern, the tower of the old one only remaining. It contains a stone pulpit, and antique stone font. The register commences in the year 1600. The charities produce about £1 per annum. There is a parochial school.

LOCKINGE, EAST, a par. in the hund. of Wantage, co. Berks, 1 mile E. of Wantage, its post town, and 3 miles to the S.E. of Wantage Road railway station. It contains the tythgs. of Betterton and West Ginge. The village is considerable, but chiefly agricultural. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £480, annexed to the wardenship of All Souls' College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a small structure, with a square embattled tower containing four bells. There is a National school. Lewis Lloyd, Esq., is lord of the manor, and owner of the soil. The parochial charities produce about £8 per annum.

LOCKINGE, WEST, a hmlt. in the above par.

LOCKINGTON, a par. in the hund. of West Goscote, co. Leicester, 7 miles N.W. of Loughborough, and 9 S.E. of Derby, its post town. The Kegworth station on the Midland line of railway is about 2½ miles S.E. from the village. It is situated near the confluence of the rivers Soar and Trent, and includes the tnshp. of Hemington. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £149. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is an edifice of ancient date. It contains monuments of the Story family. There is an endowment to Coxe's school, producing £7, and other small charities, amounting in all to about £12 per annum. Lockington Hall is the seat of J. B. Storey, Esq., who owns a pack of hounds, which hunt in this neighbourhood.

LOCKINGTON, a par. and tnshp. in the Bainton Beacon div. of the wap. of Harthill, East Riding co. York, 6 miles N.W. of Beverley, its post town, and 8 W. of Driffield. The Scarborough, Bridlington, and Hull section of the North-Eastern line of railway has a station at a short distance from the village. The par. includes the tnshps. of Aike and Lockington. The village, which is considerable, is situated on the road from Beverley to Driffield. The Lockington Car canal, formed by the Hotham family, runs for 2 miles to join the river Hull. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of York, val. £532. The church is an ancient edifice, dedicated to St. Mary. It contains a mortuary chapel, with tombs and armorial emblems of the Constable family. The Wesleyans have places of worship. There is a National school for both sexes. Lord Hotham is lord of the manor.

LOCKTON, a chplry. in the par. of Middleton, wap. of Pickering Lythe, North Riding co. York, 5 miles N.E. of Pickering. The Levisham station, on the Whitby branch of the North-Eastern line of railway, is about 2 miles distant from the village. The soil is partly under cultivation, the rest being moorland. There is a small chapel-of-ease. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have places of worship.

LOCKWOOD, a tnshp. and ecclesiastical district in the par. of Almondbury, upper div. of the wap. of Agbrigg, West Riding co. York, 1 mile S.W. of Huddersfield, its post town. It is a station on the Huddersfield and Sheffield and Huddersfield and Holmfirth lines of railway. This district is situated in the vale of the river Holme, near its confluence with another tributary of the Colne, and on the road to Sheffield. It includes the vils. of Crosland Moor, Newsome, Primrose Hill, Salford, and Taylor Hill. Woollen fabrics are extensively manufactured, and there are large mechanical works, iron and brass foundries, and a large brewery, established in 1790. The village, which is well built, comprising many handsome houses, contains an hotel for the accommodation of persons visiting the spa, and a mechanics' institute, with every convenience, and adapted to the requirements of both sexes, to whom it is equally open. There are chalybeate springs and baths, known as the Lockwood Spa, which is a handsome building, erected in 1827, containing warm, tepid, vapour, cold, and shower baths, with a large swimming bath. The water of this spa has a strong sulphureous smell and taste, containing 35 parts of carburetted and 17 of sulphuretted hydrogen, 7 of carbonic acid, 41 of azotic gas, besides a small proportion of carbonate of lime and sulphate of magnesia. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £150, in the gift of the vicar of the parish. The church of Emanuel is a stone structure, with a handsome E. window, erected in 1830 at the cost of £3,000. The Baptists have two chapels, the Free Methodists one; the United Free Methodists have also one at Crosland Moor. There are public and National schools for boys and girls.

LOCKWOOD CASTLE, in co. Dumfries, Scotland, on the banks of the river Annan, surrounded by marshes and bogs. It was built by the Johnstones, in the 14th century.

LODDINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Rothwell, co. Northampton, 4 miles W. of Kettering, its post town, and 13 N. of Northampton. The Midland Railway has a station at Kettering. The surface is undulating, and the soil fertile. The land is chiefly arable. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £421, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is a structure of the 16th century, dedicated to St. Leonard. The charities consist of £5 annually, and the rent of 10 acres of land distributed to the poor in fuel at Christmas. The Dissenters have a place of worship in common. Allen Allicock Young, Esq., is lord of the manor.

LODDINGTON, a par. in the hund. of East Goscote, co. Leicester, 6½ miles N.W. of Uppingham, its post town, and 14 E. of Leicester. It is situated on the borders of Rutland, in the vicinity of the river Eye. The surface is hilly, and the soil gravel and clay. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £92. The church is a stone edifice, dedicated to St. Michael. There are remains of a Roman camp, an ancient conduit, and a petrifying spring.

LODDINGTON, a hmlt. in par. and borough of Maidstone, co. Kent. It is situated in the vicinity of the above town.

LODDISWELL, a par. in the hunds. of Coleridge and Stanborough, co. Devon, 3 miles N.W. of Kingsbridge, its post town, and 10 S.W. of Totness. The village, which is considerable, is built on the banks of the river Avon, in the vicinity of Blackdown Camp. The par. includes the hmlt. of Stanton, and, for ecclesiastical purposes, Buckland-Tout-Saints, though in other respects a separate parish. Copper has been found; and the neighbourhood yields clay suitable for the manufacture of yellow ochre. A news and reading-room has been established for the use of the people. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £266; and the vicarial glebe comprises 103 acres, valued at £250 per annum. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val., with the cur. of Buckland-Tout-Saints annexed, £443, in the patron. of trustees. The church of St. Michael is a stone edifice, with a square tower. It contains monuments of the Arundels and Fortescues. The parochial charities produce about £75 per annum, partly arising from property bequeathed in 1725 by R. Phillips, Esq., for the relief of the poor. The Independents have a chapel, to which is attached a good school.

LODDON, a hund., being one of the 33 subdivisions of the co. of Norfolk. It was a demesne of Edward the Confessor, and afterwards came to the Bigod family. It is situated in the south-eastern part of the co., and is bounded on the N. by the hund. of Blowfield, on the E. by the hund. of Clavering, on the S. by the co. of Suffolk, and on the W. by the hund. of Earsham. The hund. includes the pars. of Alpringham, Ashby, Bedingham, Broome, Carleton, St. Peter, Chedgrave, Claxton, Ditchingham, Hardley, Hendenham, Hellington, Kirstead, Langley, Loddon, Mundham, Seething, Sisland, Thurton, Thwaite St. Mary, Topcroft, and Woodton, comprising an area of 26,750 acres.

LODDON, a par. and small market town in the hund. of the same name, co. of Norfolk, 6 miles N.E. of Bungay, and 10 S.E. of Norwich. It is situated on the road from Norwich to Beccles, and on the banks of an inconsiderable stream called the Chet, which joins the Yare at Hardley Cross. It belonged to the Bigod family, and was chartered as a market-town in the reign of Edward I. Petty sessions are held fortnightly on Wednesday, and it is a polling-place for the county The town consists of one principal street, with a market-place and a commercial bank. Malting is carried on to a small extent. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £300, in the patron. of the bishop. The church of the Holy Trinity is a commodious structure of the 15th century, with a tower, and east window of stained glass. It contains a very handsome font, and brasses of the Hobart family. The register commences in the year 1556. The charities, derived from land, produce about £115 per annum. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel. There is a National school for both sexes. In the town is a public library, with reading-room; and there is a lunatic asylum. Tuesday is market day for corn and other produce. Fairs are held on Easter Monday and 25th November for horses, cattle, &c.; and a statute fair for hiring servants a fortnight before Michaelmas.

LODDON, a tributary of the Thames, rises near Basingstoke, in co. Hants.

LODE, a hmlt. in the par. of Bottisham, co. Cambridge, 6 miles N.E. of Cambridge.

LODERS, a par. in the lib. of Lothers and Bothenhampton, co. Dorset, 2 miles N.E. of Bridport, its post town and railway station on the Great Western line. The river Asker flows through the par., which includes the hmlt. of Pymore. In the reign of Henry II. a religious community in connection with Montsburgh Abbey, in Normandy, was formed here, and afterwards transferred by Henry V. to Sion Abbey. The village, which is considerable, is situated in a valley. The land is nearly evenly divided between arable and pasture, with about 130 acres of woodland. There are quarries of building stone. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £315, in the patron. of the lord chancellor and Sir M. H. Nepean alternately. The church, with a low massive western tower, is dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene. There are small charities, amounting to about £4 per annum. The Wesleyans have a chapel, and there is a National school. Loders House is the principal residence.

LODGE, a hamlt. in the tnshp. of Settle and par. of Giggleswick, West Riding co. York, 2 miles from Settle, and 40 W.N.W. of York. It is situated in a valley among the moors, near the river Ribble.

LODGE-GREEN, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Melbecks, par. of Grinton, North Riding co. York, 4 miles N. of Askrigg, and 14 S.W. of Richmond.

LODGE-ON-THE-WOLDS, an ext. par. place in the S. div. of the wap. of Bingham, co. of Nottingham, but locally in the par. of Kinoulton, 6 miles S. of Bingham.

LODSWORTH, a lib. and par. in the hund. of Easebourne, rape of Chichester, co. Sussex, 2½ miles N.E. of Midhurst, and 3½ N.W. of Petworth, its post town. It is situated on the road from Petworth to Midhurst, west of the navigable river Rother, here crossed by a bridge, and includes the hmlt. of Lickfold. The liberty consists of certain exemptions granted by the 3rd of Richard I. The manor formerly belonged to the Bishops of London, but in the reign of Henry VIII. was given to Sir Anthony Browne. The tithes have been commuted to a rent-charge of £110, of which £90 is paid to a canon of St. Paul's, London. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £58. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient structure, with a square tower, and has recently undergone a thorough repair. The register commences in 1563. There is a National school for both sexes. The Earl of Egmont is lord of the manor.

LOE POOL, an inlet on the coast of West Cornwall, with a bar of pebbles at its mouth. Cornelians and agates are found on the shores.

LOES, a hund., being one of the 23 subdivisions of co. Suffolk. It is situated in the south-eastern part of the co., and is bounded on the N. by the hund. of Carlford, on the E. by the river Deben, on the S. by the hund. of Colners, and on the W. by the lib. of Ipswich. It includes the pars. of Brandeston, Butley, Campsey, Ash, Charsfield, Cretingham, Earl Soham, Easton, Eyke, Framlingham, Hacheston, Hoo, Kenton, Kettleburgh, Letheringham, Marlesford, Monewden, Rendlesham, and Woodbridge, comprising an area of 33,290 acres.

LOFTHOUSE, a par. and small market town in the eastern div. of the lib. of Langbaurgh, North Riding co. York, 9 miles N.E. of Guisborough, and 9 S.E. of Redcar, its post town. The nearest railway station is Guisborough. It is situated on the coast of the German Ocean, and includes the hmlts. of South Lofthouse, Street Houses, and Wapley. A priory for Benedictine nuns was founded in 1133 by the Percy family. In the parish are stone quarries, extensive alum works, and brick and tile kilns, which afford employment to the people. Although nominally a market town, Lofthouse is only an inconsiderable village. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of York, val. £575, in the patron. of the Lord Chancellor. The church is an edifice of the present century, dedicated to St. Leonard. The parochial endowments produce about £9 per annum. The Independents, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel. The Earl of Zetland is lord of the manor. Lofthouse Hall is the principal residence. A customary market is held on Thursday.

LOFTHOUSE, a hmlt. in the par. of Harewood, West Riding co. York, 7 miles N.E. of Leeds. It is situated in the valley of the river Wharfe, near the line of the Leeds and Thirsk railway.

LOFTHOUSE GATE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Stanley, West Riding co. York, 2 miles N. of Wakefield.

LOFTHOUSE-WITH-CARLTON, a tnshp. and ecclesiastical district in the par. of Rothwell, lower div. of the wap. of Agbrigg, West Riding co. York, 3 miles N. of Wakefield, its post town, and 6 S. of Leeds. It is a station on the West Yorkshire section of the Great Northern railway. The village is situated on the main road between the above towns. The ecclesiastical district includes the tnshps. of Carlton and Thorpe-on-the-Hill, with the hmlts. of Ouzlewell Green and Robin Hood. A large portion of the land is laid out as market gardens. The substratum abounds with coal and freestone of good quality. Many of the people are employed in the stone quarries, and in the manufacture of twine and bandings. The commons were enclosed under an Act obtained in 1836. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £120, in the gift of the vicar of the parish. The church, dedicated to Our Saviour, is a structure of the present century. The Wesleyans have a chapel. There is a National school. Joseph Charlesworth, Esq., is lord of the manor. Lofthouse House and Lofthouse Hall are the principal residences.

LOFTHOUSE WITH FOUNTAINS EARTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirkby Malzeard, wap. of Claro, West Riding co. York. 8 miles N. of Pateley Bridge, and 16 W. of Ripon. It is situated on the river Nidd, and has the two hmlts. of High and Low Lofthouse. The Wesleyans have places of worship. There is an endowed National school. Earl de Grey and Ripon is lord of the manor.

LOFTSOME, a hmlt. in the par. of Wressell, Holme Beacon, div. of the wap. of Harthill, East Riding co. York, 3 miles N.W. of Howden. It is situated on the banks of the river Derwent, which is here crossed by a bridge, erected at the commencement of the present century, and so constructed as to admit the passage of vessels.

LOG, an extensive bog in King's County, Ireland, 3 miles N.W. of Frankford. It comprises above 5,000 acres.

LOGAN, or PORT LOGAN, a vil. in the par. of Kirkmaiden, co. Wigton, Scotland, 4 miles N. by W. of Kirkmaiden, and 27 S.W. of Wigton. It is situated in the southernmost part of Scotland, near the coast of the Mull of Galloway, on a bay to which it gives name. The chief seat is Logan House, of the M'Doualls.

LOGAN, a vil. in the district of Kyle, co. Ayr, Scotland, 4 miles from Cumnock, and 62 from Edinburgh. It is situated on a stream called the Logan Water.

LOGAN MOSS, co. Stirling, Scotland, near Kippen. It was crossed by a Roman way made with felled trees.

LOGAN WATER, several streams of this name in Scotland: one rises in the Pentland hills, co. Edinburgh, and joins the Esk near Roslin; another rises near Kirkpatrick-Fleming, co. Dumfries, and joins the Kirtle. Its banks are celebrated in the song of "Logan braes." A third stream rises near Lesmahagee, co. Lanark, and joins the Nethan.

LOGARSTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Almeley, hund. of Wolphy, co. Hereford, 5 miles W. of Weobly.

LOGIE, a par. in the cos. of Clackmannan, Perth, and Stirling, Scotland, 6 miles N.W. of the town of Clackmannan. It contains the vils. of Blairlogi, Bridge of Allen, Craigmill, Menstry, Causeyhead watering-place, or Airthray Wells, and the remains of Cambuskenneth Abbey. This last was founded in 1147 by David I. of Scotland, and was one of the richest monastic establishments in Scotland. Several parliaments were anciently held here. The extent of the par. is about 4 miles in length, and the same in breadth. It consists of fertile carse land. Silver and copper ores occur among the Ochils, and a copper mine was formerly worked. The boundaries of the parish are traced by the rivers Allan, Devon, and Forth. The par. is in the presb. of Dunblane and synod of Perth and Stirling. The minister's stipend is £263. The parish church was erected in 1805. There are also in the parish two United Presbyterian and one Free church; also three non-parochial schools. Dunmyatt, one of the Ochil hills situated in this parish, rises to the height of 1,345 feet above sea-level. Its form is a cone, and its summit commands views over twelve counties. Under it there is a holy well. Here was interred James III. and his queen, the former of whom was killed at Stirling in 1487. The parish enjoys ready communication by means of the Stirling and Dunfermline railway, the Scottish Central railway, and the Stirling and Granton steamers.

LOGIE, a par. in the Cupar district of the co. Fife, Scotland, 5 miles S.W. of Cupar, its post town. It contains the vil. of Lucklawhill-Fens, as well as one of its own name. It is about 2¼ miles in length, and 1 mile in breadth, and comprises about 3,300 acres, of which 2,800 are arable, and the rest wood, pastoral, or waste. The surface is hilly, but the soil very productive. The highest eminence is Lucklaw hill (once a royal hunting-seat), which rises to a height of about 600 feet above sea-level, and affords a wide prospect of the cos. Fife, Perth, Forfar, and Kincardine. The par. is in the presb. of Cupar and synod of Fife, in the patron. of the crown. The minister's stipend is £205. The parish church was erected in 1826. There is a Free church. The ancient name of the parish was Logie-Murdoch, but the suffix has long been dropped. The ruins of a square tower, known as the Castle of Cruivie, is the only antiquity of the parish.

LOGIE, a quoad sacra par. in the par. of Kirriemuir, co. Forfar, Scotland, 5 miles N.W. of Forfar. It is situated near the river Esk. The living is in the presb. of Forfar, and patron. of the seatholders.

LOGIE, a vil. in the par. of Logie Pest, co. Forfar, Scotland, 5 miles N.E. of Brechin.

LOGIE ALLACHIE. See DUNKELD, LITTLE, co. Perth.

LOGIE ALMOND, a vil. in the par. of Monedie, co. Perth, Scotland, 6 miles N.W. of Perth. It is situated on the river Almond. In the vicinity are several Druidical stones, and a pillar twelve feet high.

LOGIEBRIDE, an ancient par. in co. Perth, Scotland, now united to Auchtergaven [which see].

LOGIE-BUCHAN, a par. in the Ellon district, co. Aberdeen, Scotland, 2 miles S.E. of Ellon, its post town. The size of the par. is 9 miles by 1½ mile, and contains 6,468 imperial acres, of which about 5,700 are under tillage. The surface is flat, with occasional eminences. The parish is intersected by the river Ythan, which is navigable for about 3 miles for small vessels, and in which it appears that a pearl fishery was carried on in the reign of Charles I. The par. is in the presb. of Ellon and synod of Aberdeen. The minister's stipend is £192. The parish church was erected in 1787. The song of "Logie o' Buchan" refers to a gardener of Logie, in the parish of Crimond, but the song of the "Boat of Logie" has reference to this parish.

LOGIE-COLDSTONE, or LOGIE MAR, a par. in the Kincardine O'Neil district, co. Aberdeen, Scotland, 2½ miles W. of Tarland, its post town. It is situated in a hollow, on a branch of the river Dee. It is about 6 miles in length, and 3½ in breadth. The par. consists of about 3,000 acres, chiefly under tillage. The land is in general fertile, intermixed with hills and barren moors, where game of all kinds abound, especially on the hill of Morsen. Granite is the predominant rock. The loch of Daven is about 3½ miles in circumference; and near the parish church is a mineral spring, called Peldow. The par. is in the presb. of Kincardine O'Neil and synod of Aberdeen, in the patron. of the crown, and Farquharson of Invercauld. The minister's stipend is £217. The parish church was erected in 1780. There is a Free church at Glenmuick. The chief seats are Corrachree and Blelack. In 1618 the ancient parishes of Logie-Mar and Coldstone were united to form the present parish of Logie-Coldstone. There are in the parish three large cairns, and several stone circles, supposed to be of Druidical origin.

LOGIE DURNO, an ancient par. in the Garioch district of the co. Aberdeen, Scotland. See CHAPEL OF GARIOCH.

LOGIE-EASTER, a par. partly in the co. Ross, and partly in the co. Cromarty, Scotland, 5 miles S.S.W. of Tain, and 2 N. of Parkhill. It is about 7 miles in length, and 2 in breadth. The soil is in some parts deep stiff clay, and in others approaches to a light loam. Sands have been extensively reclaimed, and the parish contains some flourishing plantations. Wheat is the chief grain crop. The par. is in the presb. of Tain and synod of Ross. The minister's stipend is £237. The parish church is a commodious structure. There is a Free church, also an Assembly school at Scotsburn. The chief seats are Shandwick and Calrossie. There are some cairns near Albanich burn, and tumuli, and mineral springs, in the neighbourhood.

LOGIE PERT, a par. in the co. Forfar, Scotland, 5 miles N.E. of Brechin. Montrose is its post town. It contains the vils. of Craigo, Logie, and Muirside. The river North Esk traces the boundary between this par. and the co. Kincardine, and gives the title of earl to the family of Carnegie. The length of the par. is 5 miles, and its breadth about 3. It contains about 3,860 acres, of which by far the larger proportion is under cultivation. Freestone is abundant, but not worked. There are copious springs in the neighbourhood, one of which is mineral. The par. is in the presb. of Brechin and synod of Angus and Mearns, in the patron. of the crown and St. Mary's College, St. Andrew's. The parish church, erected in 1840, is a commodious structure. There is a Free church; also three non-parochial schools. The principal mansions are Craigo and Gallary. In the neighbourhood are two extensive flax spinning-mills, bleachfields, and soda works, which, together, employ a large number of the inhabitants. The parish is intersected by the Aberdeen railway, which has a station at Craigo. This parish was united with that of Pert in 1610, and the ruins of the ancient churches of both parishes are still to be seen. The united parish is sometimes called Logie Forfar. There are tumuli near Craigo House, known as the Laws of Logie, where human remains, &c., have been discovered.

LOGIERAIT, a par. in the co. Perth, Scotland, 6 miles N. of Dunkeld. It includes the vil. of Ballenling, and a portion of the post town of Aberfeldy. The size of the par. is 5 miles by 4, the principal part of which lies on the point of land formed by the junction of the rivers Tay and Tummel, extending along the banks of each 7 miles. The par. is in the presb. of Weem and synod of Perth and Stirling. The minister's stipend is £251. The par. church, built in 1806, is a commodious structure. Within the parish there are a Free church, an Episcopalian, and a Baptist chapel; and at Aberfeldy there is a Free church, and also an Independent chapel. There are several schools throughout the district. In this parish are the "Braes of Tullimet," celebrated in Scottish song. Not far from the church is an eminence, which commands a prospect of the greater part of the parish. In the neighbourhood there are six distilleries, two flax mills, eight meal and other mills. Near the Tummel ferry are the ruins of a castle, said to have been the residence of Robert III.; and there are the remains of a beacon-house in the parish. It was at the village of Logierait that Rob Roy made his escape after his capture by the Duke of Athole in 1717; and here also Prince Charles kept his prisoners after the battle of Preston Pans. Roman antiquities have been discovered here; and there are ruins of Romish chapels, and Druidical remains. In 1760 an earthquake was felt here, and in 1778 the place was visited by a waterspout. In this parish there are chains of ferry-boats both across the rivers Tay and Tummel. A fair is held on the 22nd August, and the "Beltan" is kept up 1st May (old style). Dr. Adam Fergusson and Dr. Robert Bisset (biographer of Burke) may be mentioned among the parish's distinguished natives.

LOGIERIEVE, a station on the Formartine and Buchan section of the Great North of Scotland railway.

LOGIE WESTER, an ancient par. in the co. Ross, Scotland, now united to Urquhart (which see).

LOLWORTH, a par. in the hund. of Northstow, co. Cambridge, 3 miles S. of Long Stanton, and 6 N.W. of Cambridge, its post town. The Great Eastern line of railway has a station at Long Stanton. The village is small, and wholly agricultural. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £200. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £182. The church is a plain ancient edifice, dedicated to All Saints. There are charities of about £3 per annum.

LOMOND HILLS, co. Fife, Scotland, near Falkland. They attain an altitude of from 1,500 to 1,700 feet, and are situated in the western part of the county.

LOMOND, LOCH, a freshwater lake in the cos. Dumbarton and Stirling, Scotland. It is 23 miles in length, and from 1 to 5 miles in breadth. It contains 30 islands, of different sizes, the chief of which are Inch-Cailliach, Inch-Cruin, Inch-Conachan, Inch-Murrin, Inch-Moon, &c. It is replenished by the rivulets Finlas, Fruin, Luss, Douglas, Inaid, and Endrick, and its superfluous waters are carried off by the river Leven. The lake is from 20 to 100 fathoms deep, and about 22 feet above the level of the sea.

LONAN. See KIRK-LONAN, Isle of Man.

LONDESBOROUGH, a par. in the Holme Beacon div. of the wap. of Harthill, East Riding co. York, 2½ miles N.W. of Market Weighton, its post town, and 5 S.E. of Pocklington. It is situated on the Roman highway, Ermine Street, and is supposed to occupy the site of the ancient Delgovitia. The par. includes the hmlt. of Easthorpe. The Clifford family were the former possessors, from whom the property afterwards passed to the Duke of Devonshire. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of York, val. £798. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient stone edifice, with a square tower. It contains several marble monuments, antique brasses, and a stone font. There are almshouses for twelve persons, founded by the Earl and Countess of Burlington in 1680, with an endowment of £100 per annum. The other small charities amount to about £3. There is a National school for both sexes. Coins and numerous Roman remains have been found in the neighbourhood. Londesborough Park is the seat of Lord Londesborough, who is lord of the manor, and whose title of baron is derived from this place.

LONDON, the metropolis and seat of government of the British empire, and also of a university and an episcopal see, stands upon both banks of the Thames, being about 60 miles from its mouth at the Nore by the course of the river, and about 40 in a direct line by land. It occupies portions of Middlesex to the N. of the Thames, and of Kent and Surrey to the S., and is situated, measuring from the centre of the dome of St. Paul's, in 51° 30′ 47·59″ N. lat., 5′ 48·2″ W. long. from the meridian of Greenwich Observatory. It contains, according to the published abstract of the Registrar-General, 37 registration districts and Poor-law Unions, of which the following are situated in Middlesex—Kensington, Chelsea, St. George's Hanover-square, Westminster, St. Martin's-in-the-Fields, St. James's Westminster, Marylebone, Hampstead, St. Pancras, Islington, Hackney, St. Giles's, Strand, Holborn, Clerkenwell, St. Luke's, East London, West London, London City, Shoreditch, Bethnal Green, Whitechapel, St. George's-in-the-East, Stepney, Mile-end Old Town, Poplar; in Surrey—St. Saviour's Southwark, St. Olave's Southwark, Bermondsey, St. George's Southwark, Newington, Lambeth, Wandsworth, Camberwell, and Rotherhithe; in Kent—Greenwich, Deptford, and Lewisham. Of these, although Hampstead, Camberwell, Wandsworth, Greenwich, Deptford, and Lewisham are seldom considered as belonging to London generally so called, yet, as they are included in the metropolitan conveyance routes and in the official returns of the Registrar-General, it would not be correct to omit them in any strict enumeration of the London districts. The derivation of the name London still remains doubtful, but it is generally thought that it is of British or Celtic origin. By some the first syllable is supposed to be derived from llyn, a lake, by others from llwyn, a wood; or from llawn, populous, lon, a plain, or llong, a ship; and each of these, with the termination dun, or thun, signifying "a place either naturally or artificially adapted for safety," added to it, has received the support of antiquarian writers as being the parent form of our modern word London. Be this as it may, very soon after its original foundation the ancient city (although it is never once mentioned by name either by Cæsar, Strabo, or the elder Pliny) must have risen to considerable importance, for Tacitus, who is the first to notice it, speaks of it in his Annals as being, even in his time (A.D. 62), remarkable for its trade and commerce; and in the Itinerary of Antoninus, which is probably not later than the time of Severus (A.D. 193—211), it occurs six times in the routes as the place either of starting or return—a fact which in itself speaks for its eminence, as no other town is so often or so conspicuously denoted. At the rising of the Britons, under Boadicea (A.D. 61), no less than 70,000 of the inhabitants are said to have perished; and although this is doubtless an exaggeration, it nevertheless proves how densely the city was populated even at that early period of its history. The oldest portion of London is in the City, near the Thames, in the streets about Maiden-lane, Dowgate, Walbrook, the parts adjacent to the Tower and Billingsgate, and extending back as far as Lombard and Fenchurch streets. Here was the ancient British settlement of the Trinobantes, consisting of a rude sort of town formed by a collection of huts, or cabins, built of stakes and wattles, and surrounded by marshes and dense woodlands. Its position on the Thames gave it immense advantages for commerce; and at the beginning of the 4th century, according to some historians, it was surrounded by a wall constructed by Constantine the Great at the request of his mother Helena, who was a native of Britain; others assert that the wall was built by Theodosius (367—370), who successfully opposed the incursions of the Franks, Picts, and Saxons, and in whose honour the grateful inhabitants gave to their chief town the name of Augusta. The ancient walls were about 2 miles in circumference, and 22 feet in height. They started from a fort close by where the Tower now stands, and after proceeding by the Minories, Houndsditch, Cripplegate, Aldersgate, and Newgate, terminated at another fort situated on the Fleet River. Portions of the Roman wall still exist, and many Roman remains have been found in or near the sites just indicated. The "London Stone," which is let into St. Swithin's Church, in Cannon-street, is believed to have been the centre milestone from which the Roman roads were measured. Of these four started from and three terminated in London, the principal of them being Watling-street, which was the via prætoria, or high road from London to Dover. Roman remains have been found in the Fleet Ditch, the bed of the Thames, Ludgate Hill, the sites of the Royal Exchange, St. Paul's, Bow Church, the Guildhall, Lothbury, Lombard-street, Birchin-lane, St. Mary-at-Hill, St. Dunstan's-in-the-East, Long-lane, Crosby-square, Old Broad-street, Camomile-street, Crutched Friars, Fenchurch-street, the Tower, Bishopsgate, Spitalfields, the Minories, and some other spots in these neighbourhoods. In 457 Hengist overthrew the Britons, and made London the capital of his kingdom, which extended over Kent, Middlesex, Essex, and Sussex; and in 530 a colony of East Saxons invaded it. The Saxons began to quarrel among themselves, and at the battle of Wimbledon an engagement took place between the Saxons of Kent and those of Wessex. The former, under Ethelbert, were defeated; and, in 598, Augustin became the first Archbishop of Canterbury. In 604 he died, and Mellitus having become Bishop of London, the erection of St. Paul's Cathedral commenced (circa 608), on the site of an ancient temple of Diana. In the reign of Sebert, Ethelbert's nephew (circa 614), Westminster Abbey was commenced; and by this time all the traces of Roman occupation had entirely disappeared from Britain. In 793 the city was nearly destroyed by fire and plague; but it recovered from this and several successive visitations of a similar nature, and by 852 had become so rich and prosperous that it attracted the cupidity of the Northmen, who sailed up the Thames with 850 ships, and after plundering London, marched into Mercia and Surrey. In the reign of Alfred several conflicts took place with the Danes, who had occupied London in and about the city, until at length Alfred diverted the channel of the river Lea, and in 895 compelled the invaders to fly to Bridge-north. The Londoners then captured several of their ships, and brought them in triumph to London. Up to this time almost all their houses had been of wood, but Alfred induced as many of the inhabitants as he could to use stone or brick instead, and he presented them with improved models of ships for purposes both of commerce and war. The Danes, however, still continued to infest the country, and in 995 Olave, king of Norway, sailed past London to Staines, which he pillaged; but upon his return with Sweyn, king of Denmark, for the same purpose, in the following year, he was repulsed by the citizens of London. The fact that Olave sailed past London proves that at this time there was no bridge over the Thames; but one was now built in consequence. It was laid on piles, was wide enough for two carriages, and had on it bulwarks and towers; but Edmund Ironsides, aided by his old enemy Olave, with whom he had now made an alliance, destroyed it in a joint attack upon the Danes, who still maintained a footing in Southwark. Subsequently, when Canute invaded England, the bridge was rebuilt, and the Danish king's ships reached London by means of a canal cut either from Greenwich or through the Surrey marshes. At length, after several encounters, in which Edmund was successful, he was himself murdered, and Canute succeeded to the throne, by virtue of a treaty. The Dane revenged himself for the defeats he had sustained by inflicting heavy pecuniary penalties upon the whole kingdom—one-eighth of which, amounting to £11,000, he levied from the inhabitants of London. On the death of Hardicanute, in 1042, Edward the Confessor, who had married Editha, the daughter of Godwin, Earl of Kent, ascended the throne, and made London his chief place of residence. Under this monarch the city rapidly increased in wealth and importance. In 1065 Westminster Abbey was rebuilt by him, and dedicated to St. Peter; and his death, which occurred soon after, put an end to the Saxon sway in England. Upon William the Conqueror's advance to London, some opposition was shown by the inhabitants; but Southwark was burned by him, and the citizens then made their submission. William, after he was crowned at Westminster Abbey, on Christmas Day, 1066, gave a charter to the city; but, at the same time, he took care to disarm the inhabitants, and employed Gundulph, Bishop of Rochester, to enlarge and strengthen the Tower, the original building of which is asserted by tradition to have been commenced by the Romans, in order to awe the people into obedience in the event of any insurrection occurring amongst them. William Rufus further strengthened the Tower, built Westminster Hall, and rebuilt London Bridge. On the death of the king, in 1100, his brother Henry hastened from Winchester to London, and was crowned by Bishop Maurice. He granted a charter to the citizens, which exempted them from Dane-geld and the obligation of quartering soldiers, and conferred upon them many privileges which they had sought in vain from his predecessors. Notwithstanding all these concessions, however, Henry oppressed the English and favoured the Normans so much, that when Stephen ascended the throne, in 1135, the former were so pleased at the prospect of better times that the Londoners gladly opened their gates to him and welcomed him as their rightful king. Stephen granted the citizens a fresh charter, in return for which they espoused his cause against his rival. When the king was taken prisoner, deputies from the City of London demanded his liberation, and the re-establishment of the laws of Edward the Confessor in the place of those of Henry, which they found to be unjust and oppressive. These demands were ignored, and for a time they were compelled to submit to the Empress Matilda. At length, however, when they found that all their representations were treated with contempt, the Londoners, being joined by the Bishop of Winchester, took up arms in defence of their rights, and restored Stephen to the throne in 1141. During this reign (A.D. 1136) the city was burnt down from Aldgate to St. Paul's, and London Bridge was also destroyed by the fire. Stephen first made the Tower a royal residence; and it was used for this purpose so late as the reign of James II. St. Katharine's Hospital was founded near the Tower by Queen Matilda. Since then the docks have been formed upon its site, and the hospital has been transferred to the Regent's Park. The accession of the Plantagenets was the commencement of a renewed system of oppression to the Londoners, and both Henry II. and Richard I. (1154—1199) imposed fines and tallages, and levied forced loans from the City to a vast extent; and the Jews, in particular, were subjected not only to cruel exactions, but even to torture and massacre. In Henry's time the Temple Church was built by the Knights Templars, and the effigies of several of the members of that illustrious body who fell during the Crusades, and are buried in the church, may still be seen in the vestibule, or porch. During the reign of the latter all national distinctions between Englishmen and foreigners became obliterated, a fresh charter was granted to the city, and the name of its chief magistrate changed from portreeve to that of mayor. The renown which Richard acquired in the Holy Land rendered him popular at home, and the Londoners contributed a large sum towards his ransom. After his return from captivity he sold a new charter to the Corporation for £1,500, by which he granted them the conservancy of the Thames and various other privileges. Notwithstanding all this, his excessive taxation drove the citizens to revolt, under William Fitz-Osbert, surnamed Longbeard, who, however, was defeated and hung upon a gibbet. John, on his accession (27th May, 1199), confirmed all former rights and privileges to the citizens on their payment of 3,000 marks, and gave them the power of electing one of their own body annually as mayor, as also of appointing the sheriffs and common councilmen. During this reign there was a fire at London Bridge, in which 3,000 people were burned or drowned. On the 6th January, 1218, the barons in London demanded a renewal of Henry's charter, and a confirmation of that granted by Edward; and in Magna Charta the franchise of the City was declared inviolable. Foreign merchants were allowed to trade freely therein, and no imposts except the three feudal aids were to be levied without the consent of parliament. The Court of Common Pleas was fixed at Westminster, and the City was to remain in the hands of the 25 barons who were appointed to maintain the articles of Magna Charta, and of whom the Mayor of London was one. The Tower was committed to the keeping of Langton, and the stone bridge over the Thames which had been begun by Matilda was completed. Continual collisions took place between Henry III. and the citizens (1216—1272) in consequence of his exactions; and when he was obliged to sell his plate and jewels in consequence of parliament refusing him a subsidy, the City incurred his anger by buying them. In order to revenge himself, he granted to the Abbot of Westminster, whose house the citizens destroyed, an annual fair to continue for 15 days, in Tothill Fields, and during this period all business in the City was by his order suspended. In 1263 another massacre of the Jews took place, and a raid was made upon the Lombard bankers, a great number of whom saved their lives by taking sanctuary in the churches. The queen was pelted on her way up the river from the Tower to Windsor, and as stones were collected to sink her barge if she attempted to pass under London Bridge, she was forced to return to the Tower. During the civil war the Earl of Leicester took up his headquarters in London, and the first indisputable meeting of knights, citizens, and burgesses, as representatives of the kingdom, and sitting as a general parliament, took place on 20th January, 1265. After the battle of Evesham, where Leicester was killed, and an end put to the power of the barons, London was exposed to the hatred and vengeance of the royalists. The liberties of the City were for a time suspended, and its privileges, even when restored, much curtailed. It was mulcted in 20,000 marks, and its mayor was fined and imprisoned. Edward I., who was crowned at Westminster, 19th August, 1274, massacred 280 Jews in the City, and seized their property. In order to maintain his wars against Scotland and France he courted the Londoners, and restored to them the right of electing their own magistrates, of which they had been deprived by his father. This monarch disafforested the forest of Middlesex, and, in 1285, finished Westminster Abbey, which had been 60 years in the course of erection. The gross favouritism shown by Edward II. to the two Spensers exasperated the Londoners greatly, and in the rebellion of his queen and son against him they sided with the insurgents, slew the Bishop of Exeter, and seized the Tower. In this reign the House of Commons began to put annexed petitions to the bills by which they granted subsidies, and bills of exchange were first adopted. The next king, Edward III. (1327—1377), granted two new charters to the City, by one of which he enlarged and confirmed its former privileges, and by the other annexed to it the borough of Southwark. In this reign the wars against Scotland and France led to the imposition of large taxes; but the battles of Halidon Hill in 1333, of Crecy in 1346, and Poitiers in 1356, terminated so gloriously that the people scarcely grudged the inconveniences to which they had been put.

In May, 1357, Edward the Black Prince returned to London with John, King of France, and his son, as prisoners. David II., King of Scots, was also a prisoner at the same time; and the King of France was placed in the Savoy Palace, in the Strand, a site at that time occupied by splendid mansions, gardens, and pleasure grounds, while the King of Scotland was lodged in the Tower. There were three terrible pestilences, supposed to have come from India or China, in this reign, which are said to have destroyed two-thirds of the population. St. Stephen's chapel was erected. The lords and commons had hitherto sat as one assembly, but each house now moved into its own chamber, and the latter chose their first speaker. Edward III. greatly encouraged the trading companies of the City, and granted them several charters. In his reign goldsmiths were first ordered to put their marks on all plate manufactured by them, as were smiths on all their knives and swords; and the title of Lord Mayor was given to the chief magistrate of the city. He also changed Windsor Castle from a mere fortress into a royal residence, instituted the Order of the Garter, and in his reign the poet Chaucer left the "Tabard Inn," in the borough, on that celebrated pilgrimage to the shrine of St. Thomas-à-Becket at Canterbury, which he has immortalised by his own pen. In the reign of Richard II. occurred the memorable risings under Wat Tyler and Jack Straw. The sovereign, when scarcely eleven years old, made a triumphal entry into London, through streets decorated with various devices, and having the conduits running with wine, and was crowned at Westminster, 16th July, 1377. In 1381 the peasantry, indignant at a poll tax which had been imposed, headed by Wat Tyler and Jack Straw, met at Blackheath, in number about 200,000, and proceeded to London, where they burnt the Savoy Palace, and pillaged several warehouses. The king, hearing of the outbreak, took refuge in the Tower, the insurgents marching on through Smithfield to Mile-end, where they were joined by another body of rebels. They demanded certain rights and liberties to which the king agreed; but upon Wat Tyler having been slain by the Lord Mayor, Sir William Walworth, at Smithfield, Richard retracted all he had granted, and as a memento of the trials and executions which took place at this period, the dagger was added to the City arms. Meanwhile the king lived in so luxurious and extravagant a manner, that when he was in Ireland in 1399 the nobles and people, headed by Henry of Lancaster, broke out into open revolt. On the 29th September in the same year Richard abdicated in favour of Henry at an interview they had in the Tower, and the new king was crowned at Westminster. During Richard's reign, the present Westminster Hall was built, the statute of præmunire passed, and the Londoners, who subsequently changed sides, broke into and plundered the houses of John of Gaunt and Lord Percy for espousing the cause of Wickliffe and the Reformation. Henry IV.'s reign was chiefly conspicuous, as far as London is concerned, for the persecution of the "Lollards," or followers of Wickliffe. During this reign the Order of the Bath was instituted, and the House of Commons greatly advanced its powers and privileges. The next king, Henry V., was also a persecutor of the Lollards, and in 1413, Sir John Oldcastle, better known as Lord Cobham, their leader, was condemned as a traitor and heretic. He was, however, respited for fifteen days, during which time he escaped from the Tower, but was ultimately burnt in St. Giles's Fields in 1417. In this reign a lantern holding a lighted candle was ordered to be placed at the door of every house in the City; Holborn was first paved; the new Guildhall, which was begun in 1411, was completed, and Sir Richard Whittington, thrice Lord Mayor of London, flourished. He was born in 1354, and was a great benefactor to St. Bartholomew's and Christ's hospitals. To the latter he gave a very valuable library and lands in Newgate-street. He also endowed certain almshouses near Sion College (which are now removed to the vicinity of Highgate), and at an entertainment to the king upon his marriage at Guildhall he is said to have burnt a packet of bonds for £60,000 which Henry borrowed from him before the battle of Agincourt, and thus to have cancelled the debt. John Carpenter was one of his executors, and also left some funds for educational purposes, which were applied by the citizens to the foundation of the "City of London school" in 1832. In the reign of the next king, Henry VI., another insurrection took place, headed by Jack Cade, who assumed the name of Mortimer, and collected 20,000 followers, who encamped on Blackheath, and from thence marched over London Bridge into the City. The rebellion, however, was ultimately suppressed, and Jack Cade slain in Kent. After the first engagement between the Yorkists and Lancastrians London was fixed upon by the contending factions as the place of meeting to effect, if possible, a reconciliation; and Queen Margaret and the Duke of York went in a solemn procession to St. Paul's to swear peace and friendship, which each undertook for their side to maintain. Notwithstanding these protestations of amity, the wars between the partisans of the "white and red roses," as the Yorkists and Lancastrians were respectively styled, from the flowers plucked by each of their leaders in the Temple Gardens, continued, as is well known, for many years. In this reign Eton College and King's College, Cambridge, were founded, and freedom of speech was granted to both houses of parliament. The apparel of each grade of society was regulated by law, and the first corn law was introduced, by which when wheat reached 6*s.* 8*d.* per quarter all importation from foreign countries was prohibited. The first lord mayor's show was established in 1450; and in 1432 the frost was so severe in London that the ice upon the Thames was thick enough for heavy waggons to use it as a high road as far down as Gravesend. Money was now first lent to government on security, although only to a very small extent, and thus commenced the "national debt." At the battle of Mortimer's Cross, 2nd February, 1461, the Yorkists were successful, and Henry was sent to the Tower, where he remained, with the exception of a short interval when he was released by Warwick, "the king maker," till his death in 1471. In 1467 a grand tournament was held in Smithfield in honour of the ambassadors who were sent by Charles the Bold of Burgundy to demand the Princess Margaret, the sister of Edward IV., who was then king, in marriage for their master, and upon the ceremony taking place Caxton the printer was made one of the members of her household. At the battle of Tewkesbury, 4th May, 1471, the Lancastrians were finally overthrown, and Queen Margaret was sent captive to the Tower, whence, however, she was ransomed by Louis XI. of France in 1475. During this reign the Bastard of Falconberg sailed up the river to London Bridge with 5,000 followers, burnt some houses there, and then marched on to Aldgate. He was opposed by the citizens, who drove the invaders back to St. Botolph's church, where they were set upon by the Tower garrison and utterly routed. Jane Shore, who deserted her husband to live with Edward, walked barefooted through the streets to St. Paul's to do penance after his death, and died in Shoreditch in the most abject penury in 1527. Edward changed the current coin in 1464, and depreciated its value considerably. In 1479 another plague carried off vast numbers of the citizens of London, and in 1473 a printing press was erected at Westminster Abbey. The reign of the young Edward V., who, with his brother the Duke of York, was confined in the Tower, and murdered by Sir James Tyrell, only lasted for two months and twelve days, and although he was proclaimed he was never crowned: but when an alteration was made in the White Tower in 1674 two bodies in a wooden box were discovered at the foot of the staircase, and were thought to be those of the unfortunate princes. On 14th May, 1483, Richard Duke of Gloucester took the style and title of "Protector of England," and held councils at his house at Crosby Place and in the Tower, and at last, by various arts and devices, he and the Duke of Buckingham prevailed upon the citizens to offer him the crown. Richard, after many pretended scruples, accepted the offer, and took his seat as king at Westminster. During the Protectorate of Richard, Lord Hastings, who opposed him, was beheaded without any trial, after a council held at the Tower, upon a log of wood that was casually lying in the courtyard there. During this reign the Heralds' College first became a corporation, the king giving them the royal mansion of Cold Harbour, from whence they afterwards migrated to Doctors' Commons. With Richard ended the line of the Yorkists, and during the 350 years which had elapsed since the accession of the first of the Plantagenets great changes had taken place both in the social and commercial aspect of the city. In the time of Stephen the houses were built of wood and thatched, but in 1189 an Act was passed compelling the inhabitants to erect party walls of stone, and to roof their dwellings with wood covered with lead or tiles. Still, however, they were only one storey high, and it was not until the end of the thirteenth century that they were allowed to exceed two stories. They had also cellars and stalls, or penthouses, attached, and the windows were mostly open by day and closed by wooden shutters at night. The streets of the city were kept clean by means of deeply cut kennels and gutters to carry away the sewage and filth, which was not then discharged into the river, but was collected by scavengers and carted away into the fields. Water was supplied to the houses by barreled carts, which brought it from the Thames, which was then pure, and abounded with salmon and other fish, or by means of public fountains and conduits. The expenses of paving and road-making were met by a toll upon vehicles, and the City gates were under the control of sergeants-at-arms, who kept watch at them by day and night, and took the tolls from those who used them. No one was permitted to walk in the streets after eight o'clock in the evening without special permission, and even then wayfarers were obliged to carry lanterns. The borough of Southwark, which was a rendezvous for all the disorderly, disaffected, and felonious characters about London, was regarded with suspicion, and laboured under special disabilities. Thus, for instance, no goods or merchandise were allowed to be landed on the Southwark side of the river; neither were boatmen to moor any craft there, or either to embark or disembark passengers after dark. The citizens were forbidden to go marketing there for any article except wood, and a constant watch was set to prevent the keepers of public houses of entertainment from harbouring seditious persons, or rogues and vagabonds. The Fleet ditch, Walbrook, and in fact all watercourses, were ordered by strict regulations to be kept scrupulously clean, and no one was allowed to bathe in the Thames near the City under penalty of death. Sometimes, however, the river occasioned great trouble and damage, as its shores were not protected by any high quays or embankments. Thus in 1242 the water overflowed its banks to such a height that Westminster Hall was flooded, and boats plied inside for hire. Indeed so little precaution was taken even in later times against accidents of this kind that the fear of a similar inundation taking place actually delayed the coronation of George II., which was to have been celebrated on the 4th October, 1727, till the 11th of that month. The great cattle market was "Smoothfield," now Smithfield, which has only lately been disused for that purpose, and both fish and meat were allowed to be sold in the City on Sundays. The tavern keepers', wine and ale sellers', and cooks' shops were almost all on the banks of the Thames, and every keeper of a house of public entertainment was responsible for the good behaviour of any guests who stopped in his house over one day and one night. All alehouses and wine-taverns were to be closed at eight o'clock, P.M., and any guest leaving a house of public entertainment after that hour was compelled to leave his arms behind him. The City authorities had no jurisdiction in matters of life and death, but might inflict punishment upon fraudulent traders, beggars, impostors, and the like, by imprisonment, the pillory, and various methods of corporal chastisement. The reign of the house of Tudor commenced after the overthrow of Richard at Bosworth Field in 1485. Upon his defeat his successor, Henry VII., went to London, which he entered in a closed chariot, in fear, as some historians assert, of the partisans of the house of York; or, according to others, to avoid exposing himself to the plague which, under the name of the "sweating sickness," was raging in London. The king was received by the lord mayor and corporation, attended by a procession of the trades' companies and citizens, and was crowned at Westminster on the 30th October. His means were so small that he borrowed £2,000 from the citizens of London in order to defend himself from the rebels who were opposed to his authority, and for the purpose, as he alleged, of going to war with France. This money, however, and other sums which he raised by fines and various methods of oppression and extortion, he appropriated to his own uses. The king was enabled to accumulate great riches by these means on account of the increased wealth of the citizens, for it was in his reign that the products of the East and West Indies became regular matters of commerce, and produced enormous profits to those who engaged in the trade. Besides this, Henry founded the "Star Chamber," so called from the starra or contracts made with the Jews, which were deposited there. By these he added still more to his revenue, and innocent people were constantly fined and imprisoned, and their property confiscated, either wholly or in part, in order to gratify the avaricious propensities of the sovereign. In consequence of his rapacious proceedings his subjects became discontented, and a rebellion broke out against him in a county so remote even as Cornwall. The insurgents marched up towards London, where Henry posted an army in St. George's Fields to oppose them. At Deptford Bridge they were met by Lord Daubeny, and driven to Blackheath, where a battle was fought in 1497, and the rebels were dispersed. In 1499 the rebellion was suppressed, and Perkin Warbeck, the ringleader, after having been confined in the Tower, from which he had made his escape with the Earl of Warwick, was led in a mock triumphal procession through the streets. Thence, after having been placed in the stocks in Cheapside and at Westminster, he was taken to Tyburn and hanged, while the Earl of Warwick was beheaded on Tower Hill. In the year 1500 the plague again devastated the City, and the king and court removed in consequence to Calais. In the ensuing year the first lord mayor's feast was held in the Guildhall, and the king, who was himself a member of the Taylors' Company, gave to it the title of the Merchant Taylors' Company. From this time to the year of his death, in 1509, Henry continued his extortions, and raised such vast sums, by fines and subsidies, that at his decease he left nearly £2,000,000. He was buried in the magnificent chapel which he built, and which still goes by his name, in Westminster Abbey. On the 24th June, 1509, Henry VIII. was crowned at Westminster, and in the sixth year of his reign considerable commotions took place in the City owing to the hatred between the foreign and native merchants. Bands of young men paraded the streets, insulting all the foreigners they met, and a report was spread of an intention to murder all aliens found in the City on May Day. The result of this was, that the aldermen forbade any one to be out after nine o'clock P.M.; but as one of the members of the court was going home, he saw some apprentices at play after that hour. He ordered them to desist, and upon their refusal proceeded to drag one of them to prison. This was the signal for a general uprising of the citizens, and the rioters pillaged and burnt several houses in quarters inhabited by foreigners. The next day the king's troops marched into the City, and seized 280 of the ringleaders, who were arraigned capitally at Guildhall. The lord mayor and corporation, who were among those who were ill-affected to the foreigners, went to the king to supplicate for mercy, which was granted to them; and all who had been arrested were sent home upon an undertaking that for the future the foreigners should remain unmolested. Notwithstanding this promise, however, aliens traded in the City under great disadvantages, and in 1527 several citizens were actually disfranchised for dealing in the property of foreigners. When the king required money for his wars, the Londoners were as usual the principal contributors, and were forced to raise large sums by threats of severities pronounced against them by Wolsey, who appropriated a considerable portion of the money to himself, and built York Place, now Whitehall, and Hampton Court palace, with the proceeds. The City was also remarkable during this reign for the scenes which it witnessed in connection with Church matters. Before Henry threw off openly his allegiance to Rome, a sermon was preached every Sunday at St. Paul's Cross, denouncing the temporal authority of the pope; but the king, not wishing to incur the anger of that potentate, did not venture at once to adopt the principles of the Reformation. Accordingly, although Tindal's translation of the Bible was publicly burned in Cheapside, and Protestants were executed for denying certain Roman Catholic points of doctrine, yet members of the latter Church were equally persecuted for denying the king's supremacy in temporal government. Afterwards, when the Reformation gained greater hold upon the country, and the religious houses were suppressed, a great alteration took place in the City, owing to the extensive abolition of these establishments. It has been computed that about two-thirds of the area within the City walls was occupied by churches, priories, and convents, while there were large dwelling-houses and gardens belonging to bishops, abbots, and various ecclesiastical dignities in the Strand and Holborn, as well as in other parts of the town and its suburbs. When these, or most of them, were abolished, there was more room for the laity in the City, and it became gradually more and more filled with persons engaged in the pursuits of trade and commerce. In this reign Westminster was made an episcopal see, but the bishopric was suppressed in the reign of Edward VI., and Dr. Thomas Thirlby, the bishop, was translated to Norwich. St. James's Palace was now built; the Trinity House Corporation formed; St. Paul's school and the College of Physicians founded; and the first secretary of state appointed. During this reign the inhabitants built their houses to a greater height, parish registers were established, and trade flourished in the City. Fresh provisions were made for paving the streets, the removal of nuisances, the better regulation of the public markets; and in general, notwithstanding the severities practised in the name of religion, the condition of London improved, and its citizens increased both in number and in wealth. Edward VI. was crowned at Westminster in 1547, and during his reign Christ's Hospital, which had been founded by Henry III., was refounded by the king as a place of education, under the title of the "Blue Coat School," from the colour of that garment which is still worn by the pupils; and Bethlehem and St. Thomas's hospitals were founded. The Protector Somerset, during this reign, built for his residence the house still called by his name in the Strand. For this purpose he pulled down two churches, and the houses of three bishops in the Strand, and a chapel in St. Paul's churchyard, and employed their materials in the erection of his own palace. He also appropriated to his uses large sums of money raised from suppressed religious houses, and defrauded the Guildhall library of three cartloads of valuable books and manuscripts. These and other tyrannical proceedings produced so much hatred against him that he was imprisoned in the Tower, and ultimately executed in 1552. In 1553 the taverns of London were, by Act of Parliament, limited to the number of forty in the City and liberties, and three in Westminster; if more than twelve persons met and refused to disperse upon a magistrate's order, the assembly was held to be treasonable; interest was forbidden to be taken for money lent; and native traders were protected by certain disabilities imposed upon the Hanse merchants. Religious persecution was less severe than it had been in the preceding reign, and the Fleet prison and the Tower were comparatively empty. St. Stephen's chapel was in this reign first used by the Commons as their place of meeting; the "Book of Common Prayer" was now set forth by royal authority; and the sweating sickness, which had at intervals been so prevalent in the City, entirely disappeared in 1551. In 1553 Lady Jane Grey was proclaimed in London; and Bishop Ridley, during the ten days of her reign, was earnest in preaching in her favour at St. Paul's Cross. When Mary, however, arrived, the citizens received her with great joy, and bonfires were lit, banquets given, and the bells rung to welcome her. She was crowned at Westminster, and soon after her accession went to the Tower, and set at liberty the Duke of Norfolk, bishops Bonner, Gardiner, and Tunstall, with several other prisoners. In 1554 Sir Thomas Wyatt endeavoured to depose Mary in favour of Lady Jane Grey, and the queen, seeing the danger she was in, went in person to Guildhall to ask the assistance of the citizens. This they most energetically afforded her; and Wyatt and his followers, after marching through Knightsbridge and along the road which is now Piccadilly, arrived at the village of Charing. They then proceeded down the Strand to Temple Bar and Ludgate, where an encounter took place, in which Wyatt was captured, and having been conveyed to Whitehall, he was sent ultimately to the Tower, and there executed. During this reign the Protestants were burned in great numbers in Smithfield, forced loans were levied, and the queen compelled the city to become security for her to Antwerp for £30,000 she had borrowed there. She also took £50,000 as a bribe from the London merchants for prohibiting foreign merchants from exporting English cloth, and she exacted £60,000 from the City in order to carry out the objects of an alliance which she had formed with Spain against France. The progress of Elizabeth from the Tower to Westminster at her coronation was a remarkable pageant. An immense variety of devices were displayed along the line of her route, and at the Standard in Cheapside she was presented with 1,000 marks of gold by the recorder, as a token of the City's love and respect for her. In 1556 the Royal Exchange was opened by the queen; in 1560, Westminster school was founded; and in 1561 the Merchant Taylors' school, by the company of that name. In 1600 the queen granted a charter to a company to trade to the East Indies, and it existed as the East India Company until 1858, when its powers were transferred to the crown. During the Tudor period the city was in a very dirty state, and the inhabitants not over cleanly either in their dwelling-places or their habits. The houses of the commoner sort of people were wattled and covered over with clay. The floors were of clay, or plaster strewed with rushes, and except in the larger mansions there were no chimneys, but the smoke escaped through a hole in the roof. These and similar circumstances, such as the want of drainage, tended greatly to foster the plague and all kinds of fevers; and London abounded not only in nuisances, but, being unlit, was infested both by night as well as by day by immense quantities of thieves and vagabonds. The population of London during the reign of Elizabeth was about 160,000, and the people were much given to shows and theatrical representations; and the names of Shakspeare, Burbage, and their fellow-actors, and of the Globe on Bankside, the Curtain in Shoreditch, and the theatres in the Black and White Friars, will ever be associated with Elizabethan London. The greater part of the City in Elizabeth's time was contained within the old City walls. Only one side of the Minories was built. Goodman's-fields was a grazing ground, and Spitalfields were fields indeed. There were but a very few houses in Bishopsgate and Shoreditch. Chiswell-street was not built, and Holborn, St. Giles, Charing, and Kensington were villages contiguous to London. The Strand consisted of a few clusters of houses on the N. side, but on the S. side ran a fine line of mansions connecting Westminster with the City. The N. of London was almost entirely open country, and Covent Garden, or the garden of the convent of Westminster, occupied a large space about St. Martin's-lane, and extended as far as the village of St. Giles. Notwithstanding the limited space thus occupied for habitable purposes, a proclamation was issued in 1580 prohibiting new buildings, which were springing up rapidly; for London now first began to exhibit symptoms of its growth, and it was feared that there would not be space enough left for the sports and amusements of the people! Notwithstanding, however, the alarm of the queen and her successor, James I., the town continued to increase and spread, and buildings arose and extended towards St. Giles's, and even so far as the Haymarket. New streets were branching out in all directions, and by the time of Charles I. even so remote a district as Hyde Park had become a fashionable place of resort. On the Reading road was a gambling-house and public place of promenade called Piccadilly, and the "Spring Gardens" was a lounge for those who sauntered round and drank the clear and limpid waters which then flowed from a fountain placed in their centre. During the reign of the house of Stuart, considerable attention was paid to the internal improvements of the town. In 1613 the New River was brought to London by Sir Hugh Myddelton; and within the next three years Moorfields was levelled, the ditches cleaned, and the walks planted, while Smithfield was also levelled and paved. In 1622 appeared the first newspaper which has been strictly authenticated, called the Weekly News. In 1649 Charles I. was beheaded before the banqueting-house in Whitehall, and St. Paul's Cathedral was used as a stable for some of the cavalry regiments of the Commonwealth. During the time of Charles II. the City walls, as we are told by Stow, were a little over 2 miles in circumference, having in them the six gates of Aldgate, Bishopsgate, Cripplegate, Aldersgate, Newgate, and Ludgate; but the nobility and gentry had already began to migrate westward, and many of them lived in the neighbourhood of Lincoln's Inn Fields, Great Queen-street, and Covent-garden. From the latter spot a street ran to Charing-cross, and from Spring-gardens—where Prince Rupert once had a house—Whitehall Palace extended along St. James's Park, and was connected with Whitehall-gardens by an archway. The present parade ground at the back of the Horse Guards was then the tilting yard, and close by was the "cock-pit," the apartments over which were appropriated to the use of the younger branches of the royal family and their attendants. The great merchants and traders continued to reside in the City, which, however, was still unpaved, unlighted, and undrained. In 1625 hackney carriages first began to ply for hire; but it was found that they crowded the thoroughfares so much that a proclamation was issued against them, and sedan chairs were used instead. By 1662, however, they had again become so numerous that it was found necessary to license them, and they have ever since been subject to regulations which have been constantly changed so as to suit the requirements of the population. An excise and landed property tax was introduced by parliament to support the war against the king, and licenses were granted to public-houses upon payment of a certain sum to the exchequer. The Puritans destroyed the crosses in Cheapside and Charing, and demolished many fine statues and ornaments in the churches of London; and in 1641 the court of Star Chamber was finally abolished. In 1655 the Jews offered Cromwell a large sum of money to be allowed to trade in England, and a tacit agreement having been come to, many of them settled in London, and a synagogue was opened in 1656. In 1660 the Royal Society was founded, and many of the inhabitants of London who had amassed large sums of money entrusted it to the City goldsmiths, who allowed them interest upon it, and established regular banking houses. When Charles II. arrived at London from Blackheath, a gorgeous banquet was given him in St. George's Fields, and the streets from London Bridge to Whitehall were strewed with flowers, while the houses were decorated with flags and tapestry, and fountains filled with wine played along the route. A splendid procession attended him on his entrance into London, and he was crowned at Westminster 23rd April, 1661. At this period the streets were so excessively narrow that the upper portions of the houses, which with few exceptions were of wood, nearly touched each other across the way. The fronts of them were decorated with numerous pictures and sign-boards, which pointed out to passers-by the trades and occupations carried on by the inmates of the shops, public-houses, and warehouses; so that, as has been observed, "a long street on a windy day looked like a great fluttering picture gallery, in which all animated nature and many monsters were depicted: lions and swans of every colour, dragons and unicorns of every shape, flaunted in the air. In the warehouses beneath and the eating-houses, very curious articles of apparel and luxury showed dimly through the dull and narrow panes, or appealed to the appetite with very different luxuries from ours. On the outspread board, though devoid of linen or of three-pronged forks, were often to be seen the flesh of wild beeves and bustards, and sometimes even of that royal favourite the boar. Cygnets and herons, too, had no business there, being rigidly preserved; but there they were. 'Marinated' manchets and marchpane, ollas and dishes of haugou, flanked by large flasks and choppins of canary and sherries-sack; but no tea, coffee, or chocolate, asparagus, lettuce, or cauliflower, until 1660." Five years later the terrible plague which devastated London made its appearance, and destroyed upwards of 100,000 people. Whole streets became depopulated, and so few passengers ventured out of doors that the thoroughfares became overgrown with grass and weeds, and the dead bodies were carted away and thrown into huge pits dug expressly for the purpose of receiving them. Of the details of this awful visitation a most graphic, although, doubtless, a somewhat imaginative description will be found in the "Journal of the Plague," by the celebrated Daniel Defoe. On the 2nd September in the next year, the great fire of London occurred. It broke out on a spot close to Fish-street-hill, and its origin was attributed to the Roman Catholics. The Monument was built in order to commemorate the event; and the gilt ornament at its top represents a mass of flame. Till 1830 it bore an inscription which stated that the conflagration was caused by the Papists, and the falsity of this assertion gave occasion to Pope's lines in "Sir Balaam:"

> "Where London's column, pointing to the skies, > Like a tall bully, lifts its head and lies."

The real truth seems to be that the fire was occasioned by the over-heating of the oven of the bakehouse in which flames first made their appearance. But, whatever was the cause of it, it spread with frightful rapidity, and the difficulty of extinguishing it was increased, not only by the inflammable materials of which the London houses and buildings were then composed, but by the fact that the pipes of the New River Company were empty, and the Thames fire-engine was burnt to ashes. It is computed that about 13,200 houses and 89 churches, amongst which was St. Paul's, were destroyed; but only eight persons lost their lives. The Exchange, the City gates, the Custom House, the Guildhall, Sion College, and various public buildings, such as libraries, hospitals, and schools, were laid in ruins; and warehouses, containing all kinds of valuable goods and stores, were totally consumed. The flames, we are told, formed a column a mile in diameter, and their reflection could be seen for hundreds of miles off, while in London itself their glare made the night as light as the day. The ruins caused by the fire included an area of 436 acres, extending along the north side of the river from the Tower to the Temple, and from the north-east gate along the City wall to Holborn Bridge. The total loss was estimated at about £7,335,000; and the king, and the Duke of York, and many of the nobility and the ministers not only used the utmost personal exertions during the conflagration in order to prevent its spreading, but contributed largely to relieve the wants of the sufferers; while provisions and stores were sent in from all sides of the country to those citizens who were driven from their dwellings and many of them reduced to absolute want. On 1st October the Commons voted the thanks of the House to the king for his magnanimous behaviour during the fire. On the 10th a day of fasting and humiliation was observed, and a medal, with the motto "So He punishes," was struck to commemorate the double visitation of the plague and the fire. Towards the end of this year a Bill was passed levying one shilling on every ton of coal which was brought to the port of London, in order to enable the Lord Mayor and the Corporation to indemnify those whose ground was taken from them in order to carry out the enlargement and improvement of the streets and thoroughfares. The first office for insuring buildings against fire was now established, and Sir Christopher Wren prepared a plan for erecting the new city, not only upon a safer principle, but so as to render it more commodious for trade and commerce, and more sightly in its architectural arrangement and structure. From one cause or another, however, his plans were laid aside, and were never put into execution. In 1667 the Royal Exchange was rebuilt, and St. James's Park planted with trees; and in May, 1671, a disbanded officer named Blood carried away the crown jewels from the Tower. In 1679 the theatres, which had been suppressed by the Puritans during the time of the Commonwealth, were reopened, and women were first allowed to perform the female characters. Bull-baiting and athletic sports formed the chief amusements of the people, and the court and the City gave themselves up to all kinds of licentiousness and debauchery. In 1678 the rumour of a supposed Popish plot was circulated by Titus Oates, and Sir Edmondsbury Godfrey, who first denounced Oates, was found murdered on Primrose Hill, near the Regent's-park. These false accusations led to a great deal of excitement, and many executions of supposed traitors took place in consequence. In 1683 the celebrated Rye House Plot occurred, and on the 21st July Lord William Russell, who had been tried for complicity in it at Hick's Hall, Clerkenwell, was executed in Lincoln's Inn Fields. In the same year a severe frost set in, and in January, 1684, the cold was so intense that whole streets of booths were formed on the Thames, and all sorts of trades and amusements carried on there for a period of nine weeks. During this reign Chelsea Hospital and Greenwich Observatory were founded, and insurances offices regularly established. A penny post carried letters in the London district, and a Postmaster-General was first appointed. The master printers in London were limited to twenty, and no book was allowed to be printed out of London, except in York and by the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge. The diaries of Samuel Pepys and John Evelyn, which extend over part of this and the whole of the two succeeding reigns, give full and interesting details of the state of London at this period, and are well worthy of attentive perusal. On 14th February, 1685, Charles II. was buried at Westminster; and on 23rd April James II. and his queen were crowned there. On the 15th July the Duke of Monmouth was beheaded on Tower Hill; and between this and September Titus Oates underwent the sentence that had been passed upon him, and stood in the pillories, which were erected at Westminster Hall Gate, Charing Cross, the Temple, the Royal Exchange, and Tyburn. The antagonism between the king and the nation on religious matters produced great excitement in the metropolis during this reign, and the imprisonment of the seven Protestant bishops in the Tower, the cruelties of the notorious Judge Jeffreys and of Colonel Kirke, and the favour and encouragement shown to the Roman Catholics, which it was thought would lead to the interference of the Pope in the affairs of the state, influenced the minds of the citizens so much that James, finding himself deserted by his friends and the army, resolved upon flight. Accordingly, he embarked at Whitehall Stairs, on 10th December, 1688, for France, having first thrown the great seal into the Thames, so that nothing could be legally done in his absence. On the 11th April, 1689, William and Mary were crowned at Westminster; and the infamous Jeffreys died in the Tower, and was buried there. In this year their Majesties dined at the Guildhall with the Lord Mayor; and it having been found that the king's picture there had been defaced, a reward of £500 was offered by the City for the detection of the malefactors. Titus Oates was set at liberty, and many attainders reversed. In 1693, as the coinage had become very much depreciated, a new one was ordered, and issued by Sir Isaac Newton, who was then the Master of the Mint, the loss being provided for by a house and window tax. In 1694 the first public lottery was drawn in London, and during this reign Chelsea Hospital, for invalid soldiers, was finished, and Greenwich Palace given up by the crown to be henceforth a hospital for sick and disabled sailors. Various Acts for the regulation of carriages plying for hire and the street traffic of London were passed, as well as Acts for completing and adorning St. Paul's and Westminster Abbey. In 1696 Evelyn complains of the extension of the metropolis, and says, "No less exhauster and waster of public treasure is the progress and increase of buildings about this already monstrous city, wherein, one year take another, are erected about 800 houses, as I am credibly informed." In 1698 a fire occurred at Whitehall, which burnt it all down except the banqueting-house; and in this year Peter the Great, Czar of Russia, came to England and lodged at Deptford, where he worked as a ship's carpenter. During his stay his portrait was painted by Sir G. Kneller, and it now adorns the walls of Windsor Castle. Upon his departure the king presented him with a yacht, in return for which Peter sent him a ruby valued at £10,000, which is now in the imperial crown of England. In the last year of this reign an Act was passed for the preservation of the library in the house in Westminster then known as Cotton House, in which were those celebrated manuscripts styled the Cottonian, which now form one of the principal collections of MSS. in the British Museum. On 7th March, 1702, King William III. died at Kensington Palace, and was buried at Westminster, where Queen Anne, who had been born at St. James's Palace, was crowned on 23rd April. In the November of the following year a terrible storm destroyed upwards of a million's worth of property in London alone, and caused so much damage to the navy that the Commons petitioned the queen to give directions for a sum to be specially applied for rebuilding and repairing the injured ships, and for providing for the families of those who had perished. In 1705 a theatre was opened in the Haymarket by Vanbrugh and Cibber; and this portion of the town had by this time become the resort of a dense population devoted both to business and pleasure. At the end of 1709 Dr. Sacheverell preached the two sermons which led to his trial before the House of Lords; and upon his progress there the mob which attended him pulled down several meeting-houses, and made a bonfire of the pulpits, pews, &c., in Lincoln's Inn Fields. The result of the riot was that many of the ringleaders were punished, and several obnoxious books upon religion were burnt by the common hangman. In 1711 an Act was passed for building 50 new churches in London and Westminster, and an estimate was sent in of the cost of each of them by Sir Christopher Wren. On 23rd June a proclamation was issued for the establishment of the General Post Office; and at the end of the year the first Italian opera ever performed in England was given at the theatre in the Haymarket. On 15th November, 1712, the celebrated duel between the Duke of Hamilton and Colonel Hamilton against Lord Mohun and Lieut.-General Macartney was fought in Hyde Park. Lord Mohun was killed, the duke mortally wounded, and Colonel Hamilton was wounded in the foot, while Macartney made his escape, and a reward was offered for his apprehension. In 1713 the Treaty of Utrecht was signed, and the two Houses of Parliament attended at St. Paul's to return thanks for the conclusion of peace. On the 1st August, 1714, the queen died, and was buried at Westminster, being the last sovereign of the house of Stuart. During the reign of this family London had made great progress in those branches of trade and commerce which have increased so rapidly ever since. In 1694 the Bank of England, which was then first incorporated, and carried on business in the hall of the Grocers' Company, commenced with a capital of £1,200,000; and in 1712 London had 560 vessels, and only a little over a quarter of a million tons of coal entered the port. During this period out-door amusements formed a great part of the recreation of the people, and fairs were kept and may-poles erected in various parts of the metropolis. During the latter portion of this period clubs and coffee-houses were very generally frequented, and formed a remarkable feature of London life. The moral state of society in the metropolis was very debased during the reigns of the Stuarts, and excesses in eating and drinking, and debauchery of all kinds, were carried on openly. We are told that the prisons presented the most horrible scenes of abject disease and misery; that the streets swarmed with destitute children, who were left to starve, or else to live by thieving, forging, or any other vicious courses which ultimately led them to the gallows; and it was not until the reign of the house of Hanover that any real steps were taken to purify the metropolis, either morally or socially, or efficient measures passed for ameliorating the condition of its population. During the reign of George I. lords Derwentwater and Kenmure were executed on Tower Hill, and the Earl of Oxford was imprisoned for two years in the Tower. In 1720 took place the celebrated South Sea bubble, which occasioned so much confusion and excitement in the City that the offices were crowded daily with eager throngs of speculators who blocked up the places of business to such an extent that it became necessary to have tables and clerks stationed in the streets near the Bank. By this scheme many thousands of families were ruined and left the country, and had it not been for the measures of Sir Robert Walpole, this and similar undertakings would probably have produced a national bankruptcy. During this reign the Sanctuary in Westminster was pulled down, and the foundations of Guy's Hospital were laid in 1721 by John Guy, a bookseller in Cornhill. In 1727 George II. came to the throne. In 1746 and 1747 lords Kilmarnock, Balmerino, and Lovat were executed on Tower Hill, and seventeen persons suffered on Kennington Common for participating in a scheme for the restoration of the Stuarts. About this time John Wesley began his remarkable career, and raised a numerous body known as Wesleyan Methodists. The first chapel they occupied in London was the "Foundry," in Moorfields, in 1739; and, in the same year, the "societies" were formed. At the time of Wesley's death, in 1791, they numbered 80,000, and now his followers, in England, the United States, and on the foreign missions, are little less than a million. The purchase of Sir Hans Sloane's collections by the government led to the foundation of the British Museum in 1753; and in 1760 the first stone of the old Blackfriars Bridge was laid — that of the present one having been laid in July, 1865. In October, 1760, George II. died at Kensington, and was buried at Westminster. George III. was crowned at Westminster, 22nd September, 1761, and was buried at Windsor in January, 1820. During this long reign the metropolis increased immensely in extent, and many inventions and improvements rendered it more commodious for its inhabitants. The Houses of Parliament were adorned by the names of lords Clive and Chatham, William Pitt, Edmund Burke, Charles James Fox, and others, while Nelson and the Duke of Wellington were accomplishing those glorious feats of arms which have made London the capital of the leading empire of the world. In 1788 the celebrated trial of Warren Hastings took place in Westminster Hall; and in 1812 Spencer Perceval, the prime minister, was shot by Bellingham in the lobby of the House of Commons. In this reign the use of umbrellas was introduced into London by Jonas Hanway, the eminent philanthropist, but did not become general for thirty years afterwards; and the Royal Academy of Music, the Society of Antiquarians, the Royal Academy of Arts, the Royal Institution, the Royal College of Surgeons, and many other literary and scientific institutions, were founded. In June, 1781, Lord George Gordon's "No Popery" riots commenced, and the mob burnt down many houses, and the prisons of the King's Bench, the Fleet, and the New Bridewell. From these they released the prisoners, as they did also from Newgate, to which they had set fire. They also attacked the Bank of England, but quiet was restored after a week, Lord George was apprehended and committed to the Tower, and a camp was formed in St. James's Park to guard against any further outbreak. In the reign of George IV. enormous improvements and alterations took place in London, more especially at the W. end of the town. The Regent's Park was laid out in 1812, from plans of John Nash, the architect, and was so called because the Prince of Wales, who was then Prince Regent, intended to erect himself a house there, and Regent-street and Portland-place were built to afford a line of communication from the prince's residence to St. James's Palace, Carlton House, and the aristocratic mansions in that neighbourhood. In 1820 a plot was laid to murder the cabinet ministers, and the conspirators met in a small street, called Cato-street, in the Edgware-road. The affair is known as the "Cato-street Conspiracy;" but the movements of the conspirators were watched, and Thistlewood, the ringleader, and four of his accomplices, were seized and executed. The king himself took a lively interest in improving and beautifying the west end of the town. Carlton House was demolished, and St. James's Palace was entirely deserted as a royal residence. Buckingham House was taken down, and the present Buckingham Palace begun. The higher classes now commenced that migration to the western parts of the metropolis which has continued ever since, and which is even now going on to such an extent that it is difficult to predict what will ultimately be the limit to the houses and mansions which are being erected in that quarter. In 1815-16, gas-lights began to supersede pretty generally the use of oil in lighting the public thoroughfares. In 1823 cabriolets were introduced into London from Paris, and were the prototypes of our present street cabs. In 1825 the first stone of the new London Bridge was laid. In 1829 omnibuses first began to run, and in the same year the Metropolitan Police Act passed, and the new General Post Office was opened for public business. The next king, William IV., was crowned at Westminster, 9th September, 1831. In May, 1832, much agitation took place throughout the country in consequence of the Reform Bill, and in London the excitement was so great, that a run was caused upon the Bank of England, and the mob assembled round Apsley House, the residence of the Duke of Wellington, Hyde Park Corner, and broke his windows, in revenge for the opposition which he offered to the Bill. On the 1st August, 1831, new London Bridge was opened by the king and queen amid great rejoicings. In 1832 the cholera made its appearance in London, and created great distress and havoc among all classes; and in 1834 both houses of parliament were destroyed by fire, which broke out on the evening of 16th October, and was not extinguished for several days. In this reign very important alterations and improvements were carried out in the City, especially in the neighbourhood of London Bridge, and several educational and scientific societies were established; among these were various Mechanics' Institutes, the National Gallery, London University, the Astronomical and Geographical Societies; the Royal Society of Literature, the Royal Institution of British Architects, the Statistical Society, the British Association for the Advancement of Science, and many others. The present reign commenced on 20th June, 1837, and since that time the metropolis has been undergoing constant change in consequence of the introduction of modern inventions, and the improved intellectual and commercial status of its inhabitants. It will, perhaps, be the most convenient method to describe it as it is laid down in the Post-office Directory, according to districts, and for this purpose we shall begin with that division which is known as the North-Western, and proceed eastward. The extreme boundaries, then, of this district include Stanmore, Mill Hill, Hampstead, Kentish Town, and St. Pancras to King's-cross to the N. and E. Southward, they extend by the New-road to its junction with the Edgware-road; and westward to Kilburn, Willesdon, Harlesden, and Harrow. In this division are situated the Regent's Park, St. John's Wood, and Camden Town, while the suburban districts are Edgware, Hendon, Stanmore, Sudbury, Harrow, and Hampstead. Of these the two last are the best known and most frequented, the former from the celebrated public school there, and the latter on account of its elevated position and the extent and beauty of its heath, from whence a commanding view of London may be obtained, and where the lower and middle classes of the citizens flock by thousands, especially on Sundays and public holidays, for the purposes of healthful recreation and enjoyment. The next postal district, proceeding eastward, is the Northern. The boundaries of this division extend from Barnet to Waltham Cross on the northern side; from Waltham Cross to Stoke Newington, excluding Kingsland on the E.; from Shoreditch to King's-cross on the S.; and by the York-road to Holloway, Highgate, Finchley, Totteridge, and Hornsey, on the W. In this division are Highbury, Barnsbury, Islington, Pentonville, Hoxton, Canonbury, and De Beauvoir Town, and the suburban districts of Barnet, Colney Hatch, Edmonton, Enfield, Finchley, Highgate, Holloway, Hornsey, Ponder's End, Southgate, Tottenham, Waltham Cross, and Whetstone. The North-Eastern district extends to High Beech and Chigwell Row, on the N. and E.; to Wanstead, Victoria Park, and Bethnal Green, on the S., and includes Shoreditch, Kingsland, Walthamstow, Chingford, and Sewardstone, on the W. Its suburban districts are Chigwell, Clapton, Hackney, Leyton, Leytonstone, Loughton, and Woodford; and it includes the populous parishes of Bethnal Green, Spitalfields, and Shoreditch. The Western district is bounded on the N. by the Grand Junction Canal and the Marylebone-road, including the Edgware-road; on the E. by Tottenham-Court-road and Soho; on the S. by Piccadilly; and on the W. it includes Kensington, Notting Hill, Hammersmith, Isleworth, and Hounslow. This division contains the large parish of Paddington and the fashionable districts of Bayswater and Tyburnia, the latter being so called from its proximity to Tyburn Gate, the place of execution in olden times, which stood close by where the "Marble Arch" now affords an entrance into Hyde Park. This is the most fashionable quarter of London, and contains some of the noblest mansions and most magnificent shops in the metropolis. Its suburban districts, besides those already mentioned, are Acton, Brentford, Ealing, and Hanwell, Shepherd's Bush, Southall, and Turnham Green. The West Central district lies within the Euston and Pentonville roads to Claremont-square on the N.; Amwell-street, Coldbath Fields, Gray's-Inn-lane, Chancery-lane, and Essex-street, on the E.; the river to Northumberland-street, Strand, on the S.; and Trafalgar-square, Whitcomb-street, and Crown-street, to Tottenham-Court-road, on the W. There are no suburban districts in this division, which comprehends the great thoroughfares of Holborn and the Strand, and the parishes of St. Pancras and Bloomsbury, and parts of St. Martin's and Clerkenwell. The Eastern Central district includes the City-road and the Old-street-road on the N.; Bishopsgate-street, excluding Houndsditch, the Minories, and Tower-hill, on the E.; the river-side to the Temple, and Fleet-street, on the S.; and excludes Chancery-lane, Gray's-Inn-lane, Coldbath-fields, and Claremont-square, on the W. In it lies the remaining portion of Clerkenwell, with Finsbury, St. Martin's-le-Grand, the Bank, the Royal Exchange, and the most important parts of the City. The Eastern district is bounded by Aldgate, Mile-end-road, Bow, Stratford, Ilford, and Romford, on the N.; Rainham and Dagenham on the E.; the river on the S.; and Tower-hill and the Minories on the W. Its suburban divisions, in addition to those already enumerated, are Barking, Blackwall, Canning Town, Chadwell, Shadwell, and Poplar; and it includes the principal part of Whitechapel, Wapping, Limehouse, Stepney, the Isle of Dogs, St. Catherine's, the London, West India, and other docks, and a great portion of that part of London which is inhabited by those whose occupations are connected with the river. The South-Western district is bounded on the N. by Charing Cross; on the E. by the river to Battersea Bridge, and to Wimbledon, Kingston, Sunbury, Twickenham, Richmond, Mortlake, Brompton, Knightsbridge, and St. James's on the S. and W. The suburban districts in this division are, in addition to those already enumerated, Battersea, Fulham, Hampton (including Hampton Court, New Hampton, and Sunbury); Kingston (including East and West Moulsey, Hampton Wick, Long Ditton, Thames Ditton, Norbiton, and Surbiton); Mortlake (including East Sheen and Barnes); Petersham, Putney (including Roehampton), Richmond, Teddington, Twickenham, Wandsworth, and Wimbledon. The London district includes Milbank, Pimlico, Chelsea, Westminster, and the fashionable quarter of "Belgravia" (so called from Belgrave-square, one of the principal aristocratic sites of London); and in it are situated both the royal palaces of Buckingham and St. James's, with Westminster Abbey and the Houses of Parliament. The Southern district extends from Battersea Bridge to Blackfriars on the N., and includes the Blackfriars'-road, Nelson-square, Newington, Walworth, Camberwell, Dulwich, Norwood, Croydon, Carshalton, Sutton, and Cheam, on the E. and S.; and Merton, Clapham, and South Lambeth, on the W. The suburban districts, besides those already mentioned, are Balham, Brixton, Mitcham, Stockwell, Streatham, Thornton Heath, Tooting, and Walworth; and in London it includes Lambeth, Vauxhall, and Kennington. The South-Eastern district is bounded on the N. by the river from Blackfriars Bridge to Erith. It extends to the E. and S. as far as Crayford, Bromley, Sydenham (including the Crystal Palace), Peckham, and the Kent-road, and westward by the Elephant and Castle to the river, excluding the London and Blackfriars roads and Nelson-square. It includes the suburban districts, in addition to those already mentioned, of Beckenham, Bexley, Charlton, Chislehurst, Deptford, Eltham, Erith, Foots Cray (including St. Mary and St. Paul's Cray), Forest Hill, Greenwich, Blackheath, Lessnessheath, Lewisham, New Cross, Peckham, Penge, Plumstead, Welling, and Woolwich. In London it includes the populous districts of Bermondsey and Rotherhithe, the Commercial Docks, and the large metropolitan borough of Southwark.—The main thoroughfares and arteries, so to speak, of London, are on the N. side of the river, and run E. and W. The principal of these is that long line of street which stretches from Notting-hill continuously to Mile-end and Bow. At the western end it is called the Uxbridge-road, and from Notting-hill to the Marble-arch at Hyde Park consists of private houses and mansions; thence it proceeds almost in a straight line under the name of Oxford-street and Holborn to the foot of Holborn-hill; there it bends southwards to the end of Newgate-street, and along Cheapside to the Poultry; it then continues in a straight line along Cornhill and Leadenhall-street, where it takes a northerly direction along Aldgate and Whitechapel, High-street, and the Mile-end and Bow roads, measuring about 8½ miles in distance from end to end. The main line of road, which for some distance runs nearly parallel to this, lies to the N. of it, and connects Marylebone with the City. This commences with the Grand Junction-road, which intersects part of Bayswater northward to the Edgware-road, which it crosses at right angles, and then continues as the Marylebone-road, the Euston-road, Pentonville-road, and the City-road to Finsbury, where it turns southward and goes by the Pavement and Moorgate-street to the Bank, its eastward continuation branching off about the middle of the City-road and leading along the Old-street-road and the Hackney-road to Victoria-park. The third main thoroughfare of London which runs from W. to E. is that which lies to the S. of the Oxford-street route, with which it joins in the City. It commences at St. James's Palace, and goes along Pall Mall by Cockspur-street to Charing-cross. Thence it proceeds along the Strand and Fleet-street, and up Ludgate-hill to St. Paul's-churchyard. Here it divides itself into two great thoroughfares; of these the northern leads into the Oxford-street route at the western end of Cheapside, while the southern runs along Cannon-street into King William-street, and thus affords a more direct communication with London-bridge. Besides these thoroughfares, however, there is another between the Oxford-street and the Strand route which leads from the Hammersmith road along the Kensington-road to Kensington-gore and Knightsbridge. Thence it proceeds along Piccadilly to the Regent-circus, from which Regent-street runs northward, and crossing Oxford-street, leads by Portland-place to the Marylebone-road and the neighbourhood of the Regent's-park. The main thoroughfares running N. and S., and thus at several points connecting at right angles the eastern and western routes already described, are, commencing from the W. and on the N. side of the river, first, the Edgware-road, leading from Kilburn through Maida-hill to Oxford-street, which it joins at Tyburn, nearly opposite to the Marble-arch entrance to Hyde-park. Next proceeding eastward, comes the road leading from Hampstead along Haverstock-hill to the end of High-street, Camden-town, where it unites with the Highgate and Kentish-town and the Camden roads, both of which branch off in an easterly direction. From their junction at their southern end they form a long line of street called High-street, Camden-town, the Hampstead-road, and Tottenham-Court-road, the latter named portion connecting the Euston-road with Oxford-street. The next important thoroughfare runs from the Camden-road to the junction of the Euston and Pentonville roads at King's-cross, and is known as the King's-road, and St. Pancras-road; from King's-cross it runs as Gray's-Inn-lane into Holborn. The next main thoroughfare also runs into Holborn from the Pentonville-road, and commencing as the Bagnigge-Wells-road it passes through part of Clerkenwell, and is continued as Farringdon-road to the foot of Holborn and Snow hills, whence it runs as Farringdon-street and New Bridge-street down to the river at Blackfriars Bridge. Next come the long lines of roads which in old times formed the route for the northern coach communication. The first of these leads from Holloway and Islington, and is known as the Liverpool-road till it joins High-street, Islington, at the union of which with the City-road stands the once celebrated tavern of the "Angel." Then it divides itself into two thoroughfares, the western of which, as St. John-street-road and St. John-street, runs through Smithfield to the union of Skinner-street and Newgate-street; while the eastern, as the Goswell-road, Goswell-street, and Aldersgate-street, runs into St. Martin's-le-Grand at the E. end of Newgate-street. This may be said to be one of the busiest sites of London, as here stand the General Post Office, St. Paul's Cathedral, Newgate Market, and the extensive offices and warehouses of Cannon-street and Cheapside, so that the traffic into and out of the City makes the vicinity a scene of constant bustle and animation, whilst the crowd and confusion which frequently prevail render it a source of much danger and alarm to passengers of a nervous temperament. The next great thoroughfare is Moorgate-street, which runs from the City-road to the Bank, and next to that comes the long line which connects Kingsland and Dalston with the City. It passes as the Kingsland-road by Ball's Pond, De Beauvoir Town, and part of Hoxton, till it meets the Old-street and Hackney roads, which it crosses, and then proceeds as Shoreditch, Norton Folgate, and Bishopsgate-street; thence, after crossing Cornhill at its junction with Leadenhall-street, it continues as Gracechurch-street to Fish-street-hill and Thames-street, which it joins close to the foot of London-bridge. From Bishopsgate-street Houndsditch and the Minories lead across Aldgate High-street to the back of the Tower; and Commercial-street, and Leman-street, Goodman's-fields, connect Shoreditch and Whitechapel with the neighbourhood of the Royal Mint and of the St. Katharine's and London docks. The last main line to the E. is that which connects Homerton and Clapton and Hackney with London. It commences as Church-street from the corner of Dalston-lane and the Lower Clapton-road, and then continues as Mare-street through Cambridge-heath and the Cambridge-road. Here it crosses the Hackney-road and the Bethnal Green-road, and runs down to the junction of the Whitechapel and the Mile-end-roads. On the S. side of the river the main thoroughfares lead from the bridges to the various suburban districts which lie in Kent and Surrey. The principal of these runs from London Bridge along Wellington-street, and High-street, in the Borough of Southwark, to the corner of Blackman-street, where it divides itself into two branches. Of these the eastern goes along Great Dover-street, by the Old Kent-road, into the New Cross-road, while the westerly runs along Newington Causeway to the "Elephant and Castle." Here it again branches off into two main routes; that to the E. leading along the Walworth and Camberwell roads, while that to the W. runs through Newington Butts along the Kennington-road to Clapham. Proceeding up the river the next bridge is Southwark. From this the Southwark Bridge-road runs into the main road just described in the Newington Causeway. The next is the Blackfriars-road, which runs from the bridge of that name due S. to St. George's-circus, where it runs in a south-easterly direction into the main road at the "Elephant and Castle," and towards the W. as the Lambeth-road, past Bethlehem Hospital, to Lambeth-bridge. The next main line, which also runs into St. George's-circus, is the Waterloo-road, leading from Waterloo Bridge, and next to that come Bridge-street and Mount-street, leading from Westminster Bridge to the Westminster-road on the E., and the Vauxhall or Kennington-road on the S. This latter road, after passing through Lambeth, joins the main line from London Bridge at Kennington-park, from which a road branches in an easterly direction to Brixton and Tulse Hill. From Vauxhall Bridge New Bridge-street also leads, by the way of Upper Kennington-lane into the Kennington-road, at the junction of which with the Clapham-road, and close by Kennington Park, stands one of the few turnpikes now remaining on the London roads. From this point a long line of road runs through Camberwell, Peckham, and Hatcham in an easterly direction till it joins the main route from London Bridge at the union of the Old Kent and New Cross roads. The Victoria and Battersea Bridge roads lead from the Chelsea and Battersea bridges, Battersea Park lying between them, and communicate with the Wandsworth, Clapham, and other roads leading to the south-western suburbs. Along all these various routes are private houses or shops and warehouses, and almost each particular quarter of the metropolis has its own peculiar characteristics. Thus the neighbourhood of Hyde Park and Kensington Gardens at the West End, as well as those about Grosvenor-square, Mayfair, Piccadilly, Belgravia, and the rapidly-increasing South Kensington estate, are the favourite places of abode of the most wealthy and aristocratic classes; while those who occupy the social grade next in rank occupy residences about Bayswater, Brompton, Chelsea, the Regent's Park, Portland-place, Portman, Cavendish, Russell, and Tavistock squares, Camden Town, and such situations in mid-London as were some few years ago fashionable, but have of late been given up by the highest portions of the community, who have migrated, and still are migrating, further westward. The principal shops frequented by the better classes are to be found in Oxford-street,

Regent-street, Bond-street, Piccadilly, St. James's-street, and their more immediate vicinities, and during the "London season," which is at its height during the months of May, June, and July, these thoroughfares are thronged with the carriages of the nobility and gentry making their purchases, while innumerable hired vehicles and pedestrians swell the crowd of those who are following their various pursuits of business or pleasure. The Strand also possesses a long line of shops, which is continued along Cheapside and Cornhill, and here also a vast amount of business is transacted, and a never-ending stream of traffic flows through them at all hours of the day. There are two Arcades in London (a small one in New Oxford-street being scarcely worthy of mention), called the Burlington and the Lowther. The former runs from Burlington Gardens at the southern end of Bond-street, into Piccadilly, and consists of shops of modistes and sellers of various articles of ornament or use suitable for the upper classes of society; while the latter, which leads from the back of the church of St. Martin's-in-the-Fields into the West Strand, more resembles a bazaar, and is composed almost entirely of shops in which are displayed a great variety of toys, cheap jewellery, fancy wares, and articles adapted for less wealthy and aristocratic purchasers. The governmental portion of the metropolis lies in and about Westminster, where are the houses of parliament and all the more important public offices connected with the political ordering of the state. The City is occupied by the monetary and commercial classes, and contains the Bank of England, the Royal and Stock Exchanges, and the innumerable banks, exchanges, warehouses, offices, and various places of business where transactions of enormous magnitude take place daily, and thousands upon thousands of merchants, traders, and every branch of the commercial community are busy, not only in adding to their own resources, but in developing and extending the independent position which England maintains among foreign nations. Further eastward also a considerable quantity of business is transacted, and vast numbers of the lower orders earn their living by all sorts of trades and occupations carried on by communities living literally by the sweat of their brow, and in localities where the wealthier and more refined classes seldom or never penetrate. The legal quarters are principally near the Temple, Lincoln's Inn, Bedford-row, Gray's Inn, and Chancery-lane; the medical in or near Saville-row, Burlington Gardens. In Spitalfields and Bethnal Green the silk and velvet weavers are located, being to a great extent descendants of French families who sought a refuge in this country after the edict of Nantes. Watchmakers and manufacturing jewellers abound in Clerkenwell; and sugar-bakers in Whitechapel. The tanners and skin-dressers are principally located in Bermondsey; the potters and glass-makers in Lambeth; the carriage-builders in and about Long Acre; the toy-makers at Hoxton; the shipwrights, anchor and boiler makers, riggers, and iron-founders in Blackwall, Poplar, Millwall, and the Isle of Dogs. The lower classes of the Jewish population live principally about Whitechapel and the Minories; the fashionable tailors, army accoutrement makers, and court-milliners and dressmakers about Regent-street, Bond-street, St. James's-street, and Hanover-square; the publishers in the streets and lanes about Paternoster-row; the principal gazette and newspaper offices are in the Strand and Fleet-street, and the chief newspaper agents in Catherine-street, Strand. The costermongers are chiefly in Whitechapel and Bethnal Green, the New Cut, Lambeth, and Somers Town; and there are numerous other classes who seem to congregate chiefly in one particular quarter or another—whole colonies, so to speak, of the same crafts or profession being generally found to establish themselves in certain portions of the metropolis. Of course such a motley collection of various grades, professions, and trades, and the numerous exigencies of so vast a metropolis, require separate government and management. Accordingly each of them is under some kind of jurisdiction which regulates their proceedings with a view to the good of the public. Thus in all matters relating to the trade of London the chief authority rests with the lord mayor and the public companies whose "halls" or places of meeting are in the City. The lord mayor, who is elected annually, is the chief magistrate of the City. He has allotted to him, as his official residence, the "Mansion House," which is a large building at the S.E. end of the Poultry, and near the Bank of England. Here he gives his state banquets to the members of the corporation, and to persons of eminence in political or social circles, and, in fact, to all those whose public or private position entitles them to partake of the hospitality which it is part of the lord mayor's duty to provide. For all this he receives a salary of about £6,500 per annum, but as the expenses of the office are reckoned at about £15,000 it is evident that the chief city officer must be always a man of considerable wealth. The City companies spring from one collective trading company or guild, which in course of time became divided according to the respective occupations of its members, and obtained charters to prevent those who did not belong to them from competing with them in the City precincts. The place of meeting of these companies or guilds was the Guildhall, which stands at the foot of King-street, and was built in 1411, since which it has been greatly improved and enlarged. Here the ordinary business of the corporation is transacted, legal trials take place, various public meetings are held, banquets are given, hustings erected at election times, and it has also a large and valuable library attached to it. The guilds themselves, or companies as they are now styled, are at the present time corporate charitable institutions, using the large funds which have accrued to them for teaching and apprenticing the sons and daughters of their more necessitous brethren, rather than associations for limiting and restricting the tradesmen of the City. There are in all 81 companies, and of these the following 12 are styled the "Great Livery Companies:"—the Mercers', Grocers', Drapers', Fishmongers', Goldsmiths', Skinners', Merchant Taylors', Haberdashers', Salters', Ironmongers', Vintners', and Clothworkers'. To some of these, as in the case of the Merchant Taylors' and the Fishmongers', persons of the highest rank and station belong, and in all of them there are many individuals of great wealth and influence, from whom are chosen the aldermen representing the various wards into which the City is divided.—The local government of the City is vested in the lord mayor and corporation, the latter body consisting of the aldermen, members of the court of common council, and the court of common hall. There are various officers attached to these courts, as the common-serjeant, the City remembrancer, the sword-bearer, the City chamberlain, and others, all of whom receive liberal salaries, and take part in the procession called the "Lord Mayor's Show," which takes place on the 9th November annually. The city revenues are derived from real property, tolls, and duties levied on coals, fruit, the stamping of weights, rents arising from markets, and various other sources, which render it excessively wealthy, its total annual receipts amounting to nearly £600,000. Its expenses, however, are very heavy, as it maintains a separate police force, several valuable schools and charities, and pays a large sum annually for improvements and general purposes in various parts of the metropolis, outside the precincts of the City. The City of London returns four members to parliament, and its representatives are invariably chosen from among those who, from their mercantile or commercial position, are best able to advance its interests, or who, from their distinction in the political world, confer alike an honour and a benefit upon the electors. The borough of Southwark (which comprehends 5 parishes) is also under the jurisdiction of the lord mayor, who is empowered to govern it by his deputy, or high bailiff. It returns two members to parliament, has its own county court and police court, and its population consists almost entirely of shopkeepers, merchants, and manufacturers. The principal officers of Westminster are a high steward, who is usually a nobleman, and a high bailiff, who is chosen by the high steward; and these two are appointed for life. There are also other bailiffs and burgesses, one of the latter being elected for the City, and the other for the liberties. There are four principal courts—viz. that of the duchy of Lancaster, that of the quarter sessions of the peace, the St. Martin's-le-Grand, and the court-leet held by the dean or his deputy for removing nuisances, choosing the parish officers, &c. Westminster has its own coroner, police, and county courts, besides various other independent institutions, and it returns two members to parliament. Besides the members who sit for the City of London, Westminster, and Southwark, there are also two returned for Marylebone, two for Finsbury, two for the Tower Hamlets, and two for Lambeth. The lords-lieutenant of the Tower Hamlets, Middlesex, Kent, and Surrey exercise jurisdiction within certain parts of the metropolis; and 23 of the largest parishes, exclusive of the City, have vestries to manage their local affairs. Of the smaller parishes, 69 are massed into and managed by 15 district boards, besides which the Charterhouse, Westminster Close, and the Inns of Court are united in one group. Certain members, elected by these parishes, vestries, and districts form the Metropolitan Board of Works, which was first established in 1855 to act as a central local government for the whole metropolis, and has its offices in Spring Gardens. It consists of 45 members, of whom 9 form a quorum, and its duties are to see that all new buildings comply with the provisions of the Building Act, to superintend the drainage and sewer works, preserve in repair the public streets and thoroughfares, and name them; to test gas and weights and measures, to purify the river, to appoint medical officers of health, to remove nuisances and obstructions, and to exercise various other functions for the public good, under the control of the home secretary. Their powers are very large, and the annual sum raised by them for the local management and main drainage works of the metropolis amount to nearly £100,000. The City and metropolitan police are each under their own chief commissioner, and number nearly 7,000 men, costing together about £500,000 per annum; the criminal population averaging about 14,000 within the sphere of action of the London police—i.e. in a radius of 15 miles from the General Post Office. The principal prisons are Newgate, which stands on the site of the ancient City gatehouse, and the Surrey county gaol, in Horsemonger-lane, and it is at these two only that public executions take place. The other prisons are the House of Correction, in Coldbath Fields, Clerkenwell; the Middlesex House of Detention, in St. James's Walk, Clerkenwell; the Westminster House of Correction; the City House of Correction, at Holloway; the Surrey House of Correction, on Wandsworth Common; the Model Prison, at Pentonville, and Millbank Penitentiary. Besides these there are prisons at Brixton and Fulham, and reformatory schools in various parts of the metropolis, where offenders of both sexes are sent after committment, in order to be taught some trade which may fit them to become useful members of society. The principal of these are—that which was, in 1788, established in St. George's Fields, near the "Elephant and Castle" tavern, but is now removed to Redhill, in Surrey; the Home, at Bow; and the Roman Catholic Reformatory at Brook Green. Besides these there are the Boys' Home, in the Euston-road; the Girls' Refuge, at Hampstead; the Lisson Grove Training Refuge, and many other similar institutions, supported either wholly or in part by the voluntary contributions of the public, and some of them rendered partially self-supporting by the sale of the articles manufactured by their inmates.—The establishments which come under the head of metropolitan charitable institutions for the maintenance and education of those who have not been convicted of any crime, but are from various causes incapable of supporting themselves, and yet are not fit objects for parochial relief, are so numerous that it would be impossible to state them all in detail here. Suffice it to say that it has been calculated that the annual income of these establishments, arising from gifts and contributions, is upwards of a million and a half; and this, added to the funds already possessed by them arising from bequests, makes a grand total of two and a half millions. This money is divided among nearly 650 institutions, which may be classified as general hospitals, hospitals and institutions for special medical purposes, dispensaries, institutions for the preservation of life, health, and morals, penitentiaries and reformatories, refuges under the names of "homes," asylums, colleges, and almshouses, relief institutions and dispensaries, soup-kitchens, a foundling hospital, lying-in charities, orphan homes, educational establishments, and many other similar institutions, founded and maintained for the express purpose of alleviating the sufferings and supplying the wants of the poorer classes of the community. Among the several hospitals may be mentioned Charing Cross; Guy's, in Southwark; the German, at Dalston; the Great Northern, in York-road, King's-cross; the Homœopathic, in Great Ormond-street, and one for sick children, in the same street; King's College, at the angle of Carey-street and Portugal-street, Lincoln's Inn Fields; the London, in Whitechapel; the Middlesex, in Berners-street, Oxford-street; the Royal Free, in Gray's-Inn-road; St. Bartholomew's, in Smithfield; St. George's, at Hyde Park Corner; St. Mary's, in Cambridge-place, Paddington; St. Thomas's, on the S. bank of the Thames, close to Westminster Bridge; University College, in Upper Gower-street; the Westminster, in the Broad Sanctuary, and the Victoria Park. Besides these many hospitals have been founded for particular objects, such as lying-in hospitals, hospitals for the cure of cancer, consumption, fever, ophthalmia, &c., and one for the reception of the incurable and the convalescent. There are also several noble asylums and benevolent institutions, such as the London and Infant Orphan, the Blind, the Deaf and Dumb, the Philanthropic Institution, the Governesses Benevolent, the Female Aid Society, the Royal Benevolent Society, the Mendicity, and many others, as well as almshouses, schools, and various institutions founded and supported by charitable individuals for the comfort both of the souls and bodies of those who have been less prosperous than themselves, and designed for the alleviation of every ill "that flesh is heir to." Some of the most important and distinguished of the scholastic establishments in London owe their origin to charitable purposes. Thus Westminster School, the proper title of which is St. Peter's College, was founded by Queen Elizabeth in 1560, and subsequent bequests have been made for the purpose of educating poor scholars. It now ranks as one of the public schools of England. Besides the foundation scholars, others are now admitted by payment, and the school possesses 37 scholarships, or exhibitions. St. Paul's school was founded by Dean Colet in 1512, and is placed under the superintendence of the Mercers' Company. Here also boys are admitted besides those who are on the foundation, and it has sent up many eminent scholars to the universities. Christ's Hospital, in Newgate-street, was founded in 1553, upon the site of the Grey Friars' monastery, by Edward VI., for poor fatherless children and foundlings. Presentations are in the hands of the governors, whose turn comes round once in three years, except in the case of the lord mayor, who has two presentations annually, and the court of aldermen one each. The revenues of this school are very extensive, and several ancient customs are still maintained there. The scholars in the head class are styled "Grecians," and the second "Deputy-Grecians." A branch school was established at Hertford in 1683, and here the junior pupils are first sent, and girls are educated as well as boys. The Charter House, in Aldersgate-street, consists of a hospital and a schoolhouse. It was originally a Carthusian convent, and, in 1611, it was endowed by Thomas Sutton for 80 old men, who are called "pensioners," or "poor brethren," and there are 44 scholars on the foundation, nominated by the governors. The Merchant Taylors' School, in Suffolk-lane, Cannon-street, maintained by the company of that name, is also a celebrated educational establishment; as also are the City of London School, in Milk-street, University College School, King's College School, and a great many proprietary schools, such as the Islington, and others. At South Kensington is the principal training-school of art for male and female students, and district schools of art are established at Finsbury, Hampstead, Lambeth, St. Martin's, St. Thomas Charterhouse, and elsewhere. These and several schools of design are under the superintendence of the Science and Art Department of the government; and, as the fees are low and the instruction excellent, they afford great facilities and advantages to a very large number of students. Besides these, there are in every part of London schools, colleges, and educational class-rooms for all religious denominations, several of them liberally endowed, and containing vast quantities of pupils. The largest is the Jews' Free School, in Bell-lane, Spitalfields, where upwards of 2,000 children of both sexes are educated annually, and many of them placed in situations which enable them to earn their own living. At the Foundling Hospital is also a school where the children are taught to sing, and its chapel, where they take a part in the service, is crowded by those who admire the fine sacred music which is performed there every Sunday morning and afternoon. The principal learned societies are the Royal, the meetings of which are held at Burlington House; the Society of Antiquaries, at Somerset House; the Royal Geographical, in Whitehall-place; the Royal Institution, in Albemarle-street (where most interesting scientific lectures are periodically given); the Royal Society of Literature, in St. Martin's-place; the Numismatic, in Gate-street, Lincoln's Inn; the Royal Academy, in Trafalgar-square; the Institution of Civil Engineers, in Great George-street, Westminster; the Medical Society, in George-street, Hanover-square; the National Association for the Promotion of Social Science, in Waterloo-place; the Royal Agricultural, Horticultural, and Botanic societies; the Archæological Institution, the British Archæological Association, the Royal Asiatic Society, the Society of Arts, the Institute of British Architects, and several others, which number among their members many of the most distinguished men of the day in literature, science, and art. They are supported by the subscriptions of their members and by donations, and hold meetings periodically in London or elsewhere for the pursuit and investigation of the objects which they have severally in view. The principal museums are the British, in Great Russell-street; Sir John Soane's, in Lincoln's Inn Fields; the South Kensington; the Architectural, in Cannon-row, Westminster; the Royal Asiatic, in New Burlington-street; the College of Surgeons, in Lincoln's Inn Fields; the East Indian, at Fife House, Whitehall; the Geological, in Piccadilly; and the United Service Institution, in Whitehall Yard. Of these the British and the South Kensington are the most frequented, and have a world-wide reputation. The former contains an invaluable collection of MSS., printed books, antiquities, prints and drawings, natural history and botanical specimens, each occupying special rooms and departments. There is also a noble public reading-room, for which orders are obtained on application to the principal librarian, who has the management of the whole establishment, under a board of trustees. The museum is open to the public inspection on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays from 10 till 4 during the winter, and 10 till 5 and 6 during the spring and summer months; and also during the four summer months, on Saturdays, from 12 till 6, and catalogues of its varied contents and a description of the reading-room can be obtained in the great hall at a low price. The South Kensington Museum consists of the two great divisions of science and art. The science comprises the educational museum, the food and animal productions, and the museum of materials used in construction, and the museum of patents. The art collections consist of paintings, sculptures, glass and metal work, and an immense variety of ornamental and useful objects, which it would be impossible to specify. The museum is open every day of the week; but on Wednesdays, Thursdays, and Fridays a sixpenny admission-fee is charged. On the N. side of Trafalgar-square stands the National Gallery of Paintings. Here are collected some of the finest specimens of English, Spanish, Dutch, French, Italian, and Flemish schools. It contains about 250 pictures by ancient masters, and splendid examples of Reynolds, Wilkie, Gainsborough, West, Hogarth, Turner, Sir Thomas Lawrence, and others. It is open to the public on Mondays, Tuesdays, Wednesdays, and Saturdays in the summer, from 10 to 6 o'clock; and in the winter from 10 till 4. Joining the National Gallery at its E. end is the Royal Academy of Arts. The members of this body are forty Royal Academicians (who enjoy the privilege of writing R.A. after their names), twenty Associates (A.R.A.), six associate engravers, a president, and a secretary. Every year an exhibition of the works of living artists is held at their gallery, between May and July, to which the entrance-fee is one shilling by day, and sixpence in the evening. By this and by the sale of the catalogue it has been calculated that nearly £70,000 per annum has been raised. The works exhibited consist of paintings in oil and water colours and sculpture, all of them having been executed to order, or being placed there by their respective artists with a view to their being purchased. The National Portrait Gallery is at present in temporary rooms at 29, Great George-street, Westminster. It is open on Wednesday and Saturday from 12 till 4, by tickets procurable at certain picture and engraving shops. The South Kensington Museum, already noticed, also contains a very valuable collection of pictures, especially those known as the Sheepshanks collection; as does also the Dulwich Gallery, which is open every day in the week except Friday and Saturday, from 10 to 5; and the galleries at Hampton Court and Windsor. Besides these, several public exhibitions of paintings at the galleries of the Societies of Painters in Water Colours, of the Female Artists, of the National Institute, and others, take place periodically during the season in the neighbourhood of Piccadilly and Pall Mall. All of these attract numerous visitors, as do the works of individual painters who have attained celebrity. The charge for admission to these exhibitions is almost always one shilling, and they are open from about 10 a.m. to 5 or 6 p.m. The same remarks will apply to the various large pictures and panoramas which are exhibited in Leicester-square and occasionally elsewhere, as at the Colosseum, in the Regent's Park, and the Egyptian Hall, in Piccadilly. These and all the sights of London are always well patronised during the season by various classes of visitors, each of them being generally suited to the tastes of the inhabitants of those neighbourhoods nearest to which they are placed. Besides these repositories of art and exhibitions there is also one, and one only, which boasts of, perhaps, as many or more visitors than any of them, viz. Madame Tussaud's, in Baker-street. This consists of life-sized figures of court and other notables, modelled in wax and dressed in their proper habiliments for grand state processions, weddings, pageants, and all sorts of ceremonies; while statesmen, poets, authors, in a word, celebrities of all kinds, are represented in a most natural and amusing manner. A room also is devoted to notorious criminals, and a call at Madame Tussaud's is generally considered a sine qud non by all strangers in the metropolis. Not very far from this, in the Regent's Park, are the Gardens of the Zoological Society, which is also a favourite place of resort; as are also those of the Botanic Society, in the same park; the latter being only open to fellows of the society and their friends upon ordinary days, but to the public generally on certain fête days by payment of a fixed sum. On the E. side of Regent's Park stands the Colosseum, built after the design of the Pantheon at Rome. It contains panoramas, sculpture, Swiss cottages, waterfalls, &c., and is open at intervals on payment of one shilling, but is not numerously attended.

The principal theatres of London are Drury Lane, Covent Garden, and Her Majesty's Theatre. The first of these has its principal entrance in Brydges-street, Strand, and the performers are styled "Her Majesty's Servants." The principal entrance to the second is in Bow-street, and adjoining it is a large iron and glass building called the Floral Hall, in which industrial and other exhibitions are held. The third is on the W. side of the Haymarket; and this theatre and Covent Garden are devoted, during the season, to the performance of Italian operas, and are frequented by all the élite of the aristocracy. Besides these there are the Haymarket Theatre, nearly opposite Her Majesty's; the Adelphi and the Strand Theatres, in the Strand; the Lyceum, in Wellington-street, Strand; the Princess's, in Oxford-street; Astley's, in Bridge-road, Westminster; the Prince of Wales's, in Tottenham-street, Tottenham-Court-road; the Marylebone, in New Church-street, Lisson-grove; the Grecian, in the City-road; the Olympic, in Wych-street, Strand; the Pavilion, in Whitechapel-road; the Royalty, in Dean-street, Soho; Sadler's Wells, in St. John's-street-road; the St. James's, in King-street, St. James's; the Standard, in High-street, Shoreditch; the Surrey, in the Blackfriars-road; the Victoria, in Waterloo-road; the City of London, in Norton Folgate; the Britannia, at Hoxton; and the Alexandra, at Highbury Barn. There are also several music-halls in London, where vocal and instrumental music, acrobatic exhibitions, and ballets take place, and where eating and drinking are allowed during the performances. The principal are the Alhambra in Leicester-square, the Canterbury Hall in the Westminster-road, the Oxford near the junction of Tottenham-Court-road and Oxford-street, the Strand in the Strand, Weston's in Holborn, the Metropolitan in the Edgware-road, and the Philharmonic at Islington. The large hotels, which are now maintained by public companies, are a novel feature in London street architecture. Some of them are quite palatial in their appearance and arrangements, and are constructed so as to administer to the wants and comforts of almost all ranks of society who may be guests there. Of this kind the Charing-cross, before which stands an Eleanor Cross, the Great Western, the Grosvenor, the Victoria, and the Langham-place Hotels, are the finest specimens; while the Great Northern, the Euston, the London Bridge, the Inns of Court, the Salisbury, the Alexandra, the Cannon-street, and the Westminster Palace, are all noble buildings, and are admirably suited for the purpose for which they were designed. There are also innumerable private hotels suited to every grade of society in various parts of the town,—the Clarendon in Bond-street, and Claridge's in Brook-street, Grosvenor-square, being the most exclusive. At these foreign princes and potentates are in the habit of taking up their quarters when in London; but there are many others, such as Morley's in Trafalgar-square, Thomas's in Berkeley-square, Long's in Bond-street, Fenton's and several others in St. James's-street and the neighbourhood, which are patronised by the nobility and gentry; while to the eastward, Radley's in Bridge-street, Blackfriars, the Old and New Hummums, and others in Covent-garden, the Gray's Inn in Holborn, the Cathedral in St. Paul's Churchyard, the Freemasons' Tavern in Great Queen-street, Holborn, and others of a similar grade, are frequented by those whose business calls them to the metropolis, and whose wants and means are both more moderate than those of the classes who can afford a sojourn at the superior kinds of hotels. Every kind of accommodation, in fact, can be found for families and individuals, from the highest to the lowest, in every quarter of London; and a reference to the various newspapers, railway guides, and handbooks of London which are now so numerous, will afford information as to their respective situations. The principal rooms for holding large public assemblies are at Exeter Hall, in the Strand, where oratorios and concerts are also given; and Willis's Rooms, in King-street, St. James's. In the Hanover-square Rooms concerts, bazaars, and fancy fairs are held; as are also sometimes, but more rarely, public meetings. At St. James's Hall, in Regent-street and Piccadilly, public meetings and entertainments of all kinds take place; and there is a large restaurant and dining establishment, which is well attended. There is also a large dining-hall, called the Wellington, at the N.W. corner of St. James's-street, and others, such as the London, at the S.E. corner of Chancery-lane, the Cremorne, in Prince's-street, Leicester-square, with several smaller ones in various parts of London, suited to all classes of the community. Large public and charity dinners generally take place either at the Freemasons' Tavern, the Albion in Aldersgate-street, or the London Tavern in Bishopsgate-street. The public gardens which are most frequented by the respectable classes of the community are those of Cremorne. They are accessible by steamboats or omnibuses, and the amusements consist of a concert, a pyrotechnic display, dancing, and various exhibitions. They are open during the summer months from about 3 o'clock P.M., and by a refreshment ticket on Sundays also. As dinners and all sorts of entertainments are provided there, they are a favourite resort, especially during the evening. Next to them is Ashburnham Hall, which is sometimes thrown open to the public upon the occasion of dog-shows, &c., being held there by the proprietors of Cremorne Gardens. There are also public gardens at Kentish Town, Rosherville, North Woolwich, and Anerley, which attract a considerable number of visitors, principally of the lower order of the tradesman and artizan classes. Shows of dogs, horses, &c., are held at intervals at the Agricultural Hall at Islington, where also concerts and various entertainments are given. Here also the grand annual prize cattle show takes place at Christmas, and the hall, which is capable of holding several thousands of persons, is thronged with those who come to the show from motives either of business or pleasure.—The clubs are almost all situated in the neighbourhood of Pall Mall and St. James's-street. Some of them are very handsome buildings, and are most luxuriously fitted up. Membership is obtained by ballot, either among the committee or the general body, and the entrance fee varies from 10 to 30 guineas, with an annual subscription of from about 5 to 7 guineas. Several of the principal clubs are composed of gentlemen belonging to some particular profession, devoted to some special pursuit, eminent in politics, art, or literature, or belonging to some society distinguished from the general mass of the community. Of this kind are the United Service and the Guards in Pall Mall, the Army and Navy in St. James's-square, the Junior United Service in Charles-street, St. James's, and the Volunteer Service in St. James's-street, the members of which are all either military or naval men. The Civil Service in St. James's-street, by its name, indicates the position of its members, as also do the United University in Pall Mall, E., the Oxford and Cambridge in Pall Mall, the New University in St. James's-street, the Public Schools' Club in St. James's-place, the Alpine, the Royal London and the Royal Thames Yacht Clubs, and several others. The clubs devoted to literature and the arts are the Athenæum in Pall Mall, the Junior Athenæum in King-street, St. James's, the Garrick in King-street, Covent-garden, the Arts in Hanover-square, and the Arundel in Salisbury-street, Strand. The political clubs are the Reform and the Carlton in Pall Mall, the Conservative, Boodle's, Brooks's, and White's in St. James's-street, and the Junior Carlton, in Regent-street. The members of the East India United Service Club in St. James's-square, and of the Oriental in Hanover-square, are men who have served in various capacities in the East; and the Travellers' in Pall Mall consists of those who have made the tour of Europe, and been in the Indies, or made any long and important journeys or voyages elsewhere. The chief clubs at which no particular qualifications are required, are Arthur's, the Cocoa-Tree, and the St. James's, in St. James's-street, the Union in Trafalgar-square, the Windham in St. James's-square, the National in Whitehall-gardens, the Arlington in the street of that name, the Portland in Stratford-place, Oxford-street, the Whitehall Club, the Westminster in Albemarle-street, and Prince's in Hans-place. This last, besides the usual accommodation of ordinary clubs, has excellent tennis and racket courts, where the University and other important matches are played. There are also some few clubs where the members are not provided with dining accommodation (the chief of them being the Cavendish in Regent-street); and some where there is no election by ballot, but admission is at once obtained by payment of a certain annual sum. Of these the largest is the Whittington in Arundel-street, Strand; and besides being a club, it has class and entertainment rooms, in which lectures, balls, and concerts are given by the managers, and to which, and to certain rooms of the club, ladies have the right of entrée. In the city there are the Gresham in Gresham-place, King William-street, and the City of London in Old Broad-street, the members being, with but very few exceptions, men who are engaged in business in the city. Besides these are various social clubs, such as "Our Club," the "Cosmopolitan," &c., which are chiefly composed of authors, actors, artists, and gentlemen connected with the press, whose avocations keep them up late, and who meet in the evening for the purpose of social conversation on points connected with their respective callings.—The residences of the nobility and gentry are almost entirely in the W. and N.W. districts. They are very numerous and splendid, but those which are most remarkable are Stafford House, the town residence of the Duke of Sutherland, in Stable-yard, St. James's; and close to it Bridgewater House, the mansion of the Earl of Ellesmere. In this latter there is one of the noblest collections of pictures in England. There are also some very fine pictures and works of art in Apsley House, the residence of the Duke of Wellington, at Hyde Park Corner, and at Baron Rothschild's which adjoins it. Devonshire House in Piccadilly, Chesterfield House in South Audley-street, Lansdowne House in Berkeley-square, Dorchester House in Park-lane, Montague House in Whitehall-gardens (the residence of the Duke of Buccleuch), Mr. Hope's house in Piccadilly, Grosvenor House, the residence of the Marquis of Westminster, in Upper Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square, are all magnificent mansions, abounding with the most celebrated and costly works of art, and in the last named there are four pictures by Rubens which cost £10,000, and the Claudes are unequalled by those in any other collection in the world. The three royal palaces of London are those of Buckingham, St. James's, and Kensington. The first of these stands at the W. end of St. James's Park. It is a stone building with gates in front, and has cost nearly a million of money. On the eastern and northern sides are the queen's apartments, and the principal rooms in the building are, the throne room, in which addresses are received, the green drawing-room, the banqueting room, the state ball room, and the grand saloon. During the absence of the royal family the palace may be seen by an order from the Lord Chamberlain. There are fine stables and a riding house attached to it, and in the gardens stands a pavilion adorned with paintings by celebrated modern artists. St. James's Palace is at the foot of St. James's-street. It was originally a leper hospital, but in 1532 Henry VIII., who purchased the land around it, built a mansion, and laid out some pleasure-grounds there. It is now a rambling, irregular pile of building of brick and stone mixed, having its principal entrance under a lofty gate-house, on which there is a clock, into a quadrangle with a piazza on the W. side. In this piazza is the entrance into the chapel royal, and the principal staircase leads to the state apartments, which are situated on the side next to the park. In these the "state drawing rooms" and "levees" are held, and in the Colour Court the band of the Guards plays daily at 11 o'clock. In the Stable-yard are the residences of the Duchess of Cambridge and several members of the aristocracy, as well as the houses of persons officially connected with the court. Kensington Palace, on the W. side of Kensington-gardens, is not now a royal residence, but is inhabited by various persons who are allowed by the crown to live there. It is a red brick building containing a suite of state apartments, and having a fine orangery attached to it. Marlborough House, the residence of the Prince of Wales, is separated from St. James's Palace by an entrance into the park, and derives its name from having belonged to the celebrated Duke of Marlborough, who died there. Opposite to it stands the gallery of the British Institution, where an exhibition of pictures by old masters takes place during the season, and on the same side of the way the street consists entirely of shops, whereas on the other, or S. side, it is composed of club-houses, and the block of buildings in which the business of the War office is carried on. Overlooking St. James's Park, at the S. end of Waterloo-place, are Carlton-terrace and Carlton-gardens, which are rows of stately mansions inhabited by ambassadors, ministers of state, and members of the aristocracy. Here at the top of a flight of steps leading into the park, and having the Athenæum Club on the right, and the United Service Club on the left, stands the Duke of York's column. It was built in 1833 by public subscription in honour of Frederic, the second son of George III., is 122 feet high, and is surmounted by a bronze figure of the duke. Visitors are allowed to ascend it on payment of 6*d*., and the view from the top is well worth seeing. Another column stands in Trafalgar-square, in honour of Admiral Lord Nelson. It is a fluted Corinthian column upon a pedestal ornamented with bas-reliefs illustrative of the victories of St. Vincent, the Nile, Copenhagen, and Trafalgar. The platform or terrace on which it stands is to be adorned with figures of lions couchant, after models by Sir Edwin Landseer, R.A. The entire height of the column, including the bronze capital, and the statue of Lord Nelson by which it is surmounted, is 145 feet. The only other column in London is the monument on Fish-street-hill. It is a fluted Doric column, 202 feet high, and was finished from designs by Sir C. Wren in 1677, at a cost of £13,700. On the W. side of the pedestal is an emblematical sculpture in relief, representing the destruction of the City, and Charles II. giving orders for its restoration, and the top is surmounted by a gilt urn from which issue flames; inside is a staircase of 345 steps, and at the top an iron balcony, which, in consequence of six persons having thrown themselves from the top, is now caged over. The public are allowed upon payment to ascend it, and very many persons avail themselves of the permission, as a very extensive and interesting view is obtained from it of the metropolis and its environs. The royal statues in London are, those of Edward VI. in bronze in the court of old St. Thomas's Hospital, in Southwark, and another in Christ's Hospital; an equestrian one of Charles I., at Charing-cross; one of Charles II. in the quadrangle at Chelsea Hospital, and another in Soho-square; one of James II. behind the Chapel Royal, Whitehall; an equestrian statue of William III. in St. James's-square; one of Queen Anne in Queen-square, Westminster, and another before St. Paul's Cathedral; an equestrian statue of George III. in Pall Mall East, and the same monarch, with Father Thames, in the quadrangle of Somerset House; an equestrian statue of George IV. in Trafalgar-square; of William IV. in King William-street, London Bridge; and of Queen Victoria in the area of the Royal Exchange. In Old Palace-yard, near the peers' entrance to the House of Lords, is a statue, of a highly imaginative kind, of Richard Cœur de Lion. It was in the Exhibition of 1851, and was purchased by subscription and a parliamentary grant as a memorial of that event. Besides these, there are the following statues of public characters:—the Duke of Cumberland, the victor of Culloden, an equestrian statue, in Cavendish-square; the Duke of Kent, the father of Queen Victoria, in Park-crescent, at the top of Portland-place; the Duke of Wellington, two equestrian statues, one on the top of the arch at Hyde Park Corner, and another in front of the Royal Exchange, of John Duke of Bedford in Russell-square, of William Pitt in Hanover-square, of George Fox in Bloomsbury-square, of George Canning in the square opposite the Houses of Parliament, of General Havelock and Sir Charles Napier in Trafalgar-square, of Sir Robert Peel at the W. end of Cheapside, of Dr. Jenner, the discoverer of vaccination, in Kensington-gardens; of Captain Coram, the founder of the Foundling Hospital, in front of that institution; and one of Sir Hugh Myddelton near Islington-green; and in addition to these, those of Hampden, Selden, Walpole, Falkland, Clarendon, Somers, Mansfield, Fox, Lord Chatham, Pitt, Grattan, and Burke, in St. Stephen's Hall, in the Palace of Westminster; and one of Achilles (so called) in Hyde Park, made of the metal of French cannon taken at Salamanca, Vittoria, Toulouse, and Waterloo. It represents a naked warrior 18 feet high, and its cost was defrayed by subscriptions raised by the women of England. Besides these there are the following public memorials in commemoration of celebrated individuals and events:—the Albert Memorial in Hyde-park, on the site of the Exhibition of 1851, which, when completed, will be a magnificently designed and executed Eleanor cross; the Crimean pillar, a column in the mediæval style, 62 feet in height, to commemorate the death of officers who fell in the Russian war, stands in front of Dean's-yard, Westminster; and the Guards' memorial monument, to the memory of the officers and soldiers of that distinguished corps who were killed in the same eventful struggle, stands at the end of Waterloo-place, at its junction with Pall Mall.—The buildings devoted to the management and transaction of government affairs lie almost entirely in Westminster, between Charing-cross and the palace of Westminster. Thus, going S. from Charing-cross, and proceeding down Whitehall, we have, on the right, the Admiralty, and next to it the Horse Guards. Here the commander-in-chief has his offices, and an archway beneath a clock-tower leads into St. James's Park. Only royal personages and those who have special permission are allowed to ride or drive under this archway, which, however, is open to all classes of pedestrians, and behind it is a large parade ground, where colours are sometimes presented to regiments, and military inspections are held, and on which stand two pieces of ordnance, one a Turkish gun, taken at Alexandria in 1801, and the other a howitzer, or mortar, taken at the siege of Cadiz, in 1810. Next to the Horse Guards, are the Home Office, the offices of the Board of Trade, the Treasury, and the Privy Council office, the whole presenting a handsome frontage in the Italian style of architecture, and extending as far as the corner of Downing-street. In this latter street are situated the official residence of the First Lord of the Treasury, and those of the other great ministers of state, and a vast range of various official buildings overlooking St. James's Park at the rear. At the end of Parliament-street, across the road leading to Westminster Bridge, are the Houses of Parliament, or "the Palace of Westminster," as they are sometimes called. The first stone of this noble pile of buildings was laid in April, 1840, the old Houses of Parliament having been burnt down in 1834. The granite embankment on which the river frontage of it stands is 886 feet in length, and the whole stands on a bed of concrete 12 feet thick. To the E. it has a frontage of about 1,000 feet, and the whole of it occupies an area of about 9 acres. At the S.W. extremity is the Victoria tower, 346 feet in height, through which is the sovereign's state entrance into the House of Peers. At the N. end of the river front is the Speaker's residence, at the S. that of the Usher of the Black Rod, and between these are the libraries and committee rooms. The House of Peers and the House of Commons are situated behind these, and the central hall, which lies between the two houses, is reached through St. Stephen's Hall and porch, which communicates by flights of steps with Westminster Hall. The architect is Sir Charles Barry, and it can be seen on Wednesdays and Saturdays by orders obtained at the Lord Chamberlain's office. The clock tower contains the largest bell in England. The original bell was cast at Houghton-le-Spring, and was called "Big Ben," after Sir B. Hall (Lord Llanover), chief commissioner of works when it was put up. In consequence of a crack it was re-cast by Mears, of Whitechapel. It still retains its sobriquet, and weighs 15 tons 18½ cwt., is 9 feet 5½ inches in diameter, 7 feet 10½ inches in height, and cost £3,343 14*s.* 9*d.* The whole of the interior of the Palace of Westminster is decorated, and adorned with pictures, frescoes, and statues. Westminster Hall, founded by William Rufus, was rebuilt by Richard II., and the magnificent chestnut wood roof, and the stone frieze below the windows are adorned with devices of that monarch. The hall itself is 270 feet long by 74 feet broad and about 90 feet high, and royal banquets and coronation feasts were held in it for many successive reigns. Courts of justice were also assembled here in very early times, at which the king himself presided, and the stone bench on which he sat, and from which the term "Court of King's Bench" is derived, is said still to be buried under the pavement at the upper end of the hall. The courts of Chancery, Common Pleas, and Exchequer, are also held here; but all legal business will soon cease here and be transferred to those law courts on the S. side of Lincoln's Inn Fields, which are to form part of that noble pile of building which is to be designated the "Palace of Justice." Westminster Hall has also been used as a court for several trials of great public importance, as for those of the Earl of Strafford, the Duchess of Kingston, Warren Hastings, Lord Melville, Lord Cardigan, Queen Caroline, and several others. Many parliaments have also been held in it, but its principal use now is to serve as a great public entrance to the whole palace, of which it now forms a part. The cloisters and crypt of St. Stephen's chapel, adjoining the hall, have not been destroyed; and the latter, which has been restored and decorated, is open to public inspection. At the N. corner of Victoria-street, which leads from the Broad Sanctuary, Westminster, to the Grosvenor Hotel, the London, Chatham, and Dover railway terminus, and the quarter of Belgravia, stands the Westminster Palace Hotel. Here the Government occupy rooms in which the business of the India office is transacted. The Inland Revenue office is at Somerset House; the Public Record or State Paper office, in Fetter-lane, Holborn; the Duchy of Cornwall office, at Buckingham-gate, St. James's Park; the Duchy of Lancaster office, in Lancaster-street, Strand; the Herald's College, or College of Arms, at Bennett's-hill, St. Paul's; the Lord High Chamberlain's office, in the royal court at the Palace of Westminster; Queen Anne's Bounty office, in Dean's-yard, Westminster; and almost all the other public offices connected with government are in and about Whitehall.—London has two cathedral churches, St. Paul's and Westminster Abbey. The former, which is the fifth church that has been built on the site, was commenced by Sir C. Wren in 1675, and took thirty-five years in building, the last stone having been placed on the lantern by the architect's son in 1710. The exterior of the building is of two orders, the lower part being Corinthian, the upper of a mixed kind of architecture. In the W. front are two porticoes, one above the other, the upper one consisting of ten coupled columns, supporting an entablature and pediment filled in with a bas-relief representing the Conversion of St. Paul, and the under one having twelve coupled columns. The magnificent cupola rises from the body of the church, and the dome itself stands on an Attic order, which is flanked by a balustrade. The whole is surmounted by a gilt cross and ball, the former being 30 feet high, the latter, which is capable of containing eight persons, measuring 6 feet 2 inches in diameter, and weighing 5,600 lbs. The elevation of the cross from the floor of the basement is 365 feet, and the circumference of the whole edifice is 2,292 feet, or only 343 feet less than half a mile. The interior of the dome (which is supported by eight piers, each of 40 feet width at the base) was painted by Sir James Thornhill, and in the choir is some very fine wood-carving by Grinling Gibbons. The length of the building within is 500 feet, and its breadth at the entrance 100 feet, while its superficial area is 84,025 feet. It contains many fine monuments to celebrated persons, such as John Howard, Dr. Johnson, Lord Nelson, Captain Cook, Marquis Cornwallis, Sir John Moore, Earl Howe, Sir Ralph Abercromby, and many others, and the tombs of Wren, Turner, Sir Thomas Lawrence, West, Fuseli, Reynolds, Nelson, Collingwood, Picton, the Duke of Wellington, and various eminent characters who have deserved well of their country. There is also a grand library, a geometrical staircase, a model room, a whispering gallery, and two outside galleries. These, as well as the crypt, the vaults, the clock-room, and the interior of the ball and cross, are open to the inspection of visitors upon the payment of fees amounting in all to 3*s.* 2*d.* There are daily services at 8 and 9·45 a.m., and 3·15 p.m., and at certain periods during the year Sunday evening service is performed under the great dome at 7 o'clock; and as the preacher is always some celebrity, great crowds are attracted. Here also the festivals of "the sons of the clergy" and of the united metropolitan charity schools are held annually, and at the latter the children perform selections of sacred music. On each of these occasions the cathedral is crowded, and presents a very wonderful and beautiful appearance. Westminster Abbey was founded about 615 by Sebert, King of the East Saxons. After him Edward the Confessor built a church there in honour of St. Peter, but only a very little of his work is left. Henry III. and his son, Edward I., built the eastern portion of the church as far as the first column in the nave, beyond the entrance to the choir, and carried the cloisters each as far as his respective work extended. Various abbots then continued the church, beginning with Abbot Langham, in 1350. During the reigns of Edward II. and III. the works were stopped, but they were resumed under Richard II., and continued down to Henry VII.'s time, when the nave, aisles, and cloisters were finished, and the W. window put in by Abbot Esteney. The western towers were commenced by Islip, who built Henry VII.'s chapel, but were left unfinished till Sir Christopher Wren completed them. The abbey is in the form of a Latin cross, in the pointed style of architecture, and its exterior length from E. to W., exclusive of Henry VII.'s chapel (which is 115 feet), is 416 feet, including the walls. Its interior length to the piers of Henry VII.'s chapel is 383 feet, and its breadth at the transept 203 feet. The height of the W. tower to the top of the pinnacles is 225 feet. It lies open to the street on three sides, but the S., where the public are admitted, is much blocked up by houses. Upon entering, the visitor passes through "Poets' Corner," thus called from its being dedicated to the memory of poets and those shining lights of literature and art whose works have shed a halo of glory round the land of their birth or adoption. Chaucer, Spenser, Shakspeare, Ben Jonson, Milton, Dryden, Campbell, Gay, Handel, Addison, Garrick, and Macaulay, have memorials here, and there is a beautiful monument to John Duke of Argyll. The view of the interior from the W. entrance is remarkably grand, as also are those from very many other points of the building. The choir is wainscoted, and before the altar-piece is a very fine specimen of Mosaic pavement. Behind the choir is the chapel and shrine of Edward the Confessor, and near them the coronation chairs, in the oldest of which is the celebrated "Scone stone," or the stone which Edward I. brought from Scotland, and is said to have been the stone upon which Jacob slept in the Holy Land. Round the chapel are tombs of various kings and queens, and in different parts of the church many fine busts and monuments. The most magnificent of the chapels is that of Henry VII., which is said to have cost a sum equal to about £200,000 of our present money. The gates are of brass, and the walls covered with sunk panels and mouldings. In the niches are statues, angels with escutcheons, and Tudor roses and fleurs-de-lis, and crowns. The Knights of the Bath are installed in this chapel, and their plates are placed in the stalls. There are also several saints' chapels in the church, and the great chamber in the abbot's house is that which is now known as the Jerusalem chamber. Besides these magnificent structures, there are several churches which are remarkable for the beauty of their architecture and their internal decoration, or the interest attaching to them. Of these the principal are, the chapels royal of St. James's and Whitehall, the Temple church, and All Saints', in Margaret-street, Cavendish-square. There are 156 parish churches in London, and so many district churches and chapels that it would be needless to enumerate them all. Those which principally attract the eye are—St. Saviour's, Southwark; St. Magnus the Martyr, Thames-street; St. Dunstan's-in-the-East, St. Dunstan's-hill; St. Mary Woolnoth, Lombard-street; St. Stephen's, Walbrook; St. Mary-le-Bow, Cheapside; All Hallows, Bread-street; Christ Church, Newgate-street; St. Sepulchre's, Skinner-street; St. Andrew's, Holborn-hill; St. Bride's, Fleet-street; St. Dunstan's-in-the-West, Fleet-street; St. Clement Danes, and St. Mary-le-Strand, Strand; St. Paul's, Covent-garden; St. Martin's-in-the-Fields, St. Martin's-lane; St. James's, Piccadilly; St. Margaret's, Westminster; St. John the Evangelist, Milbank; St. Mary's, Lambeth-walk; St. Philip's, Regent-street; St. George's, Hanover-square, at which the London marriages of the aristocracy are usually celebrated; All Souls', Langham-place; St. Marylebone and Trinity, New-road; Christ Church, Lisson-grove; St. Pancras, Euston-square, New-road; St. George's, Hart-street, Bloomsbury; St. Giles's-in-the-Fields, High-street, Bloomsbury; St. Bartholomew the Great, West Smithfield, which is the oldest of the London churches; and St. Andrew's, Wells-street. Lambeth Palace, the London residence of the Archbishop of Canterbury, stands on the S. bank of the Thames, nearly opposite the Houses of Parliament. The palace of the Bishop of London is at Fulham, and his London official residence in St. James's-square. The principal Roman Catholic place of worship is St. George's "cathedral," in the Westminster Bridge-road. It was built at a cost of upwards of £100,000, and will contain 3,000 people. In Bloomfield-street, Finsbury, stands St. Mary's, Moorfields; and in the Brompton-road is the Church of the Immaculate Heart of Mary, better known as the "Brompton Oratory." There are also Roman Catholic chapels in Warwick-street, Regent-street; Spanish-place, Manchester-square; Sutton-street, Soho-square; Farm-street, Berkeley-square; Westmoreland-place, Bayswater; Duncan-terrace, City-road, and elsewhere; and a magnificently decorated one in Great Ormond-street, Bloomsbury. The best attended Presbyterian churches are those in Crown-court, Drury-lane, and Regent-square. There are others in Halkin-street West, and at Chelsea, Islington, Millwall, and various other parts of the metropolis and the suburbs. There is but one Russo-Greek church in London, and that is in Welbeck-street, Cavendish-square. The Jews have City synagogues in St. James's-place, Aldgate (the great synagogue); St. George's-road, Southwark; Church-row, Fenchurch-street (the Hamboro' synagogue); Bevis Marks; Crosby-square; and Great St. Helen's (the new synagogue); and at the West End in Chichester-place, Harrow-road; Great Portland-street, Oxford-street; Margaret-street, Cavendish-square; St. Alban's-place, Haymarket; and Maiden-lane, Covent Garden. The Catholic Apostolic cathedral in Gordon-square is a fine pile of building; but of all the Dissenting bodies which have separate places of worship, the most remarkable is that of the Baptists, called the "Metropolitan Tabernacle," in Newington High-street, and nearly opposite the Elephant and Castle tavern, which in olden time used to be a famous house of call for stage-coaches on their way in and out of London, but is now best known as a rendezvous for omnibuses, which ply from hence to almost every part of the metropolis. Near this, passing St. George's cathedral, is Bethlehem (or, as it is generally pronounced, "Bedlam") Hospital for lunatics. It covers in its whole extent an area of 14 acres, contains 375 patients, and is supported at an annual expense of upwards of £20,000.—The commissariat of so vast a city as London is supplied by several markets. The great market for live stock, called the "Metropolitan Cattle Market," is situated in the Caledonian-road, Islington. The number of animals for sale averages—of beasts above 5,000, sheep and lambs over 27,000, calves about 500, and pigs between 400 and 500 weekly. The great market for dead stock is Newgate Market, between Newgate-street and Paternoster-row. For fish, Billingsgate Market, in Thames-street, is the great emporium; but it is in contemplation to remove it to the site of the present Farringdon Market, in Farringdon-street. For fruit and flowers Covent-garden is the great mart, the market-days being Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays, and thus alternating with Farringdon Market, where they are Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays. In Leadenhall Market is an excellent supply of all sorts of miscellaneous produce, such as meat, bacon, poultry, vegetables, fish, and most of all, hides; and many live animals, such as fancy fowls and dogs, are bought and sold here. There is also a very good miscellaneous market in Farringdon-street (which, however, is scarcely large enough to serve its purpose), and another in York-street, near St. Saviour's church—this last being called the Borough Market. Besides these, there are the Spitalfields, Cumberland, Newport, and Portman markets; and several for the lower orders, such as Clare Market, which are plentifully supplied with provisions and wares of all sorts suitable to the wants of the poorer classes. Old Smithfield, which used to be so famous as a cattle-market, is now used only for the sale of hay and straw on Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays, but it is intended to erect a meat and poultry market there. The largest of the London breweries is that of Messrs. Truman, Hanbury, Buxton and Co., whose premises in Brick-lane, Spitalfields, cover an area of 8 acres. The principal bazaars are the Soho in Soho-square, the Pantheon in Oxford-street, the London Crystal Palace, near the North Circus, Oxford-street; the "Panklibanon," or Baker-street Bazaar. There are also several large warehouses for the temporary deposit of carriages, furniture, and goods of all kinds, which are placed there by persons leaving London for long or short periods, the chief of them being the "Pantechnicon," near Belgrave-square.—The parks of London are Hyde Park, the Green Park, St. James's Park, the Regent's Park, Battersea Park, and Victoria Park. The first of these lies between the Knightsbridge and Uxbridge roads, and covers an area of about 400 acres. It is ornamentally laid out, and is separated from Kensington Gardens by a low wall and the Serpentine river, which is an artificial piece of water of about 50 acres, formed by Queen Caroline in 1733, is supplied by the Chelsea Waterworks, and is the resort of numerous bathers in the summer mornings, and of crowds of skaters and sliders when it is frozen in the winter. Hyde Park is the most fashionable resort of the higher classes for the purpose of riding, driving, or lounging, and in "Rotten Row," which is thronged during the season with riders, and in the "ring," which is devoted to driving, crowds of splendid equipages may be seen during the season, and not only all the élite of London society, but the best appointed "turns-out," and probably the finest horses in the world. The park has several entrances, both from the N. and S. sides, the principal of them being the "Marble Arch," from Oxford-street, the large gates near Apsley House from Piccadilly, and the Albert Gate at Knightsbridge. The Green Park consists of about 50 acres, lying between Piccadilly and Constitution Hill, which latter is an ascent leading from an arch opposite Hyde Park Gates to the front of Buckingham Palace. St. James's Park lies between the Mall on the N. and the Birdcage-walk on the S. The former was laid out by Charles II. for the purpose of playing at a game so called. This monarch also formed the ornamental water, which is 2,800 feet long by 100 broad. It is crossed by an ornamental suspension-bridge, and the Ornithological Society have placed several foreign and domestic aquatic birds on it. Besides the entrance into the park by Buckingham Gate—the palace itself standing at the W. end of the park—and one under the archway of the Horse-guards, there is a third down the steps of the Duke of York's column, and another by a passage from Spring-gardens. The Regent's Park consists of 450 acres, lying between the New-road and Hampstead. It is nearly circular in form, is laid out in shrubberies and small plantations, and has a sheet of ornamental water. It has an outer and an inner circle, the former being 2 miles in circumference and connected with the latter by a bridge. It has been already said that the gardens of the Botanical, Toxophilite, and Zoological Societies, and the Colosseum, are in this park; and there is also at the residence of a private gentleman an observatory, from which many well-known astronomical discoveries have been made. The Regent's Park contains many terraces, villas, and some large private mansions, and is a favourite resort, especially in the summer evenings, to a somewhat inferior grade to those who frequent Hyde Park. Adjoining it on the N. side is Primrose Hill, which in old times was an isolated spot famous for robberies and duels, but now surrounded with streets, shops, and houses. Battersea Park extends along the S. bank of the Thames from Chelsea suspension-bridge to Battersea. It contains 186 acres, and is planted with flowers and ornamental trees. There are several level patches of turf left for the purposes of cricket and athletic sports; and as there is a refreshment-house, it is a great resort for those who live in those parts of London, and is sought by those who come from the more distant parts for the purposes of pic-nics, &c. Victoria Park lies near Hackney, on the N.W. side of London. It contains nearly 300 acres, and is used chiefly by the inhabitants of Whitechapel, Bethnal-green, and Shoreditch. Immediately adjoining Hyde Park on the W. are Kensington Gardens. They extend over a space of nearly 300 acres, and are planted with trees, and a great variety of ornamental shrubs and flowers. They abound in shady and secluded walks and groves, and the ornamental water-works at the head of the Serpentine, which flows through them, are made to resemble an Italian garden. On the banks of the Serpentine there are flower-beds and terraces adorned with statuary, and the gardens form a favourite resort of the public at all times, but especially on those afternoons when military bands play, and in the skating season.—The Thames between London Bridge and Hammersmith is crossed by 11 bridges, of which the following are the names, ascending the river:—1. London; 2. Southwark; 3. Blackfriars; 4. Waterloo; 5. Charing-cross railway-bridge; 6. Westminster; 7. Lambeth; 8. Vauxhall; 9. Pimlico railway-bridge; 10. Chelsea suspension-bridge; 11. Hammersmith. Besides these 11, there are wooden bridges at Battersea and Putney, and a magnificent iron railway-bridge of the South-Eastern line is in progress from Cannon-street to the S. side of the river. All these highways across the Thames, from London Bridge to Kew, present great varieties in styles, costs, uses, and profits. The bridges free of toll are London, Blackfriars, Westminster, and Southwark Bridge, which belongs to a company. It has been offered to the Corporation for £200,000, but it appears unlikely that the offer will be accepted, and the probability is that the toll system will be resumed on Southwark Bridge. London Bridge was commenced in 1824, and was finished in 1831. The cost was about £620,000. The carriage way admits of four lines of vehicles. It has five arches, the centre one 152 feet, with four side arches, one pair 140 feet, and the other 130 feet span. Southwark Bridge consists of three arches, one of 240 feet, and the others of 210 feet span. The arches are of cast iron, of which 5,308 tons were used in the structure. The bridge and approaches cost about £666,000, the bridge separately about £400,000. Blackfriars Bridge—now (1865) open by a temporary structure, until the new bridge has been completed—is to be erected and maintained, as London Bridge is, from the "Bridge House Estates," an ancient fund held in trust for the maintenance, in the first instance, of London Bridge. The Bridge House Estates consist of lands and buildings in the parishes of St. Olave and St. Saviour, Southwark; at Lewisham, Sydenham, Kent-road, St. George's Fields, Bermondsey, Stratford, Ewell, and other quarters. The estates revenue is about £40,000 per annum, and an additional sum of £21,000 will fall in between now and 1871 on account of terminable annuities, upon which money was advanced by Government for the building of London Bridge. The new bridge at Blackfriars will cost, it is expected, about £300,000. The capital raised for Waterloo Bridge and its approaches exceeded £1,000,000. It is considered one of the most excellent stone bridges in existence. It was erected between the years 1811 and 1817. The bridge is of nine arches, is 1,242 feet long, with 42 feet width between the balustrades. Westminster Bridge was commenced in 1853, and finished in 1862. It is a government work, free to the public. The roadway is wide enough to accommodate six lines of vehicles. It cost about £400,000, and is unique in character from its combination of elegance and strength. The arches are constructed in great part of malleable iron, which gives great bearing power and elasticity, with unusual lightness in design. It is admirably in accord, as was intended, with the style of the Houses of Parliament, so near to it. Lambeth suspension-bridge cost about £50,000. Vauxhall Bridge cost about £296,998. The width of the roadway is 24 feet, total width 36 feet, the length from gate to gate 976 feet 6 inches. It consists of nine arches of cast iron, on stone piers, the acclivity being 1 in 35. The next bridge on the river, apart from the railway viaduct, and the handsomest structure amongst them, is the Chelsea suspension-bridge. It is a toll bridge, and was executed by Government at the moderate cost of about £105,652, exclusive of the embankment works. The old Battersea Bridge is an unsightly object and a dangerous obstruction. The capital of the Fulham or Putney Bridge is £30,000, and the tolls are very high. The bridge was first opened for traffic in 1728. The capital of the Hammersmith Bridge, opened in 1827, is £80,000. Kew Bridge, erected about 100 years ago, was the property of a single individual, whose trustees claim the right to take tolls on the bridge, or its successors, for ever. The probable cost of this bridge was about £20,000. The annual take in tolls is about £2,500, of which £1,000 is contributed by foot passengers at one halfpenny each.—As regards the traffic over the metropolitan bridges, London Bridge gives much the largest returns. For the twenty-four hours ending with midnight on the 23rd of May last, the following was the traffic: — Cabs, 6,127; omnibuses, 3,981; waggons, carts, &c., 2,564; horses, 183; passengers in vehicles, 72,559; on foot, 91,080: total, 163,639. The number of passengers by Southwark Bridge before the tolls were abolished, was, from 8th November, 1863, to 7th May, 1864, 257,616; from 9th November, 1864, to 1st May, 1865, after the bridge was opened free, the foot passengers rose to 2,359,312, with 487,249 vehicles, and 10,975 saddle and other horses. At Blackfriars Bridge, for the twenty-four hours ending at midnight on the 9th June, 1865, the traffic was, cabs, 2,735; omnibuses, 844; waggons, carts, &c., 7,246; other vehicles, 1,414; horses led or ridden, 293; passengers in vehicles, 30,141, on foot, 48,572: total, 78,713. At Waterloo Bridge the total number of foot passengers for the year ending 23rd February, 1865, was 5,111,368. The average daily number of foot passengers by the Charing-cross railway-bridge, at ½*d.* toll, is 5,348. At Westminster Bridge the foot passengers who crossed between 6 A.M. on the 10th, and 6 A.M. on the 11th June last, was 47,062; with 5,110 cabs, 553 omnibuses, 4,990 light traffic vehicles, and 2,466 with heavy traffic. The traffic over Lambeth Bridge is equal to about 1,300,000 persons annually. For Vauxhall Bridge there are no published returns of traffic that we know of. The number of foot passengers over Chelsea suspension-bridge in the year ending March 31, 1864, was 957,294; horses and vehicles, 198,533. A new company has been formed—the Albert Bridge Company—with powers to buy up the Fulham and Battersea bridges, and which puts forward the project of erecting a new iron bridge at lower tolls than those now paid. An opinion prevails that the general interest would be promoted by a bridge rate instead of the toll system. Besides these bridges over the river, there is also a passage under it, viz. the Thames Tunnel, reaching from Wapping-stairs on the N. bank of the river to Rotherhithe on the S. It is 1,200 feet long, and is pierced by two arched passages, each above 16 feet wide, lighted throughout their whole length with gas, and having a footway 3 feet wide. The descent is down a staircase, formed in large circular shafts, and the charge for passing through it used to be 1*d.* either by day or night. It is, however, for the future to serve as a tunnel for the railway which is to run from Rotherhithe to the N. side of the river, so as to form a line of communication between the populous districts which lie at the E. end of London.—The river Thames, to which London owes its importance, is one of the busiest and most wonderful of its great highways. Its crowds of shipping and ceaseless activity render it an object of constant amazement both to natives and foreigners, and it is almost a trite remark to observe, that there is no port in the world that can compare for the extent and variety of its commerce with the port of London. "Above bridge," as that portion of the river is termed which lies above London Bridge, small steamers are constantly plying between the various piers at Hungerford, Blackfriars, the Temple, and London Bridge; and the embankment which is now being made along the north bank of the river from Westminster Bridge to Blackfriars will, when completed, not only aid in improving the navigation, but will be a magnificent embellishment by adding a noble line of terrace frontage to the river, and securing a fine and healthy promenade by its side, while at the same time it will aid effectually in facilitating the system of drainage which is now being carried on for its purification. Below bridge, the river, following its course downwards, is divided into the Upper, Middle, and Lower pools. These extend for 4 miles, and constitute what is properly termed the Port of London. They reach from London Bridge to Deptford, and are covered with tiers of shipping from four to five hundred yards in breadth. Then comes Limehouse Reach, then Greenwich and Blackwall reaches; next Long Reach, then Gravesend Reach, and then the Nore Light. In going down the river the principal objects on the Middlesex or left-hand shore, are Billingsgate Market, the Coal Exchange, the Custom House, the Tower, St. Katharine's docks, and the London docks; whilst on the Surrey side are St. Olave's church, and an extensive range of wharves, in which an immense variety of merchandise is stored, representing an enormous amount of capital and enterprise. In the Lower pool we have on the Middlesex side the eastern entrance to the London docks, and the Regent's canal and basin, and on the Surrey side the Grand Surrey docks and canal, and the Commercial docks. In Limehouse Reach, on the Middlesex side are the South Dock canal, the Isle of Dogs, and vast steam-engine, anchor, and iron cable factories; while on the Surrey side are the Commercial Dock pier, the East Country dock, the Greenland dock, and Deptford Dockyard. In Greenwich Reach, on the Middlesex side, are East Ferry, and several large and important ship-building establishments and warehouses; and on the other or Kentish side is the town of Greenwich, of which the hospital extends along the river front. This institution is for disabled seamen, and 2,720 pensioners partake of its bounties. It has a famous painted hall by Sir James Thornhill, a chapel, &c., which are worthy of a visit, being open gratis on Mondays and Fridays, and for a fee of 3*d.* on other days. Greenwich Observatory is on a hill in the park behind the hospital, and from hence the longitude is reckoned in all British calculations; and the true time of day is kept and communicated by telegraph wires to certain stations in London. Off Greenwich pier is moored the Caledonia, an old wooden line-of-battle ship, which is now fitted up as a hospital ship for sick seamen of all nations. It is supported by voluntary subscriptions. Further down in Blackwall Reach we have on the left bank the West India Docks and Brunswick pier, the latter leading to those celebrated taverns where Londoners are so fond, during the whitebait season, of taking their fish dinners. Then the Blackwall railway, the East India Docks and masthouse, and the Victoria Docks; while the opposite bank consists of a large extent of flat, damp land called the Greenwich and Bugsby's marshes. In Long Reach, on the left, are the North Woolwich Gardens, hotel, and pier, Barking and Dagenham, and Purfleet and the Government powder magazines; while on the opposite bank are Charlton, Woolwich, with its dockyard, arsenal, &c., Erith, and Dartford Marshes, and lower down Greenhithe, Northfleet, and Rosherville, and Gravesend, with Tilbury Fort on the opposite side. The docks which have been mentioned are all of them remarkable works of engineering science, and their extent such as to astonish the visitor. As an example the London Docks may be cited, which has several docks each communicating with the other, and the nearest or western of which is 20 acres in extent. The "tobacco dock" is surrounded by warehouses covering 4 acres, and 24,000 hogsheads of tobacco can be stowed there, while beneath are vaulted cellars capable of holding 70,000 pipes of wine and spirits. The eastern dock occupies 7 acres, and about 2,500 vessels are cleared in the London docks in the course of the year, representing freight and cargoes of nearly 500,000 tons. The docks are managed by a board of 25 directors, and employ a capital of £4,000,000 sterling. The extent of vaultage covers an underground area of 890,545 feet, and it is said that the walls which surround the docks on the land side alone have cost nearly £70,000. The corporation of the Trinity House has the jurisdiction of the river Thames, and possesses very extensive powers in matters connected with its navigation, such as erecting lighthouses, the placing of buoys and sea marks, examining masters of ships, appointing pilots, removing obstructions to the navigation, &c. The corporation consists of a master, 4 wardens, 8 assistants, and 18 elder brethren, and the Trinity House itself is a handsome stone building in Trinity-square, on Great Tower-hill, not far from the Tower, the Custom House, and the Royal Mint. The former of these is a very extensive fortress, having four turrets, and presenting within the appearance of a regular town, as it comprises inside the walls an area of upwards of 12 acres. It has several streets besides barracks for the garrison stationed there. The chief entrance is by a stone bridge over a ditch on the W. side. On the river side is a gate opening into a cut which leads to the ditch or moat by which the Tower is surrounded. This gate is known as the "Traitors' Gate," from the circumstance that through it state prisoners were brought to and from their trials at Westminster. The principal objects to be seen are various armouries and the crown jewels, which are said to be worth about £3,000,000 sterling. The Tower is open daily to the public by tickets to be obtained at the gate. The warders or "beefeaters" (boufetiers, or attendants at the boufet), a body of men dressed in quaint costume, are in readiness to show visitors over at the fee of 6*d*. each to the armouries, and 6*d*. to the crown jewels. The Custom House is a plain but extensive and convenient pile of buildings immediately below Billingsgate-market. The principal, or "long room," is 190 feet by 60, and about 55 feet high in the centre. The business of the Custom House at London is of course enormous, and a large staff of officials is kept constantly employed. The customs are under the control of nine commissioners acting under the Lords of the Treasury, and they have jurisdiction over all the ports of England and Wales. The Mint is on Little Tower-hill. It is a massive and extensive building with ponderous entrance gates. It is fitted with engines and apparatus of great power, accuracy, and ingenuity for the various purposes of coining the current money of the realm, the production of which in 10 years has been 52,696,355 sovereigns; 12,692,316 half-sovereigns; 14,380,157 florins; 24,154,339 shillings; 20,200,444 sixpences; 782,661 groats; 18,359,110 threepences; 133,445,760 pence; and 152,686,237 halfpence. Permission to view it can only be obtained from the chief officer, who is styled the "Master of the Mint."—Returning westward from the place which is the manufactory of money, by the Minories, Leadenhall-street, past Bishopsgate-street, and so into Cornhill, the passenger soon arrives in the neighbourhood of its principal market, the Stock Exchange, the Royal Exchange, and the Bank of England. The first of these has entrances from Hercules-passage, Shorter's-court, New-court, and Capel-court. It is a large room with a cupola in the middle, and is fitted with tables and benches for the accommodation of the brokers and jobbers and their clerks, who alone have the right of entrée there. Any non-member who should venture inside is liable not only to be insulted, but to be grossly maltreated, a fact which contrasts badly with the courteousness which is observed to strangers in other societies in the modern day. The affairs of the Stock Exchange are managed by a committee of 24 members annually elected by ballot. The Royal Exchange is a truncated triangular building, about 310 feet long from E. to W., by about 175 feet at the E. and 120 at the W. end, and surmounted by a tower 177 feet in height. The quadrangle is 170 feet long by 112 wide. It was opened by the queen in 1844, and has in the centre of the quadrangle a statue of her Majesty by Lough. All round the quadrangle is an arcade or covered walk, in which merchants transact their business, and denominated the "merchants' walks." The roof and sides of this arcade are adorned with frescoes, and on the walls are exhibited placards advertising the sailing of ships, sales by auction, various shops, &c. On the E. and N. sides of the Exchange upstairs is the vast shipping establishment known as "Lloyds." It consists of three principal rooms, one of which is open to the public and has an excellent refreshment bar, and the others reserved for the use of subscribers. The entrance is by a vestibule 35 feet square opening on the S. into the subscription, or "underwriters" room, and on the W. side into the public, or "commercial" room. The former of these apartments is 100 feet by 48; the latter 92 feet by 40 in its widest part, and 30 feet high. Beyond the subscription room is the reading room and library, 40 feet by 25, and lighted by a lantern. The E. front of the Royal Exchange has in the centre four Corinthian columns from which the tower springs, and on the top of the tower is the famous old copper-gilt grasshopper vane 11 feet long, which escaped injury from the fire which burnt down the old Exchange in 1838. Also in the tower are a clock and a peal of 15 bells. The main portico is at the W. end, mounted on 13 granite steps and supported by columns, and in the tympanum of the pediment is an allegorical piece of sculpture in relief representing commerce. There are two inscriptions on the frieze, one recording the foundation of the original building, 13th Elizabeth, and its restoration, 7th Victoria; the other the words, "The earth is the Lord's, and the fulness thereof." The S. side of the building is principally occupied by the London Assurance Corporation. The building is under the management of the Gresham Committee, Sir Thomas Gresham having been the founder of the original Elizabethan building, and the establisher of the college in Basinghall-street which still goes by his name, and where the Gresham Lectures are delivered by seven professors, upon the subjects of divinity, astronomy, music, geometry, Roman law, physic, and rhetoric. Gresham's statue, which was also saved from the fire of 1838, is now deposited in this college. The Coal Exchange is a building in the Italian style of architecture, and has two principal fronts, of which one is in Lower Thames-street, the other in St. Maryat-hill. Above the portico is a tower, with a staircase inside, leading to the rooms and offices on the several stories. The principal hall for the merchants is a rotunda 60 feet in diameter, covered by a glazed dome, the height from the floor to the apex of the dome being 74 feet. In the basement on the E. side, are the remains of a Roman bath. The merchants' hall has three projecting galleries, and the floor is laid so as to resemble the face of a mariner's compass, with the city shield, &c., in the centre. The Corn Exchange is in Mark-lane. The building exhibits an application of the Doric style of architecture, and the large door has wreaths of corn-ears in the frieze, and there are lions' heads in the cornice, while the podium is surmounted by a sculptured representation of the royal arms, grouped with agricultural implements. The great mart for groceries and colonial produce is in Mincing-lane, while the Baltic Coffee-house is the chief resort of the Russian merchants, having a large room for the trade-sales of tallow, hides, hemp, and other Baltic produce; and the Jamaica Coffee-house in St. Michael's Alley, the Jerusalem, and East India Coffee-house in Cowper's-court, are much frequented for purposes of business by those who deal in the stocks, shares, manufactures, or natural products of the countries indicated by the above names. There is a large hide and leather market in Weston-street, Southwark; and at Garraway's Coffee-house, in Change-alley, and the Auction Mart in Token House Yard there are sale-rooms where auctions of landed property, houses, reversionary interests, securities, advowsons, and the like, are constantly disposed of by public sale. There are also several auction-rooms in King-street, Covent-garden, Oxford-street, Holborn, and elsewhere, where jewelry, musical instruments, wearing apparel, furniture, and all kinds of miscellaneous property are constantly sold; while literary property is usually disposed of in Wellington-street, Strand, Bond-street, and Leicester-square. At Tattersall's, the celebrated sporting establishment at Knightsbridge, which is under the direct patronage and support of the Jockey Club, there are always on sale many valuable horses; and periodical sales take place, at which the studs of noblemen and gentlemen who are or have been celebrated patrons of the turf or the hunting-field, are disposed of; and some of the finest animals in the world frequently leave these stables to become the property of foreigners, who send over agents to bid high prices for the pick of our English horses in order to improve their own breeds. There is also another large establishment for the sale by auction of horses of inferior kinds, and of carriages and vehicles of all descriptions, at Aldridge's, in St. Martin's-lane.—The Bank of England occupies an area of 8 acres between Lothbury and Threadneedle-street on the N. and S., and Bartholomew-lane and Princes-street on the E. and W. It was originally founded by William Patterson, a Scotchman, in 1691, and received its charter of incorporation in 1694. Up to 1736 its business was carried on at Grocers' Hall in the Poultry, when it was transferred to its present site. The architect first employed was Mr. G. Sampson. In 1766-86 several additions and alterations were made by Sir Robert Taylor; and in 1788 Sir John Soane, upon being appointed architect, still further enlarged the building, and attempted the difficult task of making the various parts harmonise with each other. This, however, he found impracticable; and although he carried out his plan as far as possible, yet the long, low structure of the Bank of England still presents great incongruities of style, and although various portions of it when taken singly are worthy of much admiration, yet, as a whole, its architecture is of a very heterogeneous nature, and bears decided testimony to its having been commenced, carried on, and finished, from very different designs. The business of the bank is conducted by a governor, a deputy-governor, and a board of twenty-four directors, who hold their meetings in an apartment called the "Bank Parlour," where they settle the rate of discount, declare the dividend on their stock, and transact all the various matters connected with their office. The number of clerks, messengers, and porters employed is over 1,000, and the salaries paid them amount to above £220,000 per annum. The principal offices are the bullion office, the public drawing office, the pay office, the transfer rooms, the five-pound note office, the post bill office, the power of attorney office, the telling room, and the rotunda. Through this last is a public thoroughfare, and it presents an extraordinary scene at dividend time, as here the money is paid in exchange for the dividend warrants; and it is crowded for several days with persons thronging to the counter to receive their change. The principal entrance is in Threadneedle-street, and inside the walls are a garden, with a fountain, and an excellent library and reading-room, for the use of those who are employed on the establishment. There are several mechanical curiosities worth seeing in the bank, such as a clock with sixteen faces, over the drawing office, so placed that a face is seen in each of sixteen different offices; a machine in the weighing office for testing light sovereigns; the method of printing the bank notes; and the arrangement and resources of the bullion department. For these special orders are necessary from persons officially connected with the establishment, but the public offices are open to general inspection on every day except holidays between the hours of nine and three. In the immediate neighbourhood of the Bank are all the principal life, fire, shipping, and other insurance offices, as also the private and joint stock banks, the stock and share brokers' offices, and all the various places of business in which the large daily monetary, mercantile, and commercial transactions not only of London, but of a great portion of the world, are settled and carried on. Lombard-street, lying to the S. of the Bank, and leading from Cornhill to Fenchurch-street, and so called from the Langobard or Lombard merchants, who established themselves as early as the reign of Edward II., consists almost entirely of the banking houses of several of the best known and richest firms of London bankers, and from this circumstance it is said to be the wealthiest street in Europe.—The General Post-Office stands at the S.E. corner of St. Martin's-le-Grand. It is a handsome building in the Ionic style of architecture, and was erected in 1829. It is 390 feet in length by 130 in width, and 64 in height. It has a lofty portico, up an ascent of a few steps, which forms the entrance into the great hall. This is 80 feet in length, about 53 feet high in the centre, and extends entirely across the building, having its back entrance in Foster-lane, in which Goldsmiths' Hall is situated. Here is a large court-yard, where the mail carts, vans, &c., are received and despatched upon going to or returning from their respective destinations. The great hall contains the boxes and offices for posting letters, books, newspapers, patterns, &c.; and much hurry and excitement prevail there every day, but especially on Saturdays, as the hour approaches when the evening mails are being made up, and between 5·30 and 7·30, up to which time the late letters and newspapers may be posted. The management and patronage of the Post-office are in the hands of the postmaster-general, who is always ex officio a minister of state. He is assisted by a secretary, upon whom all the internal arrangements devolve, and to whom the public are indebted for originating such improvements as may from time to time take place in the postal system. It has been calculated that upwards of 6,000,000,000 letters pass through the General Post-Office annually, of which London takes and sends considerably more than a fourth, and, besides these, about 75,000,000 gazettes and newspapers, and 12,000,000 of parcels of magazines and books. The operations of the Post-office are now largely increased by the money-order and government savings-banks departments which have been added to it, and the business of the former office, as connected with the General Post-Office, is so large that it employs a separate building for the purpose. This is on the opposite side of St. Martin's-le-Grand, a little farther to the N., and next to the French Protestant church. There are branch offices to the General Post-Office in Lombard-street and at Charing-cross, and district offices in the following postal divisions, viz. the West Central, at 126, High Holborn; the Northern, in Essex-road, Islington; the North-Eastern, in Church-street, Bethnal-green; the Eastern, in Commercial-road, East; the South-Eastern, at 170, High-street, Borough; the Southern, at 17, York-place, Lambeth; the South-Western, at Buckingham-gate; the Western, at 3, Vere-street, Oxford-street; and the North-Western, in Eversholt-street, Camden Town. Besides these, there are an immense quantity of receiving-houses, and pillar-boxes placed in the streets and at the various railway stations. All the information relative to the General Post-office, in connection not only with the metropolitan districts, but with the whole world, will be found in the British Postal Guide, a quarterly publication, costing one shilling, and issued under the direct official sanction of the Post-office authorities.—The Guildhall is at the end of King-street, Cheapside. It was originally built between 1411 and 1431, previous to which the corporation met, and the civil courts were held, in Aldermanbury, a street running northward from Gresham-street to London Wall. The executors of the celebrated Richard Whittington, who was lord mayor for the third time in 1419, paved the hall with Purbeck stone, and in 1501 the famous kitchen was added. The roof and various parts of the building were very seriously damaged by the Great Fire, but restorations were made by Sir C. Wren, again by Dance in 1789, when the Gothic front was finished, and ultimately by Bunning, the late city architect, who effected great improvements, more especially in regard to the crypt. The southern porch was erected temp. Henry VI. The great hall is about 158 feet in length by 48 in breadth, and 60 in height. The side walls are divided by clusters of circular columns, and the E. and W. windows are of stained glass. Beneath the former are statues of Edward VI., Queen Elizabeth, and Charles I., and at the same end of the hall is a raised platform hustings. The colossal painted wooden figures of Gog and Magog, the two celebrated city giants, stand on pedestals on either side of the W. window, and there are several monuments to illustrious persons, such as Lord Chatham, William Pitt, Nelson, Wellington, Beckford, and others, by celebrated sculptors. Beneath the eastern portion of the hall is the crypt, 75 feet in length, 45 in breadth, and 12 feet 6 inches in height from the pavement to the crown of the arches, being the finest specimen of a crypt in London. In the various rooms and courts attached to the hall, such as the chamberlain's court, the upper court, the court of common council, and the committee rooms, are several fine portraits of civic dignitaries, and pictures commemorative of public events, and there is also a reading-room and a library, which was founded by the corporation in 1824. Since then a museum has been added, so that the Guildhall now possesses a very valuable collection of about 22,000 volumes, maps, autographs, and MSS. of various kinds, besides a regularly arranged series of antiquities—a great portion of them discovered in excavating for the foundations of the Royal Exchange—and many curiosities, such as seals, coins, medals, &c., which are well worthy of examination.—On the S. side of Cheapside, not far from the end of King-street, but more to the W., stands the church of St. Mary-le-Bow, or "Bow church," as it is more commonly called. Its steeple is 200 feet high, and is surmounted by a gilt dragon-shaped vane. It was built by Wren after the Great Fire, and has a fine Norman crypt, a projecting clock, and a celebrated peal of bells. These are the bells which Whittington is said to have heard when he sat on Highgate stone, and all who are born within their sound are said to be thorough-bred "Cockneys." The derivation of this word has given rise to a considerable degree of controversy. By some its origin is said to be accoquiner, "to become lazy," by others the Greek word οἰκόγενης (oikogenes), "born or bred at home." Some, again, derive it from coquina, "a kitchen;" others from to cocker, an old word signifying to "fondle," or "indulge;" others from cock, the bird so called, in allusion to the fondness of the ancient Londoners for the sport of cocking, or cock-fighting, or from the fact of fowls and peacocks having been favourite delicacies at city feasts; while some contend that it comes from the Italian Cuccagna, a popular Neapolitan festival, at which feasting of all sorts takes place, and hence that the "land of Cockaigne," the "King of Cockenaye," and similar expressions, as used by the old writers, refer to London as a city abounding in all sorts of idleness and luxury. However this may be, it is certain that the word "Cockney," which was originally applied only to those who lived or were born "in the sound of Bow bells," was afterwards given indiscriminately to all the inhabitants of London, but has now, except in remote country places, fallen almost altogether into disuse.—The "Inns of Court" are places inhabited by members of the legal profession. The principal of them are, the Temple (consisting of the Inner and Middle Temple), Lincoln's Inn, and Gray's Inn. They each of them have their own libraries and halls, in the former of which lectures are given, and in the latter a fixed number of dinners are eaten by certain of the students in order that they may keep the proper number of terms required of those who are to be called to the bar. This "eating of terms" used to be a sine quâ non; but there are now other means—such as attending a certain number of lectures, &c.—of being "called." The "benchers," a body of barristers selected from the members of the inn on account of their professional standing or eminence, also dine in the hall at a "high table," and by them all matters connected with the management of the inn are conducted. The benchers of the Inner and Middle Temple have the privilege of granting orders of admission to the Temple church; and the Temple gardens, which reach down to the Thames, afford a healthful and pleasant promenade for the members of the two inns and their friends. The gardens are carefully planted and kept, and the chrysanthemum shows which take place there periodically are numerously and fashionably attended. There is also a garden at Gray's Inn which is open to the public, but it is chiefly the resort during the summer evenings of children and nursemaids, who flock to it from the populous districts of Bloomsbury to which it is adjacent. The other inns of court are, Serjeants' Inn, Barnard's Inn, Clement's Inn, Clifford's Inn, Furnival's Inn, Lyon's Inn, Staple's Inn, and Thavies' Inn. These are all situated in the neighbourhood of Holborn and the Strand, but as they do not make calls to the bar, they are not used for legal purposes, but are let out, with the exception of Serjeants' Inn, in sets of chambers to any respectable tenant who may choose to reside there. The Incorporated Law Society is a large building in Chancery-lane. It contains a hall, a library, a club room, a lecture room, a fire-proof room for depositing deeds, offices for consultations, and rooms for arbitrations, committees, and various other professional purposes. It is much used by attorneys and solicitors both as a club and also for meetings of a professional nature.—The Heralds' College, on Bennett's-hill, Doctors' Commons, has jurisdiction in all matters connected with grants of arms, drawing up pedigrees, patents of nobility, &c. It consists of three kings called respectively Garter, Clarencieux, and Norroy; six heralds, viz. Lancaster, Somerset, Richmond, Windsor, York, and Chester; and four pursuivants, viz. Rouge Croix, Blue Mantle, Portcullis, and Rouge Dragon. This college possesses some valuable relics and many very curious portraits, rolls, heraldic MSS., and family records. In Doctors' Commons, besides the Heralds' College, are the Admiralty Registrar's Office and the Will Office, in the last-named of which the wills of deceased persons are registered and deposited. They can be inspected by any one upon the payment of the fee of 1*s.*, but no copies or extracts are allowed to be made without special permission and the payment of an extra fee. The Public Record Office is a handsome building in the late Gothic or Tudoresque style, standing between the rear of the Rolls' Court, in Chancery-lane, and Fetter-lane. It faces northward, and will form one side of the new street which is to be continued eastward from Carey-street to Cheapside. It contains historical documents and archives of inestimable value, and these are all allowed to be used and consulted in a room provided for the purpose by means of an order to be obtained under the sanction of the Master of the Rolls.—The University of London consists of the two colleges of University College, in Upper Gower-street, Bedford-square, and King's College, which occupies the E. wing of Somerset House, in the Strand, where it extends in a straight line down to the river. The former of these stands upon 7 acres of ground, and the building consists of a central part 430 feet in length, with a portico and a dome, and two projecting wings, the whole forming three sides of a quadrangle. It contains several large lecture rooms, a library and museums, a hall 90 feet in length by 45 in breadth, and 23 in height, a laboratory, suites of apartments for some of the professors, and rooms for the meetings of the council and the accommodation of the officers of the establishment; and in Gordon-square is a hall in connection with it, presided over by some one appointed by the council, for the express purpose of providing board and lodging at fixed payments for a certain number of students who may choose to live there. This hall was formerly founded at Manchester under the title of "Manchester New College," for the training of young men for the Protestant Dissenting ministry. A certain number of these pupils now reside there and attend classes and lectures given on the premises, but the lay department is separate from the theological. In the college there is a museum containing a collection of models by the celebrated Flaxman, and the "Marmor Homericum" of the Baron de Triqueti. The University College school and the junior school in connection with it, which have been founded for the instruction of boys between 16 and 7 years of age, are not only well attended, but have earned a well-deserved reputation. The college itself was designedly established for the purpose of receiving students without any theological test or teaching, and it therefore numbers among its graduates and undergraduates Jews, Dissenters, and members of a great variety of religious denominations. It possesses several exhibitions and scholarships, while the number of subjects embraced in its art and humanity examinations, far exceed those required at Oxford and Cambridge. This, in the opinion of several who are well qualified to judge, renders the education too diffuse, and is the cause of its failing to turn out scholars as accomplished as those who come from the older universities. King's College has on the ground floor the hall, the lecture-rooms, and the secretary's office. In the first of these are two grand staircases leading to the anatomical museum on the S. side of the first floor, and the library on the N. side. The educational system embraces the four branches of theology (in which the distinction of "Theological Associate" is granted), general literature, science, and science as applied to arts and medicine. The principal and professors are for the most part men of great reputation for sound learning and varied accomplishments, and there is an excellent school connected with the college, and evening classes for students engaged during the day. There are some scholarships of £50 per annum, and two medical scholarships of £25 each. Both University College and King's College have hospitals attached to them, and both rank high as medical schools. There are several schools and collegiate establishments, both in London and the country, in connection with the University of London, who send up candidates for degrees without their students having been either to University or King's colleges. The examinations for degrees are held at Burlington House, in Piccadilly, which is now devoted to this and similar purposes, such as the meetings of learned societies, the middle-class examinations, &c., and the degrees conferred are those of LL.D., LL.B., M.A., B.A., and M.B. The governing body of the university consists of a chancellor, vice-chancellor, fellows, and graduates, and both University and King's College publish each year a calendar containing the names of graduates and undergraduates, lists of prizemen, examination papers, and other matters connected with their status and progress. The College of Preceptors grants certificates to schoolmasters who have passed its examinations; and the Society of Arts, in John-street, Adelphi, grants honorary and pecuniary prizes for inventions, discoveries, and improvements in art. Upwards of £250,000 have been spent for the promotion of the objects of the last-named society since its establishment in 1754, and it was at one of its meetings, under the presidency of the late Prince Consort, that the idea of the first Great Exhibition, which was held in Hyde Park in 1851, was originally mooted, and the plan for the International Exhibition of 1862 discussed and finally arranged. There are some fine pictures in its meeting-rooms, and its conversaziones at South Kensington are attended by vast numbers of the aristocracy and gentry, among whom are to be seen a great proportion of those whose names have become celebrated throughout the world on account of their eminence in various branches of literature, science, or art.—The garrison of London is usually composed of three regiments of household cavalry, two battalions of the brigade of foot guards, and a line infantry regiment in the Tower. There are also troops stationed at Windsor, Hampton Court, Hounslow, and Woolwich, who could easily be brought up to the metropolis in case of need. The principal infantry barracks besides those at the Tower and the Horse Guards are, the Wellington Barracks, in Birdcage-walk, St. James's Park, a large winged building 110 feet in length, fronting the park. They have, besides a chapel, a school for infants and adults, a laundry and washhouse, fitted with steam machines for doing all the washing of the soldiers stationed at the Horse Guards and the Tower, and all the modern improvements which have been introduced into barrack life since the close of the Crimean war. There are cavalry barracks in Albany-street, Regent's Park, at Knightsbridge, and at St. John's Wood, and the army clothing depôt is at Pimlico. The foot guards are always on duty at the royal palaces, the opera houses, and certain public places; and at the Horse Guards two mounted sentinels and cavalry soldiers on foot are on guard. The Honourable Artillery Company ranks first of all the metropolitan volunteer regiments. Its exercising and parade ground lies in the E.C. district between Bunhill-row and the W. side of Finsbury-square. The late Prince Consort was colonel of this corps, which often forms guards of honour at royal visits and other state occasions in the City. There are upwards of 18,000 volunteers in London, besides about 2,600 Royal Naval Volunteers; and many of the volunteer regiments, such as the Inns of Court (commonly called the "Devil's Own"), the Victoria, the Queen's, Westminster, the Civil Service, and some others, have carried high encomiums from the highest military authorities on account of their appearance, discipline, and aptitude for active service in the field. They, as well as the regular troops, are frequently inspected in Hyde Park, the Regent's Park, and elsewhere, and once a year a regular volunteer encampment is formed at Wimbledon (generally in the month of July), at which prizes are shot for by riflemen of various regiments, members of the houses of parliament, all comers, scholars from the great public schools, &c.; and these meetings not only attract a great number of visitors, but keep up the zest for good shooting, promote social and friendly feelings among the members of the different corps, and effectually increase the general efficiency of the volunteer service. A most deserving and useful society, composed of men who have served in the army, and who have been disabled by wounds or sickness, has within the last few years been established under the name of the Corps of Commissionaires. It is partly self-supporting and partly maintained by gifts and subscriptions. Its members live in a barrack which has been provided for them, and wear a regular uniform.

They are men whose characters have undergone strict investigation, and they are employed extensively as watchmen of premises, attendants at large shops and places of public resort, messengers, porters, and in many other ways upon occasions where honesty, obedience, and intelligence are requisite. The offices of the corps are at 3, Exchange-court, and 419A, Strand, and there is a regular official tariff published and issued by which those of the public who may wish to employ the men may learn the exact price they have to pay for their services. The corps possesses an excellent band, which performs on summer evenings in St. James's Park, and may be hired for fêtes, balls, concerts, or any similar entertainments. —The principal cricket-field of London is at "Lord's," in St. John's Wood, near the Regent's Park. Here the great matches of the season are played; and the ground upon certain occasions, such as that of the match between the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge, the public schools, the Gentlemen and the Players, and others, is crowded with spectators, many of whom belong to the highest classes of society. "Lord's" is under the patronage and control of the "Marylebone Cricket Club," which has there a house for dining, and for keeping the implements of the game in, on the ground; and there is also a tennis-court, billiard-room, and a refreshment-house for the use of the general public, and on certain occasions a "grand stand" is erected. The Marylebone Club numbers among its members several noblemen and gentlemen of the highest rank, and its picked eleven are probably the finest set of cricketers in the world. At Kennington Oval there is also an excellent cricket-ground, where many first-rate matches are played; and another close to the cattle-market in Islington. There is a tennis-court in Charles-street, Haymarket, close to the Haymarket Theatre; several public and private billiard-rooms in the Strand, Regent-street, Leicester-square, and various places throughout the metropolis. The annual rowing-match between two eight-oars of the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge takes place during the long vacation, on the Thames, between Mortlake and Putney, and creates great interest and excitement among all classes of the community; and the Thames, Leander, and other rowing-clubs, have their boats, subscription-rooms, &c., at Westminster, and elsewhere, on the banks of the river. Boats are let out for hire on the ornamental waters of the Serpentine and in St. James's Park, and in the evenings of the summer months rowing forms the amusement of a considerable number of young Londoners.—Sunday excursions are much in vogue among many classes of the community, and the boats and railways to Greenwich, Richmond, Hampton Court, Kew, Epping Forest, and the various suburban places to and from which conveyance can be had at a cheap rate, are, during the spring and summer months, filled with passengers. A great many excursionists also go to Hastings, Brighton, Margate, Southampton, &c., by cheap trains or boats, which leave London early in the morning, and return the same night, or extend their stay from Saturday till Monday. The suburbs also abound with the villas and residences of merchants and traders who travel to and fro daily to their various places of business, and whose families enjoy a purer air and greater quiet than is to be obtained in London. On the London, Chatham, and Dover railway there is a cheap workman's train in the morning and evening, and this is found to be a great boon to those who by the modern improvements and alterations in London have been ejected from their houses, and are obliged to live a long way from their work. The same plan is also in operation on the Metropolitan or Underground railway from Farringdon-road to Paddington. Several societies, however, and benevolent individuals, have taken up the subject of the difficulty experienced by labourers and the operative classes in obtaining suitable dwelling-places, and companies have been formed for the purpose of building premises where they may be housed both decently and cheaply. At Bethnal Green Miss Burdett Coutts has erected some houses, arranged in three distinct blocks, and forming three sides of a quadrangle. Each block is five stories high, and has shafts for the removal of dust, baths, washhouses, closets, and similar fittings and appliances for securing the health and cleanliness of their inhabitants. There are 170 families residing here, who occupy all the rooms, which are let to them in sets of from one to three rooms, at a rent varying from 2*s.* to 5*s.* a week. Mr. George Peabody, a benevolent merchant, has given the munificent sum of £150,000 for the same purpose; and in Lisson Grove, at Lambeth, in Eagle-court in the Strand, opposite to Somerset House; in Ward's-place, Essex-road, Islington; in Love-lane, Shadwell; and in Commercial-street, Shoreditch—localities in which hitherto the worst classes of the community herded together, without any regard to cleanliness or decency—there are ranges of buildings, provided with comfortable kitchens, plenty of water, large windows, sinks, cupboards, &c., and in some cases with workshops attached, all designed for the express purpose of ameliorating both the physical and moral status of their occupants. The sum of £23,542 has also been expended in the purchase of land and the erection of buildings at Tower-buildings, Brewhouse-lane, Wapping (where nearly the whole of the dwellings for 60 families are occupied), at King's-cross-road, Bagnigge Wells, and in Old St. Pancras-road. These latter buildings consist of five blocks, two of which are fully occupied, and, as they are all in the immediate vicinity of the Great Northern railway station at King's-cross and several large manufacturing establishments, it is expected that they will soon be completely filled, as the applications received already exceed the number of tenements, although they are constructed so as to afford ample accommodation for 100 families. Negociations are also pending for a piece of land in the City-road, about a mile from the Bank, as a site for three blocks of buildings; and in Greenwich a subscription has been set on foot for the purchase of a vacant piece of ground near the parish church, on which it is proposed to erect three or four blocks of buildings, to be let at a cheap rate to the working poor of that busy and populous neighbourhood. The promoters of these benevolent and at the same time, it is to be hoped, remunerative schemes, will apply to parliament for power to borrow money on certain terms from the Public Works Loan Commissioners, and for such other concessions as they may deem necessary; and should the undertaking prove successful they will endeavour to carry out their operations on a still more useful and extensive scale. Cheap dining-rooms for the operative classes have been established in the New Cut, Lambeth, and in Fleet-street and there are several public baths and washhouses in London, where hot, cold, and plunge baths can be obtained at a much cheaper rate than at the establishments of private bath proprietors, and where great accommodation for washing and drying is afforded at a very moderate price. Of these the principal are the Whitechapel baths and washhouses in Goulston-street, Whitechapel; the Bermondsey in Spa-road, Bermondsey; the Bloomsbury and St. Giles's in Endell-street, Long Acre; the Lambeth in the Westminster Bridge-road; the Metropolitan in Ashley-crescent, City-road; the Poplar in the East India-road, Poplar; the St. Margaret and St. John's, Westminster, in Great Smith-street; the St. George's in Davies-street, Berkeley-square; the St. James's in Marshall-street, and Dufour's-place, Broad-street, Golden-square; the St. Martin's in Orange-street, Leicester-square; the St. Marylebone in the Marylebone-road, the City of London in Golden-lane, Barbican; and the Tunbridge in Cross-street, Islington. There are also several "Turkish" baths, the principal of which is in Victoria-street, Westminster, in a building fitted up in a luxurious Oriental style, and having attached to it a bath for horses and cattle. Drinking-fountains have during the last few years been extensively set up in the public thoroughfares, and have proved a great boon to passengers. Many of them have been erected by private individuals, and an association has been formed for a similar object. An immense number of persons avail themselves of these fountains, and there is every reason to believe that they have materially aided in lessening drunkenness in the metropolitan districts. The water supply of London is carried on by various companies, whose operations are controlled by acts of parliament. By one of these they are "prohibited from deriving their supplies from the Thames below Teddington-lock, or from its affluents below points reached by the tide." It is to be conveyed in covered pipes or aqueducts, and filtered before distribution for domestic use. Each company is required to keep for inspection by all who wish a map of the district in which its mains are laid, and its pumping-engines must consume their own smoke. Every inhabitant who has paid his water-rate may demand constant service. Every reservoir within 5 miles from St. Paul's in which unfiltered water is stored is required to be kept covered. It has been calculated that the various companies distribute about 85,000,000 gallons of water to about 350,000 houses, having engines of about 8,000 horse-power, and mains and branches of about 2,200 miles in length. Their total outlay upon works has been estimated at about £8,000,000, and the water rental at about half a million per annum. The principal companies are those of the New River, the Grand Junction, the East London, the West Middlesex, the Lambeth, the Chelsea, the Southwark and Vauxhall, and the Hampstead. There are also several deep-sunk wells from which a large supply of water is obtained for brewing, chemical and manufacturing, and other purposes. The principal of these are—in Trafalgar-square, for the supply of the fountains there; at the Reform, Conservative, and Union club-houses, the Blackwall railway, and Greenwich Hospital; and the breweries of Reid and Co., at Liquorpond-street; Combe and Co., Castle-street, Long Acre; Meux and Co. Tottenham-Court-road; Truman, Hanbury, Buxton, and Co., Brick-lane, Spitalfields; Barclay and Co., Southwark; the City of London Brewery, Upper Thames-Street; Charrington and Co., Mile-end-road, and Goding and Co., Belvedere-road, Lambeth. The New River Company has also a well, which cost £12,000 in constructing; and its covered storing-reservoir, in Claremont-square, Pentonville, has an area of 31,000 square feet, and contains three and a half millions of gallons, while its engines pump water for high service as much as 430 feet above high-water mark.—One of the most important matters in regard to the metropolis is its drainage. The polluted state of the Thames, into which it has been calculated that before the main drainage works began 80,000,000 gallons of dirty water and refuse flowed from upwards of 100 sewers and drains in its course past London, and the foul smell which it emitted during the spring and summer months, have led to a system of draining which will not only improve the health of the inhabitants, but will bring considerable profits to a company which has been formed for utilising that which has hitherto only been a nuisance and a fertile source of disease. The southern outfall of the main drainage is at Crossness Point, on the Kentish side of the river, where immense works have been erected on the marsh land, near Barking Reach, and about half way between Woolwich and Erith. The quantity of sewage now brought down to the N. and S. sides of the river is estimated at 63,000,000 cubic feet per diem, the area from which it is obtained being 117½ square miles. The reservoirs into which it is received have a united area of 16 acres, and the total length of sewers already constructed is 82 miles. All that is now required to complete the work is a portion of the low-level sewer on the N. side, which will run beneath the Thames embankment under the new street from Blackfriars Bridge to the Mansion House; and, as this is being rapidly proceeded with, this great metropolitan improvement will before long be in active operation. An association under the name of the "Metropolitan Sewage and Essex Reclamation Company" has just been formed for utilising the sewage on the N. side of London. The total cost of the undertaking is set down at £2,400,000, and the profits, which are expected to amount to £650,000 per annum at the least, after deducting all the working expenses, are to belong exclusively to the company for the first four years, and for the remaining fifty of the concession which has been granted to it by the Metropolitan Board of Works they are to be divided equally between the company and the board. Many curious anecdotes connected with the sewers and those employed in them are related in Mayhew's valuable and interesting work, "London Labour and the London Poor," and articles of considerable value are not unfrequently found amongst the sewage, into which they have either fallen by accident, or been placed by design.—Of course, in so large a metropolis as London, fires are of common, in fact, of almost daily occurrence; and an association, under the name of the "London Fire Brigade," has been organised since the year 1833, for the protection of life and property from the damage and accidents arising from conflagrations. The chief station of the fire brigade is in Watling Street, and there are seventeen other stations distributed over the various districts of the Metropolis. Each station is provided with engines, buckets, hose, fire escapes, &c., and the last-named machines are wheeled out each evening to certain convenient localities, where they remain all night under the charge of a fireman, so as to be ready in case of any sudden emergency. Besides the hand-engines, there are several engines worked by steam power, and, on the Thames, some steam floating engines. The value of property in the metropolis has been estimated at about £900,000,000 sterling, and the Fire Insurance offices spend £25,000 a-year in keeping up the brigade, which is composed of 128 skilled firemen under the command of one superior officer. They have a regular uniform, and, besides the regular brigade, some large manufacturing firms (the most noted on this account being Hodges' Lambeth Distillery Works) and public offices have engines and all the proper means and appliances for the extinction of fires, and their men are very active, and render great assistance to the brigade in the case of fires at their own or their neighbours' premises. Many noblemen and persons of the highest rank take much interest in the matter of fires, and are personally present at them, superintending and encouraging those who are endeavouring to extinguish them. They also give occasional entertainments to the members of the fire brigade, and use the utmost exertions to maintain the efficiency of all such arrangements as may conduce to lessen the chances of conflagrations occurring within the limits of the metropolis. There is also an association called the "Royal Society for the Protection of Life from Fire," of which the fire-escape conductors have attended as many as 712 fires, and rescued 68 persons in one year. Its receipts from donations and contributions are over £9,000, and its expenses over £8,000 per annum. After 1st January, 1866, the management of the brigade, and afterwards that of this Royal Society, is to be vested in the Board of Works under the name of the "Metropolitan Fire Brigade." The plant of the existing fire offices is to be transferred to the Board, and they are to pay salaries, make regulations, and to be enabled to enforce certain rates of contribution from the fire offices. Government is to subsidise the Board, and it is allowed by the Treasury to raise a loan of £40,000 towards preliminary expenses.—The streets, shops, and public rooms and buildings of London are lighted by gas-lamps and burners, and a great deal of gas is consumed in private houses. This is supplied by about twenty companies, whose daily production is estimated at nearly 15,000,000 cubic feet at a cost of over a million and a half sterling per annum. The mains and pipes are laid under the roadways, and are above 2,000 miles in length. Much complaint is made by Londoners of the price and quality of the gas supplied to them, and there are several schemes on foot for reducing the former and improving the latter.—The public conveyances of London are cabs, omnibuses, boats, and railways. The number of licensed cabs is between 5,000 and 6,000 placed on regularly-appointed stands in the streets, and at the different railway stations. The tables of fares and regulations for the drivers are issued by the Commissioners of Police, and policemen are required to be furnished with books of fares so as to decide disputes between cabmen and passengers. Tables of fares between well-known spots are affixed to public buildings and places of general resort. The general fare is 6*d.* per mile for two persons, and 6*d.* extra for each person exceeding that number, two children under ten years of age reckoning as one adult. If hired by time, the fare is 2*s.* per hour, and the driver is compelled to drive at the least 4 miles in the hour. The drivers must wear a badge with a number on it, and produce a ticket (also numbered) if it is demanded. If luggage is carried inside, no payment for it is required; but if it is placed outside, the charge is 2*d.* for each box or package. The principal omnibus routes are N. and S.; N. and the City; to and from between the N. and the W.; the W. and the E.; the W. and the City; the S. and the W.; and the S. and the City. The fares vary from 2*d.* to 6*d.*, according to the by-laws of the different companies, and the distances travelled by the passengers. The chief centres of omnibus traffic are the Bank of England, the Mansion House, and Bishopsgate-street, for omnibuses plying E. and W., along the routes between Stratford, Bow, Mile-end, Whitechapel, Hackney, Blackwall, &c., on the E., and Bayswater, Chelsea, Brompton, Kensington, &c., on the W.; Gracechurch-street for those going S.; the "Angel" at Islington for Ball's Pond, Kingsland, Homerton, &c.; Tottenham-Court-road for the Victoria station, Camden and Kentish Towns, Highgate, Hampstead, Finchley, and the northern suburbs; the "Elephant and Castle" for the southern suburbs, the City, and the West End; the Regent-circus at Oxford-street for Bayswater, the Great Western railway, &c.; and of Regent-street and the Piccadilly-circus for the Strand, Hyde Park Corner, Westminster; St. Paul's Churchyard for Hammersmith, Kew, &c.; and the Bank, Charing-cross and the various railway stations for almost every part of London. The London General Omnibus Company has the largest number of vehicles on the metropolitan roads; and, on Whit-Monday, 1865, 195,805 passengers travelled by its conveyances alone, while its receipts for one week frequently amount to over £14,000. The river steam boats belong principally to the Citizen, Waterman, and Iron Boat Companies. Penny boats run constantly between Westminster and London Bridge on the N., and to the Surrey side on the S. of the river, stopping at all the intermediate piers. Eastward boats go to the Thames Tunnel, Greenwich, Woolwich, Blackwall, Thames Haven (for passengers to Margate and Ramsgate), and Gravesend; and, westward, to Vauxhall, Cremorne, Battersea, Hammersmith, Kew, Richmond, Twickenham, &c., most of them calling at the intermediate piers to embark and disembark passengers. There are also some vessels on the American saloon-steamer plan plying between London Bridge and Gravesend. Their speed is very great, as they make 20 miles an hour, and they will doubtless soon become very general on the river. The numbers of persons who enter and leave London by railway has been calculated, without counting those who travel over the Metropolitan lines, at about 80,000,000 in the year. The principal termini are the Great Western at Paddington, the Great Northern and the Midland at King's-cross, the Great Eastern in Shoreditch, the North-Western in Euston-square, the London, Brighton, and South Coast, the South-Eastern, the North Kent, the Greenwich, and the Crystal Palace, at London Bridge; the South-Western at Waterloo Bridge, the London, Chatham, and Dover, and the West End and Crystal Palace, at the Victoria Station, Pimlico; the London and Blackwall and the North London in Fenchurch-street. The great connecting links between the N. and S. of England are the Clapham Junction and Kensington stations on the West London Extension railway. For passengers travelling within the limits of the metropolis, the West London runs from the Kensington and Euston stations to Blackwall and Fenchurch-street; the South-Eastern from London Bridge to Blacktriars and Charing Cross; the Great Western (in connection with the Metropolitan or Underground railway) from Farringdon-street to Notting-hill, Shepherd's Bush, Kensington, and Hammersmith. On this line, also, trains run from Kensington to Ealing, Hanwell, and Southall. The South-Western runs trains from Waterloo-bridge to Vauxhall, Kensington, Chelsea, and Battersea, and so on to the Clapham Junction, and Wandsworth, Putney, Barnes, Chiswick, Kew, Hounslow, Richmond, Kingston, and Windsor. From Victoria trains go to Battersea Park, Wandsworth-road, Clapham, and Stockwell, Loughborough-road, Camberwell New-road, the Walworth-road, the "Elephant and Castle," the Borough-road, Blackfriars Bridge, and Ludgate-hill; and, by the London, Chatham, and Dover line, to Herne-hill, Dulwich, Sydenham-hill, and so on to Rochester Bridge and Chatham. From London Bridge trains run to New Cross, Forest Hill, Sydenham, the Crystal Palace, Gipsy Hill, Lower Norwood, Streatham, Balham, and New Wandsworth, to the Clapham Junction, and so on through Battersea, Chelsea, Kensington, and Battersea Park, to Victoria. From London Bridge and Victoria there are also trains to Epsom, and these stations present scenes of great confusion and excitement on the "Derby" and "Oaks" days, as also do the stations on the "Downs," from the crowding and anxiety of the many thousands who are anxious to witness those celebrated races. The North London railway has its principal station at Fenchurch-street, and its route is through Blackwall, Stepney, Bow, Stratford, Victoria-park, Hackney, Kingsland, Newington-road, Highbury, the Caledonian-road, and Camden-road, to the Camden station at Chalk Farm. To this latter station trains from Euston also run, and so proceed by Kilburn and Kensington to the Clapham Junction, the Crystal Palace, Norwood, and New Croydon. By the North Kent line passengers travel from Charing-cross by Waterloo, Blackfriars, London Bridge, and New Cross, to Lewisham, Blackheath, Charlton, Woolwich Dockyard and Arsenal, Plumstead, Abbey Wood, Belvedere, Erith, Dartford, Greenhithe, Northfleet, Gravesend, Higham, and Strood; while a line, branching off from Lewisham, runs through Lower Sydenham and Croydon to Beckenham, Shortlands, Bromley, and Bickley. From the Bishopsgate station there are branch lines to Hertford, through Mile-end, Stratford, Lea Bridge for Walthamstow, Tottenham, Park, Angel-road, Ponder's End, the Ordnance Factory, Waltham, Cheshunt, Broxbourne for Hoddesdon, Rye House, St. Margaret's and Ware, and another through Edmonton to Enfield. The main line goes through Forest Gate, Ilford for Barking, Chadwell Heath, Romford, Brentwood, and Ingatestone, to Chelmsford. From the Bishopsgate and Fenchurch-street stations, the North Woolwich line passes through Stepney, Stratford Bridge, Barking-road, Victoria Docks, Silvertown, and North Woolwich, to Woolwich town; and, from the same stations, the Epping Forest line runs through Stratford, Low Leyton, Leytonstone, Snaresbrook, George Lane, Woodford, Buckhurst Hill, Loughton, Chigwell Road, and Theydon, to Epping, and so on, through North Weald and Blake Hall, to Ongar. The London and Blackwall railway runs through Shadwell, Stepney, Limehouse, the West India Docks, and Poplar, and the London, Tilbury, and Southend, through Stepney, Bromley, Plaistow, East Ham, Barking, Rainham, Purfleet, Grays, Tilbury (for Gravesend), Low Street, Stanford-le-Hope, Pitsea, Purfleet, and Leigh, to Southend. From Fenchurch-street, also, trains run, viâ the North London railway, to Kentish Town, Hampstead Heath, Finchley-road, Kensall Green, Acton, Kew, Mortlake, Richmond, Twickenham, Teddington, Hampton Wick, and New Kingston. The Metropolitan or Underground railway runs from the Bishop's-road station at Paddington, close to the main station of the Great Western railway, to Farringdon-street, and having as its intermediate stations the Edgware-road, Baker-street, Portland-road (for the Regent's Park, Portland-place, &c.), Gower-street (for Tottenham-Court-road, Euston-square and station, &c.), and King's-cross (for the Great Northern and Midland railways, Pentonville, &c.). The trains run at intervals of five and ten minutes from 5.15 a.m. to 12.5 midn. on week days; and from 7.55 a.m. to 10.35 a.m., and from 1.5 to 11.5 p.m. on Sundays. Trains in connection with the Metropolitan run from Hammersmith and Kensington, and this line, when completed, will connect the E. and W. ends of the town, and have branches where it is possible to the various great railway termini, so as to obviate the necessity, which now exists in so many instances, of passengers being compelled to undergo the trouble, expense, and delay of traversing a great part of London in cabs or omnibuses. At Earl-street, Blackfriars, it passes 30 feet below the London, Chatham, and Dover line, and will run under the new street to the Mansion House, and in a westerly direction along the Thames embankment. This line will relieve the London and Brighton railway company's main line of the sole charge of the traffic to and from the Crystal Palace, and will use the high-level terminus which is just opposite the central transept of the palace. Several new railways, such as the Tottenham and Hampstead junction, and others, are in contemplation or progress in various directions of the metropolis and to the suburban districts. These, as well as the various alterations and improvements in the streets, are laid down as they occur in the maps and plans of London and its environs, which are constantly published. The main features, indeed, of the metropolis will, it may be expected, long remain unchanged; but the continually increasing population, and the progress of science, lead to ceaseless innovations, and it is certain that each succeeding year will witness the removal of old and the construction of new sites, the accomplishment of fresh sanitary and architectural plans—in a word, every variety of change which may be required for the benefit and convenience of the inhabitants. The construction of railway bridges, or rather tubes, in the Borough, Camden and Kentish Towns, at Blackfriars, Vauxhall, Ludgate-hill, and elsewhere, has already considerably altered the appearance of many of the leading thoroughfares; and the concentration of the law courts in the site already marked out for the "Palace of Justice," between the S. side of Lincoln's Inn Fields and the Strand, the viaduct from Holborn to Snow-hill, the new street from the W. end of Oxford-street to Piccadilly, and various railway and other works already in progress or contemplation in all parts of London and its environs will sufficiently exemplify the nature of the changes that will constantly take place; and parliament will, no doubt, during each session, have as many or more fresh schemes laid before it for the alteration and improvement both of the City and the West End as it has already sanctioned during the last few years. In the former the demand for space for offices, &c., is so great, on account of the immense quantity of ground required for proposed alterations that the value of land has risen in a proportion beyond all belief. £320 per annum rent has lately been asked and given for a small house let as offices in a court in Throgmorton-street, for which the tenant has hitherto paid £80; and a piece of freehold ground, occupying a site of 2,500 square feet, in Cannon-street, at the corner of St. Swithin's-lane, has been sold for £30,600. The land to the W. of Temple-bar belongs principally to ten peers, viz. the Dukes of Norfolk, Bedford, and Portland, the Marquises of Exeter, Salisbury, Northampton, Westminster, and Camden, and the earls of Craven and of Portland, and the value of their estates is enormous. Many of them as the rents fall in compel their tenants either to quit or spend considerable sums of money in improving the houses and tenements which they occupy. Thus the ancient forms of street architecture are gradually disappearing, and even in old neighbourhoods the buildings are gradually assimilated to modern types and a style which is more adapted to meet the wants engendered by the increased wealth and means of comfort possessed by every class of the community.—The metropolitan graveyards which exist in several parts of London have for some years been totally disused, intramural interments having been forbidden by Act of Parliament. In their place suburban cemeteries, ornamentally laid out and planted with trees, shrubs, and flowers, are used for purposes of burial. Each has its own chapel and its officiating minister, and some of them contain tombs and monuments of much artistic merit, and erected at a vast expense. Side by side with these, many memorials to the dead strike the eye by the appropriate simplicity of their design, or the profuseness of the flowers, wreaths of "everlastings," or other tokens of affection which are placed near or upon them. The principal cemeteries are, in the western district the Kensal Green, occupying an area of about 80 acres in the Harrow-road, about 2¼ miles from the Paddington station of the Great Western railway; in the northern district the Highgate, the Abney Park at Stoke Newington, and the Great Northern at Colney Hatch; in the south-western district the Brompton; in the north-western the Paddington, on the road from Kilburn to Willesden; in the north-eastern the Victoria Park; in the eastern the City of London and Tower Hamlets, in the Mile-end-road; in the south-eastern the Nunhead, Peckham; and in the southern the Norwood. Besides these situated outside London, the first-named of them being beyond the limits of the metropolitan postal districts, are the London Necropolis, at Woking, in Surrey; the City of London Cemetery, at Ilford, in Essex; the Lambeth, at Tooting; the St. Mary Abbott's, Kensington, at Hanwell; and the Marylebone, the St. Pancras, and the Islington, at Finchley. The Jews have their own burial grounds at South Hackney, Ball's Pond, Brompton, Mile-end-road, and West Ham.—The statistics of the newspaper press of London almost exceed belief. It has been calculated that 248,000 newspapers are issued daily, making an annual issue of 77,000,000. If to these be added the annual issue of the weekly journals, which is upwards of 117,000,000, the total will amount to about 195,000,000 issued from the metropolitan press every year. The leading journal is the Times, the chief office of which is in Printing-house-square, Blackfriars, near Apothecaries' Hall. It has also a City office, in George-street, Mansion House. It employs a large and most efficient staff of writers, reporters, compositors, &c., all of whom are liberally paid, and its proprietors have in several instances evinced the greatest readiness not only in advocating cases of national and private distress, but in contributing largely to mitigate the misfortunes and privations of the sufferers. In the Captains' room at Lloyd's, and over the door of the chief office of the paper, are marble tablets commemorative of the benefit conferred by it upon the commercial public by its exposure of a gang of swindlers in the celebrated case of "Bogle v. Lawson." A verdict was obtained against the Times, but its conduct was so highly appreciated that a subscription was raised to indemnify the proprietors for their expenses. The sum contributed, however, they generously refused to accept, but founded with it the "Times' scholarship" in the City of London school. The principal paper for fashionable intelligence is the Morning Post, which has its chief office in Wellington-street, Strand, and its City office in Cornhill. The great paper for the advertisement of businesses of all sorts to be sold, &c., is the Morning Advertiser, which, as it is taken in at almost all public-houses and places of entertainment, is called the "publicans' paper." Its office is in Fleet-street. The principal offices of the Daily News are in Bouverie-street, Fleet-street; those of the Morning Herald in Shoe-lane; those of the Daily Telegraph (which was the first of the penny papers) in Fleet-street and Peterborough-court. This paper has the largest circulation of any of the London papers, its daily issue reaching to about 150,000 copies as against about 55,000 of the Times. The offices of the Morning Star are in Fleet-street and Dorset-court; those of the Standard in Fleet-street and Shoe-lane; of the Public Ledger in St. Dunstan's-alley; of the Commercial Daily List in Mincing-lane; and of the Manchester Guardian in Cannon-row. The offices of the evening papers are those of the Express in Bouverie-street; the Globe in the Strand; the Shipping and Mercantile Gazette in Gracechurch-street and Talbot-court; the Sun in the Strand; the Evening Herald in Shoe-lane; the Evening Star in Dorset-street, Fleet-street; the Standard (which has the largest circulation of all the evening papers) in Shoe-lane and Fleet-street; and the Pall Mall Gazette, in Salisbury-street, Strand. Cheap papers are also issued, principally containing advertisements, in certain districts, such as Islington, Bloomsbury, Clerkenwell, &c., and also at the West End, and have a large local circulation in the neighbourhoods to which they relate. Of the numerous weekly illustrated papers which now issue from the press the Illustrated London News is the principal, and its offices are in the Strand and Milford-lane. There are also the Illustrated Times, the Illustrated News of the World, the Illustrated Sporting News, &c.; but these are sold at a lower price, and their artistic merit is far inferior to that of the first-named journal. There are also many weekly papers devoted to particular subjects, such as the Athenæum, the Saturday Review, the Reader, &c., to literature; Bell's Life in London, the Field, the Sporting News, the Racing Times, &c., to sporting matters; while the subject matter of the Railway Times, Record, and Gazette, the Army and Navy Gazette, the United Service Gazette, the Volunteer Service Gazette, the Civil Service Gazette, the Gardeners' Chronicle, the Sharebrokers' Guardian, the Builder, the Orchestra, the Musical World, the Police Gazette, the Pawnbrokers' Gazette, Allen's Indian Mail, the Photographic Journal, the Mechanics' Journal, the Nonconformist, the Lancet, the Law Times, the Wesleyan Times, the Court Journal and Circular, the Publishers' Circular, and very many others, is sufficiently indicated by the titles which they respectively bear. The chief Sunday paper among the upper classes is the Observer, while among the lower orders Lloyd's Weekly Newspaper, the Weekly Times, Reynolds's Newspaper, and others, are extensively circulated. The Punch and Fun offices are both in Fleet-street; and during the sitting of Parliament a journal called the Owl is published in Catherine-street, Strand, which unites statements respecting official personages and transactions with articles of a light and jocular character, and it frequently contains announcements of a semi-official nature; while the London Gazette, issued every Tuesday and Friday, in St. Martin's-lane, gives an authentic list of all public appointments and promotions made by the crown and government, lists of bankrupts, &c., and a variety of official statements, which are all put forth under direct authority. Besides the newspapers there are immense quantities of magazines and periodicals published weekly, monthly, and quarterly; some confined to literature, philosophy, or the arts, others blending these subjects with lighter matter, while others mingle instruction with amusement, and seek to adapt themselves to readers of all classes. At several circulating libraries, such as Mudie's, the Library Company, Booth's, and others, all the leading periodicals may be had on loan, as well as novels, and all the best works in all the various branches of literature which are constantly issuing from the press. The London Library, in St. James's-square, possesses a very numerous and valuable collection of books, which are not only accessible to the subscribers in the rooms of the building, but are allowed to be taken by them to their own houses.—The various telegraph companies, which have their chief offices in London, are the Anglo-Australian and China, in Tokenhouse-yard; the Atlantic, in St. Helen's-place; Bonelli's Electric, in John-street, Adelphi; the British Electric, in Threadneedle-street; the Cape of Good Hope, in the Poultry; the Magnetic, in Chancery-lane; the Mediterranean extension, in Gresham-street; the National, in Adelphi-terrace; the General Submarine, in Craven-chambers, Strand; the South-West of Ireland, in Leadenhall-street; the Indian, in Moorgate-street; and the Universal Private, in Adelaide-street, Strand. There are, however, five companies which have several branch offices and stations in various parts of the metropolis, and are much more extensively employed than those already named. Of these the principal is the London District Telegraph Company, the central station of which is in Cannon-street. It has nearly 200 branch stations in various parts of London and the suburbs, including among them the Houses of Parliament, all the principal clubs, hotels, railway stations, and public buildings, and as communication by its means is so easy and cheap, its wires are kept constantly employed in transmitting messages to and fro within the metropolitan districts. The Electric and International Company (having in connection with it the Channel Islands telegraph) has its general offices in Moorgate-street, and its central station in Founders'-court, Lothbury. Its branch stations are at the railway station, Blackwall; the Metropolitan Cattle Market; the Coal Exchange, Lower Thames-street; the General Post Office; the central lobby of the House of Commons; the Merchants' room at Lloyd's; the Stock Exchange; the London Docks; the Kensington station of the West London railway, and the termini of all the other railways, besides other stations in a great many of the leading thoroughfares, such as Cornhill, Cheapside, High Holborn, the Strand, Regent-street, Hyde Park Corner, Great George-street, Westminster, and elsewhere. The British and Irish Magnetic has its central station in Threadneedle-street, and branch offices in Throgmorton-street, Mincing-lane, Leadenhall-street, Seething-lane, Lloyd's, Regent-circus, Piccadilly, Charing-cross, Capel-court, the South Sea House in Threadneedle-street, and the House of Commons. It also works in connection with all the offices of the London District Company. The United Kingdom Electric has its central offices at Gresham House, Old Broad-street; and other offices in Hercules-passage, Mincing-lane, Fleet-street, Gresham-street, Cockspur-street, New Bond-street, High-Holborn, St. John-street-road, and Cannon-street West. The Submarine has its chief office in Threadneedle-street and branches at the South Sea House, and the Baltic Coffee House, Charing-cross, the Corn Exchange Chambers, in Seething-lane, Leadenhall-street, Lloyd's, the House of Commons, the Stock Exchange, Mark and Mincing-lanes, and the Regent-circus, Piccadilly. "Reuter's Telegrams" are so called from the fact of a gentleman named Reuter having opened at Aix-la-Chapelle, in 1849, an office for collecting all the telegraphic news which at that period could be obtained from the various cities and quarters of the globe to which wires had been laid down. In 1851 Mr. Reuter transferred his office and system to London, which was immediately put into direct telegraphic communication with the chief cities and towns of the continent of Europe. Up to 1859, however, messages were chiefly confined to monetary, commercial, or private matters; but on the 9th of February in that year, a speech made at 1 p.m. by Napoleon III. at the Tuileries to the Austrian Ambassador was sent by Reuter's telegraph to the Times in London, and published verbatim by that journal at 2 p.m. As the words used by the Emperor appeared to intimate a rupture between France and Austria, they produced a great effect upon the public mind, and "Reuter's telegrams" became famous, and the accuracy and speed with which they were transmitted procured for their originator the favourable opinion both of the metropolitan and provincial press. The London, country, and continental journals hastened to avail themselves of the system, and the most important political, social, and miscellaneous information relating to one country is now conveyed to another and published with the most marvellous quickness and fidelity within a few minutes after the events recorded have transpired. The principal offices for Reuter's telegrams are at 1, Royal Exchange-buildings for day, and 10, Ludgate-hill, for night messages, and should any message of great importance be received there it is at once communicated to the chief government offices, the Stock Exchange, and such public departments as it may concern, and when occasion requires, published in the newspapers. By all the telegraph companies regular tariffs of their prices are issued, so that all who send messages may know precisely the amount they will have to pay.—The annual expense incurred by the commissioners of her Majesty's works and buildings amounts on an average to about £425,000 per annum, which is raised by a parliamentary grant, amounts received on emergencies from the civil contingency fund, and sums arising from the sale of old materials, plant, &c. Some of the principal items of expenditure are about £50,000 a-year for maintaining and repairing the royal palaces; about £95,000 for the royal parks, pleasure gardens, &c. Of these last, St. James's, the Green and Hyde Parks, cost about £25,000; the Botanic Gardens and the pleasure grounds at Kew, about £21,000; the Regent's Park, about £8,000; Kensington Gardens, nearly £5,000; and Victoria Park, rather over the same amount; Hampton Court park and pleasure grounds, about £3,000; Bushey Park, about £2,500; and Greenwich Park, nearly £2,000. In 1864, £46,444 were voted for the maintenance and expenses of the Houses of Parliament; and £39,829 10*s.* 11*d.* spent. The keeping in order and winding of the great clock cost £117 10*s.*; and works of art for the decoration of the "Palace of Westminster," £3,657 11*s.* 6*d.*; £4,795 were spent for the erection of new stables for the Speaker of the House of Commons, £29,394 2*s.* 9*d.* upon the new Foreign Office, and £1,182 17*s.* 1*d.* in improvements of the site of Downing-street. A grant of £12,000 was voted by Parliament for the improvement of the approaches to Westminster Bridge by the removal of those buildings which obstruct the view from Great George-street, and such other alterations as might be deemed necessary. Of this sum, however, only £1,762 1*s.* 5*d.* were used, so that the balance still remains in hand to be applied for this or any other similar purpose. Full details of these expenses, and of all matters connected with the proposed alterations and improvements of the metropolis, are to be found in the "blue books" and parliamentary papers relating to London, which are from time to time published (by authority) by the Queen's printer, whose offices are situated in New-street-square. There are also an infinite number of works upon the history of London, its food, antiquities, inhabitants and their ways of life, curiosities—in a word, everything relating to it already published, and fresh maps, guide and handbooks are constantly issuing from the press. The mere titles of books relating to London fill upwards of fifty leaves in the old large folio catalogue of printed books in the British Museum, while one whole volume in the supplementary catalogue is devoted to the same subject, the titles in it occupying 120 leaves, or 240 pages, exclusive of an alphabetical index of contents, consisting of 21 leaves, or 42 pages. There are also several works upon London, entered in the "King's" and the "Grenville" catalogues of printed books, and in the "King's Catalogue of Maps and Drawings" the list occupies from page 187 to page 208; in the supplementary catalogue of maps, from leaf 12 to leaf 105, or 93 pages, are taken up with it, exclusive of a table of contents, arranged under the following heads:—Maps of the Country round London; Geological Maps; Maps for particular purposes; Particular Plans, comprising Canals, County Courts, Docks, Geological Sections, Parishes, Railways, Sewers, Streets. Then follow the General Views; and, next, the Particular Views, including Bridges, Churches, Hospitals, Inns of Court, Noblemen's and Gentlemen's Houses; Palaces, Parks, Public Buildings, Miscellaneous Buildings, and Tables of Distances, &c. Besides this, an immense quantity of matter relating to London is to be found in the MS. collections, and in the printed royal 8vo catalogue of the "Manuscript Maps, Charts, Plans, and Topographical Drawings," 52 pages are occupied with the titles of maps, plans, views, &c., of several of its most interesting localities and buildings. The earliest map is that of "London as it was in 1560." It is in the King's Library, and was reprinted by Vertue in 1737. Next comes Ralph Aggas's celebrated Map of 1578; then follow maps and views published at various intervals down to modern times, when their name is "legion." The earliest drawings of London are those by Anthony Wyngaerde, in the Bodleian Library at Oxford, of royal palaces and other buildings; and in the Print Department of the British Museum is an engraved fac-simile of one of them, called "London, Westminster, and Southwark, as they appeared in 1543." With these "appliances and means" at hand, therefore, the student need have no difficulty in tracing pretty accurately the various alterations which have taken place in the arrangement and appearance of the metropolis from the time of Henry VIII. to our own days. With regard to London as it now is, and as it will be in each successive year, independently of the various books and works already referred to, as being so constantly issued from the press, ample information will be found in the Post Office London Directory, which is published in Old Boswell-court, Strand, and laid before the public annually, under the immediate and special patronage of her Majesty's Postmaster-General. This most useful work, which has now reached its 66th year of publication, contains 2,582 closely-printed pages, exclusive of advertisements, &c., and forms a perfect vade mecum to London. It is preceded by a most excellent map, and contains an official directory, a street directory, a commercial directory, a trades' directory, law, court, parliamentary, postal, city, conveyance, banking, and assurance directories, besides a variety of other useful information, the whole of it so arranged as to be most easily referred to, and embracing every detail connected with the localities of the metropolis and the occupations of its inhabitants. It is taken in at a great many shops, public-houses, hotels, clubs, &c., so that the casual visitor finds no difficulty in meeting with it; and although it is necessarily somewhat bulky in form, it is at any rate a convenient and trustworthy guide to "the great and busy hive" of modern London.

LONDON, a hmlt. in the par. of Old Cleeve, co. Somerset, 2 miles S.W. of Watchet. It is situated near the Bristol Channel, and is a meet for the West Somerset hounds.

LONDON-COLNEY, a chplry. in the pars. of St. Peter's and St. Alban's, hund. of Cashio, or lib. of St. Alban's, co. Herts, 6 miles N. of Barnet. This place takes its name from the London road, which here crosses the Colne by a bridge of seven arches. The living is a perpet. cur., val. £100. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a modern edifice partly erected by a grant from the Parliamentary Commissioners. The site was given by the late Earl of Hardwicke, who settled £40 towards the support of the minister. There is a National school, with an endowment of £25 per annum.

LONDONDERRY, a maritime co. in the prov. of Ulster, Ireland, bounded on the N. by Lough Foyle and the Atlantic Ocean, on the S. by Tyrone, on the E. by Lough Neagh and the co. Antrim, and on the W. by the co. Donegal. Its greatest length from N. to S. is 40 miles, and its greatest breadth from E. to W. is 34 miles, comprising 518,493 acres, of which about 318,282 are under cultivation, 180,709 uncultivated, 7,718 in plantations, 10,327 under water, and 1,559 in towns and roads. According to Ptolemy it formed part of the country of the Darnii, or Darini; hence the modern designation of Derry. It was chiefly the territory of the O'Nials, O'Loughlins, O'Donnels, and the O'Cahans, or Kanes. Derry was seized by the English towards the close of Elizabeth's reign, so as to check the power of O'Nial and O'Donnel; and when, in 1607, the Earls of Tyrone and Tyrconnel fled, nearly all the six counties in Ulster were confiscated. King James sold the county, with all the forfeited territory, in 1609, to the twelve London companies of Clothworkers, Drapers, Fishmongers, Goldsmiths, Grocers, Haberdashers, Ironmongers, Skinners, Mercers, Merchant Tailors, Salters, and Vintners, who undertook to establish there a Protestant colony, and to expend £20,000 on the plantation, in return for the grant of extensive privileges. Four years later this company was incorporated by royal charter as "The Society of the Governor and Assistants of London of the New Plantation in Ulster, within the Realm of Ireland," or, as it is commonly known, the Irish Society, and all the towns, manors, lands, &c., given to these companies were erected by the charter into a distinct county called "Londonderry." King Charles I., being dissatisfied with the mode in which the Irish Society fulfilled their stipulations, cancelled the charter, and seized the county into his own hands; but parliament subsequently declaring the illegality of these proceedings, Cromwell restored the society to its former state, and Charles II. granted it a new charter, under which its affairs have been conducted ever since. All of the London companies retain their estates except the Goldsmiths, Haberdashers, Vintners, and Merchant Tailors, who have disposed of theirs to private individuals, as the Marquis of Waterford, the Richardsons, the Ponsonbys, the Alexanders, and the Conellys. —The county is divided into six baronies, the city and liberties of Londonderry, the town and liberties of Coleraine, and the half baronies of Coleraine, Tirkeeran, Kennaught, and Loughinsholin. It is chiefly in Derry diocese, with portions in Armagh and Connor. The principal towns are Londonderry city, with a population in 1861 of 20,153; Coleraine, with a population of 5,628; and Newtownlimavady, with 2,734; the other market towns are Castle-Dawson, Draperstown, Dungiven, Garvagh, Maghera, Magherafelt, and Moneymore—the first three, with Magherafelt, are quarter sessions courts and Poor-law Unions. The principal villages are Articlave, Ballykelly, Clandy, Muff, Portstewart, Ballyronan, Desertmartin, and Swattragh. Since the Union it has only sent four members to the Imperial Parliament—two for the county at large, constituency in 1859, 5,178, one for the city of Londonderry, constituency 825, and one for the borough of Coleraine, constituency, 274; previous to which it sent eight members to the Irish parliament. —The rivers are the Bann, the Foyle, the Faughan, Roe, and Moyola, Macosquin, Owenreagh, and Owenleg, with their numerous feeders. There is a salmon leap at Coleraine, on the Bann. The surface is rugged and hilly, but there are large tracts of very fertile land in the "slacks," or glen, and along the rivers. The principal summits are in the Speerin mountains, where the Sawel attains an altitude of 2,236 feet above the sea-level; Muinard, 2,064 feet; Mullaghash, 1,518 feet; and Streeve, 1,260 feet. In the S.E. part of the county is Slieve Gullion, a mass of porphyry rising to the height of 1,730 feet. Near the edge of the great basalt tableland, to the E. of the river Roe, are the White Mountain, which attains an altitude of about 2,000 feet; Craignahish, a mass of mica slate, 1,723 feet; Carntogher, 1,521 feet; and Benyevenagh, 1,260 feet, commanding a fine view over Loch Foyle. The best improved portions of the county are the district of Lough Neagh, the valley of the Roe, the valley of the Faughan, including the coast of Lough Foyle, between the embouchures of these rivers, and the immediate vicinity of Londonderry, on both sides of the Foyle. To facilitate the development of the agricultural capabilities of the county the Grocers' Company established an agricultural college near Muff, which has done much good. The substratum is chiefly mica slate, clay slate, sandstone, and trap, with isolated tracts of basalt and limestone.—The population in 1851 was 191,868; which, in 1861, had decreased to 184,209. The lands are generally held on lease, and are well cultivated. The inhabitants live principally by agriculture—the chief crops being oats, barley, potatoes, and flax. The net annual value of property under the Tenement Valuation Act is £342,600. Pigs are universally reared by the farmers and cottiers, for the supply of the provision merchants of Belfast, Londonderry, and Coleraine. There is also a breed of hardy, active horses. The barnacle, a species of wild fowl which frequents Lough Foyle in great numbers, is much esteemed for the sweetness of its flesh. The staple manufacture is linen, which is spun everywhere in the vicinity of Derry, Coleraine, Newtownlimavady, and Magherafelt. Pottery is extensively made at Agivey. On the banks of the Roe and Faughan are numerous bleach grounds. Iron and manganese mines have been worked, but without much success, and traces of copper, lead, and coal have been found. The condition of the cottiers and agricultural labourers is wretched enough, and their cottages mere hovels; but they are better off than the peasantry in some other parts of Ireland, wages being 1*s.* per day, besides which many of the peasantry keep pigs, goats, and poultry. At Templemoyle is an agricultural school.—The county is within the Belfast military district, and in the north-western circuit. The assizes are held at Londonderry. It is governed by a lieutenant and 20 deputy-lieutenants, custos rotulorum, high sheriff, and about 80 magistrates. —It is traversed by part of the Londonderry and Enniskillen and Londonderry and Coleraine lines of railway. The principal roads from Derry are by Clandy to Douglas Bridge, where one section runs under the hills to Cookstown, and so to Armagh and Dublin, and another by Magherafelt to Antrim and Belfast. Another line of road passes through Faughanvale and Newtownlimavady to Coleraine, and so to the Giant's Causeway. A third line runs through Coleraine to Garvagh, and so to Moneymore and Cookstown, while numerous cross roads connect the various towns and villages.—The remains of antiquity include Druidical structures at Slaught Manus and Giants' Scone, a rath at Dungorkin, a round tower at Tamlaght-finlaven, abbey ruins at Dungiven, with numerous baronial castles and churches.

LONDONDERRY, a city, seaport, municipal and parliamentary borough exercising separate jurisdiction, but locally in the co. of Londonderry, in the prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 144 miles from Dublin, and 70 miles from Belfast. It is the terminus of the Londonderry and Enniskillen and Londonderry and Coleraine lines of railway. It was originally and is still popularly called Derry. The ancient Irish called it Doire-Calgaich, or Derry-Calgach, and it was not until the incorporation of the Irish Society by James I. that the prefix London was added. The city was burnt twice by the Danes, in the 8th and 9th centuries; besieged in 1100 by Murtagh O'Brien, with a large fleet of foreign vessels (who was defeated by the son of MacLoughlin, Prince of Ailcach); plundered and burnt five times during the 12th century, and five times during the 13th century, by the O'Nials and others. Derry was made a bishop's see in 1158, and given to Richard de Burgo in 1311. It was rebuilt and fortified by Sir H. Dockwra in 1600-3, but was burnt by O'Dogherty in 1608. The following year the city was rebuilt and fortified by the London companies, to whom James I. had sold the city, with all the surrounding forfeited territory. It was besieged by Sir Phelim O'Nial in 1641, and taken by Coote for the parliament in 1649. But the city is most memorable for the siege that took place in 1689, when more than 30,000 Protestants of the North sought refuge within its walls. On this occasion, the prentice boys having shut the gates against James II.'s troops, the garrison, of upwards of 7,000 volunteers, commanded by the celebrated George Walker, rector of Donoughmore, withstood a siege of 105 days by an army of 20,000 men, commanded by the king in person. After enduring unheard-of privations the besieged were relieved by the Dartmouth frigate; though not before one-half of the population had fallen a sacrifice to their heroic bravery. —The centenary of this siege was celebrated in 1788-9. Londonderry is situated on the Donegal side of the river Foyle, on the summit of a hill, called, the "Island of Derry," which is 119 feet high, and is surrounded by massive walls 1,800 yards in circuit, 24 feet high, and broad enough to walk on. These walls were commenced in 1613, and were defended by eight or nine bastions, in which are were completed in 1617, at the expense of the Irish Society, and still remaining some of the old guns, with a pillar 81 feet high, set up in 1828 to the memory of Governor Walker, who so nobly defended the city in 1689, and was subsequently slain at the Boyne. The walls, which form a parallelogram, are pierced by six gates—one of which, the Bishop's Gate, is a triumphal arch built in 1789, at the centenary. Ferryquay Gate is the one which was closed by the prentices against the forces of James II. The city has considerably increased since the Union, and now extends far beyond the ancient ramparts. The houses are chiefly built of brick, and the city is paved and lighted with gas. The waterworks on Brae Head were constructed by the corporation, under an Act of the 40th George III., at an expense of £15,500.—For municipal purposes the city is divided into three wards, East, North, and South, and returns six aldermen and 18 councillors, who, with the mayor and 12 borough magistrates—the latter appointed by the lord-lieutenant—administer the government, under the style of the "mayor, aldermen, and burgesses of the borough of Londonderry." The mayor holds a court of conscience for pleas under 40*s*. Irish, and there is a court of record with pleas to an unlimited amount. The assistant-barrister and the recorder hold quarter sessions, and petty sessions are also held by the borough magistrates. The assizes for the county are held in the city. The population of the parliamentary borough in 1861 was 20,493, inhabiting 2,887 houses. Before the Union it returned two members to parliament, but since it has only returned one member—constituency in 1859, 825. —The bridge, 1,068 feet in length, is of wood, and was constructed by an American, Lemuel Cox, in lieu of a ferry, in 1789-91, at an expense of more than £16,000. —The principal public buildings are the cathedral and two other Protestant episcopal churches, two Roman Catholic chapels, six Presbyterian, an Independent, and two Methodist places of worship; the episcopal palace, built in 1761; Foyle College; the city court-house; prison; custom-house; Chamber of Commerce and News-room; Corporation Hall; barracks; workhouse; deanery, built in 1833; and county lunatic asylum. The cathedral, originally built in 1164, but destroyed by Dockwra, and rebuilt in 1633, is 240 feet long by 66 feet, with an eight-sided spire 288 feet high. The interior contains the tombs of Bishop Knox, by Behnes, and Dr. Hamilton; also two flags taken from the besiegers in a sortie in 1689. The other churches are a Free church, built in 1830 by Bishop Knox, and a chapel-of-ease. There are also five banks and a savings-bank, besides flax-mills, distilleries, breweries, large rope-walks, a foundry, tan-yard, and several flour-mills. Gwyn's Charitable Institution has accommodation for 120 orphans. There are several parochial and Roman Catholic schools, also almshouses for widows of the clergy.—The harbour, formed by the estuary of the Foyle, is spacious, and possesses great natural advantages. It has an income of about £2,000, and at some of the quays vessels of 500 tons may unload. It is under the jurisdiction of the Irish Society, who appoint a vice-admiral for the harbour and adjoining coast. Two railways run along the harbour, and the traffic of the port is managed by a board of harbour commissioners, appointed under the Act 17 and 18 Vic. Abundance of salmon are caught in Lough Foyle, the greater portion being sent to Liverpool. The chief exports are corn, flour, flax, linen, hides, eggs, and provisions. A Cistercian nunnery was founded here in 1218, and a Dominican friary in 1274. Farquhar, the poet, was a native of Londonderry.—The newspapers published in the town are the Londonderry Journal, the Londonderry Sentinel, and the Londonderry Standard. It gives the titles of marquis and earl to the Stewarts.—It gives name to a diocese in the province of Armagh, comprising the counties of Londonderry and Tyrone, with parts of Antrim and Donegal. The see contains 66 benefices, or 102 livings, of which two are unions, and 35 in the patron. of the bishop, whose income is £8,000, and seat Boom Hall Palace. Since 1836 the diocese of Raphoe has been joined to it. The chapter includes a dean, archdeacon, eight rural deans, three prebendaries, vicar-general, and other officers. The Roman Catholic diocese comprises 36 parishes, the bishop's seat being at Derry. —Races take place annually. Markets every day for provisions, Wednesday for linen, and Thursday for flax. Fairs are held on the first Wednesday in each month, and on 17th June, 4th September, and 17th October.

LONDON, LITTLE, many small hmlts. of this name in various parts of England—viz. near Andover, co. Hants; near Basingstoke, co. Hants; near Bishop Stortford, co. Essex; near Great Grimsby, on the Humber, co. Lincoln; near Guildford, co. Surrey; near Heytesbury, co. Wilts; near Leeds, co. York; near Ormskirk, co. Lancaster; near Sutton St. Mary, co. Lincoln; near Thame, co. Bucks; near Thaxted, co. Essex; near Uxbridge, Middlesex.

LONDONTHORPE, a par. in the soke of Grantham, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 2 miles N.E. of Grantham, its post town and railway station, on the Great Northern line of railway. The Roman Ermine Street passes through it. The village is small and wholly agricultural. The tithes were commuted for land and corn rents under an Enclosure Act in 1795. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to that of Manthorpe, in the dioc. of Lincoln. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is a stone edifice with embattled parapet and pinnacles. The interior is supported by light pointed arches. The register commences in 1539. The Wesleyans have a chapel. There are some cottages for the poor, built in the Gothic style. Earl Brownlow is lord of the manor.

LONGA. See Longo, co. Ross.

LONGA, an island in South Skye, co. Inverness, Scotland, 5 miles N. by W. of Broadford.

LONGANNAT, a vil. in the par. of Tullyallan, co. Perth, Scotland, 3 miles S. of Clackmannan. It is situated on the Frith of Forth. Some of the inhabitants are employed in the stone quarries.

LONG-BENTON. See Benton, Long, and the like, for other places having the same distinguishing prefix.

LONGBOROUGH, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Kiftsgate, co. Gloucester, 3 miles N.W. of Stow-on-the-Wolds, its post town, and 9 S.W. of Shipston-on-Stour. The Moreton station on the West Midland line of railway is about 3 miles N.E. from the village, which is considerable. It is situated on the old Roman Fosse Way, and near to a long camp, from which circumstance the place is supposed to have derived its name. The surface is hilly, and the soil in parts sterile. There is a considerable stone quarry, which the inhabitants claim the right of working. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. with the rect. of Seasoncote annexed, £221. The church, dedicated to St. James, is an old stone edifice of the Anglo-Saxon period, with a tower surmounted by pinnacles. It has been enlarged and repaired. The charities produce about £5 per annum. There is a parochial school. Lord Leigh is lord of the manor.

LONGBREDY. See Bredy, Long, co. Dorset.

LONGBRIDGE HUNDRED, one of the subdivisions of the rape of Pevensey, co. Sussex. It is situated in the south-eastern part of the co., and includes the pars. of Arlington, Berwick, Folkington, Littlington, and Wilmington, comprising an area of about 10,500 acres.

LONGBRIDGE HUNDRED, one of the subdivisions of the lathe of Scray, co. Kent.

LONGBURGH, a tnshp. in the par. of Burgh-by-Sands, ward and co. of Cumberland, 1 mile W. of Burgh, and 6 N.W. of Carlisle. It is situated on the south bank of the ship canal, and includes the two hmlts. of Dykesfield and Shield.

LONGBURTON, a par. in the hund. of Sherborne, co. Dorset, 2 miles S.E. of Sherborne, its post town, and 14 N. of Dorchester. The village is situated on the main road from Bath to Weymouth. Many of the women are employed in making gloves for the Yeovil manufacturers. There are extensive quarries of limestone for building. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. with the perpet. cur. of Holnest annexed, £275. The church is dedicated to St. James. It contains some monuments of the Fitz James's family. The charities produce about £1 per annum. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have chapels. There is a National school. J. S. W. S. E. Drax, Esq., is lord of the manor.

LONGCASTLE, an ancient par. in co. Wigtown, Scotland, now united to Kirkinner.

LONGCOTT, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. and hund. of Shrivenham, co. Berks, 4 miles S.W. of Faringdon, its post town, and 9 N.W. of Wantage. It is situated in White Horse Vale, close to the Wilts and Berks canal, and the Great Western railway passes through the neighbourhood. The tithes were commuted for land, and an annual money payment under an Inclosure Act in. 1796. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £300, in the patron. of the Lord Chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient edifice, recently enlarged, and has an embattled tower. The Wesleyans have a chapel. There are charity and parochial schools. Viscount Barrington is lord of the manor.

LONGDALE-END, a tnshp. in the par. of Wykeham, North Riding of the co. York, 10 miles E. of Pickering.

LONGDEN, a chplry. in the par. of Pontesbury, hund. of Ford, co. Salop, 3½ miles S.E. of Pontesbury, and 5 S.W. of Shrewsbury, its post town. There are malt kilns and lead mines, which employ many of the inhabitants. The living is a don. cur. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £75. The church, dedicated to St. Ruthin, is a small edifice of brick. There is a place of worship for Independents.

LONGDON, a par. in the S. div. of the hund. of Offlow, co. Stafford, 4 miles N.W. of Lichfield, and 4 S.E. of Rugeley, its post town. The Armitage station, on the London and North-Western line of railway, is about 1 mile N. from the village, which is a long, irregular place. The par., which is of large extent, includes Gentle Shaw, Brereton, and several other hmlts. It belongs chiefly to the Marquis of Anglesey. The surface is undulating and well wooded. Coal is found. The Trent and Mersey canal passes about two miles northward of the church. Portions of this parish and of the parish of Cannock were, in 1837, assigned as a district to the church at Gentleshaw. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £180, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. James, is a stone edifice, with a Norman arch. It contains numerous monuments, some very curious. There are almshouses for 9 poor women, and other charities, producing about £80 per annum. The Independents and Wesleyan Methodists have each two chapels, and there is a very ancient burial-ground belonging to the Society of Friends at Gentleshaw. The National school for both boys and girls has an endowment of £5 per annum. The Marquis of Anglesey is lord of the manor, and has a seat at Cannock Chase, called "Beaudesert," about 2 miles distant from the village. It was formerly the palace of the Bishops of Lichfield, and at several times has undergone improvements. The park and grounds are most tastefully laid out. A spring, called the "Nun's Well," is believed by many to possess medicinal properties. There are several good residences, and traces of ancient camps in the neighbourhood.

LONGDON, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Pershore, co. Worcester, 3 miles S.W. of Upton-on-Severn, and 4 N.W. of Tewkesbury, its post town and nearest railway station on the Midland line. It is situated within a short distance of the western bank of the river Severn, and includes the hmlts. of Eastington, Hilworth, Hill-End, and several other small places. The road from Upton to Gloucester passes through the village. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £845, besides 94 acres of appropriate glebe. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. with the perpet. cur. of Castle-Morton annexed, £448, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Westminster, who are the appropriators and lords of the manor. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a brick structure with stone tower, containing a peal of 6 bells, re-cast in 1835. The register commences in 1538. The charities consist of Godwin's school endowment, producing £34, and others for the poor, realising altogether about £50 per annum. There is a National school held in a new building.

LONGDON-UPON-TERNE, a par. in the hund. of South Bradford, co. Salop, 3 miles N.W. of Wellington, and 10 N.E. of Shrewsbury, its post town. It is situated on the river Terne, which is here crossed by the Shrewsbury canal by means of an aqueduct 186 feet in length. The main road between Wellington and Wem passes through the village. The river, which is here fed by several smaller streams, is crossed by two bridges. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £210. The living is a don. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £182. The church, dedicated to St. Bartholomew, is a small edifice of brick. There is a parochial school for both sexes, built by the Duke of Sutherland, who is lord of the manor.

LONGFIELD, a par. in the hund. of Axton, lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, co. Kent, 5 miles S.W.½ of Gravesend, and 5 S.E. of Dartford, its post town. The Meopham station on the London, Chatham, and Dover line of railway, is about 4 miles E. of the village, which is small and wholly agricultural. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £193, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is a small edifice, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene. Archdeacon Plume, founder of the Plumian professorship of astronomy at Cambridge, lies buried here. The charities consist of property bequeathed by the above for increasing the value of poor livings and other purposes, producing about £340 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes.

LONGFIELD, EAST, or UPPER, a par. in the bar. of Omagh, co. Tyrone, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, containing a large portion of the town of Drumquin. Omagh is its post town. The par. is 5 miles long and 3 broad. The surface consists of a fair soil. It is watered by the river Fairy Water and Lough Claraghmore. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Derry, val. £235, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built by aid of a gift from the late Board of First Fruits in 1803. Here is a Presbyterian meeting-house, also three Sunday and several day schools.

LONGFIELD, WEST, or LOWER, a par. in the bar. of Omagh. co. Tyrone, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, containing a portion of the town of Drumquin, which is its post town. It is 7 miles long by 6 broad. The surface is mostly barren, but diversified by several lakes. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Derry, val. £600, in the patron. of the bishop. Here are a church, Roman Catholic chapel, and several Sunday and day schools. Cloverhill is the only residence.

LONGFLEET, a tythg. in the par. of Canford Magna, hund. of Cogdean, co. Dorset, 1 mile N. of Poole, its post town, and 6 S. of Wimborne. The village is included in the borough of Poole, and the workhouse for that Union is situated here. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £85. The church is of recent date, erected chiefly at the expense of Lord de Mauley. There is a National school for both sexes. Sir I. B. Guest, Bart., is lord of the manor.

LONGFORD, an inland co. of the prov. of Leinster, Ireland, lying between 53° 29′ and 53° 56′ N. lat., and between 7° 19′ and 7° 56′ W. long. It is bounded on the N. by the cos. of Leitrim and Cavan, on the E. and S. by the co. of Westmeath, and on the W. by the co. of Roscommon. Its greatest length from N. to S. is 29 miles, and its greatest breadth from E. to W. 22 miles, comprising an area of 420 square miles, or 269,409 acres, of which 191,823 are arable, 58,937 uncultivated, 4,610 in plantations, 13,675 under water, and 364 in towns and roads. In ancient times it formed part of the native kingdom of Meath, and as such was included in the grant made by Henry II. to Hugh de Lacy, who built castles and planted a colony of English, represented by the Tuite and Delamere families; but the O'Farrels held the chief power till the time of Elizabeth. In the 11th year of that reign, Sir Henry Sidney, then Lord Deputy, constituted it a separate county, under the name of Longford, from its chief town; and in the 29th year of the same reign, Faghan O'Farrel, the prince of Annaly, made a formal surrender of his territory to the queen, and next year obtained a re-grant, subject to the jurisdiction of the English law. In 1615, a commission was appointed by James I. to inquire into his title to the territory, and upwards of 17,904 acres were seized to the king's use by virtue of the Act of Absentees, and disposed of to patentees. The plantation did not take effect to any great extent; and when the civil war commenced in 1641, the entire county appears to have been in the possession of the O'Farrels, except Longford Castle and Castle Forbes, both of which were then besieged and taken by the Irish for the O'Farrels. But the ultimate triumph of Cromwell's forces entirely reversed the fate of the country, and the O'Farrels lost both their property and influence. The confiscations which ensued extended over nearly the entire county, and introduced a new proprietary, most of whom were of English descent.—The population in 1851 was 85,350, and, in 1861, 71,694, and the net annual value of property in the county under the Tenement Valuation Act, is £151,598. The surface is for the most part flat, and, in many places, overspread with large tracts of bog. Towards the N., where Longford borders on the county of Leitrim, it rises into bleak and sterile mountains; but towards the S., it is much more fertile and well cultivated, especially in the valley of the Inny. In the S. the only considerable eminence is Slieve Gauldry, which rises to the height of 650 feet, and consists of a mass of sandstone, resting upon a stratum of stratified limestone, which constitutes the prevailing formation of the southern portion of the county and the tract in the north-eastern part of it. The hilly district in the N.W. is chiefly clay slate, of the graywacke formation, so prevalent in the adjoining county of Cavan. The principal range of hills is the Clonhugh, which extends for about 10 miles in a south-westerly direction, attaining an altitude of 912 feet at Cairn Clonhugh. The line of division between the limestone and clay-slate proceeds from the Camlin river, near Longford, by St. Johnstown, between Lough Kinale and Lough Gownagh, to the head of Lough Sheelin. To the W. of the clay-slate formation in the north-western extremity of the county, is a considerable tract of sandstone, which stretches on both sides of the Shannon into the counties of Roscommon and Leitrim. Marly clay in beds, from 1 foot to 10 feet thick, underlies many of the boggy tracts, which are of great extent, and have an average depth of 30 feet. In these bogs the scented myrtle, and many rare species of plants, are found, particularly in the barony of Longford. Near Ballymahon, a marble of a deep grey colour is raised, and near Lough Gownagh is a small tract of millstone grit. The only mineral treasures at present discovered are lead ore and ironstone rock. This latter, mixed with coal shale, is abundant in the vicinity of Lough Gownagh and Benlaghy, not in thin layers like those of the Arigna district, but regular in formation and of a deep red colour. No systematic attempts have, however, yet been made to work either of these minerals; ochres of various colours are common. Notwithstanding the abundance of limestone, sandstone, and gravel, pure water is rather scarce and the streams few. The whole drainage of the county, except a few streams that fall into Lough Gownagh, is towards the Shannon. This noble river connects the county with the important line of navigation, extending from Lough Allen to the city of Limerick; and, by another line, through Longford, with the city of Dublin. On first entering the county, the Shannon expands into Lough Forbes, about 3 miles long by 1½ mile broad, and here receives the waters of the Rhinn flowing out of Leitrim; about 2 miles farther on it receives the waters of the Camlin, which rises near the eastern boundary of the county, and pursues a winding course of 20 miles towards the W. After passing the county town, it receives the waters of the Keenagh and another stream from the S.; then those of the Fallen and Ownamount, two insignificant streams. The Shannon then expands into the extensive lake of Lough Ree, the banks of which are diversified by deep bays, rugged headlands, and numerous islands. At this point it is joined by the Inny, which flows through a rich country in a winding course by Ballymahon, and forms part of the southern boundary of the county. Few rivers present so many facilities for water carriage as the Inny, the total fall from Finea to the Shannon being only 90 feet, and the main obstructions to its navigation the two shallows between the Shannon and Ballymahon, and the ridge of rocks between the latter and Newcastle. The waters of Lough Ree, swollen by numerous streams in winter, rise to an average height of 7 feet above the summer level, and inundate the country to a wide extent on its banks. The islands of this lake are numerous, and some of them large: those within the county of Longford are All Saints, Inchban, Innis-bofin, Innisdoran, Inchynough, and Quakers' Island. Besides the loughs already mentioned, many smaller lakes diversify the surface of the county, as Loughs Gownagh and Kinale, between this county and Cavan; also, Loughs Bon, Bonnow, Drum, Derry, Drumurry, Doogary, Gurteen, Tully, and Glin. The Royal Canal passes through the county in a westerly direction, entering from Westmeath by an aqueduct over the Inny, near Tinellick, and joins the Shannon at Richmond Harbour, in its course having sent out a branch northwards to the town of Longford. Two branches of the Midland Great Western railway pass through the county from Mullingar to Longford and Cavan. The roads are numerous and well made, but are in general wet, owing to the watercourses being neglected.—The soil varies very considerably both in quality and composition, being in parts a light thin mould, in others a deep loamy clay, alternating with bog and marl, while the best lands in the south are a rich vegetable mould, resting on blue clay or limestone gravel. Large tracts in the north are still in a state of nature, and are of little value except as sheep walks, while the rich lands of the south, especially in the barony of Granard, produce herbage of the finest quality for grazing, and the high lands between Edgeworthstown and Longford yield heavy grain crops. The climate, however, of this part of Ireland being mild and damp, is, on the whole, better adapted for pastures and green-crops, and, under a better system of drainage, would rank with the best grazing lands in the kingdom. The lower grounds, which are chiefly in pasture, produce great varieties of acidulous plants, occasioned by the overflowing of the rivers and by the accumulation of the surface waters, which have at present no sufficient outlets. The occupations are tillage and grazing, chiefly the latter. A few manufactures only, as linen cloth, linen yarn, flannels, friezes, and coarse woollens, are carried on chiefly for domestic consumption.—The county returns two members to the Imperial Parliament, and had a constituency in 1859 of 2,869. It is in Ardagh diocese, with a small portion in Meath. It is divided into 6 baronies, Ardagh, Granard, Longford, Moydow, Rathcline, and Shrule, comprising 26 parishes. The principal towns are Longford, the county town, where the Assizes are held, and where are the county prison and county infirmary, with a population in 1861, of 4,535, Granard with a population of 1,665, and Ballymahon,—at all these quarter sessions are held, and each is the seat of a Poor-law Union. The county is within the N.W. circuit, and forms part of the military district of Dublin, where are barracks for cavalry and military. The constabulary force has its headquarters at Longford, but the staff of the county militia is stationed at Newtown-Forbes.—Fossil remains of many extinct animals have been discovered in the limestone caverns and fissures; also, bones and horns of the elk and red deer in the marl at the foot of the Escars, and beneath several of the bogs. The remains of antiquity are very few. A large rath, usually called the Moat of Granard, stands at one end of the main street of that town; another, called Lisardowlin, situate near the road from Longford to Edgeworthstown, was probably connected with the rampart of Dunela, which runs from Lough Kinale to Lough Gownagh, about 8 miles, and is supposed to have formed part of the division between the ancient kingdoms of Meath and Ulster. Monastic institutions were numerous and well endowed; the Abbey of Longford is said to have been originally founded by St. Patrick, and was afterwards rebuilt by O'Farrel, Prince of Annaly, in 1400. There were also abbeys, or priories, at Abbeyshrule, Ardagh, Clone, Clonebrone, Dery, Druimchei, Granard, where are ruins of a round tower, Killinmore, Lesha, or Laragh, and Moydow, besides those of the Islands of Innismore, a foundation of St. Columba's in Lough Gownagh; Innisbofin, founded by a nephew of St. Patrick, about 530, in Lough Ree, Innisclоran, or Inch-Clorin, also in Lough Ree, on which are the ruins of seven churches and a round tower, and All Saints' monastery, founded by St. Kieran in 544. Ruins of all the above remain, but of the priories at Ballynasaggard, Kilglass, and St. Johnstown, no vestiges can now be found. At Lanesborough are the ruins of a preceptory of the Knights Templars. A few castles are still partially standing; the most interesting are Granard Castle, built on the summit of a lofty hill, and commanding an extensive view over the level country; Castle-Forbes, the strongly-fortified seat of the Forbes family; Ballymahon, erected to defend the ford of the Inny, of which the vaults only remain; Rathcline, the chief residence of the O'Cuins; Barnacor and Lot's Castles, on the opposite banks of the Inny; Tenellick, a very strong castle, of which there are considerable ruins.

LONGFORD, a bar. in co. Longford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It is 14½ miles in length, and its greatest breadth is 10½. Its boundaries are the bars. of Granard, Ardagh, Moydow, and cos. Roscommon and Leitrim. It contains part of the pars. of Killashee, Killoe, Mohill, and Templemichael, and the whole of Clongesh.

LONGFORD, an incorporated market and post town and capital of the co. of Longford, in the par. of Templemichael, partly in the bar. of Longford, but chiefly in that of Ardagh, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 20 miles N.W. of Mullingar, and 75 W.N.W. of Dublin by road, or 76 by the Midland Great Western and Great Northern and Western of Ireland railway, which has a branch line to this town. This place, anciently called Athfadha, was the site of a monastery founded by St. Idus, a disciple of St. Patrick, and also of a Dominican Abbey founded in 1400, and which continued to flourish till the Dissolution. The castle, a place of some strength, was taken by the insurgents from the O'Ferrals in 1641, and the garrison put to the sword. In 1657 Francis Lord Aungier, Baron of Longford, who had become proprietor of the town, obtained from Charles II. the grant of a charter incorporating the town by the designation of the "sovereign, bailiffs, and burgesses of the borough of Longford," with the power of holding a court of record before his seneschal, of appointing bailiffs for his manor court, and maintaining a gaol for the manor and town. Previous to the Union it was a parliamentary borough, returning two members to the Irish parliament, but was then disfranchised. The corporation still consists of a sovereign, two bailiffs, twelve burgesses, and other officers, but its functions are now little more than nominal. The assizes for the county and quarter sessions are held here. The population in 1861 was 4,535. The town, which stands on the left bank of the river Camlin, with a small portion on the opposite bank, is well built. It consists of several regular streets of good houses, and has recently been much improved. The streets are paved and well kept, being cleaned and lighted by a general rate. It contains the county court house, the county gaol, erected in 1825 on the radiating principle, a market-house, erected by the late Lord Longford, cavalry and artillery barracks, built on the right bank of the river, a principal police station, county infirmary and dispensary, and a branch of the bank of Ireland, which has been established here since 1834. The parish church of Templemichael is situated in the town, also a Roman Catholic cathedral recently erected, with a tower 200 feet high and a portico of six Ionic columns. Besides these there are Presbyterian and Methodist meeting-houses. The trade of the town has considerably increased since the extension into it of a branch of the Royal canal and a branch line of railway from the Midland Great Western of Ireland. It is now one of the best markets for corn, pork, bacon, and butter, and has a considerable trade in linen and coarse woollens. There are extensive storehouses in the town, also a whisky distillery, brewery, several tan-yards, a butter market, and shambles. At the termination of the new cut from the Royal canal a basin for boats was constructed by the late Earl of Longford, to whom the town is indebted for many of its improvements. The principal seats in the vicinity are Castle Forbes, of the Earl of Granard; Carrickglass, of the Lefroys; Mount Jessop, and Clonbolt. The Longford Poor-law Union comprises 19 electoral divisions in the baronies of Ardagh and Longford. Market days are Wednesday and Saturday, chiefly for corn, butter, bacon, pigs, hemp, and flax. Fairs are held on the 25th March, 10th June, 19th August, and 22nd October. The June and October fairs are most frequented.

LONGFORD, a bar. in co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland. It is bounded by the bars. of Leitrim, Kilconnel, and Clonmacnoon, and cos. Roscommon, King's County, and Tipperary. It is 15 miles long, and its average breadth is 8. It contains the pars. of Clonfert, Donanaghta, Fahy, Kilmalinoge, Kilquain, Kiltormer, Lickmolassy, Meelick, Tiranascragh, and parts of Abbeygormacan, Clontuskert, Dunery, Killimorbologue, Tynagh, and Killoran, with the towns and vils. of Eyrecourt, Lawrencetown, and Portumna.

LONGFORD, a par. and tnshp. in the hund. of Appletree, co. Derby, 6 miles S. of Ashborne, and 9 W. by N. of Derby, its post town. It is situated on a tributary of the river Dove, and includes the hmlts. of Alkmonton, Hollington, Hungry Bently, and Rodsley. The land is chiefly in pasture, with a very small quantity of arable and woodland. The soil is in general fertile. At Alkmonton are traces of an ancient religious house. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £700. The parish church, dedicated to St. Chad, is an ancient structure, mostly in the Norman style of architecture. It contains freestone stalls, and a monument of the Countess of Leicester. There is also a district church at Alkmonton, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £50. There are almshouses founded by Sir R. Coke, and endowed with property producing £55 per annum. In 1688 Lady Catherine Coke bequeathed land producing £50 per annum for school purposes. The total amount of charities is about £77 per annum. The Earl of Leicester is lord of the manor.

LONGFORD, a par. in the Newport div. of the hund. of South Bradford, co. Salop, 1 mile S.W. of Newport, its post town, and 16 miles N.E. of Shrewsbury. The Shropshire Union railway has a station here. The par. includes the tnshps. of Drockton and Stockton. A Roman station appears formerly to have occupied the site of the present village. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £144 16*s.* 6*d.* The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £415. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a modern structure, with a square tower and stained-glass windows. Adjoining the church is a portion of the former one, containing monuments of the Talbot family. Longford Hall has a Doric portico, and is situated in an extensive park. It is the seat of the Leeke family, to whom the manor belongs. This is a meet for the Hoar Cross hounds.

LONGFORD, a hmlt. in the par. of Britford, co. Wilts, 2 miles S.E. of Salisbury. It is watered by the river Avon. Here is Longford Castle, a seat of Earl Radnor, in which is a collection of paintings by the old masters, including some portraits of eminent persons. There is also a steel chair, with about 130 bas-reliefs taken from Roman history, and a triangular house erected by Lord Coleraine, both of the 16th century.

LONGFORD, a hmlt. in the par. of Kingsland, hund. of Stretford, co. Hereford, 4 miles N.W. of Leominster.

LONGFORD, a hmlt. in the borough of Coventry and hund. of Knightlow, co. Warwick, 3 miles N. by E. of Coventry. It is a station on the Coventry and Nuneaton branch of the London and North-Western railway.

LONGFORD, a tnshp. in the par. of Morton-Sey, co. Salop, 2 miles W. of Market Drayton.

LONGFORD, a hmlt. in the par. of Stanwell, co. Middlesex, 1 mile E. of Colnbrook, and 17 miles W. of London. It is situated on the river Colne, and is frequented by anglers.

LONGFORD ST. CATHERINE, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Catherine, upper div. of the hund. of Dodstone, co. Gloucester. It is situated to the N. of the city of Gloucester, about 1 mile from the railway station. The Romans appear to have had a colony here. Henry VIII. gave the manor to the see of Gloucester, to which it still belongs.

LONGFORD ST. MARY, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Mary-de-Lode, hund. and co. as above. It adjoins the hmlt. of Longford St. Catherine. Longford House is the principal residence, from which there are some good views.

LONGFORGAN, a par. in co. Perth, Scotland, 11 miles N.E. of Perth. It is a railway station on the Dundee and Perth line. It includes the vils. of Balbunno, Kingoodie, and Lochtown, and was given by Bruce in 1315 to Sir A. Gray, and made a burgh of barony in 1672 under the Earls of Strathmore. It belongs for the most part to Patterson, of Castle Huntley, an ancient structure. The par. is 7 miles in length, and its greatest breadth 3 miles. The coast line measures 4 miles. The parish partly consists of rich carse land, and the surface rises 667 feet above the level of the sea at Dion hill camp, 972 feet at Ballo, and 1,172 at Lochtown. In the neighbourhood are several stone quarries, including the noted one at Kingoodie. The par. is in the presb. of Dundee and synod of Angus and Mearns, in the patron. of the crown. The minister's stipend is £268. The parish church, rebuilt in 1795 in the pointed style of architecture, has the old steeple. There is a Free church and four non-parochial schools. There are the ruins of a chapel which once belonged to the monks of Cupar Angus. Mylnefield House and Lockton House are the chief mansions. About the year 1790 near 300 coins of Edward I. were found here. There is a tumulus known as the Market-Knowe which is 15 feet high, and 84 feet in diameter. A large number of the inhabitants are employed in weaving by the manufacturers of Dundee. Fairs, chiefly for cattle, are held on the fourth Saturday in April, the third Saturday in June, and the third Saturday in October.

LONGFORMACUS AND ELLIM, an united par. in Lammermuir, in co. Berwick, Scotland, 6½ miles W.N.W. of Dunse, its post town. It is situated on the rivers Whitadder and Dye. The size of the parish is 12 miles by 6, with a hilly surface. About 18,800 imperial acres are pastoral, 2,200 under tillage, and 350 under wood. Copper ore is found. The principal summit is Dirrington Great Law, which rises to the height of 1,145 above sea level. The par. is in the presb. of Dunse and synod of Merse and Teviotdale. The minister's stipend is £231. The church is an ancient structure repaired in 1830. The mansion of Longformacus is the only seat here. In the vicinity is Byrecleugh tumulus, which measures 240 feet by 75, and is 18 feet high.

LONGHAM, a par. in the hund. of Launditch, co. Norfolk, 4 miles N.W. of East Dereham, its post town, and 9 N.E. of Swaffham. The Fransham station on the Great Eastern line of railway is about 3 miles S.W. of the village, which is a small agricultural place. The land is chiefly arable, with a very small quantity of pasture and woodland. The common, comprising above 300 acres, was enclosed in 1814. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £285. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. with that of Wendling annexed, £82. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient structure with a square embattled tower. It contains some remains of a richly carved screen. The Wesleyans have a chapel. There is a school supported by the Earl of Leicester, who is lord of the manor. In 1816 traces of Roman road and numerous ancient skeletons were discovered here.

LONGHAM, a hmlt. in the par. of Hampreston and lib. of Westover, co. Hants, 4 miles S.E. of Wimborne-Minster. It is locally within the co. of Dorset.

LONGHIRST, a tnshp. in the par. of Bothal, eastern div. of the ward of Morpeth, co. Northumberland, 2½ miles N.W. of Bothal, and 3 N.E. of Morpeth, its post town. It is a station on the North-Eastern line of railway, which passes a short distance E. of the village. A small stream passes through the township, which is the property of the Duke of Portland and of the Lawson family. A convenient building was erected here in 1847, for the accommodation of the National school, to which is attached a good library and reading-room. Longhirst Grange and Longhirst Hall are seats here.

LONGHOPE, a par. in the union of Westbury, Duchy of Lancaster, co. Gloucester, 5 miles S. of Newent, 6 N. of Newnham, its post town, and 9 W. of Gloucester. The Gloucester and Hereford branch of the Great Western railway has a station here. The main road between Gloucester and Coleford passes through the village, which is considerable. May Hill, in this parish, forms a landmark from the Bristol Channel. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £396 17s. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £384. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient edifice. The parochial endowments, including £135 derived from land, produce nearly £150 per annum. The Baptists and Wesleyans have chapels. Edmond Probyn, Esq., is lord of the manor. Longhope House is the principal residence.

LONG ISLAND, on the coast of Cork, Ireland, 3 miles S.W. of Skull. It is separated from the main land by Long Island Sound, which affords good anchorage. The island is about 3 miles in length, by ½ mile broad, and is a coastguard station.

LONG-LANE, a hmlt. in the par. of Wrockwardine, co. Salop, 2 miles W. of Wellington. It is situated near the river Tern and the Shrewsbury and Birmingham railway. Some of the inhabitants are employed in the neighbouring coal and ironstone mines.

LONGLEAT, a seat of the Marquis of Bath, in co. Wilts, 4 miles W. of Warminster. It is situated on the banks of the river Frome, and is surrounded by a park 15 miles in circumference. The present mansion, which is in the Italian style of architecture, is 220 feet long by 180. It was begun in 1567 after designs by John de Padua, and has recently been improved by Wyatt; it contains a massive baronial hall, and a spacious portrait gallery, with paintings by Reynolds and other ancient masters.

LONG LEYS, a vil. in the par. of Cupar-Angus, co. Perth, Scotland.

LONG LOCH, an arm of the sea running up from Holy Loch in the Frith of Clyde about 18 miles between the cos. of Argyle and Dumbarton, Scotland. It has Ben Arthur at its head, and is from 2 to 3 miles wide.

LONG LOCH, a branch of Loch Alsh in Kintail, co. Ross, Scotland. It is about 5 miles in length to the mouth of the Loigh, or Long.

LONGMARSTONE, an ext. par. place united with Asthorpe, and locally in the par. of Marsworth, co. Bucks, 3 miles W. of Ivinghoe. The Great Western railway passes through the neighbourhood.

LONGMEADOW, a hmlt. in the par. of Bottisham, co. Cambridge, 6 miles N.E. of Cambridge.

LONG MEG, a large mass of whinstone 18 feet high by 15 round, forming part of a Druidical circle, locally known as "Long Meg and her Daughters," and situated on a heath between the Eden and Hartside Fells in co. Cumberland, 3 miles S. by E. of Kirkoswald.

LONGMONT, or LONG MYND, a range of hills in co. Salop, running in a south-westerly direction, and at one point attaining an altitude of 1,675 feet.

LONGMORN, a hmlt. in the par. and co. of Elgin, Scotland. It is a station on the Great North of Scotland railway.

LONGNER, a tnshp. in the par. of St. Chad, co. Salop, 2 miles S.E. of Shrewsbury. It is situated on the river Severn. Longner Hall is a fine seat.

LONGNESS, a promontory of St. Michael's Island, Isle of Man, near Derby Haven.

LONGNEWTON, a vil. in the par. of Ancrum, co.

Roxburgh, Scotland, 3 miles N.W. of Ancrum, and 5 from Jedburgh. It is situated near the river Ale, a branch of the Teviot, on the borders of Ancrum moor, where the English were defeated in 1645 by the Regent Arran.

LONGNEY, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Whitstone, co. Gloucester, 6 miles S.W. of Gloucester, its post town, and 7 N.W. of Stroud. It is situated on the banks of the river Severn, which is here navigable, and the Haresfield station on the Gloucester and Bristol railway is about 3½ miles S.E. from the village. This place is famous for the growth of the russet apples. A considerable portion of the parish is in orchard grounds. The tithes were commuted for land and corn rents under an Enclosure Act in 1812. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £100. The church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, is an ancient stone edifice with a tower. The parochial charities amount to about £30 per annum. The Independents have a chapel.

LONGNIDDRY, a vil. in the par. of Gladsmuir, co. Haddington, Scotland, 3 miles S.W. of Aberlady. It is a junction station of the North British railway. The old mansion where John Knox was tutor is now in ruins.

LONGNOR, a tnshp. and small market town in the par. of Allstonefield, N. div. of the hund. of Totmonslow, co. Stafford, 6 miles S. of Buxton, its post town, 10 N.E. of Leek, and 29 N.E. of Stafford. It is situated in the north-eastern part of the county on the borders of Derbyshire, between the rivers Dove and Manifold. The tnshp. includes the hmlt. of Nab End. Although nominally a market town, it is but an inconsiderable village. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £150, in the patron. of the vicar of the parish. The church, dedicated to St. Bartholomew, is a plain edifice, built towards the close of the last century, and enlarged with galleries in 1812. The charities produce about £11 per annum, which is applied to school purposes and relief of poor widows. The Wesleyans have a chapel. There is a parochial school with a small endowment. Sir John Harper Crewe, Bart., is lord of the manor. Tuesday is market day. Fairs are held on the Tuesday before old Candlemas Day, Easter Tuesday, 4th and 17th May, Whit-Tuesday, 5th August, Tuesday before old Michaelmas Day, and 12th November.

LONGNOR, a par. in the hund. of Condover, co. Salop, 5 miles N.E. of Church Stretton, and 8 S. of Shrewsbury, its post town. The Leebotwood station on the Shrewsbury and Hereford line of railway, is about 1½ mile from the village. It is situated on the river Onny in a hilly neighbourhood. The Romans had a station here. Coal is obtained. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to that of Leebotwood, in the dioc. of Lichfield. The church is an ancient edifice, formerly belonging to Haughmond Abbey. The parochial endowments produce about £44 per annum. There is a National school. This was the birth-place of the Rev. Samuel Lee, a self-taught linguist, and formerly professor of Arabic at Cambridge. Longnor Hall is the principal residence.

LONGO, or LONGA, a small island at the mouth of the river Gairloch, and belonging to the par. of Gairloch, on the W. coast of Ross, Scotland.

LONGOBOBY, a deanery in the archdeac. and dioc. of Lincoln.

LONGPARISH, a par. in the upper half of the hund. of Wherwell, co. Hants, 4 miles W. of Andover, and 4 S.W. of Whitchurch, its post town. The London and South-Western railway has a station 5 miles N.W. from the village. It is situated on the river Jest, or Anton, and includes the tnshps. of Forton and Middleton, with the tythgs. of East and West Aston. The parish, which is of large extent, is almost wholly arable and woodland. The surface is flat, and the soil gravelly. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £226. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is an ancient structure. There is a small charity left by Thomas Blake in 1796 for the purpose of educating children. The Baptists have a chapel. H. Beaumont Coles, Esq., is lord of the manor. Longparish House is the principal residence.

LONGPORT, commonly styled a borough in the par. of St. Paul, city of Canterbury, and partly in the hund. of Westgate, co. Kent. This was formerly reckoned a distinct borough, forming part of the above parish, but has long been included within the city of Canterbury, with which it is contiguous on the eastern side.

LONGPORT, a vil. in the tnshp. and par. of Burslem, co. Stafford, 2 miles from Burslem. It is situated on a branch of the Trent canal, on the banks of which are several wharfs. Many of the people are employed in the manufacture of china and earthenware, and flint glass. It was anciently called Longbridge, from a number of stepping-stones which formed a causeway across the meadows. The church of St. Paul, Burslem, stands on rising ground near this village, which may be considered a suburb of that town. There are places of worship belonging to several Dissenting bodies, and district schools.

LONG REACH, a bend of the river Thames near Gravesend, including the measured nautical mile of 1,940 yards, where the speed of steamers is tested.

LONGRIDGE, a tnshp. in the par. of Norham, hund. of Norhamshire, co. Northumberland, 3 miles S.W. of Berwick-on-Tweed. Until recently it was included in the county of Durham. Longridge House is the principal residence.

LONGRIDGE, a lib. in the par. of Penkridge, co. Stafford, 1 mile N.W. of Penkridge.

LONGRIDGE, a vil. and chplry. in the tnshp. of Dilworth and par. of Ribchester, lower div. of the hund. of Blackburn, co. Palatine of Lancaster, 4 miles W. of Clitheroe. It is situated on the road from Preston to Clitheroe, near the river Ribble, and in the vicinity of Longridge Fell. There is a railway from Preston to the Fell, constructed chiefly for the conveyance of freestone from the celebrated "Delphs." A hospital is said to have been founded here at a distant period for a master and brethren, and dedicated to the Virgin Mary and our Saviour. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £170, in the patron. of Hulme's trustees. The church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, had a new tower built to it in 1841. Fairs are held on St. Lawrence's Day, 16th March, 16th April, Monday in Passion week, and 5th November, for the sale of live stock.

LONGRIGG, a tnshp. united with Mealrig, in the par. of Bromfield, co. Cumberland, 6 miles S.W. of Wigton.

LONGRIGGEN, a hmlt. in the par. of Slamanan, co. Stirling, Scotland, 2 miles from Slamanan, and 5 S. of Falkirk. It is a station on the Midland railway.

LONG ROCK, a dangerous reef off Ballywalter, in co. Down, Ireland.

LONG SANDS, an extensive sand bank lying between the Kentish Knock and Sunk Channel in the North Sea, at the mouth of the Thames. It is 5 miles broad in one part, and partly dry at low water.

LONGSDON, a tnshp. in the par. of Leek, N. div. of the hund. of Totmonslow, co. Stafford, 2 miles S.W. of Leek.

LONGSHAWS, a tnshp. in the par. of Long Horsley, western div. of the ward of Morpeth, co. Northumberland, 5 miles S.W. of Long Horsley, and 5 N. of Morpeth. It is a small agricultural place. Here are some ruins of a very ancient seat called the Launches.

LONGSHIPS, dangerous rocks off the coast of Cornwall, 2 miles W. of Land's End. They are marked by a fixed light visible for 14 miles, in N. lat. 50° 4′, and W. long. 50° 45′.

LONGSIDE, a par. in the district of Buchan and co. Aberdeen, Scotland, 6 miles W. of Peterhead, of which parish it was part until 1620. It is a railway station on the Great North of Scotland line. The par. is about 6 miles long by 5 broad, and contains about 16,000 acres, of which 12,500 are under tillage. The surface, though undulating, lies low. It is in the presb. of Deer and synod of Aberdeen, in the patron. of the crown. The minister's stipend is £217. The parish church was erected in 1836, and is a commodious structure. There is an Episcopalian chapel, and also a Free church. Throughout the parish there are three parochial schools, two girls' schools, partly endowed, and several unendowed schools. There are saw and meal mills in the neighbourhood; and at Millbank in this parish there was formerly a woollen factory. There is a savings-bank in the village. Fairs are held here on the Wednesday following the 12th May, and on the Tuesday after the 7th November. In the churchyard is a monument to the memory of the Rev. John Skinner, the correspondent of Burns, and for many years minister of the Episcopalian chapel here. There are several tumuli at Cairn Catto.

LONGSIGHT, an ecclesiastical district in the par. and borough of Manchester, co. palatine of Lancaster, 2 miles S.W. of Manchester. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Manchester, in the patron. of trustees. It is a station on the Manchester and Stockport section of the London and North-Western railway.

LONGSLOW, a tnshp. in the par. of Market Drayton, hund. of North Bradford, co. Salop, 1 mile N.W. of Drayton.

LONGSTOCK, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Thorngate, co. Hants, 1 mile N. of Stockbridge, its post town, and 6 miles S. of Andover. It lies at the base of Longstock Hill, and is watered by the river Anton. The Andover canal passes through the parish. The land is chiefly arable. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £433, and the vicarial for one of £315. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £285. The church is an ancient edifice, dedicated to St. Mary. The charities amount to £15 per annum. The Primitive Methodists have a chapel, and there is a school, supported by resident families. The Rev. Sir J. B. Mill, Bart., is lord of the manor.

LONGSTONE, a vil. in the par. of Colinton, co. Edinburgh, Scotland, 3 miles S.W. of Edinburgh.

LONGSTONE ISLAND, one of the Staples or Farne Islands, co. Northumberland. It is about 1½ mile in circumference, and has a lighthouse, erected in 1827, which may be seen for 13 miles.

LONGSTONE MAGNA, a chplry. in the par. of Bakewell, hund. of High Peak, co. Derby, 3 miles N.W. of Bakewell, its post town, and 12 W. of Chesterfield. It is a station on the Buxton branch of the Midland railway. The tnshps. of Holme, Little Longstone, and a portion of Wardlow, are included in this chplry. The impropriation belongs to the Dean and Chapter of Lichfield. The vicarial tithes of Great and Little Longstone were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1810. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £180, in the gift of the vicar of the parish. The church is an ancient structure, dedicated to St. Giles. It contains monuments of the Eyre family, earls of Newburgh. There is a school, with an endowment of £15. The other charities produce about £30 per annum. The Wesleyans have a chapel. The Duke of Devonshire is lord of the manor. Longstone Hall is the principal residence.

LONGSTONE PARVA, a tnshp. in the par. of Longstone Magna, as above, 3½ miles N.W. of Bakewell. It is situated in the vicinity of the river Wye, at the base of some lofty hills. Divine service is performed in a room in which a Sunday-school is also held.

LONGSTOW HUNDRED, one of the 19 subdivisions of co. Cambridge. It is situated in the western part of the co., and is bounded on the N. by the hunds. of Chesterton and Papworth, on the E. and S. by the hund. of Wetherly, and on the W. by the co. of Huntingdon. It includes the pars. of Bourn, Caldecote, Caxton, Croxton, Eltisley, Great and Little Eversden, Gamlingay, Little Gransden, Hardwicke, St. George Hatley, Kingston, Longstow, and Toft, comprising an area of about 25,000 acres.

LONGSTOW, a par. in the hund. of the same name, co. Cambridge, 2 miles S. of Caxton, its post town, and 12 S.W. of Cambridge. The village, which is small, is situated on the old North road. A hospital for poor sisters was founded here in the reign of Henry III. by Walter, then vicar of this parish. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1798. Fossil remains abound in the neighbourhood, consisting of ammonites and bones of large extinct quadrupeds. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, valued in the king's books at £4 8*s.* 4*d.* The church is ancient. The register commences in 1558. The charities, arising partly from land and cottages, produce about £30 per annum, and are applied to repairs of the church and relief of the poor. Joseph Simpson, Esq., is lord of the manor.

LONGSTOW. See STOW, LONG, co. Hunts.

LONG STREET, a tythg. in the par. of Enford, co. Wilts, 6 miles N. of Amesbury. The Avon flows through it.

LONGTHORPE, a hmlt. and chplry. in the par. of St. John the Baptist, lib. of Peterborough, co. Northampton, 2 miles W. of Peterborough, its post town. It is situated on the river Nen, and the line of the Northampton and Peterborough railway passes through it. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £80. The chapel, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is a very old stone edifice.

LONG THORPE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Ellerby and par. of Swine, in the East Riding of co. York, 6 miles N. of Hedon, and 7 N.E. of Hull.

LONGTHWAITE, a tnshp. in the par. of Doncaster, N. div. of the wap. of Strafforth, West Riding co. York.

LONGTON, a chplry. in the par. of Penwortham, hund. of Leyland, co. palatine of Lancaster, 4 miles S.W. of Preston, its post town. It is situated on the bank of the river Ribble. The village is a straggling place, about 2 miles in length, through which the old road from Liverpool to Preston passes. The district for the most part is agricultural. There are malt-kilns and a brewery. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £148. The chapel is a brick structure of the last century. There is a free grammar school, open to all, having an endowment of £30. The other charities produce in all about £48 per annum. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have chapels.

LONGTON WITH LANE END, a tnshp. and market town in the par. of Stoke-upon-Trent, N. div. of the hund. of Pirehill, co. Stafford, 1 mile N.W. of Lane End, its post town, 4 miles S.E. of Newcastle-under-Lyme, and 14 N. of Stafford. It has stations on the Crew, Stoke, and Uttoxeter, and on the Silverdate, Stoke, and Longton branches of the North Staffordshire line. The tnshp. comprises an area of about 4 square miles, above half of which is pasture, and the remainder arable, or built over. It includes the hmlt. of Lane End, which is the postal name for the whole district. It is situated in the most southern part of the pottery district, and during the last century has risen from an obscure village to be one of the most flourishing places engaged in this branch of trade. The town contains a large number of excellent shops and private dwellings. It is well paved, has good water supply, and is lighted with gas. There is a good townhall, market, and court-house, situated at the upper end of Market-street, in which petty sessions are held weekly on Wednesday, and the commissioners for paving, lighting, &c., meet on the first Monday in each month. It is a well-built structure. The police-office is in the lower part of the building. The staple manufactures of the place are china and earthenware, with malting and brewing establishments; and in the neighbourhood are ironstone mines and collieries. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lichfield. The church, dedicated to St. James the Less, was built in 1833, and is a stone edifice in the pointed style, with a tower. There are also two district churches, viz. St. John's and Edensor, both perpet. curs.*—the former, val. £160, in the patron. of trustees, and the latter, val. £130, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately. The church of St. John the Baptist is a commodious structure of brick, with a tower containing a peal of eight bells. The church of Edensor is dedicated to St. Paul. The Independents, Baptists, Roman Catholics, Swedenborgians, Wesleyan New Connexion, and Primitive Methodists, have places of worship. There are National, British, and infant schools for boys and girls. In connection with Longton Athenæum is a good Mechanics' Institute. In this township is Foley House, where Wesley frequently preached. J. E. Heathcote, Esq., is lord of the manor. There are several good residences in the vicinity, but Longton Hall is the principal. Saturday is market day, but during the summer there is a market on Wednesday for fruit and vegetables. Fairs are held on Shrove Tuesday, Easter Tuesday, Whit-Tuesday, and Martinmas Tuesday chiefly for pleasure.

LONGTOWN, a tnshp. and small market and post town in the par. of Arthuret, ward of Eskdale, co. Cumberland, 8 miles N.W. of Carlisle, and 309 N.N.W. of London. It is a station on the North British railway, and is about 5 miles from the Rockcliffe station on the Caledonian line. It is situated on the south bank of the river Esk, over which is a stone bridge near the junction of that river with the Liddel. It was founded a long time back by the family of Graham, of Netherby, to whom the property belongs, but, until recently, was only a poor village. It now contains upwards of 2,717 inhabitants. Petty sessions are held in the town, also courts leet and baron at Easter and Michaelmas, at the former of which constables are appointed for the government of the town. It is a polling place for the Eastern division of the county. The streets are spacious, and the houses in general well built. The workhouse for Longtown Poor-law Union, comprising 14 parishes, is in this township. Many of the people are employed in weaving for the manufacturers at Carlisle. There is a chapel belonging to the Presbyterians, also a free school, founded by Lady Widdington in 1754. Monday and Thursday are the market days. Fairs are held on Thursday previous to Whitsun Day for the sale of horses, and on the Thursdays in Whitsun week and Martinmas for hiring servants.

LONGTOWN, a chplry. in the par. of Clodock, hund. of Ewyas-Lacy, co. Hereford, 7 miles N.W. of Grosmont, and 16 S.W. of Hereford, its post town. It is situated at the base of the Black Mountains, on the Olchon brook, a tributary of the river Monnow. The village is considerable. Courts-baron are held annually for the manor and hundred. Here was anciently a strong castle, some traces of which still remain. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £68, in the gift of the vicar of the parish. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a stone edifice, with a fine roof. The Baptists have a chapel. There is a free school for boys and girls. Fairs are held on 29th April and 22nd June for live stock, and one for the sale of wool in the first week of July; also a statute fair on 21st September for hiring servants.

LONGTREE HUNDRED, one of the 28 subdivisions of Gloucestershire. It is situated in the southern part of the co., and bounded on the N. by the hund. of Bisley, on the E. and S. by the co. of Wilts, and on the W. by the hund. of Berkeley. It includes the pars. of Avening, Cherington, Horsley, Minchinhampton, Rodborough, Rodmarton, Shipton-Moyne, Tetbury, Weston-Birt, and Woodchester, comprising an area of about 32,000 acres.

LONGUE PIERRE, a beacon rock between Sark and Herm, Channel Islands.

LONGUEVILLE, a vil. in the par. of St. Saviour, Island of Jersey, Channel Islands, in the vicinity of St. Helier.

LONGVILLE, a tnshp. in the par. of Eaton, co. Salop, 6 miles S.W. of Much Wenlock. It is situated at the foot of Wenlock Edge, and is united with Lushcott and East Wall.

LONGWATHBY. See LANGWATHBY, Cumberland.

LONGWITTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Hartburn, co. Northumberland, 8 miles W. of Morpeth. It is a small agricultural village situated near the river Wansbeck. The mineral spring known as Thurston Wells is in this township. The principal residence is Longwitton Hall, a former seat of the Swinburnes and Trevelyans.

LONGWOOD, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Huddersfield, upper div. of the wap. of Agbrigg, West Riding co. York, 2 miles W. of Huddersfield, its post town. It is a station on the London and North-Western line of railway. This township consists chiefly of a narrow ridge rising rapidly from the banks of a rivulet. It includes several hmlts., of which Dark Lane and Dod-Lee are the principal. The village is very considerable. It contains several scribbling and fulling mills, and a mechanics' institute. Here are the reservoirs for supplying the town of Huddersfield with pure water. The place is lighted with gas, and the streets are clean, though only partially paved. The people are mostly employed in the cotton trade, and in the manufacture of woollen and fancy goods. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £150, in the patron. of the vicar of the parish. The church is dedicated to St. Mark. The parochial endowments produce about £100 per annum, applied to school purposes. The Wesleyans have two places of worship, and the New Connexion Methodists one. There are National and Free schools for boys and girls. At Slack Hill, in this township, were discovered a Roman altar, dedicated to Fortune, a bath and hypocaust, and a tesselated pavement nearly a yard in thickness, which discovery has induced some antiquarians to consider this place, and not Almondbury, as the site of the Roman station Cambodunum.

LONGWOOD, a post-office vil. in the par. of Clonard, in the bar. of Upper Moyfenrath, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles N.W. of Innfield. It is situated on the river Blackwater. It contains a Roman Catholic chapel and a police station. Petty sessions are held at intervals. Fairs are held on 1st February, 28th April, 12th July, and 11th December.

LONGWORTH, a par. in the hunds. of Ganfield and Ock, co. Berks, 7 miles N.E. of Farringdon, and 8 N.W. of Abingdon, its post town. It is situated on the S. bank of the river Isis, and includes the hmlts. of Charney-Bassett and Draycot-Moor. The surface is in general flat, and the soil clay alternated with sand. At Charney-Bassett is a chapel-of-ease. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. with the cur. of Charney-Bassett annexed, £785, in the patron. of Jesus College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a small Saxon edifice with a tower. It contains a number of brasses, dating as far back as 1422. In the register is an entry of the baptism of Bishop Fell, whose father was rector of Longworth. From the site on which the church stands is an extensive prospect along the river and over into the opposite county of Oxford. The charities for the poor and educational purposes produce about £45 per annum. The Wesleyans have a chapel. There is a National school. Philip Pusey, Esq., is lord of the manor. In this parish is the ancient entrenchment called Cherbury Camp, of an oval form, surrounded by a triple vallum; the diameter in the widest part is 310 paces, and in the narrowest 211.

LONGWORTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Bolton-le-Moors, hund. of Salford, co. palatine of Lancaster, 5 miles N.W. of Bolton.

LONINGBOROUGH HUNDRED, one of the subdivisions of the lathe of Shepway, co. Kent, situated in the eastern part of the county. It includes the pars. of Acrise, Elham, Lyminge, and Paddlesworth, comprising an area of about 12,200 acres.

LONMAY, a par. on the N.E. coast of Buchan, in the co. Aberdeen, Scotland. It is 4 miles S.E. of Frazerburgh. It includes the vil. of St. Comb, which was the ancient name of the whole par. The size of the parish is 10 miles by 4, and the surface is flat. There are about 6,488 Scotch acres in tillage and pasture, 2,056 in moss or moor, and 220 under wood. The river Ugie traces part of the boundary of the parish. It is in the presb. of Deer and synod of Aberdeen. The minister's stipend is £224. The parish church was erected in 1787. There is a chapel-of-ease at Kinninmouth; also an Episcopalian chapel. There are three parochial schools. The chief seats are Crimond-mogate and Cairness House. There is a Druidical circle at Newark, called Crimond-mogate. Gordon of Butlaw is the chief landowner. Fairs are held in the month of June, the day before that of Mintlaw fair, and in November, the day after Longside fair.

LONSDALE, a ward in co. Westmoreland, situated in the southern part of the county, along the banks of the river Lune. It includes the par. of Kirkby-Lonsdale, with some portions of Burton-in-Kendal and Kendal, comprising an area of about 35,350 acres.

LONSDALE, one of the subdivisions of the co. palatine of Lancaster, situate in the northern part of the county. It comprises the two hunds. or divs., "North of the Sands," and "South of the Sands." The first includes the town of Broughton, and the pars. of Aldingham, Cartmel, Colton, Dalton-in-Furness, Hawkshead, Kirkby-Ireleth, Pennington, Ulverstone, and Urswick, comprising an area of about 137,500 acres. The latter hund. contains the pars. of Bolton-le-Sands, Claughton, Halton, Heysham, Melling, Tatham, Tunstall, Warton, Whittington, with portions of Burton-in-Kendal, Cockerham, Lancaster, and Thornton-in-Lonsdale, comprising together about 128,250 acres.

LONTON, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Holwick, North Riding co. York, 8 miles N.W. of Barnard Castle. The river Tees flows through it.

LOOE, EAST, a chplry., seaport, and incorporated market town, having separate jurisdiction, but locally in the par. of St. Martin, hund. of West, co. Cornwall, 16 miles W. of Plymouth, 8 S.E. of the railway station at Liskeard, and 232 W.S.W. of London. It is situated on the eastern bank of Looe Bay, near the mouth of the river Looe, over which is a modern stone bridge connecting the boroughs of East and West Looe. It was formerly a place of importance, and sent two members to parliament, but was disfranchised by the Reform Act. It received its first charter of incorporation from Elizabeth in 1587, and is now governed by a corporation consisting of a mayor, recorder, town clerk, and 12 burgesses. Its trade was so considerable in former times that it furnished 20 ships to the siege of Calais in the reign of Edward III.; but it has recently much decayed, notwithstanding the construction of the Liskeard and Looe canal, which facilitates the transmission of goods to the Cornwall railway, at Liskeard. The pilchard fishery was one of the chief sources of its former prosperity. There is an excellent harbour and quay. The chief business is at present in the coasting trade—the exports being tin, copper, and lead ore, bark, timber, salt, and pilchards; the imports, coal, culm, and limestone. Two courts leet are held annually, and a borough court on every third Monday from Michaelmas Day. The living, with West Looe, is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £75, in the patron. of the bishop. The church of East Looe, dedicated to St. Mary, was rebuilt in 1806, with the exception of its low castellated tower. The Wesleyans and Independents have each a chapel, and the Society of Friends a meeting-house. There is a free school for boys, and a National school for girls. Wednesday and Saturday are market days. Fairs are held in February and October for cattle. There are remains of a bridge of 13 arches, built in the 14th century, crossing the estuary of the Looe, which was 141 yards in length, and only 6 feet wide.

LOOE ISLAND, forming an ext. par. place in the hund. of West, co. Cornwall, and lying off the mainland S.W. of West Looe. It is about half a mile distant from the shore, and the same in circumference. It is the property of the Trelawney family, and is the resort of wild fowl. Here are some ruins of an ancient chapel. Outside the island is a dangerous reef known as Rennies Rocks.

LOOE ROCK, a reef visible at low water on the E. side of Baltimore Harbour, co. Cork, Ireland.

LOOE STREAM, the passage between Selsea Bill and Ower Shoal, off the coast of Sussex.

LOOE, WEST, a town in the par. of Talland, hund. of West, co. Cornwall, 7 miles S. of Liskeard, its post town and nearest railway station. It is situated on the western shore of Looe Bay, or Creek, opposite East Looe, with which it communicates by a modern bridge. It formerly was a market town and borough, returning two members to parliament, but was disfranchised at the same time as East Looe. The market has fallen into disuse. The corporate government is nominally vested in a mayor and burgesses, according to the charter granted in the reign of Elizabeth. There are a town-hall and prison. Many of the inhabitants are engaged in the coasting trade and in the pilchard fishery; but this latter has recently declined. There is a district church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, also chapels for Dissenters. The free school and National school are open to children of East and West Looe. The charities produce about £4 yearly. A cattle fair is held on 6th May.

LOOP HEAD, a promontory on the E. side of the river Shannon, in co. Clare, Ireland. It is marked by a lighthouse put up in 1802, which shows a fixed light 269 feet above the sea-level, and visible for 22 miles.

LOOSE, a par. in the hund. of Maidstone, lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, 2 miles S. of Maidstone, its post town, and 6½ N.W. of Staplehurst. It is situated on a tributary of the river Medway. The main road between Cranbrook and Maidstone passes through the village. The neighbourhood abounds with hop-grounds and orchards—the fruit of which, particularly filberts, are sent in considerable quantities for the supply of the London market. Many of the people are employed in the tanyards and brewery, and in the corn, fulling, and paper mills, which are worked by a stream which flows through this place. There are quarries of ragstone. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £492, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church is dedicated to All Saints. The register commences in 1570. There are some small charities producing about £3 annually.

LOOSEBARROW HUNDRED, in the East Shaston div. of co. Dorset. It is situated in the central part of the county, and includes the pars. of Almer, Morden, and Spetisbury, comprising an area of about 12,000 acres.

LOPEN, a par. in the hund. of South Petherton, co. Somerset, 2 miles S.W. of Petherton, and 4 E. of Ilminster. Crewkerne is its post town. The village lies at a short distance off the road leading from London to Exeter, between two wooded hills, gently rising on either side of it. Some of the people are employed in weaving checks. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £200. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £77. The church is an ancient stone edifice dedicated to All Saints. It has been frequently repaired, and was enlarged in 1834. The register commences in 1693. Earl Poulett is lord of the manor.

LOPHAM, NORTH, a par. in the hund. of Guiltcross, co. Norfolk, 2 miles S. of Kenninghall, and 4½ S.E. of East Harling, its post town, and railway station on the Great Eastern line. The village is situated near the sources of the rivers Ouse and Waveney, which, rising within a few yards of each other, pursue different courses towards the sea. The principal trade of the place is in the manufacture of coarse linen goods, diaper, huckaback, &c. Nearly half the parish is included within the grounds of Lopham Park, one of the seats of the Duke of Norfolk. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. with that of South Lopham annexed, £619, in the patron. of St. John's College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is a commodious edifice with a square embattled tower. The register commences in 1558. The parochial charities produce about £100 per annum, in addition to which there are above 100 acres of land appropriated for fuel. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel. There are schools connected with the church and with the Wesleyan body.

LOPHAM, SOUTH, a par. in the hund. of Guiltcross, co. Norfolk, 1 mile S. of North Lopham, and 6 miles S.E. of East Harling. It is situated in a fertile district watered by the rivers Waveney and Ouse, which have their sources at Lopham Ford, in this parish. The people are mostly employed in the linen manufacture. The living is a rect. annexed to that of North Lopham. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is an ancient edifice with a Norman tower between the nave and chancel. It is situated in a field, and has a lofty range of clerestory windows in the nave. There are charities producing nearly £130 per annum, and an allotment of 126 acres. There is a free school.

LOPPERWOOD, a tythg. in the par. of Eling, co. Hants, 4 miles N.W. of Southampton. Lopperwood House is the chief seat.

LOPPINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Pimhill, co. Salop, 2 miles W. of Wem, its post town, and 6 S.E. of Ellesmere. It is situated on the river Roden. The Baschurch station of the Shrewsbury and Chester railway is about 5 miles S.W. from the village. The par. includes the tnshps. of Burlton and Noneley. The surface is in general flat. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £97 18*s*. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £270, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient stone edifice, and contains some brasses. The charities produce about £20 per annum, including £13 to school endowment. The Primitive Methodists have a chapel. There is a boys' free school; also a National school for girls. The Duke of Cleveland is lord of the manor. Loppington House is the principal residence.

LORBOTTLE, a tnshp. in the par. of Whittingham, N. div. of the ward of Coquetdale, co. Northumberland, 5 miles N.W. of Rothbury. Lime-burning is carried on here. Lorbottle House is the principal residence.

LORDINGTON, a hmlt. and ancient chplry. in the par. of Racton, hund. of Westbourne, rape of Chichester, co. Sussex, 5 miles N.W. of Chichester, its post town. It is situated near Stanstead Park, formerly the seat of Governor Barwell. Sir Richard Pole and Margaret Countess of Salisbury for some time resided here; and here Cardinal Pole was born. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect. of Racton, in the dioc. of Chichester.

LORDLAND, NORTH and SOUTH, hmlts. in the chplry. of Dent, West Riding co. York, 2 miles from the town of Dent.

LORD'S BRIDGE, a hmlt. in the hund. of Chesterton, co. Cambridge, 5½ miles from Cambridge. It is a station on the Cambridge, Bedford, and Bletchley section of the London and North-Western railway.

LORD'S ISLAND, a demesne on the E. side of Derwentwater, co. Cumberland. Formerly the seat of the Radcliffe family, by whom it was forfeited, and subsequently given to Greenwich Hospital.

LORD'S MERE, a quarter in the chplry. of Saddleworth, and par. of Rochdale, West Riding co. York, 6 miles N.W. of Ashton-under-Lyne. It is situated near the river Tame.

LORN, a district in the co. Argyle, Scotland. It extends along the coast W. of Loch Awe. Its length from N. to S. varies from 22 to 33 miles, and its breadth from 15 to 32. It comprises the pars. of Glenorchy, Ardchattan, Muckairn, Kilmore, Kilbride, Kilchrenan and Dalavich, Kilninver and Kilmelford, Kilbrandon and Kilchattan, and Appin and Lismore. It gives name to a presbytery, which comprises the before-mentioned parishes, and belongs to the synod of Argyle. It likewise gives title of marquis to the Campbells.

LORNTY BURN, a stream rising in Loch Benachally, co. Perth, Scotland, and joining the Ericht at Blairgowrie.

LORRHA, a par. and post-office vil. in the bar. of Lower Ormond, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 7 miles N. of Borrisokane. It is 6½ miles long by 5½ broad. The surface, though low and boggy, possesses a considerable proportion of good pasture land. The river Shannon forms the W. boundary. Loughs Derg and Frier are partly within the limits. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Killaloe, val. £788, in the patron. of the bishop. Here is the parish church, besides which there is an ancient pile, built in 1269 by Walter de Burgo, and lately repaired, which is used as a place of worship. Lorrha Abbey was a structure probably founded in the 12th century; it is a ruin in middling preservation, though it appears to have been partially destroyed by fire. It contains numerous tablets; among others, is a marble monument to the M'Egans. There are several other old ruins in the parish, one of which is known as Cromwell's Castle. Near the abbey stands a modern Roman Catholic chapel.

LORTON, a parochial chplry. in the ward of Allerdale-above-Derwent, co. Cumberland, 3 miles S.E. of Cockermouth, its post town, and 8 N.W. of Keswick. It is situated on the river Cocker, and comprises the vils. of High and Low Lorton, with the tnshps. of Brackenthwaite and Wythop, and the hmlt. of Armaside. The people are employed in flax-dressing, and in the manufacture of thread. There is also a large brewery. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £76. The church is dedicated to St. Cuthbert. There is a parochial school for the children of both sexes. Lorton Hall, Lorton House, and Armaside House, are the principal residences.

LORUM, a par. in the bar. of East Idrone, co. Carlow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles S. of Bagnalstown. Killedmond is its post town. It is 3½ miles long by 2½ broad. The surface lies high, and consists of good arable and pasture land. The river Barrow and the road from Bagnalstown to Borris intersect the parish. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Leighlin, val. with others, £352, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was an old building, but was almost entirely rebuilt in 1806. There are Roman Catholic, National, and several day schools. Kilgraney and Corries are the principal seats.

LOSCOE, or LOSCOW, a hmlt. and tnshp. in the par. of Heanor, hund. of Morlaston, co. Derby, 5 miles E. of Derby, and 6 S.E. of Alfreton. It is joined with Codnor. The village is considerable. There is a place of worship for Baptists.

LOSCOMBE, a hmlt. in the pars. of Netherbury, North Poorton, and Poorstock, co. Dorset, 3 miles S.E. of Beaminster.

LOSFORD, a tnshp. in the par. of Hodnet, co. Salop, 3 miles S.W. of Market Drayton. It is watered by the river Tern.

LOSSIE, a river rising in Edenkillie, co. Elgin, Scotland, and after a course of 26 miles, falls into the Moray Frith.

LOSSIEMOUTH, a vil. in the par. of Drainy, co. Elgin, Scotland, 4 miles N.E. of Elgin, and 86 from Aberdeen. It is situated at the mouth of the river Lossie, and is a subport to Inverness. It is the terminus of the Great North of Scotland railway.

LOSTOCK, a tnshp. in the par. of Bolton-le-Moors, hund. of Salford, co. palatine of Lancaster, 4 miles W. of Bolton. It is a station on the West Lancashire and Yorkshire line of railway. Mining operations are extensively carried on. Here are the remains of Lostock Hall, a wooden edifice of the 16th century, supposed to have been the residence of the Andertons; over the highest oriel window are the royal arms, with the date 1590.

LOSTOCK-GRALAM, a tnshp. in the par. of Great Budworth, hund. of Northwich, co. palatine of Chester, 2 miles E. of Northwich, its post town, and 5 S.W. of Knutsford. It is a station on the Northwich and Altrincham branch of the Cheshire Midland railway. It is situated on the river Weaver, and the North Staffordshire canal passes through it. This is an ecclesiastical district, which includes also the tnshps. of Hulse, Lach Dennis, and Wincham, and the hmlt. of Lostock Green. The village is considerable. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Chester, val. £120, in the gift of the incumbent of Witton. The church is a small modern edifice of brick, dedicated to St. John the Baptist. The Wesleyans have a chapel at Lostock Green. There is a National school.

LOSTOCK-HALL, a hmlt. in the par. of Preston, hund. of Amounderness, co. Lancaster, 4 miles from Preston. It is a station on the W. section of the Lancashire and Yorkshire railway.

LOSTOCK LANE, a hmlt. in the par. of Deane, co. Lancashire, 4 miles W. by N. of Bolton. It is a station on the W. section of the Lancashire and Yorkshire railway.

LOSTWITHIEL, a par., market town, and municipal borough, in the eastern div. of the hund. of Powder, co. Cornwall, 6 miles S. of Bodmin, 21 S.W. of Launceston, and 246 from London, on the Cornwall line of railway. It is situated in a vale on the banks of the river Fowey, and on the road from Plymouth to Falmouth. It was at one time the county and stannary town, and was a parliamentary borough with Penkneth, in the par. of Lanlivery, returning two members to parliament from the reign of Edward II. till the passing of the Reform Bill, by which it was disfranchised. It is said to have been founded by Richard Earl of Cornwall, who built the palace, in which the stannaries court was held, as well as Restormel Castle, in the reign of Edward I. In 1644 a battle was fought between the Royalists and Parliamentarians on the Broad Oak and St. Winnoe Downs, when the former were victorious. The latter retreated into Lostwithiel, while the Royalists encamped on the adjoining hills. The Earl of Essex, commander of the Parliamentarians, was accommodated at Lanhydrock, the seat of Lord Robartes, one of his officers, afterwards Earl of Radnor. A charter of incorporation was granted in the reign of George II., by which the local government was vested in a mayor, six aldermen, 17 common councilmen, with the usual officers. The mayor is chosen annually by the council. Property and money matters are managed by the aldermen, and a court is annually held when the inspectors of weights and measures and other officers are appointed. The corporation, by virtue of its charter, has jurisdiction over the river Fowey, which is navigable to the quay at spring tides, and is crossed by a commodious stone bridge. The borough includes part of the parish of St. Winnoe, and in 1861 had a population of 1659. It contains a markethouse, townhall, a mechanics' institute, and the Lostwithiel Book Club. The houses are built of stone and roofed with slate, which abounds in the district. The principal trade carried on consists in the conveyance of the iron and copper ores and other mineral produce of the surrounding district to the port of Fowey for shipment to Wales, and the bringing from thence coal, timber, limestone, and sand. Many of the people are also employed in the tanneries and the Royal Restormel Iron Mine, and as woolstaplers. About 3 miles distant from the town are the rich copper mines of Lanescot and the Fowey Consols. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £96. The church dedicated to St. Bartholomew, is an edifice of ancient date, with a square tower surmounted by a lantern spire. It contains an antique font of an octangular form, and several monuments, some very old. The charities produce about £20 per annum. The Independents, Wesleyans, and Wesleyan Association Methodists have each a chapel. There are a corporation, mathematical, and commercial school, and a girls' National school. Some interesting ruins still exist of Restormel Castle, once occupied by the earls of Cornwall, and visited in 1864 by the Prince of Wales as Duke of Cornwall. According to tradition Lostwithiel was so called from having been the residence of Withiel, anciently Earl of Cornwall, who had a palace at Penknight. The manorial rights of the Duchy of Cornwall were purchased by the Earl of Mount Edgecumbe 70 years ago, and conveyed by him to the Corporation of Lostwithiel. Friday is market day. Fairs are held on the 31st March, 10th July, 4th September, and 13th November, for the sale of horses and live stock. A cattle show takes place on the 12th December, and a regatta in August.

LOTH, a par. in the E. coast of co. Sutherland, Scotland, 11 miles N.E. of Golspie, its post town. It contains the vil. of Port Gower, and adjoins Helmsdale. It is 7 miles in length, and about 4 at its greatest breadth. The surface for the most part is hilly, and attains in some parts a height of 1,500 feet above the sea-level. There are several streamlets, the principal being the Loth. The par. is in the presb. of Dornoch and synod of Sutherland and Caithness. The minister's stipend is £162. The church is a modern and commodious structure. There were formerly three chapels in this parish, but the burying-grounds of two are the only traces now left of them. A portion of the parish, including the town of Helmsdale, was in 1841 annexed to the par. of Kildonan. There are remains of Picts' houses on Loth Water, also cairns, tumuli, and a pillar of stone 10 feet high. The last witch burnt in Scotland suffered here about 1720.

LOTHERS, a lib. in the div. of Bridport, co. Dorset. It is situated in the western part of the county, and includes the borough of Lyme Regis, and the pars. of Bothenhampton and Loders.

LOTHERSDALE, a hmlt. in the par. of Carlton, West Riding co. York, 2 miles S.W. of Skipton. This place, which consists of a few scattered houses, is situated in a deep valley. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £100, in the patron. of the vicar of the parish. The church was erected in 1838 on a site presented by the Earl of Burlington.

LOTHERTON-CUM-ABERFORD, a. tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Sherburn, upper div. of the wap. of Barkstone-Ash, West Riding co. York, 5 miles S.W. of Tadcaster, and 8 N.E. of Leeds. This tnshp. includes the eastern portion of the town of Aberford. The Lamplugh family are the chief owners of the soil. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of the parish. There is a chapel-of-ease. Lord Ashtown is lord of the manor, and owner of Lotherton Hall, a mansion in a well-wooded demesne.

LOTHIANS, EAST, MIDDLE, and WEST, a district in the S. of Scotland, extending from the river Tweed to the Forth and Avon. It anciently formed part of the kingdom of Northumbria, having been settled by the Anglo-Saxons, but was given up to Malcolm II. in 1020. It includes the counties of Haddington, Edinburgh, and Linlithgow, and formerly parts of Berwick, Roxburgh, and Selkirk, which see.

LOTHINGLAND WITH MUTFORD, a subdivision of co. Suffolk, consisting of the two hunds. united. It is situated in the north-eastern part of the county, and bounded on the N. by Breydon Water, on the E. by the German Ocean, on the S. by the hund. of Blything, and on the W. by the hund. of Wangford, co. Norfolk, and river Waveney. It includes the borough of Yarmouth, and the pars. of Ashby, Barnby, Belton, Blundeston, Bradwell, Burgh Castle, Carlton Colville, Corton, Flixton, Fritton, Gisleham, Gorleston, Guxton, Herringfleet, Hopton, Kessingland, Kirkley, Lound, Lowestoft, Mutford, Oulton, Pakefield, Rushmere, and Somerleighton, comprising an area of about 32,960 acres.

LOTHIOSCAR, an islet in Loch Linnhe, co. Argyle, Scotland.

LOTHRY WATER, a river in co. Fife, joins the Leven below Leslie.

LOTTISHAM, a tythg. in the par. of Ditcheat, co. Somerset, 2 miles N. of Castle Cary.

LOUDOUN, a par. in the Cunninghame district of co. Ayr, Scotland, 7 miles E. of Kilmarnock. It is situated near the bridge over the river Irvine, and contains Auldton, Derville, and Newmills, at which last place is a railway station on the Glasgow and South-Western and Portpatrick line. The size of this parish is 9 miles by 5, with a hilly surface. It contains about 19,170 imperial acres, of which about 10,700 are in tillage, 7,600 moss, moor, or pasture, and the remainder under wood. Clay, ironstone, and coal are abundant, and limestone of good quality is extensively worked here.

The par. is in the presb. of Irvine and synod of Glasgow and Ayr. The minister's stipend is £191. The parish church, situated at Newmills, is modern and commodious. There are a Free church, Reformed Presbyterian church, an United Presbyterian church, a parish school, besides several other schools. Loudon Hill, situated in the S.E. part of this parish, is a conical eminence celebrated in history. In the neighbourhood of this hill Claverhouse was defeated in 1679, and in 1307 a battle known as the battle of Loudon Hill was fought between the English under the Earl of Pembroke, and the Scots under Bruce. The Knights Templars possessed lands in this parish. The parish is for the most part owned by the Marquis of Hastings, who takes the title of earl and baron from this place. Loudoun Castle, the seat of the before-mentioned earl, is an ancient structure, and was restored by Chancellor Loudon in 1622. It contains a library, and is situated among the "bonny woods and braes" of Tannahill's song. Near Loudon Hill are traces of a Roman camp; also Roman vessels have been found. In the neighbourhood are tumuli, cairns, and traces of castles, supposed by some to be of Danish origin. John Earl of Loudon, who succeeded to the earldom in 1731, did a great deal for the agricultural improvement of this parish. The feast of "Beltan," or Baal's fire, is kept up on St. Peter's day.

LOUDWATER, a chplry. in the par. of High Wycombe, hund. of Desborough, co. Bucks, 3 miles S.E. of High Wycombe. It is a station on the Oxford, High Wycombe, and Maidenhead branch of the Great Western railway. The living is a perpet. cur.* val. £132, in the patron. of trustees. The church was built and endowed in 1788 by W. Davis, Esq.

LOUGHAN, or CASTLEKEERAN, a par. in the bars. of Castlerahan and Upper Kells, cos. Cavan and Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles S.W. of Moynalty. It is situated along the E. side of the river Blackwater. The road from Dublin to Enniskillen passes through the parish. The living is wholly impropriate in the dioc. of Meath. There is a Roman Catholic chapel, also two day-schools. Maprath House and two or three other residences are seated within the limits.

LOUGHANILLOON, a small lake in co. Clare, Ireland, 4 miles E. of Tulla.

LOUGHBEG, a vil. in the bar. of Kerrycurrihy, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, near Queenstown.

LOUGHBOROUGH, a par. and market town in the hund. of West Goscote, co. Leicester, 12 miles N.W. of Leicester, 14 W. of Melton Mowbray, and 115½ from London. The Midland Counties railway has a station here. It is situated on a tributary of the river Soar, and the Loughborough canal, which passes by the town, connects the Soar and Trent. Its name is probably derived from an ancient lough, or lake, now a large extent of meadow occasionally overflowed. The par. includes, besides the town of Loughborough, the tnshp. of Knight Thorpe and the hmlt. of Wood Thorpe. It was for generations in the possession of the Despencer family, and now belongs to the Marquis of Hastings. In size and population this is the second town in the county, having a population in 1861 of 10,830. Petty sessions for the hundred are held here every Thursday, and a county court monthly. It is the place of election and a polling place for the northern division of the county. The Derby and Leicester main road passes directly through the town, forming its principal street, which is crossed by several smaller ones. There is a good market-place, in which stands the townhall and corn exchange, recently erected. The market-house was built near the middle of the last century, and stands on pillars, where the old cross formerly stood. There are three commercial banks, savings-bank, theatre, barracks, gas-works, public library, the workhouse for the Loughborough Poor-law Union, and a prison. The principal manufactures are stocking knitting and weaving, also cotton and woollen goods; a few people are engaged in needle and pipe making, and a large number of females in bobbin-net lace making. A good trade is done in coals, which are sent by the canal into the interior of the county. Its local government is vested in two constables, two headboroughs, and other officers, chosen at the court leet held annually in the month of October.—The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £1,000, in the patron. of Emanuel College, Cambridge. The parish church, dedicated to All Saints, has a lofty tower, and contains two brasses and numerous heraldic devices. It is believed to have been built at the latter end of the 16th century. There is also a district church, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £860, in the patron. of Emanuel College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to Emanuel, was built in 1837. In the parochial register is a curious entry of the sweating sickness which prevailed in the town in 1557, and is there described as "the swat, alias new acquaintance." The parochial endowments produce altogether about £1,880; a large portion of this was bequeathed in 1495 by one Burton, to endow a chantry, but is now applied to the support of schools, of which there are five, called Burton's Free Schools. The Baptists, Independents, Wesleyans, and Unitarians have places of worship. The grammar-school is an edifice of the Elizabethan style of architecture, situated in the Leicester-road. It was erected in 1853 at a cost of nearly £8,000. Besides the high and low schools in Churchgate, and Miss Tate's, for boys, there are British and two infant schools. This was the birthplace of Pulteny, the eminent physician and naturalist. Loughborough Cottage and The Elms are the principal residences. Thursday is market day. Fairs are held on the 14th February, 28th March, 25th April, Holy Thursday, 12th August, and 13th November, for the sale of horses, cattle, and live stock; on the 24th March and 25th September for the sale of cheese; and on the 14th November for hiring servants.

LOUGHBRACKAN, a par. in the bar. of Lower Slane, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 1 mile S.W. of Drumcondra. It is 3 miles long by 1 mile broad. The soil is fertile and watered by the river Dee and the lake of Loughbrackan. The road from Dublin to Londonderry passes through a portion of the parish. The living is wholly impropriate, and united to Nobber, in the dioc. of Meath. Here are ruins of a church.

LOUGHBRICKLAND, a small post town in the par. of Aghaderg, in the bar. of Upper Iveagh, co. Down, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 24 miles W. of Downpatrick, and 73 from Dublin. It is situated on the road from thence to Belfast, near Brickland Lough. It is a neatly-built little place, and presents a clean and cheerful appearance. Here stand the parish church, three chapels, schoolhouses, and the ruins of a monastery. The place was founded by Sir M. Whitchurch, in 1585, who had a castle here, which was burnt in 1641. This spot was the scene of the repulse of the Danes in 1187. Fairs are held on the 3rd Tuesday in every month, and on the 12th November.

LOUGHCOOTER CASTLE, a seat of Viscount Gort, on Lough Cooter, co. Galway, Ireland, 3 miles S.E. of Gort.

LOUGHCREW, a par. in the bar. of Fore, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles S.E. of Oldcastle, which is its post town. The par. is 4 miles long, and its average breadth is 1½ mile. The surface consists of a good soil, and includes a considerable amount of woodland. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with others, £347, in the patron. of the crown. The church is ancient. Here are a Roman Catholic chapel, also National and day schools. Loughcrew House is a very attractive feature of the locality, occupying an elevated site. At Newton Hill a large stone is seen, supposed to be of Druidical origin.

LOUGHGALL, a par. and post town in the bars. of Armagh and West O'Neilland, co. Armagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 4 miles N. of Armagh. It is 7½ miles long by 1½ mile broad on the average. The surface is principally good land, watered by the rivers Blackwater and Callan. The lakes of Castle-Dillon and Loughgall diversify the scenery of the interior, which is traversed by the road from Charlemount to Rich-hill. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Armagh, val. £611, in the patron. of the primate. The church, built in 1795 by private subscription, underwent some alterations in 1822. Here are a Presbyterian church and Methodist meeting-house, besides several Sunday and day schools. The principal seats are Castle-Dillon, that of Sir Thos. Molyneux, Bt., and Hockly Lodge, of the Hon. H. Caulfield, and Drumilly. Here is a police-station and a dispensary, which is within the Armagh Poor-law Union. Fairs are held on 1st July and 24th September.

LOUGHGILLY, a par. in the bars. of Lower Fews, and Lower and Upper Orior, co. Armagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 4 miles S.E. of Market Hill, its post town. It is a station on the Newry and Armagh railway. The par. is 8 miles long, and about three-quarters of a mile in breadth. The surface consists generally of good arable and pasture land. The lakes Shaws, Loughgilly, and Mullaghmore diversify the landscape. The interior is traversed by the road from Dublin to Armagh. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Armagh, val. £995, in the patron. of the primate. The church was erected in 1811 by aid of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. Here are three Presbyterian meeting-houses, a Roman Catholic chapel, Sunday and day schools. Loughgilly House is the principal residence.

LOUGHGLINN, a post-office vil. and quoad sacra par. in the par. of Tibohine, bar. of Frenchpark, co. Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 7 miles S.W. of Frenchpark. Here is a police station, and a dispensary within the Castlerea Poor-law Union. Loughglinn House is the seat of Viscount Dillon. Fairs are held on 25th May, 29th July, 12th September, 14th October, and 19th December.

LOUGHGUILE, a par. in the bars. of Kilconway and Upper Dunluce, co. Antrim, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 7 miles E. of Ballymoney. Moss-side is its post town. It is 6½ miles long by 5½ broad. The greater part of the surface consists of a light soil. The parish comprises a small proportion of waste land. The road from Ballymena to Ballycastle crosses this parish. Lake Loughguile is situated near the centre. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Connor, val. £386, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built at the close of the last century, chiefly by the late Earl of Macartney. Here are a Roman Catholic chapel and several Sunday and day schools. Lissanour is the principal seat. Checker Hall is another residence. Here is a police station, where petty sessions are held. Mount Aura was the scene of a battle between the M'Donalds and the M'Quillans, and is marked by a cairn.

LOUGHILL, a par. and post-office vil. in the bar. of Shanid, co. Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 1 mile E.N.E. of Glynn. The surface lies along the coast at the mouth of the river Shannon. It is hilly towards the interior, from whence flows the Oran. The road from Limerick to Tarbert crosses the parish. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Limerick, val. with others, £108, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was erected at the expense of the late Board of First Fruits in 1812. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Kilfergus. Here are a National and two or three day schools. Mount Trenchard is the demesne of Lord Monteagle.

LOUGHINISLAND, a par. in the bar. of Kinelarty, co. Down, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 5 miles W.S.W. of Downpatrick. Seaforde is its post town. It is 5 miles long by 4 broad. The surface consists of good land, with some extent of bog. The road from Newry to Downpatrick traverses the interior. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Down, val. £412, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, which is at Seaforde, was erected about 1720. Here are three Presbyterian meeting-houses, two Roman Catholic chapels, which are united to that of Tyrella, and several day and one or two Sunday schools. The chief seats are Draper Hill, Seaforde, and Mountpleasant. Near Lough Loughinisland stands an old castle, formerly belonging to the M'Artanes; also a cromlech and some church ruins. The old parish church formerly stood upon a small island in the lake. Building stone and slate occur.

LOUGHINSHOLIN, a bar. in co. Londonderry, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. It is 18½ miles long, and its breadth is 16 miles. It is bounded by the bars. of Kenought, Coleraine, and cos. of Antrim and Tyrone. It contains the pars. of Ballymacreen, Desertlyn, Desertmartin, Kilcronaghan, Killelagh, Maghera, Magherafelt, Termoneeny, and parts of Arboe, Artrea, Ballinderry, Ballyscullion, Derryloran, Kilrea, Lissan, Tamlaght, and Tamlaght O'Crilly, with the towns and vils. of Moneymore, Bellaghy, Castle Dawson, and Tubbermore.

LOUGHKEEN, a par. in the bar. of Lower Ormond, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 8 miles N.E. of Borrisokane. Parsonstown is its post town. It is 5½ miles long, and its average breadth is 1½ mile. The soil is of middling quality. The Little Brosna impinges on the boundary of the parish, and the road from Birr to Limerick crosses the interior. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Killaloe, val. £128, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built by means of a grant from the late Board of First Fruits in 1822. Here is a Roman Catholic chapel, which is united to that of Birr; also one National and three or four day schools in the parish. Among the seats of the district are Gurteen, Ivyhall, Wingfield, Carrig, Elm Hall, Castleview, Riverstown, and Oakpark.

LOUGHMORE, a hmlt. in the par. of Mungret, in the bar. of Pubblebrien, co. Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, not far from St. Patrick's Well. Ruins of Mungret Abbey are seen. Loughmore House is the principal residence.

LOUGHMORE, EAST, or CALLABEG, a par. in the bar. of Eliogarty, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles N. of Thurles. Templemore is its post town. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cashel, val. with Templetuohy, £606, in the patron. of the bishop.

LOUGHMORE, WEST, a par. in the bar. of Eliogarty, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, near Loughmore, East. Templemore is its post town. It is 4 miles long by 1½ mile broad. The surface lies along the bank of the river Suir, and consists of good land. The road from Templemore to Cashel traverses the interior. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Cashel, val. £184, in the patron. of the bishop. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Templeree. There are one or two day schools; also ruins of a church and of two old castles.

LOUGHOR, a par. and market town in the hund. of Swansea, co. Glamorgan, 5 miles S.E. of Llanelly, 12 W. of Neath, and 212 from London. The South Wales section of the Great Western railway has a station here. It is situated on the banks of the river of the same name, across which there is a wooden bridge communicating with the opposite county of Carmarthen. The local government is vested in a portreeve, 12 aldermen, and other officers. It is a contributary borough with Swansea and other towns, returning one member to parliament. The people are mostly employed in mining, and in the copper and zinc works. The population in 1851 was 821, and in 1861, 876. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £180. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. The Independents have a chapel. There are remains of Beauchamp's Castle, and traces of a Roman camp, where coins, &c., have been found. There is a weekly market. Fairs are held on the first Monday in June, and 10th October.

LOUGHRASK, a hmlt. in the par. of Drumcreely, in the bar. of Burren, co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles S.W. of Burren.

LOUGHREA, a bar. in co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland. It is 12 miles long, and its average breadth 5 miles. It is bounded by the bars. of Athenry, Leitrim, and Dunkellin, and by the co. Clare. It contains the pars. of Bullaun, Isertkelly, Killeenadeema, Loughrea, and parts of Kilchreest, Kilconickny, Kilconierin, Killaan, Killinan, Killogilleen, Kilmeen, Killeskill, Kilthomas, Ardrahan, Grange, and Liskerrig.

LOUGHREA, a par., post and market town, in the bar. of Loughrea, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland. The par. is 4½ miles long by 3 broad. The surface consists of pasture and arable. Loughrea Lake is partly within the limits. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Clonfert, val. £444. The church is surmounted with a steeple. It was erected in 1821 by aid of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. The Roman Catholic chapel is likewise a very attractive building. There are several day-schools. Mount Pleasant, Woodmount, and Summerhill are the chief seats. The town occupies a site on the bank of Lake Loughrea, 21 miles S.E. of Galway, and 109 from Dublin. The principal street is a thoroughfare of considerable length, consisting of tolerably built houses. It contains barracks, a court-house, linen hall, bridewell, bank, union poor-house, and a brewery. The business of the place is confined to general trade. The Marquis of Clanricarde is the proprietor. A Carmelite friary was founded here in 1300 by Richard de Burgh. There is also a nunnery of the same order, which was first founded in 1680, and removed to its present site in 1829. At Monument Hill a Druidical circle may be seen. Loughrea gives name to a Poor-law Union, containing fifteen electoral divisions in the county of Galway. It is a chief police station, and general sessions are held twice a year; also petty sessions once a fortnight. Thursday is market day. Fairs are held on 11th February, 7th May, 20th August, and 5th December.

LOUGHRIGG, a hmlt. in the par. of Grasmere, Kendal ward, co. Westmoreland, 2 miles W. of Ambleside. It is situated in a retired spot at the foot of Loughrigg Fell, which rises above 1,000 feet in height, commanding extensive views of the Lakes. On either side are the rivers Brathay and Rothay. There is a tarn of about 12 acres in extent, called by the above name. Loughrigg is joined with Rydal to form a township.

LOUGHROSBEG and LOUGHROSMORE, bays on the coast of Donegal, Ireland, 4 miles W. of Ardara.

LOUGHSHINNY, a vil. in the par. of Lusk, in the bar. of East Balrothery, co. Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles N.N.W. of Rush. It is situated near the coast, on a small but convenient harbour. A copper mine was worked here with some advantage.

LOUGHTEE, LOWER, a bar. in the co. Cavan, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. It is 7½ miles long, and the same broad. It is bounded by the bars. of Tullaghgarvey, Upper Loughtee, and Tullaghagh, and the co. of Fermanagh. It contains the par. of Drumlane, and parts of Annagh, Tomregan, and Urney, with the town of Belturbet.

LOUGHTEE, UPPER, a bar. in co. Cavan, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. It is 15 miles long by 8 broad. It is bounded by the bars. of Lower Loughtee, Tullaghgarvey, Castleregan, Clonmahon, Tullaghoncho, and Tullaghagh. It contains the pars. of Annagelliff, Castleterra, and Savey, and parts of Crosserlough, Denn, Killinkere, Kilmore, Larag, and Urney, with the town of Cavan, and the vils. of Ballyhaise and Stradone.

LOUGHTON, a par. in the hund. of Newport, co. Bucks, 3½ miles S.E. of Stoney Stratford, its post town, and 5 S.W. of Newport Pagnell, on a tributary of the river Ouse. The London and North-Western railway passes through the parish. The surface is gently undulated, and the soil a strong clay. Some of the women and children are employed in the manufacture of lace. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1769. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £228, in the patron. of Trinity College, Cambridge. The church is dedicated to All Saints. The parochial charities for binding boys apprentice, and providing fuel for the poor, produce about £50 per annum. The Baptists have a chapel. H. B. Whitworth, Esq., is lord of the manor.

LOUGHTON, a par. in the hund. of Ongar, co. Essex, 4 miles S.W. of Epping, and 13 N.E. of London. It is a station on the Great Eastern railway. The par. is situated in the vicinity of Epping Forest, and the river Roding flows through the neighbourhood. The village, which is considerable, consists mainly of one street, of considerable length. It formed part of the demesne of Waltham Abbey till the dissolution of the monastic establishments in the reign of Henry VIII., and was subsequently the residence of Queen Anne of Denmark, while princess. Here is a station of the K division of the Metropolitan police, and a post-office, with which is connected a savings-bank. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £458. The church, dedicated to St. John, is a modern structure, rebuilt in 1825. It stands on elevated ground, about the middle of the village, and nearly a mile from the more ancient one of St. Nicholas, of which the chancel alone remains. The church contains some old brass effigies of the Stonard family. The parochial endowments produce over £80 per annum, about £50 of which are applied to school purposes. The Baptists have a chapel. There are National and British schools. Loughton Hall, an Elizabethan pile of considerable architectural beauty, with a stone staircase, designed by Inigo Jones, was destroyed by fire in 1836, after having been completely restored.

LOUGHTON, a chplry. in the par. of Chetton, hund. of Stottesden, co. Salop, 6 miles N.W. of Cleobury Mortimer, and 9 N.E. of Ludlow. Bridgnorth is its post town. The village is small, and wholly agricultural. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect. of Chetton, in the dioc. of Hereford. The church is a small stone edifice, believed to have been built about three centuries back. There is a National school for both sexes. Viscount Boyne is lord of the manor.

LOUISBURGH, a post and market vil. in the par. of Kilgeever, bar. of Murrisk, co. Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 23 miles S.W. of Castlebar, and 184 from Dublin. It is situated on a small stream, to which it gives name, at Clew Bay, and on the road from Westport to Killery Harbour. In the town stand a church, Roman Catholic chapel, and a police station. Monday is market day. Fairs are held on the 1st May, 24th June, 4th August, and 29th September.

LOUISBURGH, a suburb of Wick, co. Caithness, Scotland.

LOUND, a par. in the hund. of Mutford, co. Suffolk, 4 miles N.W. of Lowestoft, its post town, and 6½ S.W. of Yarmouth. It is situated on the coast of the German Ocean. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in fishing and agriculture. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £437, besides a glebe of 22 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £458. The church is an ancient edifice, dedicated to St. John the Baptist. It has recently been restored, and has a good E. window. It contains a carved stone font, of octagonal form. The charities produce about £34 per annum, distributed to the poor in fuel. The register commences in 1695. There is a parochial school. Sir S. M. Peto, Bart., is lord of the manor.

LOUND, a hmlt. in the par. of Witham-on-the-Hill, wap. of Beltisloe, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 2 miles N.E. of Witham, and 2 S.W. of Bourn.

LOUND, a tnshp. in the par. of Sutton-cum-Lound, Hatfield div. of the wap. of Bassetlaw, co. Nottingham, 1½ mile N.E. of Sutton, and 3 miles N.W. of East Retford. It is situated to the W. of the river Idle. The village is considerable. The Wesleyans have a place of worship.

LOUNT, a hmlt. in the par. of Breedon-on-the-Hill, co. Leicester, 5 miles N.E. of Ashby-de-la-Zouch.

LOUP-HOUSE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Cotherston, North Riding co. York, 3 miles N.W. of Barnard Castle.

LOUTH, a maritime co. in the prov. of Leinster, and the smallest in Ireland, bounded on the N. by Carlingford Bay and Armagh, on the S. by co. Meath, on the E. by the Irish Channel, and on the W. by cos. of Monaghan and Meath. This county was originally part of the territory of the Voluntii, and subsequently was included in the independent sovereignty of Argial, or, as it was called by the English, Oriel, or Uriel. After being conquered by John de Courcy in 1183, it was erected into a county by King John in 1210, who presented it to De Courcy as part of Ulster. During Elizabeth's reign the insurgent chieftains committed great devastations in the county, and towards the close of the 17th century negociations took place between O'Nial and O'Donel and the English government as to the right of the English to that part of Ulster between the Boyne and Dundalk, and the towns of Carlingford, Carrickfergus, and Newry; but nothing came of these negociations, and from that period Louth has formed part of Leinster province. Edward Bruce was killed at Dundalk in 1318. At Drogheda, at an old church gate, "Poyning's law" was passed in 1694, Cromwell having previously taken it by assault in 1649.—Louth comprises an area of 315 square miles, or 201,434 acres, of which 178,972 are arable, and about 16,000 uncultivated. Its greatest length, from Drogheda to Carlingford Bay, is 32 miles, and its greatest breadth 15 miles. The southern districts of the county are level, with some parts undulating, all in a high state of cultivation. The Ravensdale, Cooley, and Carlingford mountains are to the N. From the mouth of the Boyne the coast is low and sandy for nearly 10 miles northward to Clogher Head, where is a natural harbour. To the S. of Dunany Head is a sandy bay with some reefs; these are covered at high-water, but left dry for a considerable distance at ebb-tide. Dunany Point is the southern extremity of Dundalk Bay, the town and harbour being its most inland point. From the head of the bay the land sweeps round the peninsula which projects to the S.E. between Dundalk Bay and Carlingford Lough. Here, on the northern side, the mountains already mentioned rise grandly from the water's edge, their height ranging from 904 feet to 1,935 feet, the height of Carlingford Mountain. Carlingford and Dundalk bays are unsafe for shipping; but great quantities of fish are caught, including turbot, cod, haddock, and herring, and oysters of a delicious flavour at Carlingford, the greater portion of which are sent to Dublin. The county is almost wholly agricultural; the southern parts are the most fertile, the best land being about Ardee and Louth; and though large parts are pasture, all kinds of grains are extensively cultivated. Great quantities of flax are also grown, and sent to the spinners of Bolton, Leeds, and other manufacturing towns in England. The population in 1851 was 107,657, which in 1861 had decreased to 90,713. It is calculated that 62 per cent. of the population are employed in agriculture, and about 27 per cent. in manufacture and commerce.—Louth is divided into 6 bars., Ardee, Drogheda, Upper and Lower Dundalk, Ferrard, and Louth, and contains 64 pars. Before the Union, Louth returned 10 members to the Irish parliament; since it has only returned three to the Imperial parliament—viz., two for the county and one for Dundalk borough. The chief towns are Dundalk, Ardee, and part of Drogheda. Dundalk is the county, assize, and sessions town, and the head-quarters of the police. It is in the diocese of Armagh, and in the Belfast and Dublin military districts, and is governed by a lieutenant, custos rotulorum, 13 deputy-lieutenants, a high sheriff, and some 45 magistrates. The district lunatic asylum is in Dublin; the county hospital at Dundalk, which is reckoned one of the most complete of its kind in Ireland, both as to the structure and the way in which it is conducted. There is a considerable quantity of linen manufactured at Drogheda, and there are large bleach-grounds at Collon and Ravensdale. There are large pin manufactories at Dundalk and Louth; also an iron and brass foundry. There are also extensive breweries and distilleries: the ale of Castle Bellingham has long been held in very high repute. Flax-mills abound on all the smaller rivers, and there are also many large flour and meal mills in the county.—Most of the rivers are small; they include the Boyne, celebrated for the battle of that name, fought in 1690, in which William III. defeated James II., who watched the engagement from Donore Church; the Flurry, Stranarn, Cully, and Craeghan, which rise in county Armagh, and flow into Dundalk Bay; the Fane flows into the same bay, the Lagan and Dee into the sea below Castle Bellingham; and many small streams rise in the interior, which very much contribute to the fertility of the country. The roads are good and well kept.—There are numerous remains of antiquity of a very varied character, including Druid circles at Ballrichan and Carrick Edmond, the ruins of a Druidical temple at Ballinahalne, near Dundalk, a cromlech at Ballymascanlan, and a large cairn on Carrick-Beant; also Danish camps, or forts, at Rosskugh, Castle Bellingham, Mount Albini, near Kilbig Hill, and the extraordinary fort called Fagh-na-ein-eighe, or "the one night's work." There is a round tower at Monasterboice, 110 feet high, and part of another at Dromiskin. Upwards of twenty religious houses have existed in the county, remains of which may be seen at Carlingford, Faughart, Mellifont, and Monasterboice, where there are two pillar crosses, 18 and 20 feet high—one, named St Boyne's, being the most ancient and the largest and most richly decorated in Ireland. There are numerous ancient castles, accounts of which will be found under their respective parishes. Large numbers of pure gold ornaments, swords, spears, bronze axes, and other antiquarian relics, have been found. In 1835 a very large head ornament and fibula of pure gold were discovered near Monasterboice. Edward II. created Sir John Birmingham earl of Louth, but the title died with him. Subsequently Henry VIII. created Sir Oliver Plunkett Baron Louth, whose descendants have the title to this day. Viscount Ferrard of Collon has also the title of Baron Oriel, the ancient name of the county. There are many seats in the county, including those of Lord Massareene, at Oriel, and Lord Louth, at Louth Hall.

LOUTH, a bar. in co. Louth, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It is 8 miles long, and its average breadth is 3. It is situated on the sea-coast, and the other sides are environed by the bars. of Upper Dundalk and Ardee, and by the co. of Monaghan. It contains the pars. of Clonkeehan, Darver, Dromiskin, Killincoole, Mansfieldtown, and parts of Iniskeen and Louth.

LOUTH, a par. and post town in the bars. of Louth and Ardee, co. Louth, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 7 miles S.S.W. of Dundalk, and 49 from Dublin. The par. is 6 miles long and about 4 broad. The surface consists generally of good land, and is watered by the rivers Glyde and Fane. Lake Ross lies towards the W. The roads from Ardee to Castle-Blaney, and from Dundalk to Carrickmacross, pass through the interior. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Armagh, val. £1,638, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately. The church was built at the expense of the parish towards the commencement of the present century. There are three Roman Catholic chapels, two National and several private day schools. Stephenstoun, Glydemains, and Glydefarm are the principal residences. The town is a very ancient place, standing on the bank of the river Glyde. It is a petty sessions town, containing a police station and a dispensary within the Dundalk Poor-law Union. Here are remains of an abbey said to have been built by St. Patrick in 534, and destroyed by the Danes. In 1148 it was made a priory for canons regular by Edan, Bishop of Clogher, and a chapter was held here in 1242. When Edward Bruce invaded Ireland, in 1315, he visited this town, and was entertained at the priory. Henry VIII. handed the possessions of the monastery over to the Plunkets, who take from it the title of baron. Among other remains of forts are those of Mount Ash and Castle Ring.

LOUTH, a par., market town, and municipal borough, exercising separate jurisdiction, but locally in the Wold div. of the hund. of Louth Eske, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 15 miles S. of Grimsby, 25 E.N.E. of Lincoln, and 141 from London. It has a station on the East Lincolnshire section of the Great Northern railway. It is situated in a fertile vale eastward of the Wolds, bounded on the N. and S. by chalk hills, which command varied and extensive prospects. The par. includes, besides the borough of Louth, the tnshp. of Louth Park and the new ecclesiastical parishes of St. Michael and Holy Trinity, recently constituted by orders in council. Its ancient Latin name was Luda, so called from its vicinity to the Lud, a small stream formed by the junction of two rivulets. The soil is in general fertile and well cultivated, resting on a bed of clay or chalk-marl, 80 feet thick, with gravel below, which supplies abundance of water for the service of the town. It was anciently distinguished for its religious houses, particularly De Parco-lude Abbey, a cell to Fountains Abbey, in Yorkshire, founded in 1139 by Alexander, Bishop of Lincoln. In 1536 its inhabitants warmly espoused the cause of the regular clergy in opposition to Henry VIII., and joined Captain Cobler in his "pilgrimage of grace," for which the Vicar of Louth, with four other priests, was executed at Tyburn. In 1631 a destructive plague swept away in one year above 754 persons, and the town was almost deserted. In the reign of Edward VI. it received its first charter of incorporation, with the style of "warden and 6 assistants of the town of Louth, and free school of Edward VI. in Louth." The Municipal Reform Act placed the borough under the government of a mayor, 6 aldermen, and 18 councillors, leaving the grammar school in the patronage and control of the "warden and 6 assistants." It is divided into two wards, and in 1861 had a population of 10,568. Its income amounts to nearly £1,500, chiefly derived from the rents of the town lands. Its common seal, showing the connection between the school and old corporation, bears the strange device of a boy birched by his master, with the pithy motto, "Qui parcit virgæ odit filium."—The town, which is upwards of a mile in length, is neat and well built, the houses being chiefly of brick covered with tiles. The streets are paved and lighted with gas, and the inhabitants are abundantly supplied with water from springs. It contains many public buildings. The townhall is a spacious structure of brick and stucco, with lofty assembly-room, erected in 1854; the sessions-house, with gaol and house of correction attached, was erected in 1827, and has a Doric portico; the corn exchange is a stone building erected in 1853, and situated in the Corn-market, as are also the public subscription news and billiard rooms; the savings-bank, in Eastgate, is a Gothic edifice erected in 1860; the mechanics' institute, with a library of 5,000 volumes, is situated in Upgate; also a theatre, dispensary, two branch banks, a penny bank, union workhouse, situated to the N. of the town, and erected in 1837 at a cost of £6,000, corn-market, wool-market, market for provisions, &c. There are manufactories for carpets, blankets, agricultural instruments, flour-mills, a paper-mill, tanneries, iron-foundries, and breweries. A considerable trade is also carried on in woolstapling, malting, bone crushing, soap making, lime burning, and rope and brick making. Steamboats and trading vessels from Hull and various parts of Yorkshire and Scotland come up to the eastern side of the town by means of the Louth navigation, which follows the valley of the Lud for 14 miles to Tetney Lock, on the Humber. Quarter sessions for the eastern division of the parts of Lindsey are held in this town alternately with Spilsby; petty sessions for the parts of Lindsey every alternate Wednesday, and petty sessions for the borough every Friday. It is also a polling place for the parliamentary elections for the parts of Lindsey, and the head of a Poor-law Union comprising 91 parishes and townships. It is also the seat of a superintendent registry and new County Court districts, which latter is held monthly at the sessions house. The Floral and Horticultural societies hold their exhibitions thrice in the season at the townhall. The Louth General Friendly Society has been in operation since 1814, and has upwards of 125 members. An extramural cemetery comprising 10 acres was formed in 1854 on the London road.—The living is now a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln; originally it was a vic.* val. £330, but in 1860 the Ecclesiastical Commissioners added to the glebe lands, and put the chancel under the care of the incumbent, thus raising it to a rect., val. £630, in the patron. of the bishop. The parish church, dedicated to St. James, is one of the finest structures in the county. At the E. end is a window of seven lights with very beautiful tracery, and filled with stained glass from Clayton and Bell, and at the western extremity is a lofty tower containing a peal of eight bells, and surmounted by a rich crocketed spire of 141 feet, built in 1635 by T. Turner, in place of the original one, which was 60 feet higher. The tower has four stories, and at its summit are four octagonal turrets with flying buttresses to the spire; the whole height, from the base of the tower to the cross on the spire, being 300 feet. In 1846 the church, having been seriously injured by lightning, the vestry voted a sum of £1,746 for its restoration, which has been admirably effected by the late L. N. Cottingham, of London. In the interior is a shrine of Caen stone, with a carved and crocketed canopy, erected by public subscription in memory of the late William Allison, a banker and great benefactor of the town. There are two district churches, St. Michael and All Angels, consecrated in 1863, and the Holy Trinity, built in 1865. The first is in the patron. of the rector, and the latter, now in the hands of the trustees of the Old Trinity Chapel, will shortly lapse to the bishop, as patron of the mother church. There are places of worship for Independents, Baptists, Primitive, Association, and Wesleyan Methodists, and a Roman Catholic chapel. The free grammar school, founded and endowed by Edward VI. with the revenues of two ancient guilds and a chantry of earlier date, has now a gross income of £1,150, chiefly arising from land. A portion of this sum is appropriated to the maintenance of twelve poor sisters, who reside in the almshouses connected with this charity. There is also a commercial school instituted by Dr. Mapletoft in 1676, and further endowed by the late Mr. Hardie, the gross income of which now amounts to £150, exclusive of boarders received into the master's house. Besides these there are two sets of National schools, British, infant, Wesleyan, Sunday, and adult evening schools, all well attended. The benefactions for the poor are numerous, producing altogether about £300 per annum, besides the interest of £600 bequeathed by Dr. Atkinson in 1762, to provide a salary for the organist.—Market days are Wednesday and Saturday, the former principally for corn; also a sheep market at Quarry Hill every Friday in the spring and autumn, and a fat stock market every alternate Friday throughout the year. Fairs are held on 30th April, middle Friday in September, last Friday in October, and on the 23rd November.

LOUTH ESKE, a hund. in the parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln. It is situated in the north-eastern part of the county, and is bounded on the N. by the wap. of Beadley Haverstoe, on the E. by the German Ocean, on the S. by the hund. of Calceworth, and on the W. by the wap. of Ludborough. There are two divs. called respectively Marsh and Wold. The former includes the pars. of Alvingham, Castle-Carlton, Conisholme, Grainthorpe, Grimoldby, Manby, Preston, Saltfleetby, Skidbrooke, North and South Somercotes, and Yarborough; the latter div. has the pars. of Authorpe, Burwell, Calcethorpe, North and South Cockerington, North and South Elkington, Farforth, Gayton-le-Wold, Hallington, Haugham, Keddington, Kelstern, Louth, Muckton, Raithby-cum-Maltby, Ruckland, Stewton, Tathwell, Welton-le-Wold, Withcull, and East Wykeham—comprising an area of about 70,000 acres.

LOUTH MILLS, a hmlt. in the bar. of Louth, co. Louth, Ireland, 1½ mile S.W. of Louth.

LOUTH PARK, a tnshp. in the par. of Louth, hund. of Louth Eske, co. Lincoln, 1 mile from the town of Louth, and about half a mile E. of the railway station. A monastery of the Cistercian order was founded here in the 12th century, of which there are some remains.

LOVAT, a hmlt. in the par. of Kirkhill, co. Inverness, Scotland, 8 miles W. of Inverness. It is situated near Loch Beauly.

LOVEDALE, a tnshp. in the par. of Penkridge, hund. of Cuttlestone, co. Stafford, 6 miles S. of Stafford. It is situated near the river Penk.

LOVEDEN WAPENTAKE, one of the subdivisions of the parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln. It is situated in the western part of the county, and is bounded on the N. by the lib. of Lincoln and wap. of Boothby Graffo on the E. by the wap. of Langoe, on the S. by the wap. of Winnibriggs and Threo, and on the W. by the co. of Nottingham. It includes the pars. of Ancaster, Beckingham, Grange and Long Bennington, Bant Broughton, Carlton-Scroop, Caythorpe, Claypole, Dry Doddington, Fenton, Foston, Fulbeck, Hough-on-the-Hill, Hougham, Leadenham, Marston, Normanton, Stragglethorpe, Stubton, and Westborough, comprising an area of about 47,340 acres. It gives name to a deanery in the archdeac. and dioc. of Lincoln.

LOVELAND. See LEAVELAND, co. Kent.

LOVERSALL, a par. in the soke of Doncaster, West Riding co. York, 3 miles S. of Doncaster, its post town, and. 3¼ N. of Tickhill. The main road between Balby and Worksop passes through the village. This place was formerly much frequented by visitors, the spring known as St. Catherine's Well being remarkable for the purity of its waters, and the neighbourhood exceedingly healthy. Limestone is quarried. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, val. £60, in the patron. of the Vicar of Doncaster. The church is an ancient structure with a tower and embattled parapet ornamented by eight pinnacles. There are three memorial windows of stained glass, and several monuments and effigies of the Overton, Wirrall, and other families. Mrs. Catherine E. Cooke is lady of the manor. The principal residences are St. Catherine's and Loversall halls—the former a remarkably fine example of later English domestic architecture, embellished with porticoes, turrets, and pinnacles.

LOVESOME HILL, a vil. in the chpiry. of Hutton-Bonville, North Riding co. York, 3 miles N. of Northallerton.

LOVESTON, a par. in the hund. of Narberth, co. Pembroke, 5 miles S.E. of Narberth, its post town. It is a small agricultural place. There are several mines of anthracite coal. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £113. The church is a small ancient edifice.

LOVINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Catsash, co. Somerset, 2 miles W. of Castle Cary, its post town, and nearest railway station on the Wilts and Somerset line, and 10 S.W. of Wincanton. It is situated in the vicinity of the river Brue. The village is small and chiefly agricultural. The impropriate tithes belonging to the Dean and Chapter of Wells have been commuted for a rent-charge of £215, with an impropriate glebe of 14 acres. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £72, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Wells. The church, dedicated to St. Thomas-à-Becket, is an ancient stone edifice, with a modern built tower and porch. The register commences in 1603. The charities, arising from rents and appropriated to education, produce about £13 per annum, besides other small sums for the poor. James Tidcombe, Esq., is lord of the manor. There is a National school for both sexes.

LOW, a hmlt. in the par. of Wolverley, co. Worcester, 3 miles N. of Kidderminster. It is situated near the river Stour and the Stourbridge canal.

LOW ABBOT-SIDE. See ABBOT-SIDE, LOW. And all places having a similar distinguishing prefix will be found under the proper name.

LOWDHAM, a par. in the S. div. of the wap. of Thurgarton, co. Nottingham, 6 miles S.W. of Southwell, and 8 N.E. of Nottingham, its post town. It is a station on the Midland line of railway. The parish is situated on the navigable river Trent, and includes the hmlt. of Caythorpe and Gunthorpe. The village, which is considerable, is situated on the road from Nottingham to Newark, and is a polling place for South Notts. The people are mostly employed in the stocking manufacture, and in the various cotton, corn, and paper mills. The tithes were, with certain exceptions, commuted for land, under an Enclosure Act in 1765. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £276. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a stone edifice, with a tower and spire. There was formerly a chapel-of-ease at Gunthorpe, which was taken down at the commencement of the present century. The charities amount to about £4 per annum. The Wesleyans, Independents, and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel. There is a National school for both sexes. Peter Strey Broughton, Esq., is lord of the manor.

LOWDORE, at the head of Derwentwater, co. Cumberland, from whence a view is obtained of the lake, and of the waterfall to which it gives name.

LOWE, a tnshp. in the par. of Stottesden, co. Salop, 5 miles N. of Cleobury Mortimer.

LOWE, a tnshp. united with Ditches, in the par. of Wem, hund. of North Bradford, co. Salop, 1 mile N.W. of Wem.

LOWE, a tnshp. in the par. of Leek, N. div. of the hund. of Totmonslow, co. Stafford, 1 mile S.E. of Leek.

LOWE, THE, a tnshp. in the par. of Worfield, hund. of Brimstree, co. Salop, 3 miles N.E. of Bridgnorth. It is situated on a branch of the river Severn.

LOWER, a hmlt. in the par. of Conwil-Cayo, co. Carmarthen, 7 miles N.W. of Llandovery.

LOWER ALLITHWAITE. See ALLITHWAITE, LOWER, co. Lancaster. And all places having a similar distinguishing prefix will be found under the proper name.

LOWER PARK, a tnshp. in the par. of Diddlebury, co. Salop, 6 miles N. of Ludlow.

LOWER STREET, a hmlt. on the river Orwell, co. Suffolk, 7 miles S.E. of Ipswich.

LOWESBY, or LOSEBY, a par. in the hund. of East Goscote, co. Leicester, 4 miles N. of Billesdon, and 9 N.E. of Leicester, its post town. It is situated on a tributary of the river Wreak, and includes the tnshp. of Cold Newton. The manufacture of fancy articles in terra-cotta and pottery used to be carried on here. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £98. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure with an embattled tower. One of the three bells is said to be 600 years old. Lady Fowke supports a school for the children of the poor. Sir F. G. Fowke, Bart., is lord of the manor.

LOWESGREAN, a hmlt. in the bar. of Middlethird, co. Tipperary, 4 miles S.E. of Cashel. Fairs are held on the 2nd August and 23rd October.

LOWESTOFT, a par., market and seaport town, in the hund. of Mutford, co. Suffolk, 10 miles S. of Yarmouth, 39 N.E. of Ipswich, and 113 from London by the turnpike road, or 117 by the Great Eastern railway, which has a branch line to this town. It is situated on the easternmost point of the county, overlooking the German Ocean, and is a packet station, a much frequented watering-place, and a principal seat of the herring fishery. Until recently the town was little better than an insignificant fishing village. It was anciently called Lothwinstoft and Laystoft, either derived from the name of a Saxon earl who resided here, or from "Low-toft," a market formerly held beneath the cliffs. In 1349 the great plague, which devastated the continent of Europe, raged here with such malignity that not more than one-tenth of the inhabitants escaped the contagion. It suffered much, also, from the plague in 1603, and was nearly destroyed by fire in 1645. In 1665 a naval engagement took place off shore between the English and Dutch fleets, when the latter were defeated.—Since the construction of the harbour and the opening of the railway, this place has made rapid advancement, having increased in population from 6,580 in 1851 to 10,663 in 1861. The town is clean, well-paved, thoroughly drained, and lighted with gas. It has a good water supply. The main thoroughfare is above a mile in length, and on the heights are many terraces and villas overlooking the sea. The shore is well adapted for sea-bathing, consisting of sand and shingle of a close, firm nature. There is a modern townhall, library, and news-rooms, a mechanics' institute, four commercial banks, and a savings-bank. Petty sessions are held weekly on Wednesday, also county courts once a month. The principal branches of industry are ship and boat building, rope and sail making, and corn and oil mills. A large number of the resident inhabitants are employed in the herring and other fisheries. On the Denes, under the town, is a population of 2,300 beachmen, &c., for whom the vicar and a committee are erecting a church. And on the common to the N. a bridge is to be erected across a ravine, to connect the two parts of the town together. The Mutford and Lothingland Infirmary, for indoor and outdoor patients, is situated in this parish. The harbour, constructed by Sir S. Morton Peto in 1846-8, consists of two massive stone piers 36 feet wide, the northern pier being about 1,800 feet in length, along which there is a tramroad, and the southern pier 1,200 feet, the former converging towards the latter at the entrance to the harbour, which is 160 feet wide. Each pier is terminated by a lighthouse, and the southern one is used as a promenade. The river Waveney flows into the inner harbour, which is about 2 miles across, and thus affords a means of transit for goods to the interior. Besides the lighthouses at the entrance to the harbour, there are two others, one to the N. of the town, called the Upper Lighthouse, and the other, a wooden one, called the Low Lighthouse, at a part called the Denes. The Trinity Board is now erecting a new lighthouse on the Needle Point, instead of the lower lighthouse. This is rendered necessary by the change in the entrance to the roads consequent on the shifting of the sands. The new lighthouse is to be built of iron and Aberdeen granite, on the newest principle, and will cost, including houses for the men, about £4,000. South Lowestoft, situated near the harbour and railway station, is the more fashionable locality, where the Grand Hotel stands, surrounded by a number of villa and semi-detached residences. Here is also the esplanade, a platform of about 2,400 feet in length, which, with South Pier, forms a marine promenade.—The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £323, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, is a structure of the 14th century, with a square tower surmounted by a spire rising to the height of 120 feet. The S. porch is decorated with a fan-roof in stone. The interior of the church contains an antique font, crypt, and a singular recess for penance; also numerous monuments, tablets, and two brasses, with traces of others which have been removed. In addition to the parish church there is the district church of St. John, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £100, in the patron. of trustees. There is also a chapel-of-ease dedicated to St. Peter. The parish register, which commences in 1650, contains also a register of the vicars from the year 1308 down to the last presentation. There are two free grammar schools, called Annott's, founded in 1571, which has an income of £30, and Wilde's, with £72; also six almshouses for decayed master fishermen, and several other charities, producing in all about £460 per annum. The Independents, Baptists, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists have chapels. There are National, British, and infant schools. George II. once landed here, as also did the first American ambassador, Adams. A regatta takes place annually. Amber and jet are occasionally found on the sea-shore. Wednesday is market day. Fairs are held on 12th May and 10th October for the sale of pedlery.

LOWESWATER, a parochial chplry. in the ward of Allerdale-above-Derwent, co. Cumberland, 7 miles S.E. of Cockermouth, its post town, and 10 N.E. of Egremont. It is situated in a deep and extensive vale at the foot of Blake Fell, between the north-western part of Crummockwater and the lake bearing its name. The river Cocker bounds it on the E., separating it from Lorton. The chplry. includes, besides the tnshp. of Loweswater, those of Mockerkin and Sosgill, and the hmlt. of Thackthwaite, with part of Crummockwater. Here is the famed Scale Force waterfall, the waters of which are precipitated between two vast rocky walls to a depth of 200 feet, where they are received into an immense chasm. The lake of Loweswater is about 1 mile in length by a quarter in breadth, and abounds with fish. Lead is obtained in the hills, and the peculiar stone called Lydian stone. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £49. The church, dedicated to St. Bartholomew, is a stone structure built in 1827 on the site of an ancient chapel founded by a prior of St. Bees. The endowments consist of about £12 per annum for school purposes, and other small charities producing about £2. There is a parochial school in the village, and another on the common for boys and girls.

LOWFIELD, a hmlt. in the par. of Bowes and wap. of Gilling, North Riding co. York, 5 miles S.W. of Barnard Castle. It is situated on the river Greta, near God's bridge, a natural arch of 15 feet span.

LOW FIELDS and LOW STREET, hmlts. in the par. of Kirkby Fleetham, North Riding co. York, 3 miles N. of Bedale.

LOWFOLD, a hmlt. in the par. of Bolton, West Riding co. York, 2 miles N. of Bradford.

LOWICK, a par. in the eastern div. of the ward of Glendale, co. Northumberland, 7 miles N.W. of Belford, and 9 S. of Berwick, its post town. The North-Eastern line of railway has a station at Beal, 4 miles N.E. of the village. The par. includes the vils. of Barmoor, Bowsdon, and Holburn, with the hmlt. of Laverick Law. The village of Lowick is a long and straggling place; the houses mostly detached, with thatched roofs. The people are employed in the collieries, quarries, and in the manufacture of bricks, drain-pipes, and lime burning. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £150, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church is a stone structure, rebuilt towards the close of the last century. It has a good E. window, also a memorial window of the Gregson family, both of stained glass. There are charities amounting to about £4 per annum. The Presbyterians and Primitive Methodists have chapels; that of the former is a Gothic edifice, built of stone. There is a National school for both sexes, held in a modern stone building. A large number of fossils have been found in the limestone, which, by the labours of the incumbent, have been collected and deposited in the Woodwardian Museum, Cambridge. Barmoor Castle is the principal seat here.

LOWICK, or LUFFWICK, a par. in the hund. of Huxloe, co. Northampton, 2 miles N.W. of Thrapston, its post town, and 8 N.E. of Kettering. A tributary of the river Nen flows through the parish. The London and North-Western railway has a station at Thrapston. The village is situated nearly in the centre of the parish. Coal and limestone are worked. A chantry for secular priests was founded here in the reign of Edward II., and was granted at the Dissolution to Sir Edward Montague. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £308. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a commodious edifice, with a tower of peculiar construction, surmounted by pinnacles and a large octagonal lantern. It has windows of stained glass depicting some of the Israelitish kings, the apostles, and Sir Walter de Vere, the founder of the church. It contains several effigies, monuments, and brasses of the De Vere, Stafford, Wilton, and other families; one of brass to Henry Green, Esq., the founder of Drayton Hall in this parish, in the vicinity of which a portion of Roman pavement was found in the last century. There is a free school for 18 children, endowed by Sir John Germaine (whose family monument is in the church) with an income of £90. The late Duke of Dorset likewise founded and endowed a school of industry. The parochial charities produce altogether about £125 per annum. W. B. Stopford, Esq., is lord of the manor.

LOWICK, a chplry. in the par. of Ulverstone, hund. of Lonsdale North of the Sands, co. palatine of Lancaster, 4½ miles N.W. of Ulverstone, its post town. It is situated on the banks of the river Crake, which is here crossed by a bridge. From the heights behind the village is a view of Conistone with its varied scenery. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £75. The chapel is a small slated edifice. There is a parochial school with teacher's residence. The charities amount to about £6 per annum.

LOWLIN, a hmlt. in the par. of Kyloe, hund. of Islandshire, co. Northumberland, 7 miles N.W. of Belford. It is united with the tnshp. of Beal, where there is a station on the North-Eastern line of railway. In the village is a mill giving employment to some of the people. Lowlin House is the principal residence. This is a meet for Lord Elcho's hounds.

LOWMILL, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Lowside Quarter, par. of St. Bees, co. Cumberland. It is situated in the vicinity of Whitehaven, near the coast of the Irish Sea.

LOW MILL, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Thurcross, West Riding co. York, 5 miles N. of Otley.

LOW MOOR, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of North Bierley, par. of Bradford, West Riding co. York, 4 miles from Bradford. The Lancashire and Yorkshire railway and the Leeds, Bradford, and Halifax Junction of the Great Northern railway have stations here. The inhabitants are employed in the collieries, stone quarries, and iron mines.

LOW QUARTER, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirkby-Ireleth, hund. of Lonsdale North of the Sands, co. palatine of Lancaster, 5 miles W. of Ulverstone.

LOWRIE'S DEN, a hmlt. on the top of Soutra Hill, co. Haddington, Scotland. It is situated on the Lammermoor range.

LOW ROW, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Melbecks, North Riding co. York, in the vicinity of Reeth.

LOWS, a small loch in co. Perth, Scotland, 2 miles N.E. of Dunkeld.

LOWSIDE, a tnshp. in the par. of Whickham, western div. of Chester ward, co. palatine of Durham, 3 miles W. of Gateshead, where there is a station on the North-Eastern line of railway. The tnshp. includes the vils. of Dunston, and the hmlts. of High and Low Team. The chief branches of industry carried on are in nail making, fire bricks, rope walks, wire drawing, preparation of hemp, chemical works, saw mills, and collieries. The building in which the National school is held is licensed for Divine service. The Primitive and New Connection Methodists have each a chapel. Dunston Lodge is a lunatic asylum, situated in this township.

LOWSIDE QUARTER, a tnshp. in the par. of St. Bees, ward of Allerdale-above-Derwent, co. Cumberland, 4 miles S. of Whitehaven. It is situated to the S.W. of Egremont, between the coast of the Irish Sea and the banks of the river Eben. The tnshp. includes the hmlts. of Braystones, Middletown, Nethertown, Uppertown, otherwise Caulderton, and Low Mill. The Whitehaven and Furness Junction line of railway passes through here, and has a station both at Braystones and Nethertown. Flax spinning is extensively carried on here. Egremont Castle, now in ruins, is within this township.

LOW-STREET, a station on the London, Tilbury, and Southend railway, in co. Essex, near Tilbury.

LOWTHER, a par. in West Ward, co. Westmoreland, 4 miles S. of Penrith, its post town, and 11 N.W. of Appleby. It is situated on the river Lowther, a tributary of the Eamont, and includes the tnshps. of Hackthorpe, Melkinthorpe, and Whale. There are two villages, called Lowther and Lowther New Town. The latter was laid out by Sir John Lowther in 1682, upon the demolition of a portion of the old village. Carpet and linen manufactures were introduced here, but without success. The families of Machel, Clifford, and Strickland have successively been the proprietors, from the latter of whom it passed to the Lowthers, the present possessors, who take the title of viscount from this place. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £95. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £283. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is a stone edifice, cruciform in shape, with tower rising from the centre, surmounted by a lantern. It was almost wholly rebuilt in 1686, and has been recently restored, with the addition of a new porch. It contains numerous mementos of the Lowthers, consisting of monuments, brasses, tablets, and tombs of various designs. A new mausoleum has been erected for this family in the churchyard. The parochial endowments consist of about £400 per annum, chiefly for educational purposes, which is now applied to the support of the schools in the several tnshps., also £90 for the relief of the poor. Lowther Castle is the seat of the Earl of Lonsdale. It is a magnificent structure, rebuilt in the early part of the present century under the direction of Smirke. The style of architecture is the decorated early English, which prevailed about the 14th century, and the numerous towers, bastions, battlements, ramparts, &c., give it a grand and imposing appearance. The great central tower rises to the height of 90 feet, up which is the grand staircase, 60 feet square, leading to the principal apartments. The N. front of the building is 420 feet in length, with a terrace of 500 feet, and the S. front 280 feet; the hall is 60 feet by 30, over which is the saloon, of the same dimensions, into which open the drawing-room on one side, and the dining-room on the other, each 45 by 26 feet. The interior contains a valuable collection of paintings, consisting of family portraits and pictures by the first masters. From the summit of the tower there is a most extensive prospect over the surrounding country. The grounds are very large, and are well stocked with deer. The shrubberies and flower gardens are extensive, and laid out with great taste. Passing through the park to the S.W. of the mansion is Lowther terrace, a grass-covered platform of about 3,000 feet in length, at the foot of which flows the river Lowther. The Earl of Lonsdale is lord of the manor.

LOWTHER, a range of mountains on the Scottish border, separating Lanarkshire from Dumfries, near the sources of the Clyde. The highest summits are 3,150 feet above the sea-level.

LOWTHER, a vil. on Windermere Lake, co. Westmoreland, 1 mile S. of Ambleside.

LOWTHERSTOWN, or IRVINESTOWN, a small post and market town in the par. of Derryvullan, in the bar. of Lurg, co. Fermanagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 8 miles N. of Enniskillen, and 112 from Dublin. It is a station on the Irish and North-Western railway. It is situated on the road from Enniskillen to Pettigo, and on the right bank of Lough Erne. It is a small but improving place, and is the head of a Poor-law Union, lying within the cos. of Fermanagh, Tyrone, and Donegal. Necarne, the seat of the D'Arcys, is in the vicinity. Fairs are held on the 8th of every month.

LOWTHERTOWN, a vil. in the par. of Dornock co. Dumfries, Scotland, 3 miles E. of Annan.

LOWTHORPE, a par. in the wap. of Dickering, East Riding co. York, 4 miles N.E. of Great Driffield, and 7 S.W. of Bridlington. It is a station on the Hull and Bridlington branch of the North-Eastern line of railway. The village is very small, consisting of a few farmhouses. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, val. £64. The church, dedicated to St. Martin, is an ancient edifice. The chancel has long been in ruins. There are numerous monuments and inscriptions, some of which are scarcely legible. It was made a collegiate establishment about 1330, but fell into disuse as such towards the latter part of the 16th century. William St. Quintin, Esq., is lord of the manor. Lowthorpe Lodge is the principal residence.

LOWTHWAITE, a hmlt. in the par. of Crosthwaite, co. Cumberland, 3 miles E. of Keswick, and 21 S. of Carlisle. It is situated on the river Greta, at the bottom of Derwentwater.

LOWTON, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Winwick, hund. of West Derby, co. palatine of Lancaster, 3 miles S.W. of Leigh, and 7 N. of Warrington, its post town. The Golborne station, on the London and North-Western line of railway, is about 1 mile from the village. Cotton spinning is carried on. The land is chiefly in meadow and pasture, with some arable and woodland. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £95. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chester. The church, dedicated to St. Luke, is an ancient edifice. There is also the district church of St. Mary, a perpet. cur.* val. £127. The parochial endowments produce about £50 per annum. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel. There is a school partly endowed for boys and girls. Byrom Hall and Lowton Hall, formerly seats, are now farms.

LOWVALLEYFIELD, a vil. in the par. of Culross, co. Perth. Scotland, 6 miles S.E. of Clackmannan.

LOXBEAR, a par. in the hund. of Tiverton, co. Devon, 4 miles N.W. of Tiverton, its post town, and terminus of a branch line of the Great Western railway. It is situated on the high road from South Molton to Tiverton. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £180. The church is a stone edifice of ancient date, with a Norman doorway. It contains an antique font and some monuments. There was formerly a chapel at Leigh in this parish. The charities produce about £2 per annum. A. H. D. Troyte, Esq., is lord of the manor.

LOXFIELD-DORSET HUNDRED, one of the subdivisions of the rape of Pevensey, co. Sussex. It is situated in the central part of the county, and includes the pars. of Buxted, Framfield, Isfield, and Uckfield, comprising an area of 17,600 acres.

LOXFIELD-PELHAM HUNDRED, as above, lies to the N.E., and includes the pars. of Mayfield, Wadhurst, and a portion of Lamberhurst, comprising an area of 25,440 acres.

LOXHORE, a par. in the hund. of Sherwill, co. Devon, 6½ miles N.E. of Barnstaple, its post town, and nearest railway station on the North Devon line of railway. It is a small agricultural village. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £177. The church is a stone structure, dedicated to St. Michael. The charities amount to about £1 per annum. There is a parochial school. Sir J. P. B. Chichester, Bart., is lord of the manor.

LOXLEY, a lib. in the par. of Uttoxeter, hund. of South Totmonslow, co. Stafford, 2½ miles S.W. of Uttoxeter, and 1 mile N. of the Bramshall station. The neighbourhood is agricultural. Loxley Hall, a mansion surrounded by a noble park, is the seat of the Kynnersley family, to whom the manor belongs.

LOXLEY, a par. in the Snitterfield div. of the hund. of Barlichway, co. Warwick, 4 miles E. of Stratford-upon-Avon, and 8 S. of Warwick, its post town. The village, though very small, is ancient, being named in the Domesday survey. It appears to have been possessed by the monastic establishments of Kenilworth and Worcester. The surface is in general hilly, and the soil a sandy loam, alternating with clay, on a subsoil of limestone. Charles I. slept at the old manor-house of Loxley the night before the battle of Edgehill. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £190. The church is a structure of antique appearance, dedicated to St. Nicholas. The Baptists have a chapel. Many of those slain at the battle of Edgehill lie buried in the churchyard. The charities amount to about £5 per annum. There is a parochial school for boys and girls. British and Roman coins have been frequently found.

LOXTON, a par. in the hund. of Winterstoke, co. Somerset, 3½ miles N.W. of Axbridge, its post town, and 5 S. of Weston-super-Mare, its nearest railway station on the Great Western line. It is situated on the river Axe. The village, which is a small rustic place, is situated close to the Mendip range of hills, from which views are obtained of the surrounding country. The land is chiefly pasture, with a considerable extent of common and woodland. Cheddar cheese is the principal produce. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £284. The church is a stone edifice, dedicated to St. Andrew. There are charities amounting to about £5 per annum. The Wesleyans have a chapel, and there is a parochial school partly endowed. Major Galton is lord of the manor.

LOXWOOD-END, a hmlt. in the par. of Wisborough Green, hund. of Bury, rape of Arundel, co. Sussex, 3 miles N. of the village of Wisborough Green, and 7 N.E. of Petworth, its post town. The Arun and Wye canal passes through it, and the river Arun flows in the immediate vicinity. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic.* of Wisborough Green, in the dioc. of Chichester. The chapel is a neat structure, rebuilt in 1822. Here is a meet for Mr. Napper's hounds.

LOYNTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Norbury, co. Stafford, 4 miles S.W. of Eccleshall. Loynton Hall is the only residence.

LOYNTON, a tnshp. in the par. of High Offley, hund. of Pirehill, co. Stafford, 4 miles S.W. of Eccleshall. The Birmingham and Liverpool canal passes through the neighbourhood.

LUBBENHAM, a par. in the hund. of Gartree, co. Leicester, 2 miles W. of Market Harborough, and 10 E. of Lutterworth. Rugby is the post town. It is situated on the river Welland, and the Grand Union canal passes the parish on the N.E. The London and North-Western railway has a station at Market Harborough. The par. includes the chplry. of Thorpe Lubbenham. Its old name appears to have been Levbenho. The manufacture of silk plush for hats is carried on here. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £110. The church is an ancient and commodious edifice, with heavy embattled tower. It is dedicated to All Saints, and contains a shrine and other relics of Roman Catholic times. The charities produce about £27 per annum, applied chiefly to school purposes, and derived from property bequeathed by Alderman Newton. Here is a chapel, used by both Independents and Baptists. In the neighbourhood there are traces of a Roman camp. Thomas Paget, Esq., is lord of the manor. Papillon Hall, an old seat of the Papillons, is the principal residence.

LUBBESTHORPE, a chplry. in the par. of Aylestone, hund. of Sparkenhoe, co. Leicester, 3 miles S.W. of Leicester. It is situated on the western bank of the river Soar. There are some remains of an old chapel. The Duke of Rutland is lord of the manor and sole proprietor.

LUBNAIG LOCH, a lake, situated partly in the par. of Balquhidder, and partly in the par. of Callander, co. Perth, Scotland. It measures about 5½ miles in length, and half a mile at its broadest point. In its immediate vicinity is the Benledi mountain, a portion of which overhangs the waters of the lake. On the E. side of the lake stands Ardwhillary House, which was at one period the residence of Bruce, the Abyssinian traveller.

LUCAN, a par. and post town in the bar. of Newcastle, co. Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 7 miles W. of Dublin. It is a station on the Great Southern and Western railway. The par. is 2 miles long by 1½ mile broad. The surface consists of an excellent soil, thickly wooded. It is watered by the river Liffey. The road from Dublin to Leixlip, and the Royal canal, traverse the interior. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Dublin, val. £104, in the patron. of the Incumbent of Leixlip. Here are a Roman Catholic chapel, a Wesleyan meeting-house, a National and several day schools. Lucan House, Weston Park, and Lucan Abbey, are the chief seats. The Spa, which is much celebrated, has its pump-room and baths, and is a centre of fashionable resort. The town is situated on the right bank of the Liffey, 1½ mile E.S.E. of Leixlip. An elegant bridge crosses the river. It contains a library, loan fund, flour-mills, and a dispensary, within the Celbridge Poor-law Union. It is the head-quarters of the county militia. A monastery was founded here in 1220 by Lord Lucan, as a cell of St. Catherine. The estates afterwards came into the possession of the Vesey family, through the Rokebys. Petty sessions are held in the town, and races take place occasionally.

LUCCOMBE, or LUCKHAM, a par. in the hund. of Carhampton, co. Somerset, 4 miles S.W. of Minehead, its post town, and 12 W. of Williton. Two streams flow through the parish, the principal of which is called the "Horner," flowing through a dell into the sea about a mile to the E. of Porlock. There are three hmlts., Doverhays, Horner, and West Luccombe. The main road between Minehead and Porlock passes through the village. The hill of Dunkerry, which belongs to the greywacke formation, rises to the height of 1,700 feet above the sea-level. The substratum is chiefly a coarse, red sandstone, alternating with limestone, and frequently containing iron ore. The soil is rich, and the land in a high state of cultivation. There are some chalybeate waters, and some beautiful specimens of marble are found in the limestone quarries. The tithes have been commuted for a rent charge of £365. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £417. The church is an ancient stone edifice, dedicated to St. Mary. The register commences in 1676. The charities amount to about £4 per annum. There is a parochial school. Sir T. D. Ackland is lord of the manor.

LUCCOMBE. See CHELBOROUGH, EAST, co. Dorset.

LUCCOMBE CHINE, a shelf of rock under Shanklin Down, Isle of Wight, co. Hants, 6 miles S.E. of Newport.

LUCE, a river, partly in the co. Ayr, but chiefly in co. Wigtown, Scotland. It rises on the S. side of Benerard Hill, 1,430 feet high, and consists of two streams until within 6½ miles of the sea. It runs 16 miles S. through Glenluce, past New Luce and Old Luce, to Luce Bay.

LUCE BAY, the entrance of which is between the Mull of Galloway and Barrow Head, is 15 miles long, and 18 wide. The bay is sandy, and has anchorage in 3 to 16 fathoms at East Tarbert, Drumore, Chapel Rosan, Kirkmaiden, &c. There is a lighthouse on the Mull of Galloway.

LUCE, NEW, a par. in the co. Wigtown, Scotland, 5 miles N. of Glenluce. It is situated on the Luce, where the Cross water falls into that river. Its length southward is 9⅛ miles, and its greatest breadth is 6½. The hilly parts are covered by rocks or heath, while the arable land, which is not of great extent, lies principally on the banks of the rivers. Lead was formerly worked. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the rearing of sheep and black cattle. The par. is in the presb. of Stranraer and synod of Galloway, in the patron. of the crown. The minister's stipend is £158. The parish church was erected in 1821. New Luce and Old Luce formerly were one parish, known as Glenluce, but were separated into two distinct parishes in 1646.

LUCE, OLD, or GLENLUCE, a par. containing the vil. of Glenluce, in the co. Wigtown, Scotland, 15 miles W. of Wigtown. It is situated on the banks of the river Luce, and on the public road at the head of Luce Bay, which here forms a tolerably good harbour for small vessels, and affords employment for many fishermen. The size of the parish is 10 miles by 5. The surface is hilly and irregular, excepting near the coast and river Luce, where it is level, and well cultivated. The par. is in the presb. of Stranraer and synod of Galloway, in the patron. of the crown. The minister's stipend is £158. The parish church was erected in 1814. The United Presbyterians and Free Church have each a place of worship. There are five non-parochial schools. About a mile N. of the parish church are the ruins of Luce Abbey, founded in 1190 by Rowland, Lord of Galloway, as a cell to Melrose. Tradition reports Michael Scott, of cabalistic memory, to have been at one time abbot of this establishment. On the coast S.E. of the mouth of the Luce stand the ruins of the castle of Synniness. Carscreuch, now in ruins, is an ancient seat of the earls of Stair. The modern seats are Park Place, Genoch, and Balkail House. There is a mineral spring in the neighbourhood. An annual fair is held at Glenluce on the Tuesday before the 26th May, and there is a monthly fair or market from the first Friday in the month of April to the first Friday in December.

LUCKENSFORD, a vil. in the par. of Inchinnan, co. Renfrew, Scotland, 3 miles N.W. of Renfrew.

LUCKER, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Bambrough, N. div. of the ward of Bambrough, co. Northumberland, 4 miles S.W. of Bambrough Castle, and 4 S.E. of Belford, its post town. The North-Eastern line of railway has a station here. The village is a small agricultural place. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £62. The chapel is a stone edifice. Here is a school for the children of both sexes, conducted on the National system. Lucker Hall is the principal residence. The Duke of Northumberland is lord of the manor.

LUCKHAM, a par. in the hund. of Carhampton, co. Somerset. See LUCCOMBE.

LUCKINGTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Kilmersdon, co. Somerset, 5 miles N.W. of Frome.

LUCKINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Chippenham, co. Wilts, 7 miles S.W. of Malmesbury, and 10 N.W. of Chippenham, its post town. This was a possession of the Seymours, who received it from King Harold. It is situated close on the borders of Gloucestershire. Building stone is quarried, and there is a medicinal spring. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £292 15*s*. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £278. The church is an ancient edifice, dedicated to St. Michael, with a tower. There is a Sunday-school, endowed with £7, and other charities, producing together £16 per annum. In the vicinity are barrows, kistvaens, and a cromlech.

LUCKLAWHILL-FEUS, a vil. in the par. of Logie, co. Fife, Scotland. It commands an extensive view.

LUCTON, a par. in the hund. of Wolphy, co. Hereford, 5 miles N.W. of Leominster, its post town, and 9 S.W. of Ludlow. It is situated on the main road between Ludlow and Presteign, in the vicinity of the river Lug. Hops are cultivated in this neighbourhood. About one-third of the parish is woodland, and the rest nearly equally divided between arable and pasture. The soil is a mixture of clay and loam on a substratum of limestone, which is quarried. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £98, in the patron. of the governors of Lucton school. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a stone edifice, rebuilt on the old foundation in 1852. In 1708, John Pierrepont, Esq., founded and endowed a free grammar school, in which 50 boys are clothed and educated gratuitously, besides others on moderate terms. It has a revenue of nearly £1,250 per annum.

LUDBOROUGH, a wap. or subdivision of the parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, situated in the north-eastern part of the county. It is bounded on the N. by the wap. of Bradley Haverstoe, on the E. by the hund. of Louth Eske, on the S. by the hund. of Hill, and on the W. by the wap. of Walshcroft, and includes the pars. of Covenham (St. Bartholomew and St. Mary), Brackenborough, Fotherby, Little Grimsby, Ludborough, North Ormsby, Utterby, and Wyham-cum-Cadeby, comprising an area of about 12,600 acres.

LUDBOROUGH, a par. in the wap. of the same name, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 5 miles N.W. of Louth, its post town, and 8 S. of Great Grimsby. The Great Northern line of railway has a station here. The village is situated on the main road between Grimsby and Louth. The Romans had a station here. The tithes were commuted for land in 1774 under an Enclosure Act. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £388. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has recently undergone complete restoration. The register commences in 601. The Wesleyans, Free, and Primitive Methodists have chapels, and there is a National school.

LUDCHURCH, a par. in the hund. of Narberth, co. Pembroke, 3 miles S.E. of Narberth, its post town. The parish is of small extent, but contains limestone and marble quarries. The village is small, and wholly agricultural. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £94. The church is dedicated to St. Elidyr.

LUDDEN, a par. in the bar. of Clanwilliam, co. Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 8 miles N.N.W. of Sixmilebridge. Limerick is its post town. It is 1 mile square. The surface consists of good land. The road from Limerick to Kilmallock traces part of the E. border. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Emly, united with Caherconlish.

LUDDENDEN, a chplry. in the par. of Halifax, wap. of Morley, West Riding co. York, about 3 miles N.W. of Halifax. The vils. of Luddenden and Luddenden Foot are situated partly in the tnshp. of Midgley, and partly in that of Warley. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the various cotton, woollen, worsted, paper, and corn mills. It is watered by Luddenden Brook, a tributary of the river Aire. The surface is boldly varied, rising into hills of lofty elevation, and commanding some mountain scenery. At Luddenden Foot is a station on the Lancashire and Yorkshire line of railway. The Manchester canal passes through the neighbourhood. Stone of excellent quality is extensively quarried. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £170, in the patron. of the vicar of the parish. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, was rebuilt in 1821 at an expense of £3,000, and has a square embattled tower, crowned with pinnacles. The Wesleyans have a chapel at Luddenden, and the Independents one at Luddenden Foot.

LUDDENHAM, a par. in the hund. of Faversham, lathe of Scray, co. Kent, 2 miles N.W. of Faversham, its post town, and 4½ E. of Sittingbourne. The Teynham station on the London, Dover, and Chatham line of railway is about 1½ mile W. of the village. It is situated near the river Swale. A large portion of the parish consists of marsh land, which to some extent has been drained and brought under cultivation. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £385 4s. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £394, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure of stone and flint, with brick tower. The register commences in 1547. There is a parochial school.

LUDDESDOWN, a par. in the hund. of Toltingtrough, lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, 5 miles S.W. of Rochester, and 6 S. of Gravesend, its post town. The Sole Street station on the London, Chatham, and Dover line of railway is 1½ mile N.W. of the village. The road known as Luddesdown Street passes through the par., which includes the hmlts. of Henly Street and Poundgate. Hops are grown in this neighbourhood. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £330. The church is a structure of ancient date, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul. It contains a tomb of the Montacute family, who were formerly lords of the manor. There is an endowment of land for church purposes, consisting of about 4 acres. Here is a free school for the children of the parish.

LUDDINGTON, a par. in the western div. of the wap. of Manley, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 5 miles N.E. of Crowle, and 12 N.W. of Brigg. Goole is its post town. The nearest railway station is Crowle, on the South York and Lincolnshire railway. It is situated on the river Don, near its confluence with the Trent, and includes the tnshps. of Garthorpe and Luddington. Steamboats ply on the Trent between Gainsborough and Hull. The tithes were commuted under an Enclosure Act in 1796 for land and annual money payments. The living is a rect. and vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £382. The church, dedicated to St. Oswald, is a modern structure with a tower and spire, and contains windows of stained glass. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel, and there is a National school. The charities consist of about £3 and 65 pecks of barley per annum. Earl Manvers is lord of the manor.

LUDDINGTON AND DODWELL, a hmlt. in the par. of Old Stratford, co. Warwick, 3 miles S.W. of Stratford-upon-Avon. This neighbourhood is watered by the navigable river Avon. Here are remains of an ancient chapel, said to be the one in which Shakspeare was married.

LUDDINGTON-IN-THE-BROOK, a par. partly in the hund. of Polebrook, co. Northampton, and partly in that of Leightonstone, co. Huntingdon, 5 miles S.E. of Oundle, its post town, and 8 N.E. of Thrapston. It is a small rustic place. The tithes, with certain exceptions, were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1807. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £150. The church is dedicated to St. Margaret. The charities are shared with the parish of Hemington.

LUDDINGTON-IN-THE-WOLD. See LUTTON, co. Huntingdon.

LUDE, an ancient par. in co. Perth, Scotland, now united with Blair Atholl.

LUDFORD, a par. chiefly in the hund. of Munslow, co. Salop, and partly in that of Wolphy, co. Hereford, half a mile S. of Ludlow, its post town. It is situated on the S. bank of the river Teme, opposite Ludlow, and is included in that borough. The vil. and church are in Herefordshire, but the larger portion of the par., which contains the tnshp. of Street, is in Shropshire. This was a Roman station, and subsequently the site of the monastery of St. John. An old but substantial bridge crosses the Teme, which here forms the boundary line between the counties of Hereford and Salop. Stone is quarried. A saline spring rises at Saltmore in this parish out of the red marl, and is esteemed efficacious in eruptive and scorbutic complaints. The living in a vic. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £200. The church is an old edifice, with a tower. It is much ornamented, and supposed to have been built in the reign of Henry I. A hospital for six poor people was founded here in 1672 by Sir Job Charlton, and has an income of £63. There are some other charities, the whole producing about £78 per annum. Ludford House is the principal residence.

LUDFORD MAGNA, a par. in the eastern div. of the hund. of Wraggoe, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 6 miles E. of Market Rasen, its post town, and 8 N.W. of Louth, at both of which places there is a railway station. It is situated on the Fosse Way, near the source of the river Bain. The tithes, with certain exceptions, were commuted for corn-rents under an Enclosure Act in 1791. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £189, to which is annexed the rect. of Ludford Parva, val. £119. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. The Free Methodists have a chapel, and there is a National school. Roman coins have been found in this neighbourhood.

LUDFORD PARVA, a par. in the eastern div. of the hund. of Wraggoe, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln. It adjoins the par. of Ludford Magna, of which it is now virtually a part. The living is a rect. annexed to the vic. of Ludford Magna. There is no church, but the burial-ground is still used. The Wesleyans have a chapel.

LUDGERSHALL, a par. and small town in the hund. of Amesbury, co. Wilts, 14 miles S.E. of Marlborough, 15 N.E. of Salisbury, and 7 N.W. of Andover, its post town, where the London and South-Western railway has a station. This place, formerly called Lurgeshall and Lutgashall, was anciently of considerable extent, and is supposed to have been the residence of some of the Saxon kings. It lies in a low spot on a tributary of the river Avon, and after the Norman Conquest was a market town and borough by prescription, returning two members to parliament, at intervals from Edward I. to Henry V., and then till the passing of the Reform Bill, when it was disfranchised. It is now only a good-sized village, situated on the road from Devizes to Andover. The houses are much scattered, and the inhabitants employed in agriculture. A castle of Norman build once stood here, which was held by the Clifford, Molin, and other families, and finally passed to the crown. The Empress Maude took refuge in this fortress in 1141, during her flight from Winchester towards the castle of Devizes. It was dismantled shortly after the battle of Lewes. There are still some slight remains of the walls to be seen in a farmyard near the village. A bailiff is appointed at the court leet held by the steward of the manor on Michaelmas-day, when two constables are also chosen. The surface is boldly undulating, rising in some parts into hills of moderate elevation. The soil is chalky in some parts, and in others a strong red loam. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £274. The church, partly of brick, is of ancient date, with a square tower surmounted by pinnacles. The interior has recently undergone thorough repair, and a slated roof has replaced a former flat one covered with lead. It is dedicated to St. James, and contains several effigies and very ancient monuments. The parochial endowments realise about £23 per annum. The Baptists and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel. There is a good National school held in a convenient building, erected by the Messrs. Everett as a memorial to a deceased sister. Here are remains of the ancient market-cross, also an antique cross in the churchyard. About 76 years since, the great seal of England, used in the reign of Stephen, was found in the vicinity; and on Chidbury Hill is a heart-shaped plot of ground, encircled by a number of tumuli. Bid-desden House, erected by General Webb, and afterwards inhabited by the Duke of Chandos, is the principal residence. W. H. Mann, Esq., is lord of the manor. A pleasure fair is held on 25th July.

LUDGERSHALL, a par. in the hund. of Ashendon, co. Bucks, 6 miles S.E. of Bicester, and 10 N.W. of Aylesbury. Thame is its post town. The par. includes the hmlts. of Kingswood and Tetchwick. In former times there existed a small religious community here, connected with the great hospital of Saintingfield, in Picardy. At the suppression of alien priories, the property came to King's College, Cambridge. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £259. The church, dedicated to St. Mary the Virgin, is a stone edifice of ancient date. It has a font of Norman design, and contains a brass of 1565. The charities produce about £18 per annum. The Independents have a chapel. There is a National school for both sexes. The Rev. Thomas Martyn is lord of the manor.

LUDGVAN, or LUDJAN, a par. in the hund. of Penwith, co. Cornwall, 3 miles N.E. of Penzance, its post town. The Marazion station on the West Cornwall line of railway is about 1 mile E. from the village. It lies N. of Mount's Bay, on rising ground, near the coast of the English Channel. In Domesday survey this place is called Ludaham, when it was one of the possessions of Robert Earl of Mortaigne. Copper and tin are obtained here, also granite and schistose. A peculiar kind of granite, with which was blended a large proportion of mica, called the Ludgvan stone, used to be found here, but appears to be now exhausted. The people are mostly employed in mining operations. The hmlt. of Crowlas, and several small places, are included in this parish, which is of large extent. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £808. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £800. The church is a stone edifice, with tower and Norman porch, dedicated to St. Paul. It contains a monument to Dr. Borlase, the learned antiquary and historian of Cornwall, who was rector of this parish for above 50 years, and the tomb of Sir Humphry Davy's parents. The parochial charities produce about £7 per annum. The Wesleyans have six chapels, the Primitive Methodists two, and the Bible Christians one. There is a National school for both sexes. In the neighbourhood are remains of an entrenched camp, called Castleandinas, the diameter of which is 400 feet from E. to W., and the principal ditch 60 feet wide; it occupies the summit of the highest hill in this part of the county, and commands views of the English Channel. At Collurian are remains of an ancient chapel, and on the road to Marazion earthworks, thrown up by the Parliamentarians while engaged in the siege of St. Michael's Mount. The Rev. Canon Rogers is lord of the manor. A cattle fair is held at Lower Quarter on the 2nd October.

LUDHAM, a par. in the hund. of Happing, co. Norfolk, 11 miles N.E. of Norwich, its post town, and 13 N.W. of Yarmouth. It is situated near the bank of the river Bure. The village, which is large and well built, was formerly a market town, and the bishops of Norwich had a seat here. The episcopal residence was originally a grange, which formed part of the demesne of St. Bennet's Abbey at Holme, and is now converted into a farmhouse. The market was chartered in the reign of Elizabeth, but has long been discontinued. The appropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £640, and the vicarial for one of £300. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £298, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is an ancient edifice, with embattled tower, and is dedicated to St. Catherine. It has a screen of the 15th century, and a font, both handsomely carved. The parochial charities produce about £100 per annum, above £80 of which are derived from rents of land for the benefit of the poor. The register commences in 1583. The Baptists and Wesleyans have each a chapel, and there is a National school for boys and girls. Ludham Hall is a farmhouse, formerly part of the bishop's palace. A fair is held on the Thursday and Friday after Trinity Sunday.

LUDLOW, a par., market town, municipal and parliamentary borough, locally in the hund. of Munslow, co. Salop, 10 miles from Leominster, 25 S.E. of Shrewsbury, and 143 N.W. by N. of London. It has a station on the Shrewsbury and Hereford railway. It is situated on a commanding eminence on the southern border of the county, close to Herefordshire, and in the fertile vale of the Teme, which is here joined by the river Corve. It is a place of great antiquity, having taken its rise in a Roman settlement, and was called by the Welsh Dinan Llys Tywysog, signifying "the prince's palace," and afterwards, by the Saxons, Leadlowe. It is particularly celebrated for its castle, built by Roger de Montgomery, and once a royal residence, but now an imposing ruin, considered the most extensive in England, and extra-parochial. This castle, which was of great strength in ancient times, was seized by Henry I., besieged by Stephen in 1138, and retained by the Fitzwarines, to whom it was granted by Henry II. It was subsequently given by John to Philip d'Aubigny, from whom it reverted through the De Lacy and Mortimer families to the crown. It was stormed by Henry IV. in 1459, having been garrisoned by the Yorkists, and was fitted up for the reception of the court in the reigns of Edward V. and Henry VII., which latter monarch held the festivities here on occasion of the marriage of Prince Arthur with Katherine of Arragon. In the reign of Henry VIII. it was made the seat of the Lords President of the Marshes of Wales, and it was here that "Comus," written by Milton for the entertainment of the family of the Earl of Bridgwater, was performed. In the Civil War it was garrisoned for Charles I.; but the Royalists having been routed in the vicinity, it was surrendered in 1645 to the Parliamentary forces. At the Restoration it was held by Earl Carbery, the patron of Jeremy Taylor, and Samuel Butler, author of "Hudibras," who, whilst residing here, wrote the first three cantos of that poem. At the Revolution, the office of Lord President of Wales having been abolished, it was dismantled.—The town, which was walled by Edward I., is well built, and has recently been much improved. Broadgate is the only one of the seven gates now remaining. It was first chartered by Edward IV. It contains a townhall and market-house, guildhall, where quarter and petty sessions are held, a prison erected on the site of Goalford's tower, a police station, two branch banks, savings-bank, public library with news-rooms, assembly rooms situated in Castle-street, a literary institution and mechanics' institute, dispensary, lying-in institution, union poorhouse situated in the parish of Stanton Lacy, and a museum of natural history, containing a choice and valuable collection of fossils from the Ludlow rocks, besides antiquities and curiosities. The limits of the municipal borough are less extensive than those of the parliamentary, including only the "old borough" or parish of Ludlow St. Lawrence, with a population in 1851 of 4,691, which, in 1861 had increased to 5,178; while the parliamentary includes also the parish of Ludlow, and parts of Stanton Lacy and Bromfield, with a population in 1851 of 5,376, and in 1861 of 6,033. It has returned two members to parliament since the reign of Edward IV., and is governed under the new act by a mayor, who is returning officer, 4 aldermen, and 12 common councilmen, with the style of "bailiffs, burgesses, and commonalty of the town and borough of Ludlow." The area of the new borough comprises 1,395 acres, and its revenue amounts to about £1,900, more than half of which is derived from the town lands. A considerable business is done in the malt trade; the glove manufacture, which was formerly carried on here, is now extinct; there are, besides, two or three water corn-mills. The quarter sessions are held before the Recorder of Ludlow. There is also a county court for the recovery of debts under £50, and a Board of Poor-law Guardians for a union embracing 31 parishes, of which 6 are in Herefordshire, and the remainder in Salop. It is the seat of a superintendent registry, and gives name to a deanery in the archdeac. of Salop and dioc. of Hereford. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £23 13*s.* 6*d.—The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £150. The church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, is a spacious cruciform structure of the time of Henry VII., measuring 228 feet by 73. It has a lofty tower 130 feet high, containing a peal of eight bells and chimes; also an hexagonal porch and two chantry chapels annexed. It contains an open roof and stalls, stained E. window, a beautiful toned organ, and monuments of Lord President Bridgman and others. The interior was completely restored in 1863, at a large cost, when a new pulpit was made, all the pews and galleries cleared away, and three western windows filled with stained glass. The Independents, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists have places of worship. The College, now converted into private houses, is an old foundation. The Royal Free Grammar School, founded by Edward VI., has an endowment, out of which £200 per annum are paid to the head-master, £150 to the second, and nearly £100 to the third, with two exhibitions at Baliol College, Oxford, and an annual exhibition to Oxford, Cambridge, or Durham. It is open not only to citizens, but to children within 10 miles of the town. There is a bluecoat-school over the market-cross, with an endowment of £63. The National schools are a handsome new building, appropriated to boys and girls, with residence for masters, besides infant and Sunday schools. The charities consist of Hosyer's almshouses, rebuilt in 1758, having an endowment of £250; also Foxe's almshouse, with an income of about £200. Near the town is a mineral spring, and round the castle are public promenades commanding prospects over the rich valley of the Teme.—The principal residences in the vicinity are Dinham House, seat of the Earl Powis, where Lucien Buonaparte resided, Ludford House, the Sheet, Moor Park, Oakley Park, and Stanton Lacy House. The Ludlow hounds hunt round here, and are kennelled at Wetmoor. Annual races take place at midsummer on the Old-field, and adjoining the Bromfield railway station. There are traces of Whitefriars Priory, founded in the middle of the 14th century, and of an Austin friary, founded in the 13th. Market days are Monday and Saturday, the former being chiefly for corn and provisions, the latter for provisions only. Fairs are held on the Monday before the 13th February for cheese, on the Tuesday before Easter, Wednesday in Whitsun week, 21st August, 28th September, first Monday in November, and 6th December, for cattle, horses, sheep, pigs, and hops; also a statute fair on the 1st M y for hiring servants.

LUDNEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Grainthorpe, Marsh div. of the hund. of Louth Eske, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 7 miles S.E. of Louth.

LUDSTONE, a tnshp. in the par. of Claverley, co. Salop, 5 miles E. of Bridgnorth.

LUDWORTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Glossop, hund. of High Peak, co. Derby, 5 miles S.W. of Glossop, and 8 N.W. of Chapel-le-Frith. It is situated near the confluence of the rivers Coyt and Etherow. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in mining operations and in agriculture. Here are chapels belonging to Wesleyans and Independents.

LUFFENHAM, NORTH, a par. in the hund. of Wrangdike, co. Rutland, 5 miles N.E. of Uppingham, and 6½ S.W. of Stamford, its post town. The London and North-Western railway has a station S.W. of the village. The river Chater flows through the parish. The surface is undulating and the soil somewhat stony, though fertile. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £624, in the patron. of Emanuel College, Cambridge. The church is a stone edifice, dedicated to St. John the Baptist. It is supposed to have been built in the reign of Edward III., and was struck by lightning in 1822, when the steeple was damaged. It contains a brass of Archdeacon Johnson, formerly rector, who founded the grammar schools of Oakham and Uppingham. The parochial endowments produce about £100 per annum, of which £23 are for school purposes. Sir Gilbert John Heathcote, Bart., is lord of the manor.

LUFFENHAM, SOUTH, a par. in the hund. of Wrangdike, co. Rutland, 1 mile S. of the above, and 5 miles N.E. of Uppingham, its post town. It lies near the banks of the river Chater, on the road from Stamford to Uppingham and Leicester. A large portion of the parish is in heath and common. The surface is hilly and the soil of inferior quality. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £423, in the patron. of Baliol College, Oxon. The church is an ancient Gothic structure, dedicated to St. Mary. The charities produce about £1 per annum. There is a National school for boys and girls. Sir G. J. Heathcote, Bart., is lord of the manor. Luffenham Hall is the principal residence.

LUFFIELD ABBEY, an ext. par. lib., chiefly in the hund. and co. of Bucks, 5 miles N.W. of Buckingham. It is situated on the borders of Whittlebury Forest, and was anciently the site of a Benedictine priory, founded in 1124 by Robert le Bossu, Earl of Leicester, but subsequently suppressed and given to the abbot and convent of Westminster by Henry VII. At the Dissolution the property was given to the Throckmortons, from whom it passed to the dukes of Buckingham.

LUFFINCOTT, a par. in the hund. of Black Torrington, co. Devon, 5 miles S. of Holsworthy, and 7 N. of Launceston, its post town. It is situated on the banks of the river Tamar, and the Bude canal passes through the parish. There is no village, only a few farmhouses. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £67. The church is a small edifice dedicated to St. James. Henry Blagrave, Esq., is lord of the manor.

LUFFNESS, a vil. in the par. of Aberlady, co. Haddington, Scotland, 5 miles N.W. of Haddington. It is situated near the junction of the rivers Peffer and Leddie, on Aberlady Bay.

LUFFWICK. See LOWICK, co. Northampton.

LUFTON, a par. in the hund. of Stone, co. Somerset, 3 miles N.W. of Yeovil, its post town, and 4 S.E. of Ilchester. There is no village, and only four houses. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £102. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £107. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is a stone edifice of very small dimensions, and in various styles of architecture. J. Farquharson, Esq., is lord of the manor.

LUG, a river of Wales, rises in Radnorshire, and after a course of 50 miles, in which it receives the waters of the Pinsley, Arrow, and Frome, joins the Wye near Mordisford in Herefordshire.

LUGAR WATER, a river of co. Ayr, Scotland, rises under Wardlaw Hill, and after a course of 15 miles, in which it receives the waters of the Guelt and Burnock, joins the river Ayr near Barskimming. It gives name to a station on the Glasgow and South-Western and Portpatrick railway.

LUGDUFF, a mountain near Glendalough, co. Wicklow, Ireland, 10 miles N.W. of Rathdrum. It attains an altitude of 2,148 feet above the sea-level, and is celebrated for the Lugganure lead mines, which yield galena, with 70 per cent. of lead.

LUGGANN, a vil. in the bar. of Ross, co. Galway, Ireland, 9 miles N.W. of Oughterard.

LUGGATE WATER, a stream of co. Edinburgh, Scotland. It is a good trout stream, joining the Gala water.

LUGGIE WATER, a stream of co. Dumbarton, Scotland, joining the river Kelvin.

LUGNAQUILLA, a mountain in co. Wicklow, Ireland, 10 miles E. of Baltinglass. It attains an altitude of above 3,000 feet above the sea.

LUGTON, a vil. in the par. of Dalkeith, co. Edinburgh, Scotland, 3 miles from Dalkeith.

LUGTON WATER, a stream of co. Ayr, Scotland, rising in Loch Libo, co. Renfrew, and joins the Garnock near Eglintoun Castle.

LUGWARDINE, a par. in the hund. of Radlow, co. Hereford, 3 miles N.E. of Hereford, its post town, and 11½ N.W. of Ledbury. Hereford is the nearest railway station, whence there are trains to all parts. The par.

which includes the tnshp. of Hagley, is watered by the river Lug, and the road from Hereford to Worcester passes through the village. The river is here crossed by a stone bridge of three arches. Hops are cultivated, and the manufacture of bricks and encaustic tiles carried on. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Hereford, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The parish church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a large ancient structure, with a curiously sculptured heavy tower containing a clock and good peal of bells, and has several stained glass windows. There is also a district church at Long Grove, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £100. The parochial charities, including Edwards' £5, distributed to the poor in coals, on the anniversary of the passing of the Reform Bill, produce about £25 per annum. The Wesleyans have a chapel, and there is a parochial school, with good residence for the teacher. Longworth, Rockfield, and Wilcroft are the principal residences.

LUGYN-Y-LLAN and LUGYN-Y-WERN, tnshps. in the par. of Halkin, co. Flint, 2 miles S.W. of the town of Flint. Lead is obtained here.

LUICHARD, a small loch in co. Ross, Scotland, 9 miles W. by N. of Dingwall.

LUING, an island in the par. of Kilbrandon, co. Argyle, Scotland, 14 miles S.S.W. of Oban, off Luing Melford. It is divided from the coast by Luing Sound. It is 6½ miles in length, and rarely more than 1 mile in breadth. The great mass of the island is formed of clay slate, which is extensively quarried. The surface is generally low, but in some parts attains an elevation of about 700 feet. A large number of acres have been of late years reclaimed. At Ardinmair Hill there is a Picts' house, or fort, 60 feet by 45, with walls from 8 to 10 feet thick.

LUI WATER, a tributary of the river Dee, rises under Ben Mac Dhui, in co. Aberdeen, Scotland.

LUKE'S, ST., a par. in the Finsbury div. of the hund. of Ossulstone, co. Middlesex, 1 mile N. of St. Paul's. It was anciently part of St. Giles's, Cripplegate, and is now included within the metropolitan borough of Finsbury, containing Finsbury, Bartholomew, and King squares, the New Artillery Grounds, Bunhill Fields Cemetery, the City Basin of the Regent's Canal, and the libs. of the City-road, E. and W. Finsbury, Golden-lane, Old-street, and Whitecross-street. See FINSBURY and LONDON.

LUKE'S, ST., a chplry. in the hund. of Easebourne, rape of Chichester, co. Sussex, 3 miles N.W. of Midhurst.

LUKESWELL, a hmlt. in the bar. of Knocktopher, co. Kilkenny, Ireland, 6 miles S. of Knocktopher. It is situated on the river Kilmacow.

LULLINGSTONE, a par. in the hund. of Axton, lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, co. Kent, 4½ miles E. of Farnborough, and 6 S. of Dartford, its post town. It is situated on the river Darent; and the Sevenoaks branch line of the London, Chatham, and Dover railway passes through the parish, the nearest station being at Eynesford, about 1 mile E. of the village, which consists of a cluster of farmhouses. Hops are cultivated, and the land is generally fertile. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £350. The church, dedicated to St. Botolph, is an ancient edifice, with painted windows, rood-loft, &c. It contains a brass and numerous monuments, some of ancient date, and stands in the grounds of Lullingstone Castle. At Lullingstone, which was formerly a distinct parish, there are ruins of a very ancient church, and a variety of Roman remains have been discovered. Shoreham Castle, a former seat of the Aldham family, stood in this neighbourhood. Lullingstone Castle is the residence of Sir P. H. Dyke, Bart., having successively been possessed by the Hart, Peche, and Rokesley families.

LULLINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Alciston, rape of Pevensey, co. Sussex, 3 miles N.E. of Seaford, its post town, and 8 S.E. of Lewes. The Lewes and Hastings branch railway passes through the neighbourhood; and the parish is bounded on the W. by the river Cuckmere. It is very thinly inhabited, the village consisting of about half a dozen farmhouses. The impropriation belongs to Earl Amherst. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £28, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is said to be the smallest in this county. There are traces of a much larger one having formerly existed. The register commences in 1721. Lady Amherst is lady of the manor.

LULLINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Frome, co. Somerset, 2½ miles N.E. of Frome, its post town. The neighbourhood is hilly. Iron ore is abundant, but not worked. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £63. The church is a stone edifice of the 12th century, dedicated to All Saints. It has a Norman font of ancient date, bearing a Latin inscription. The register commences in 1712. The charities produce about £3 per annum. There is a British school, partly endowed. William Duckworth, Esq., is lord of the manor.

LULLINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Repton, co. Derby, 6 miles S. of Burton-on-Trent, its post town, 7 S.E. of Ashby-de-la-Zouch, and 4 from the Croxhall station on the Western branch of the Midland railway. The par. includes the hmlt. of Coton-in-the-Elmes. A tributary of the river Trent flows through it. In the Domesday survey this place is entered as Lullitone. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £62. The church is an ancient structure, dedicated to All Saints. The parochial charities produce about £7 per annum, including £2 to the free school, which is open to the children of both sexes. C. R. Colvile, Esq., is lord of the manor.

LULLYMORE, a par. in the bar. of East Offaly, co. Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles N.N.E. of Rathangan. Edenderry is its post town. It is 2½ miles long by 2 broad. The surface consists of a considerable proportion of bog, the remainder being generally good soil. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Kildare, val. with Kilmaogue, £344, in the patron. of the bishop. Lullymore Lodge is the seat of the Murphy family, who are the proprietors of the district.

LULSLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Suckley, upper div. of the hund. of Doddingtree, co. Worcester, 2½ miles N. of the vil. of Suckley, and 6 W. of Worcester, its post town. It is situated on the river Teme. The township is partly laid out in hop-gardens. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect.* of Suckley, in the dioc. of Worcester. The church is dedicated to St. Giles.

LULWORTH, EAST, a par. in the hund. of Winfrith, South Blandford div. of the co. of Dorset, 5½ miles S.W. of Wareham, its post town and nearest railway station, and 6 W. of Corfe Castle. The village, which is small, is situated near the coast. The manor anciently belonged to the families of De Lolleworth, Newburgh, and the Howards' earls of Suffolk, by which last family the noble castle of Lulworth was rebuilt out of the ruins of Bindon Abbey. It was commenced in 1588, but was not completed till 1641, when the property passed to an ancestor of the Weld family, its present proprietors. The castle is a massive structure, built after a design by Inigo Jones, in the form of a quadrangle 80 feet square, with circular towers at each angle 110 feet high, and 30 feet in diameter. The main entrance is on the E., which is approached by a flight of steps, and decorated with several statues, and two inscriptions commemorating the visits of George III. and his queen in 1789. It was the residence of Charles X. on his expulsion after 1830 from the throne of France. A monastery for refugees, of the Order of La Trappe, stood in the grounds before the Peace of 1815, which allowed men to return to France. It contains an illuminated psalter, as old as the reign of Edward I., and several portraits by Lely. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £109. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is partly modern, with an ancient embattled tower, and contains escutcheons and tablets of the Weld family, and of one of the Barings. The Roman Catholics have a chapel and two schools. In the neighbourhood are several barrows, and other ancient remains, chiefly British. J. Weld, Esq., is lord of the manor.

LULWORTH, WEST, a par. in the lib. of Bindon, co. Dorset, 7 miles S.W. of Wareham, its post town, and 10 S.E. of Dorchester. It is situated on the southern coast, having within its limits Lulworth Cove, a small creek of singular natural beauty, surrounded by lofty limestone rocks, the resort of the razor-bill and puffin, the collecting of whose eggs forms part of the support of the country people. The entrance of the cove is through a wide gap in the cliff, of sufficient depth for vessels of 100 tons burthen; but the landing is not good, and is often dangerous. The "Arched Rock," about a mile from the Cove, has an opening of about 20 feet high, through which the sea presents a remarkably grand appearance. The coast-guard service has a station here. The village is entirely encircled with hills, with the exception of a narrow gorge, which winds southward to the sea. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £156, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is a neat edifice, with a small square tower.

LUMB, a tnshp. and ecclesiastical district, in the par. of Whalley, upper div. of the hund. of Blackburn, co. palatine of Lancaster, 2 miles N. of Newchurch, its post town, and 5 S. of Burnley. The main road between the above towns passes through it. The hmlt. of Water is in this tnshp. Cotton and woollen goods are manufactured here, and some of the people are employed in the quarries. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £150, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately. The church is a small stone edifice of Norman architecture, dedicated to St. Michael. There is a National school, and the Baptists have a place of worship and a school at Water.

LUMBY, a hmlt. in the par. of Sherburn, upper div. of the wap. of Barkstone-Ash, West Riding co. York, 5 miles N.E. of Pontefract. It is situated close to the North Midland line of railway, at the point where a curved branch of 1¼ mile long diverges to the N. and joins the Leeds and Selby railway. This hamlet is united with Huddleston to form a township.

LUMLEY, GREAT, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Chester-le-Street, N. div. of the ward of Easington, co. palatine of Durham, 2 miles S.E. of Chester-le-Street, and 5 N.E. of Durham. The Fence Houses station on the North-Eastern line of railway is about 2 miles S.E. from the village, of which it is the post town. It is situated on Lumley Beck, a tributary of the river Wear. The people for the most part are employed in the collieries. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Durham, val. £300, in the patron. of the bishop. The Wesleyans have two places of worship, and there is a National school, in which Divine service is performed on Sunday. Here are almshouses for 12 widows, and other charities, amounting to about £50 per annum. The Earl of Scarborough is lord of the manor.

LUMLEY, LITTLE, a tnshp. in the par. of Chester-le-Street, co. Durham, 1 mile N. of Great Lumley, and 6 miles N. of Durham. It is situated near the banks of the river Wear, and the road between Durham and Newcastle passes through the neighbourhood. Fence Houses is its post town and nearest railway station. Charcoal is made here. Lumley Castle was built by Sir R. Lumley in the reign of Edward I., since which time it has been partly rebuilt and modernised, but has continued in the Lumley family. The present representative of that house is the Earl of Scarborough, who is lord of the manor and proprietor of this and the above township. The castle stands on the S. bank of the river Wear, upon rising ground, commanding a view of the surrounding country. It is a massive quadrangular building, with a machicolated tower at each angle. The hall and rooms are of good dimensions, and there is a collection of portraits of the Lumleys and other celebrities of past times.

LUMPHANAN, a par. in the Kincardine O'Neil district of the co. of Aberdeen, Scotland, 3 miles N.N.W. of Kincardine O'Neil. It is a railway station on the Great North of Scotland line. It is about 6 miles in length, and 4 in breadth, and is nearly surrounded by hills. The name of the parish signifies "the bare little valley;" but this designation is not at the present day applicable to the lowlands, which are now well cultivated and very productive. About 2,770 acres are in tillage, 4,300 pastoral or waste, and 500 under wood. The highest hills are Mealmead and Craiglich. Granite is the predominant rock. The par. is partly bounded by the river Dee, and is drained by Lumphanan Burn. It is in the presb. of Kincardine O'Neil and synod of Aberdeen. The parish church was erected in 1851. There is a Free church and non-parochial schools in the neighbourhood. This is the district in which the usurper Macbeth is said to have been slain by Macduff in the year 1057; the spot on which tradition asserts the combat to have taken place is about a mile N. of the church, on the brow of a hill, where a large cairn of stones has been raised, commemorative of the event. In the vicinity are a pillar, several Druidical stones, and small cairns; and at Pool Bog, on Lumphanan burn, is an oval moated earthen fort or bawn, 259 feet round at top, and 36 feet high.

LUMSDEN, an ancient manor in the par. of Coldingham, co. Berwick, Scotland. It was possessed by a family of that name so early as the reign of David I.

LUNAN, a par. in the co. of Forfar, Scotland, 7 miles N. of Arbroath. It is situated on the Lunan Bay, at the mouth of the Lunan water. The length of the parish eastward is 2¾ miles, and its mean breadth 1⅛ mile. The surface rises from the Lunan water until it attains a height of about 400 feet above the sea, and then recedes to the further boundary. The soil is fertile, and the greater proportion of the land is arable. The par. is in the presb. of Arbroath and synod of Angus and Mearns, in the patron. of the crown. The minister's stipend is £158. The church is a modern structure. Inverlunan was the ancient name of the parish. The Earl of Northesk is the chief landowner. Lunan House is the only mansion.

LUNAN WATER, a stream, rising near Loch Lows, in co. Perth, Scotland, which, after a course of 8 miles, joins the Isla, near Cupar Angus.

LUNASTING, or LUNNASTING, a par. in Shetland Islands, Scotland, now united to Nesting, which see.

LUNCARTY, a vil. in the Strathmore district of the co. Perth, Scotland, 4½ miles N. of Perth. It is a station on the Scottish North-Eastern railway. This place, which was formerly a district parish, is situated on the river Tay, and has the largest bleach-fields in Great Britain, the grounds comprehending about 130 acres. It was here that Kenneth III., with the assistance of the Hays, routed the Danes in 972.

LUND, a par. in the Bainton-Beacon div. of the wap. of Harthill, East Riding co. York, 6 miles N.W. of Beverley, its post town, and 8 S.W. of Great Driffield. It is situated on the Wold. The tithes were commuted under an Enclosure Act in 1794 for land and annual money payments. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of York, val. £188. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a neat stone structure with an embattled tower. It contains a number of monumental records, and a register of rather ancient date. The Wesleyans have two places of worship, and there is a parochial school. The remains of an old market-cross are still to be seen. A fair for the sale of pedlery is held on the fourth Thursday in Lent.

LUND. See CLIFF-CUM-LUND, co. York.

LUND, a chplry. in the par. of Kirkham, co. palatine of Lancaster, 3 miles S.E. of the town of Kirkham. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £382, in the patron. of Christ Church, Oxford. The chapel has been enlarged.

LUNDIE, a par. in the co. Forfar, Scotland. It contains a small village of its own name, which is 9 miles N.W. of Dundee. It is situated under the Sidlaws. The parish is 3 miles long by 2 at its greatest breadth, with an area of 4,100 acres. The soil is various, but for the most part productive. There are four lakes, the largest of which is three quarters of a mile. The ancient par. of Lundie was united to Fowlis Easter in 1618. The united par. is in the presb. of Dundee and synod of Angus and Mearns. The minister's stipend is £201. The parish has two churches, the minister officiating in them every alternate Sunday. That of Lundie is an ancient structure, repaired in 1847. The church of Fowlis Easter was founded by Sir Andrew Gray, and is still perfectly entire, though built in the year 1142. It was refitted in 1842. There are two parish schools. Cattle fairs are held at Lundie in June and August, but are of no importance. Near Pitlail lake is a three or four syllable echo.

LUNDIN LINKS, a station on the Leven and East of Fife railway.

LUNDINMILL, a vil. in the par. of Largo, co. Fife, Scotland, 2 miles from Largo, and 7 S. of Cupar. It is situated near the river Keil, on Largo Bay, and contains part of a Druidical temple, consisting of three stones 18 feet high, called "the Standing Stanes."

LUNDS, or HELBECK-LUNDS, a chplry. in the par. of Aysgarth, wap. of West Hang, North Riding co. York, 6 miles N.W. of Hawes. It consists chiefly of grazing land. The living is a perpet. cur., val. £70, in the patron. of the Vicar of Aysgarth.

LUNDY ISLAND, in the hund. of Braunton, co. Devon, 4 miles N. of Clovelly. It is situated in the mouth of the Bristol Channel, nearly opposite Hartland Point, and is upwards of 3 miles in length by 1 mile in breadth. The coast is extremely precipitous, being accessible only at one point on the eastern side. From a rock called the Constable, at the northern end of the island, a fine view is commanded of the English and Welsh coasts. Near the south-eastern point are the remains of a strong fortification, said to have belonged to Morisco, the famous pirate, in the reign of Henry III., and which, in the Parliamentary war, was held by Lord Saye and Sele for Charles I. In the reign of William and Mary the French seized the island by stratagem, and maintained themselves in it for some time.

LUNE, a bar. in co. Meath, prov. Leinster, Ireland. It is 10½ miles long, and its greatest breadth is 6 miles. It is bounded by the bars. of Upper Kells, Lower and Upper Navan, and Upper Moyfenrath. It contains the pars. of Athboy, Kildalkey, Killaconnigan, Rathmore, and part of Castlerickard.

LUNE, or LON, a river of co. Westmoreland, rises between Ravenstonedale and Lonsdale, and, after a course of near 50 miles, falls into the Irish Sea below Lancaster. It is celebrated for its salmon trout fishing, and has two lighthouses at its mouth, one on Cockerham promontory, and the other on Plover Scarr rock, visible for 9 miles.

LUNEDALE, a tnshp. in the par. of Romald-Kirk, wap. of West Gilling, North Riding co. York, 9 miles N.W. of Barnard Castle, its post town. It is situated in a vale, within a short distance of the river Tees, and is watered by the Lune, a small tributary of that river. The tnshp. is long and irregular, including the hmlts. of Birtle, Bowbank, Carbeck, Grassholme, Laith, Thevinggarth, and Wemergill. A considerable proportion is moorland. The tithes were commuted under an Enclosure Act in 1811 for land. At Laith, in this township, is a chapel-of-ease. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel. There is a good school for the children of the district, endowed with £10 per annum by the late Earl of Strathmore.

LUNG, a river of co. Roscommon, Ireland, connecting loughs Thurlagh and Gara.

LUNGA, an island on the W. side of the Sound of Luing, co. Argyle, Scotland, 1 mile N. of Scarba. Its size is about 2 miles by 1 mile, and it consists of a hilly ridge, occasionally rising to an altitude of nearly 1,000 feet above sea-level.

LUNT, a tnshp. in the par. of Sephton, hund. of West Derby, co. palatine of Lancaster, 7 miles N. of Liverpool. Lunt House is the principal residence.

LUNT'S HEATH, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Widness, co. palatine of Lancaster, 5 miles S.E. of Prescot. It is situated in the vicinity of the river Mersey.

LUNTLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Delwyn, co. Hereford, 2 miles N.W. of Weobley.

LUPPITT, a par. in the hund. of Axminster, co. Devon, 4 miles N. of Honiton, its post town, and 11 S.E. of Wellington. The par. includes the tythg. of Shapcombe and the hmlts. of Beacon, Shaw, and Week, besides several small places. The Mohun and Carew families had a seat here, of which there are still some remains. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £121. The church is an ancient cruciform structure of stone, dedicated to St. Mary. It has an antique font, also a stone screen. The charities amount to about £5 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes.

LUPTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirkby Lonsdale, ward of Lonsdale, co. Westmoreland, 4 miles N.W. of Kirkby Lonsdale, and 4½ N.E. of the Burton and Hobme station on the London and North-Western line of railway. It is situated on Lupton Fell, within a short distance of the river Lune, and includes the hmlt. of Cowbrow.

LURG, a bar. in co. Fermanagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. It is 18 miles long, and its greatest breadth is 10 miles. It is bounded by cos. Donegal and Tyrone, and the bar. of Magheraboy. It contains the pars. of Belleek, Drumkeeran, Magheraculmoney, and parts of those of Derryvullen, Magheracross, Templecarn, and Trory, with the towns and vils. of Kesh, Lowtherstown, and Pettigoe.

LURGAN, a par., post and market town, in the bar. of Castlerahan, co. Cavan, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 16 miles N.E. of Armagh. The par. is 7 miles long, and its average breadth is 1 mile. The surface is mostly cold and uninteresting, with some woodland. The road from Dublin to Enniskillen crosses the parish. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Kilmore, val. £869, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, which is at Virginia, was erected by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits in 1821. There are two united Roman Catholic chapels. Fort George is the principal seat.

LURGAN, a post and market town in the par. of Shankill, in the bar. of East O'Neilland, co. Armagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 8 miles N. of Dublin, and 19 S. of Antrim. It is a station on the Ulster railway. The town was founded in 1619 by the Brownlow family, and was twice rebuilt in the 17th century. The principal street of the town is well built, clean, and about 1 mile in length. The manufacture of linen and muslin is carried on to some extent. In the town stand Shankill church, and Presbyterian, Quaker, and Wesleyan meeting-houses, the National school, and Society of Friends' school, besides several others. It contains three banks, savings-bank, breweries, distillery, &c. The market-house and court-house are well built. The Lurgan Advertiser is published in the town. The property is held by the Right. Hon. Lord Lurgan, of Brownlow House, the grounds of which are highly ornamental. Here is a chief police station, and petty sessions are held at intervals. Thursday is market day. Fairs are held on 5th August and 22nd November.

LURGAN, a peak of the Gauff mountains, in co. Mayo, Ireland, 9 miles N. of Foxford.

LURGANBOY, a vil. in the par. of Killarnet, in the bar. of Rossclogher, co. Leitrim, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 1 mile W. of Manor Hamilton. It is situated on the road from Enniskillen to Sligo, on the Boonid river. The demesne of Lurganboy is seated in the vicinity. Fairs are held on the 21st of every month, and on the 15th of May.

LURGANGREEN, a vil. and the site of a post-office, in the par. of Dromiskin, in the bar. and co. of Louth, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles S. of Dundalk. It is situated at the embouchure of the river Fane, which falls into Dundalk Bay. Here is a police station. Fairs are held on the 25th July and 11th November.

LURGASHALL, a par. in the hund. of Rotherbridge, rape of Arundel, co. Sussex, 4 miles N.E. of Midhurst, and 5 N.W. of Petworth, its post town. The par. is rather extensive, and includes several little hmlts. It is to a great extent laid out in hop-gardens, and on the N. is bounded by the county of Surrey. Blackdown, a hill 800 feet above the level of the sea, is in this parish. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £450. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £235. The church is an ancient structure, with a very old fashioned porch, and a tower surmounted by a shingled spire. There is a good National school for both sexes.

LURGIE, a range of hills in co. Berwick, Scotland, 2 miles N. of Nenthorn. They lie in the southern part of the county, and attain an altitude of 900 feet above sea-level.

LUSBY, a par. in the eastern div. of the soke of Bolingbroke, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 4 miles N.W. of Spilsby, its post town, and 5 S.E. of Horncastle. The parish is of very small extent. The tithes were commuted for land at the enclosure of the fens. The living is a rect in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £200. The church is a small edifice, dedicated to St. Peter. The charities consist of a house for the poor, and an allotment of fen land. The Wesleyans have a chapel. The Bishop of Lincoln is lord of the manor.

LUSCOMBE, a hmlt. in the par. of Harberton, co. Devon, in the vicinity of Totness. Luscombe House is the principal residence.

LUSHCOTT, a tnshp. united with Longville, in the par. of Eaton, co. Salop, 5 miles S.W. of Much Wenlock. It is situated on Wenlock Edge.

LUSHILL, a tythg. in the par. of Castle Eaton, hund. of Highworth, co. Wilts, 3 miles N.W. of Highworth.

LUSK, or LUSH, a par. in the bar. of East Balrothery, co. Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 14 miles N.E. of Dublin. It is a station on the Dublin and Drogheda railway. It is situated on the coast, and contains the vils. of Lusk, Rush, Loughshinny, and Grace Dieu. It is 6 miles long by 4 broad. The surface is low, but fertile, and the coast rocky. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Dublin, val. £300, in the patron. of the Precentor and Treasurer of St. Patrick's Cathedral. The church is an old building, consisting of a portion of the Abbey Church. It contains a piscina, and several interesting monuments. There are three Roman Catholic chapels, four National and three private schools. Kenure is the seat of Sir R. Palmer, Bart. Here are two coast-guard stations and a police station. The village, which stands on the road from Swords to Skerries, is a very old place, consisting of neat though poor dwellings. An Austin priory is said to have been founded here in 1190 by Archbishop Comyn, upon the site of St. Macculind's monastery, founded in the 5th century.

LUSMAGH, or KILMACUNNA, a par. in the bar. of Garrycastle, King's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles S.W. of Banagher. Eyrecourt is its post town. It is 4 miles long by 3 broad. It is bounded on the W. by the river Shannon, and the Little Brosna traces the southern border. The surface is flat and boggy. The vil. of Newtown is in this par. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Clonfert, val. with Donanaughta, £300, in the patron. of the bishop. Here is a Roman Catholic chapel, also two hedge-schools. Cloghan is an old seat of the Madden family.

LUSS, a par. in the co. of Dumbarton, Scotland, 12 miles N. of Dumbarton. It is situated on the W. side of Loch Lomond. It is a railway station on the Glasgow, Dumbarton, and Loch Lomond railway. The length of the par., from N. to S., is 8½ miles, and its breadth from 2½ to 5 miles. The surface is mountainous, and in some parts attains a height of about 3,000 feet above the level of the sea. The Camstraddan and Luss quarries supply considerable quantities of excellent blue slate. The par. is in the presb. of Dumbarton and synod of Glasgow and Ayr. The minister's stipend is £268. The parish church was built in 1771. There is a Free church. Dr. John Stuart, who translated the Bible into the Gaelic language, was minister of this parish. The village of Luss is a station for the Loch Lomond steamers, and in the summer months the place is much frequented by visitors. A view of Loch Lomond, with its numerous islands, is obtained from Stronehill, a considerable elevation about half a mile N. of the village. About a mile from the village stands the cairn of St. Kessog, which is said to mark the spot where that saint suffered martyrdom, A.D. 520. The ancient parish of Luss was much larger than it now is. The only seat here is Rossdhu House, the residence of Sir James Colquhoun, Bart.

LUSTLEIGH, a par. in the hund. of Teignbridge, co. Devon, 7 miles W. of Chudleigh, and 10 N.W. of Newton Abbott, its post town and nearest railway station on the South Devon line. It is situated near the banks of the river Wrey, on the left of the high road from Newton Abbott to Moreton-Hampstead. The par. includes the hmlts. of Pethybridge and Hamerslake, and the singularly rocky valley called Lusley Cleve. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £200. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £154. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is an ancient edifice with an embattled tower. It contains several monuments and effigies, also stone stalls. The charities produce about £8 per annum. Here are remains of a large stone cross, commonly called Bishop's Stone.

LUSTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Eye, hund. of Wolphy, co. Hereford, 2 miles N.W. of Leominster, its post town. The land is chiefly laid out in hop-grounds and orchards. W. T. K. Davies is lord of the manor.

LUTHERMUIR, a vil. in the par. of Maykirk, co. Kincardine, Scotland, 4 miles S.W. of Laurencekirk. It is situated near the river Luther, or Leuther.

LUTHRIE, a vil. in the par. of Creich, co. Fife, Scotland, 4 miles N.W. of Cupar.

LUTLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Hales Owen, lower div. of the hund. of Halfshire, co. Worcester, 2 miles W. of Hales Owen, and about 6 S.W. of Dudley.

LUTLEY, a manor in the par. of Enville, co. Stafford, 5 miles W. of Stourbridge.

LUTON, a par., market and post town, in the hund. of Flitt, co. Bedford, 5 miles E. of Dunstable, 18 S. of Bedford, and 31 from London. The Great Northern line of railway has a station here. It is situated in a vale where the river Lea has its source, and the par. includes the hmlts. of East and West Hyde, Leegrave, Limbury-cum-Biscott, and Stopsley. A portion of this place formerly belonged to St. Alban's Abbey. At the time of the Norman conquest, it was held in royal demesne, and in 1216 came into the possession of Fulk de Brent, by whom a strong castle was built here in the early part of the 13th century. The town, which is situated between two hills, consists chiefly of three streets diverging from the market place. The chief employment of the inhabitants is in the manufacture of straw plait, which is said to have been first introduced into Scotland from Lorraine by Mary Queen of Scots, and afterwards transferred to this place by her son James I. It is now the chief locality in the kingdom for this branch of industry. A large iron foundry and two malting establishments afford occupation to a good many. In the new court-house in Stuart-street are held petty sessions weekly, on Monday; also a county court monthly. A court leet is held annually, under the lord of the manor, at which a high and two day constables are appointed. It contains a good literary as well as a mechanics' institute. Luton is the head of a Poor-law Union, bearing its name, and is a polling place for the county. The land is chiefly arable, with some pasture and woodland.—The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £900. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a cruciform structure, having at its western extremity an embattled tower built of stone and flint, laid checkerwise, double buttressed, and surmounted by hexagonal turrets. In style of architecture it partakes of the Perpendicular blended with the decorated Norman and early English. The western doorway and window are relieved with rich mouldings and carvings of flowers, &c. A beautifully-constructed baptismal font, said to be the finest in the kingdom, stands before the W. door; in form it is hexagonal, supported upon five pillars, and enclosed in a baptistery, elegant in design and workmanship. It also contains a sepulchral chapel, built by John Lord Wenlock, and numerous monuments, effigies, brasses, and heraldic devices of the Wenlock and other families, some dating as far back as the latter end of the 14th century. In addition to the parish church there are also three district churches, viz., Christ Church, East

Hyde,* and Stopsley, all perpet. curs., and a wooden church as chapel-of-ease to the parish church. The parochial endowments produce over £120 per annum. The Congregationalists, Baptists, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists, have each chapels, and the Society of Friends a meeting-house. There are National, British, and infant schools for boys and girls.—Luton Hoo, once the seat of the Marquis of Bute, was destroyed by fire in 1844, but was rebuilt in a style of great magnificence by the present owner, J. Shaw Leigh, Esq., and is surrounded by an extensive park and pleasure-grounds. Here are remains of a tower, partly built by one of the Wenlocks in the reign of Edward IV. The Hyde and Stockwood are other residences. Monday is market day for corn and straw plait, and Saturday for provisions. Fairs for the sale of cattle are held on the third Mondays in April and October, and a statute fair for hiring servants on the Friday succeeding the third Monday in September.

LUTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Broadhembury, co. Devon, 4 miles N.W. of Honiton.

LUTTERWORTH, a par. and market town in the hund. of Guthlaxton, co. Leicester, 8½ miles N.E. of Rugby, 13 S. of Leicester, and 89 from London. The Ullesthorpe station, on the Midland Counties railway, is about 3 miles N.W. from the town. It is situated in the vicinity of the old Roman highway, Watling Street, close upon the borders of Warwickshire. The parish is watered by the river Swift, a short distance from its confluence with the Avon. The Verdun, Sackville, Astley, and other families have successively held possession of the manor. Earl Denbigh, of Newnham Paddox, is the present owner. The town is for the most part paved and lighted with gas. About the middle of the High-street is situated the townhall, a modern brick edifice with stuccoed front supported with Ionic columns. In it petty sessions are held once a fortnight, on Thursday. The basement of the building is used as a market-place, and the hall for public meetings, concerts, &c. The town contains a branch bank, savings-bank, a mechanics' institute, and the workhouse for Lutterworth Poor-law Union; also a police station. Polling for the southern division of the county takes place here. The local management is in the hands of town officers, termed masters, and of the magistrates for the county. A few manufactures are carried on, as ribbons and stockings; but the district is chiefly agricultural. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £585, in the patron. of the crown. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a commodious edifice with a tower. It has been recently restored, and is chiefly remarkable as the scene of the labours of Wycliffe, who was for many years incumbent of this parish. His portrait, gown, and dining-table are preserved and exhibited to the curious; also the communion-cloth which he used, and the beautifully carved oak pulpit in which he preached, and which still occupies its place in the church, where are also monuments of the Fielding family, one of whom is said to have painted Wycliffe's portrait. The Independents, Baptists, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel here. Bishop Ryder, formerly rector, founded a school for girls, and established a parochial library. Sherrier's school and almshouses have a revenue of about £260, and Poole's free school for boys, £79. The total amount of the parochial charities is about £640 per annum. The Hill was the site of a hospital founded in the early part of the 13th century, by Roise de Verdon, for a master and brethren, which afterwards became a seat of the Shuckburgh family. Thursday is market day. Fairs are held on the Thursday after 19th February, 2nd April, Holy Thursday, 16th September, for live stock, cheese, &c., and on the Friday following the latter a statute fair for hiring servants; also a fair for the sale of sheep and hiring on the Thursday succeeding Old Michaelmas Day.

LUTTON, or LUDDINGTON-IN-THE-WOLD, a par. partly in the hund. of Willybrook, co. Northampton, and partly in that of Normancross, co. Hunts, 5 miles E. of Oundle, its post town, and 6 S.W. of Yaxley. It is a small agricultural place. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. with that of Washingley annexed, £220. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. The parochial charities produce about £11 per annum. The Wesleyans have a chapel. Earl Fitzwilliam is lord of the manor.

LUTTON-BOURNE, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Long Sutton, co. Lincoln, 5 miles E. of Holbeach. It is situated on Lutton Sluice, which falls into the Wash. The village is a small agricultural place. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lincoln, in the patron. of the Vicar of Long Sutton. The church is an ancient edifice dedicated to St. Nicholas. Dr. Busby, the pedagogue, was born here in 1606.

LUTTON, EAST and WEST, tnshps. in the par. of Weaverthorpe, East Riding co. York, 9 miles N.W. of Great Driffield.

LUXBOROUGH, a par. in the hund. of Carhampton, co. Somerset, 4 miles S.W. of Dunster, its post town, and 8 W. of Williton, the nearest railway station on the West Somerset line. Here are iron mines and furnaces for smelting the ore, which abounds near Brendon Hill. Limestone is quarried and converted into lime. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £141, and the vicarial for £115. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic.* of Cutcombe, in the dioc. of Bath and Wells. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a small edifice with a tower. There are charities of about £2 per annum. The Dissenters have a chapel, and there is a parochial school for both sexes. On the neighbouring hills are several barrows. This is a meet for the Devon and Somerset hounds.

LUXBOROUGH, a hmlt. in the hund. of Waltham, co. Essex, 6 miles S.E. of Waltham Abbey. It is situated on the river Roding, near the borders of Epping Forest.

LUXULION, or LUXULLIAN, a par. in the eastern div. of the hund. of Powder, co. Cornwall, 5 miles N.E. of St. Austell, its post town, and 6 S. of Bodmin. Tin is obtained in small quantities. The neighbourhood abounds with granite and slate, which are extensively quarried. The higher grounds command views of the Channel and St. Blazey Bay. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £120, and the vicarial for £230. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £230. The church, dedicated to SS. Cyricus and Julieta, is an ancient stone edifice standing on a lofty granite foundation, from which there is an extensive prospect. The records of the duchy were for some time preserved in the tower of the church, previous to the civil war of the reign of Charles I. The Wesleyans and Bible Christians have places of worship, and there is a National school. Prideaux is the site of a castle said to have been built previous to the Norman conquest, and near the same spot are remains of an ancient camp. Fairs are held on 2nd July and 7th October.

LYBSTER, a quoad sacra par. in the par. of Latheron, co. Caithness, Scotland, 25 miles S. of Thurso. It is situated in a wild and hilly district watered by the rivers Berriedale and Langwell, and several small lakes which abound in salmon and trout. The prevailing stratum is limestone, which is broken into rocky cliffs along the coast. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture and fishing. The par. is in the presb. of Caithness, and in the patron. of the male communicants. The minister has a stipend of £100. The church is a modern edifice. The principal residence is Lybster House, the seat of Sinclair, who is chief heritor. In the vicinity are remains of a Druidical circle and fort, and of several ancient castles.

LYD, a river of co. Devon, rises in Dartmoor Forest, and, after a course of 12 miles, joins the Tamar below Lifton Park.

LYDBURY, NORTH, a par. in the hund. of Purslow, co. Salop, 3 miles S.E. of Bishop's Castle, its post town, and 8 S.W. of Church Stretton. The Craven Arms station, on the Shrewsbury and Hereford line of railway, is about 8 miles W. from the village, which is situated on the main road from Bishop's Castle to that station. The par., which is of large extent, includes the tnshps. of Acton, Brecton, Choulton, Eaton, Eyton and Plowden, Lower Down, and Totterton. The soil is rich, and the surface undulating. Stone is quarried for building purposes. In the reign of Henry III. the bishops of Hereford had a castle here. Plowden, the distinguished lawyer and author of the "Commentaries," resided at Plowden Hall, in this parish. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. with the cur. of Norbury annexed, £551. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is a very ancient structure with some modern improvements. It contains an antique font. The parochial charities, including £11 endowment to Shipman's school, produce about £50 per annum. The Roman Catholics have a chapel at Plowden Hall, to which a school is attached. There is a parochial free school for both sexes, and in the village is a free library, founded by the Countess of Powis. In Lower Down are traces of a British camp. Walcot Park is a seat of the Earl of Powis. The mansion contains some good paintings, also a large number of Indian productions brought to this country by Lord Clive. The Earl of Powis and William Plowden, Esq., are lords of the manor. Plowden Hall and Totterton Hall are handsome seats.

LYDD, a par., market and post town, in the lib. of Romney Marsh, lathe of Shepway, co. Kent, 4 miles S.W. of New Romney, 17 S. of Ashford, and 70 from London. The Appledore station, on the Ashford and Hastings branch of the South-Eastern line of railway, is about 8 miles N.W. of the town. It is situated in the most southern part of the county, looking across the English Channel, and near the point of land which forms the Bay of Dungeness, and on which Dungeness lighthouse stands, 110 feet in height. Lydd being united to Romney, is entitled to the privileges enjoyed by the Cinque Ports. The local government is administered by a bailiff, jurats, and freemen elected annually: the first is coroner, and the jurats are justices for the borough, and hold a general court of session. A portion of the northern part of the parish comes within the jurisdiction of New Romney. Petty sessions are held here, and there is a house of correction. In the neighbourhood are two batteries. The town contains a small but well built market-house. A good trade is done in coal, which is landed here. The inhabitants of the parish are for the most part employed in agriculture, some in the fisheries, and others in the breweries. A part of the coast is very uneven, in some places are pits and waterholes, and in others strips of marsh land stretching out to sea. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £1,247, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has a massive tower. It contains numerous monuments and brasses, some dating back to the early part of the 15th century. The register commences in 1564. The parochial endowments produce about £80 per annum. The Wesleyans have a chapel, and there are National schools for boys and girls. Thursday is market day. A fair is held on the last Monday in July.

LYDDEN, a par. in the hund. of Bewsborough, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, 4 miles N.W. of Dover, its post town, and 8 S.W. of Deal. The Shepherd's Well station, on the Dover line of railway, is about 2 miles N.W. of the village. It is situated in a vale between hills of chalk, on the old Roman highway, and the main road between Canterbury and Dover passes through it. Several springs have their rise here, which form a body of water known as Lydden Spout, and which, after pursuing an underground course, empties itself into the sea in the neighbourhood of Folkestone. The parish is well wooded, and there is a considerable proportion of meadow and pasture. The Archbishop of Canterbury is impropriator of the great tithes. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £130, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a modern structure with tower at the W. end. An old residence of the Moning family, called Swanton Court, is now a farm.

LYDDINGTON. See LIDDINGTON, co. Rutland.

LYDDYMORE, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Decuman, co. Somerset, in the vicinity of Watchet.

LYDE, a tnshp. in the par. of Pipe, hund. of Grimsworth, co. Hereford, 3 miles N. of Hereford. It was once a separate parish.

LYDEARD, BISHOP'S. See BISHOP'S LYDEARD, co. Somerset.

LYDEARD PUNCHARDON, a tythg. in the par. of Bshop's Lydeard, hund. of Taunton, co. Somerset, 4 miles N.E. of Milverton.

LYDEARD ST. LAWRENCE, a par. in the hund. of Taunton, co. Somerset, 5 miles N.E. of Wiveliscombe, its post town, and 8 N.W. of Taunton. The surface is hilly, and the soil sand intermixed with clay. The village, which is small, is situated on the road from Taunton to Dunster and Minehead. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £400. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £322. The church is a stone structure erected about the end of the 14th century, and dedicated to St. Lawrence. The register commences in 1573. There are some small charities, also a parochial school.

LYDEWAY, a tythg. in the par. of Urchfont, co. Wilts, 3 miles S.E. of Devizes.

LYDFORD, a par. in the hund. of Lifton, co. Devon, 7½ miles N.E. of Tavistock, its post town, and 14 from Launceston. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Lyd, here crossed by a bridge of rude construction. Near it is a fall of the Lyd, which rushes over a chasm of 80 feet in depth. In a valley to the E. of the village is a cascade called Kitt's Hole, and another to the S.W. The par. includes the chplry. of Dartmoor Forest, which comprises an area of 53,900 acres. Lydford, although now an inconsiderable village, was formerly a market and chief stannary town returning two members to parliament in the reign of Edward I. At the time of the Norman conquest it was considered of such importance as to be taxed on an equality with London. In 1238 the forest of Dartmoor and the castle of Lydford were granted by the king to Richard, Earl of Cornwall, and the manor still belongs to the duchy. In the neighbourhood are several tin and copper mines. The stannary courts were held here till the close of the last century, and offenders against the stannary laws were tried and imprisoned in the castle, of which some remains still exist. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £160, in the patron. of the Prince of Wales, who is lord of the manor. The church is dedicated to St. Petrock. There is a place of worship for the Wesleyans. At Prince's Town, in Dartmoor Forest, is also a chapel, with a minister appointed by the crown. This chapel was originally attached to the prison built here in 1808 for the reception of the numerous French prisoners. This latter building was an immense structure capable of holding near 10,000 men, with hospital, governor's house, and barracks adjoining.

LYDFORD EAST, a par. in the hund. of Somerton, co. Somerset, 5 miles E. of Somerton, its post town, and 5 W. of Castle Cary station on the Wilts and Somerset railway. The parish, which is of small extent, lies near the river Brue. The road from Bath to Exeter skirts the village. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £106 16*s*. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £180. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. The register commences in 1730. There are parochial and Sunday schools. The old Roman Fosse Way passed along the western boundary of the parish.

LYDFORD WEST, a par. in the hund. of Catsash, co. Somerset, 6 miles W. of Castle Cary, and 9 S. of Shepton Mallet. Taunton is its post town. The village is situated on the river Brue, which is here crossed by a bridge of five arches. The old Roman Fosse Way passes through the parish. There is a chalybeate spring, called Hunt's Well. The tithes were commuted under an Enclosure Act in 1827 for land and a money payment. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £350. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a stone edifice of the present century. It is in the Gothic style of architecture, with a tower and a memorial window. The register commences in 1714. The charities, including £5 school endowment, produce about £14 per annum. The Wesleyans have a chapel, and there is a National school. Mrs. Colston is lady of the manor. Fairs are held on Holy Thursday and the 12th August for the sale of cattle.

LYDGATE, a chplry. in the par. of Rochdale, wap. of Agbrigg, West Riding co. York, in the vicinity of the town of Rochdale, and 3 miles N.E. of Oldham. The chapelry comprises a mountainous district. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the cotton spinning mills. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £150, in the patron. of the vicar of the parish. The church, dedicated to St. Anne, is a neat structure, with a campanile turret.

LYDGATE, a vil. in the tnshp. of Nether Hallam, West Riding co. York, 1 mile W. of Sheffield.

LYDHAM, a par. partly in the hund. and co. of Montgomery, but chiefly in the hund. of Purslow, co. Salop, 2 miles N.E. of Bishop's Castle, its post town, and 8 S.W. of Church Stretton. The main road from Bishop's Castle to Shrewsbury passes through the village. The small river Camlet rises in the par., which includes the tnshp. of Aston. A portion of the people are Welsh. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £463. The church is an ancient stone edifice, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, and has an antique font. The Rev. A. Oakeley is lord of the manor. Oakeley House is the principal residence.

LYDIATE, a tnshp. in the par. of Halsall, hund. of West Derby, co. palatine of Lancaster, 4 miles S.W. of Ormskirk, its post town. The Leeds and Liverpool canal passes through the township. The village, which is considerable, is situated near Halsall Moss, which is famed for its "lit-turf," used in the manufacture of candles. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Chester, val. £73, in the gift of the rector of the parish. The church is a Gothic structure, with a square tower surmounted by pinnacles. The Roman Catholics have a church, built of stone, with a tower and spire, and window of stained glass. There is a Roman Catholic school. Here are extensive ruins of Lydiate Abbey, which at the time of the Dissolution was in an unfinished state. Lydiate Hall is now a farm.

LYDLEY-HAYES, a tnshp. in the par. of Cardington, co. Salop, 4 miles N.E. of Church Stretton.

LYDLINCH, a par. in the hund. of Sherborne, co. Dorset, 3 miles W. of Sturminster-Newton, and 9 S.E. of Sherborne. Blandford is its post town. It is situated on the Lyd, a tributary of the river Stour. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £440, besides £60 from the parishes of West Parley and Horton. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £458. The church is a small edifice, dedicated to St. Thomas-à-Becket. The charities produce about £80 per annum, and are applied to the repairs of the church, apprenticing of children, and relief of the poor. There is a National school for both sexes. The Marchioness of Thomond is lady of the manor.

LYDNEY. See LIDNEY, co. Gloucester.

LYDOCH, a loch in the Muir of Rannoch, on the borders of cos. Perth and Argyle, Scotland. It is about 12 miles in length by 1 mile broad, and is connected with lochs Ericht and Rannoch by the river Gauer.

LYE, a tnshp. and chplry. united with Lye Waste, in the par. of old Swinford, lower div. of the hund. of Halfshire, co. Worcester, 2 miles E. of Stourbridge, its post town. It is a station on the Cradley and Stourbridge branch of the Great Western railway. This place has risen into importance within the last few years. Previously it was, as the suffix to its name implies, a dreary waste, and there is still want of regularity in its appearance. The road from Stourbridge to Birmingham passes through the village. The people are principally employed in the works for the manufacture of anvils, nails, vices, and other iron goods, and in the collieries. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £184. The church, dedicated to our Saviour, has been recently enlarged. The Independents, Wesleyans, Presbyterians, and Primitive Methodists, have chapels. There are National and infant schools.

LYE, NETHER and OVER, tnshps. in the par. of Aymestry, co. Hereford, 7 miles N.W. of Leominster, and 5 N.E. of Presteign. The river Lug flows through the place.

LYFORD, a chplry. in the par. of West Hanney, hund. of Ock, co. Berks, 4 miles N. of Wantage, its post town, and 8 S.W. of Abingdon. It is situated on the river Ock, and the Wantage Road station on the Great Western line of railway is nearly 3 miles S.E. of the village. The surface is flat, and the land fertile, being in general a deep rich black earth. The tithes were commuted for land in 1801 under an Enclosure Act. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Oxford, in the patron. of Worcester College, Oxford. Almshouses for fourteen poor persons of this parish were founded in 1603 by Oliver Ayshcombe.

LYLESLAND, a district on the S. side of Paisley, Scotland. It is chiefly inhabited by weavers, and is within the parliamentary boundaries of the burgh of Paisley.

LYME-HANDLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Prestbury, hund. of Macclesfield, co. palatine of Chester, 6 miles N.E. of Macclesfield. Stockport is its post town. It is situated in the vicinity of the Peake Forest canal, and commands a view of the country round Disley, with the Mersey and Derbyshire hills in the distance. This manor belongs to the Legh family, whose ancestor, Sir Perkin, served with the Black Prince at the battle of Cressy. Lyme Hall, the family seat, is a quadrangular building of white grit-stone, partly Elizabethan, and partly by Leoni. It contains some stained windows, the carved bedstead of the Black Prince, and a picture gallery with a portrait of the Prince. The park is very extensive, and abounds with red deer. In the neighbourhood are a large number of wild cattle.

LYME REGIS, a par., seaport, market town, municipal and parliamentary borough, and fashionable watering-place, in the lib. of Loders and Bothenhampton, co. Dorset, 6 miles S.E. of Axminster, 8 W. of Bridport, and 23 W. of Dorchester. It has access by the Bridport branch of the Bristol and Exeter railway, and has a line to Axminster. This place derives its name from the river Lyme, at the mouth of which it is built, lying between two hills. It was noted in the Saxon times for its salt works, and in the reign of Edward I. received the privileges of a borough and port, being given by that monarch as part of the dower of his sister Margaret, Queen of Scotland. It furnished to the fleet of Edward III. before Calais 4 ships and 62 men, but was inundated by the sea in the reign of Richard II., and subsequently ravaged by the French, so that Camden describes it in the reign of James I. as little more than a fishing village. The Armada was first engaged off here in 1588, and the English fleet was worsted by the Dutch in 1672. During the civil war of Charles I. it was defended for two months in 1644, by Admiral Blake and Colonel Ceeley, against the Royalists under Prince Maurice. The unfortunate Duke of Monmouth landed here in 1685, and set up his standard. The inn in which he slept has only lately been pulled down, and the head of his bedstead is still in the possession of a resident. After his defeat twelve persons were executed in the town by Judge Jeffreys.—After a long period of depression the prosperity of the town began to revive, and within the last century it has attained a flourishing condition, having become a fashionable watering-place, though of late years the population has again somewhat declined. It has many of the advantages of a harbour by means of an artificial breakwater called the Cobb, from the Cobble pebbles which it was first made of, but is now a work of regular masonry, consisting of two massive piers projecting on each side and enclosing a basin recently enlarged, but which dries at low water. The pier, which was rebuilt in 1825, at a cost less than the Parliamentary grants, viz. for £17,337, is 680 feet in length, 12 in breadth at the foundation, and 16 in height. The harbour, which is about a quarter of a mile to the W. of the town, affords the only safe shelter for vessels between the Portland Roads and the Start Point. Various Acts of Parliament have been passed for its maintenance, and two officers, called Cobb-wardens, are annually chosen to superintend the repairs, which are defrayed out of its customs and harbour dues. It has a custom-house, bonding warehouses for the colonial and foreign produce, also a considerable coasting-trade, there being about twelve vessels belonging to the port. The town being well sheltered from the northerly and easterly winds, has become a favourite watering-place, and is much resorted to by invalids on account of its low rate of mortality from consumption and pulmonary diseases. The streets and lines of houses stretch along the declivities of the two rocky hills, being built chiefly of the blue lias limestone, and covered with slate. The streets are well paved and lighted with gas, and many of the shops are of a superior class. It contains two branch banks, a savings-bank, assembly rooms, and market-place. Some of the inhabitants are engaged in the lace, woollen and sail-cloth manufactures, others in the stone works or in the fisheries and coasting trade. Quarter sessions are held here by the mayor, ex-mayor, and his predecessor, and there is a court of hustings every Monday. It was first incorporated by Edward I., and under the late act is governed by a mayor, four aldermen, and twelve councillors, with the style of the "mayor and burgesses of the borough of Lyme Regis." The income of the borough is £250, chiefly derived from the rents of the manor; and the area of the old borough, 100 acres. Its population in 1851 was 2,661, which had declined in 1861 to 2,318, while the population of the parliamentary borough, which has an area of 2,000 acres, declined in the same period from 3,516 to 3,215. Previous to the passing of the Reform Bill, which enlarged its boundaries, it returned two members from the time of Edward I., but since returns only one member to parliament, the mayor being the returning officer. In the vicinity of the town are many seats, and at Dowlands, beyond Whitlands, the great landslip of 1839 took place. The coast, which is bold and rugged, offers many attractions to the geologist, as presenting one of the grandest and most extensive sections of the blue lias in the world, and abounds in fossils. It was here that Miss Anning first discovered the icthyosaurus, plesiosaurus, and pterodactyle; and since then the dinosaurus, with about 70 varieties of extinct fish, zoophites, and shells, have been found.—The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £275, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Michael the Archangel, stands near the edge of the cliff, and is an ancient structure of the later Tudor period, with a Norman arch at the W. entrance. It has recently been re-decorated, and contains several stained glass windows; also a monument to the Hewlings, who were condemned by Jeffreys. The Independents, Wesleyans, Baptists, and Roman Catholics have places of worship. There are National, British and Foreign, and infant schools. The present vicar, the Rev. Dr. Hodges, has lately built a vicarage. The parochial charities produce about £40 per annum, left by Captain James, Mr. Burridge, and others, for the poor. Many eminent persons have been born here, as Case the quack and astrologer, Coram who endowed the Foundling Hospital in London, Sir G. Somers who discovered the Bermuda and Somers islands, Judge Gundy, and Miss Anning, whose name will ever be associated with the geology of this district. The market days are Tuesday and Friday. Fairs are held on the 12th May and 2nd October, chiefly for horses, cattle, and cheese.

LYMINGE, a par. in the hund. of Loningborough, lathe of Shepway, co. Kent, 4 miles N. of Hythe, its post town, and 5 N.W. of Folkestone. The Westenhanger station on the South-Eastern line of railway is about 2 miles S. of the village. It is situated on the road known as Slane Street. The par. includes Stelling, Minnis, and several small places. A tributary of the Little Stour has its source here. In the 7th century a nunnery was founded at this place by Ethelburga, daughter of Ethelbert, King of Kent, which was afterwards destroyed by the Danes. In the 10th century the manor passed to the see of Canterbury, but was surrendered to the crown by Archbishop Cranmer, and subsequently has passed through several hands. This is a hop-growing district. In this parish is situated the workhouse of the Elham Union. Nearly a quarter of the parish is in woodland. The living is a rect. and vic.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. with the cur. of Paddlesworth annexed, £920. The old parish church, dedicated to SS. Mary and Eadburga, is a somewhat quaint structure, said to have been built with material taken from a Roman edifice which stood in the neighbourhood. It contains the arms of archbishops Warham and Bourchier. There is also a district church at Standford. There are charities for apprenticing and other purposes, of about £10 yearly value. The Wesleyans have a chapel, and there are National and infant schools. There are some Roman remains in the neighbourhood.

LYMINGTON, a div. of co. Hants, situated in the south-western part of the county. It contains the hunds. of Upper Christchurch and New Forest, with the borough of Lymington, and has an area of nearly 80,000 acres.

LYMINGTON, a par., parliamentary borough, and market town, in the div. of Lymington, co. Hants, 13 miles S.E. of Ringwood, and 20 S.W. of Southampton. The London and South-Western railway has a branch line from Brockenhurst junction to this place. It is situated on the western bank of the river Lymington, or Boldre, which discharges itself into the Solent, and is here crossed by a bridge. In Domesday Book it is called Lentune, when it belonged to the Ivry family. In the reign of Henry I. it appears to have been a place of considerable trade, mostly in wines from France, and at that time also it first became celebrated for its salt-works. From the reign of Elizabeth it has returned two members to parliament, the Reform Bill merely altering the limits of the borough, which now includes the whole of the parish, with a portion of Boldre. It was long a prescriptive borough, not being incorporated by charter till the reign of Edward I. The local government is vested in a mayor, four aldermen, and 12 common councillors. It was anciently a port of greater importance than at present, and in the reign of Edward III. fitted out and manned nine ships to assist in the defence of the coast, which was more by four ships than the quota supplied by Portsmouth. The trade is now confined entirely to coasting vessels, the construction of a dam in 1731 to the N. of the town having had the effect of contracting the channel of the river and diminishing its depth, so that it is now navigable only for vessels of 300 tons, instead of 500 as formerly. On the quay are a commodious public wharf and store-rooms, and near it is a yard for shipbuilding. The harbour at the entrance of the creek is excellent, and affords a favourite shelter for vessels belonging to members of the Royal Yacht Squadron. The inhabitants anciently exercised the privilege of levying petty dues on merchandise brought in and landed here, but this was long a disputed and vexed question with the superior port of Southampton, which obtained a prohibitory verdict in 1329, but in the middle of the last century it was again submitted to the county assize court, and decided in favour of Lymington.—The town consists mainly of one long street, distinguished by the names of High-street, Southampton-buildings, and Thomas-street. It is well paved and lighted with gas. In the summer it is much frequented as a watering-place, and has every accommodation for sea-bathing. There are also assembly rooms, a theatre, and a literary institute. The coast-guard service has a station here, and petty sessions are held in the town. The principal employments are shipbuilding, and the various branches connected with the shipping trade, much being done in coal and timber. The manufacture of salt, which formerly produced an extensive trade, has greatly declined; but to the S. of the town are still works for the preparation of the common salt for domestic purposes, as well as the medicinal article known as Epsom salts. There are three commercial banks, one for savings, and a townhall. A steamboat plies between Lymington and Cowes and Yarmouth in the Isle of Wight.—The living is a cur. annexed to the vic.* of Boldre, in the dioc. of Winchester. The church, dedicated to St. Thomas-à-Becket, is a brick and stone structure with a square embattled tower, and built at different periods. The parochial charities, including a school endowment, produce about £70 per annum. There are two chapels belonging to Dissenters and a National school. In the middle of the last century a large number of Roman coins were brought to light, and within a mile from the town is Buckland Rings, supposed to have been a Roman camp. The neighbourhood abounds with well-built mansions and villa residences, among the principal of which may be named Lymington House, Fairfield-grove House, and Priestlands. On a neck of land or bank to the S.W. of Lymington is Hurst Castle, a circular tower, strengthened by semi-circular bastions, erected by Henry VIII., and for several days in 1648 the prison of Charles I. after his removal from Carisbrooke. It is now used as a coast-guard station, and two lighthouses and a beacon are placed here for the direction of vessels navigating the coast. Saturday is market-day. Fairs are held on 12th and 13th May, and 2nd and 3rd October, for the sale of cheese, horses, and general live stock.

LYMINSTER. See LEOMINSTER, co. Hereford.

LYMM, a par. in the hund. of Bucklow, co. palatine of Chester, 5 miles S.E. of Warrington, its post town, and 7 N.W. of Knutsford. The Manchester, Lymm, and Warrington section of the London and North-Western railway has a station here. It is situated in the vicinity of the river Mersey. The Bridgwater canal passes through the par., which includes the hmlts. of Cliffe Lane and Heathley Heath. Fustian is manufactured here. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £500. The living of the first mediety is a rect., val. £349; that of the second mediety is also a rect.,* val. with the cur. of Warburton annexed, £249, in the dioc. of Chester. The church, dedicated to St. Mary the Virgin, is a modern structure. There are some remains of the old church. The various charities amount to nearly £100 per annum. The Baptists, Independents, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel, and there is a free school for boys, also a National school for both sexes. Near the church is an old stone cross, the base of which is cut out of the solid rock. Lymm Hall, Statham Lodge, and Oughtrington Hall are the principal seats. At Heathley Heath are many good residences, chiefly occupied by merchants of Warrington.

LYMPNE, a par. partly within the lib. of Romney Marsh, but chiefly in the hund. of Street, lathe of Shepway, co. Kent, 3 miles W. of Hythe, its post town, and 7 S.E. of Ashford. The Westenhanger station on the Dover line of railway is about 1½ mile N.E. of the village. It is situated within a short distance of the sea-coast, on the Ashford road and Royal Military canal. The par. includes the hmlt. of Court-at-Street, situated in Romney Marsh. The soil is partly loamy and partly rocky. The great military road called Slane Street ran hither from the Roman station Durovernum. The village, which is very ancient, is supposed to be the Aimin of Ptolemy, and the Portus Limanus of the Romans, from its situation at the mouth of the ancient river Limene, now the Rother, a branch of which ran below it. A nunnery was founded here in 633 by Ethelburga, daughter of King Ethelbert, which subsequently became an abbey, but was given after the Danish invasion to the archbishops of Canterbury. In Domesday survey it is set down as Limes. Here are the ruins of Stutfall Castle, a place of prodigious strength, built by the Romans, with walls of brick and flint inclosing a space of from ten to twelve acres. It was here that Elizabeth Barton, called the "Holy Maid of Kent," carried on her pretended miracles. A court used formerly to be held at Shepway Cross, in this parish, for the purpose of swearing in the Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports, styled the Leminarcha. The appropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £468, and the vicarial for one of £239. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. with that of West Hythe annexed, £273, in the patron. of the Archdeacon of Canterbury. The church, dedicated to St. Stephen, is an ancient structure with a Norman tower, standing on an elevated spot, and commanding an extensive view over the sea. The register commences in 1618. There are charities for the poor, chiefly derived from property bequeathed by John Finch, Esq., producing about £120 per annum. There are National schools. Numerous Roman remains, consisting of coins, pottery, &c., have been found in the vicinity of the castle.

LYMPSHAM, a par. in the hund. of Brent, co. Somerset, 6 miles W. of Axbridge, and 6 S.E. of Weston-super-Mare, its post town. It is intersected by the Bristol and Exeter section of the Great Western line of railway, and the river Axe. The par. includes the hmlts. of Batch and Eastertown. It lies in a marsh, and consists chiefly of dairy farms, supplying cheese of excellent quality. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £491 15*s*. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £503. The church, dedicated to St. Christopher, is an ancient stone edifice with a very elegant tower restored by Charles I., and contains a richly canopied stall appropriated to the mitred abbots of Glastonbury, to whom the manor formerly belonged. The register commences in 1737. The charities amount to about £4 per annum. The Wesleyans have a chapel, and there is a parochial school. The rectory house is a specimen of Tudor architecture, surrounded by beautiful grounds. Mrs. Popham is lady of the manor.

LYMPSTON, a par. in the hund. of East Budleigh, co. Devon, 2½ miles N.W. of Exmouth, its post town, and 3 S.E. of Topsham. It is a station on the Exeter and Exmouth section of the London and South-Western railway. It lies on the eastern bank of the river Exe, and being near to and easy of access from Exmouth, is much frequented in the summer season by visitors, for whom the locality has every accommodation. The inhabitants for the most part are engaged in the oyster fishery. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £263. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £267. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient stone structure with an embattled tower, and E. window of stained glass, and contains an altar-piece, the gift of a Mrs. Wyatt. The charities produce about £32, of which £8 are for the girls' free school. The Wesleyans have a chapel, and there is a National school for boys. The rector, in virtue of his office, is lord of the manor. There are many good residences, the principal of which are Nutwell Court and Harefield House.

LYNALLY, a par. in the bar. of Ballycowan, King's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles S.W. of Tullamore, its post town. It is 3½ miles long by 2½ broad. The surface is flat and boggy. The road from Tullamore to Birr and Roscrea crosses the parish, and the Grand canal traces part of the northern boundary. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Meath, forming part of the benefice of Fircal, the value of which is £2,001. The church was built in 1831 by aid of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Killina and Kilpatrick. There are two day-schools.

LYNAS POINT and COVE, in the par. of Llanelian, co. Anglesea, 2 miles E. of Amlwch. It is a pilot station for Liverpool ships, and has a lighthouse 128 feet high, put up in 1835, which may be seen for 10 miles at sea.

LYNCH, several small places of this name; one near Tenbury in co. Hereford, another near Pembridge, in the same county, and a third near Minehead, in co. Somerset.

LYNCHAT, a vil. in the par. of Alvie, co. Inverness, Scotland, 13 miles N.E. of Pitmain. It is situated under the Monadlia mountains, near the river Spey.

LYNCOMBE-WITH-WIDCOMBE, a par. in the hund. of Bath Forum, co. Somerset, in the vicinity of the city of Bath. It is situated on the river Avon, close to the Great Western railway, and is intersected by the Kennet and Avon canal. The workhouse of the Bath Poor-law Union is situated in this parish. Many of the people are employed in the manufacture of fine woollen cloth. Freestone is extensively quarried in the hills, and is largely used for the buildings in Bath, Windsor, and London. The surface is diversified with hill and dale. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £235, in the patron. of Simeon's trustees. The church, dedicated to St. Mark, has a tower. The living of Widcombe is a vic., val. with the cur. of St. Matthew's, £300, in the same patron. The church is a modern structure. The charities produce about £8 per annum. There is an hospital for idiots, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene, with a chapel annexed. A Roman Catholic college was established here by the Roman Catholic bishop of the western district for the education of secular clergymen.

LYNDHURST, a town and par. in the hund. of Redbridge, Romsey div. of co. Hants, 8 miles N. of Lymington, and 10 S.W. of Southampton. It is situated in the centre of the New Forest, 1½ mile S.W. by W. of Lyndhurst Road station on the London and South-Western railway. The courts of attachment and the swainmote courts for the New Forest are held in the Verderer's Hall, Queen's House, the former every forty days, and the latter on 14th September. The courts leet and courts baron for the manor of Lyndhurst, of which the Queen is lady, are also held here. The house, which is the official residence of the warden, is of no interest, although it occupies a beautiful site. A stirrup, which is said to have belonged to William II., is exhibited there. Northwood House, which was frequently visited by George III., is about half a mile to the N.W., surrounded by wood and commanding a view of the Solent and the Isle of Wight. Other seats in the neighbourhood are Park Hill, New Park, Vernalls, Rosier, Gascoignes, Shrubs Hill, and Cuffnalls, the seat of Sir Edw. Poore. The New Forest hounds have their kennels here. Lyndhurst gives the title of baron to the Copleys of Turville Park. It is included in the county court district of Southampton, in the dioc. and archdeac. of Winchester and the deanery of Fawley. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect.* of Minstead, the joint val. being £355. The church, St. Michael's, is a modern structure, built on the site of a more ancient one which was rebuilt by George II. The parochial endowments realise about £80, of which £26 are for school purposes. There is a Baptist chapel, and a National school for both sexes. The petty sessions are held on the first Wednesday in every month. The population was in 1851, 1,527. It contains 3,560 acres.

LYNDON, a par. in the hund. of Martinsley, co. Rutland, 2 miles N.W. of North Luffenham, its post town, 4 S.E. of Oakham, and 2 from the Manton station on the Midland Counties railway. It is bounded on the W. by the small river Chater, and formerly was included in the parish of Hambleton. The hills run from W. to E., and are extremely fertile, while the slopes of the ridges are a whitish clay of inferior quality. The substratum is a hard limestone. The appropriate tithes have been commuted for £24, and the rectorial for £175. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £190. The church is a small edifice dedicated to St. Martin. The charities amount to about £8 per annum. Lyndon Hall is the principal residence.

LYNDON, a quarter in the par. of Bickenhill, co. Warwick, 4 miles S. of Coleshill.

LYNE and MEGGET, two pars. ecclesiastically united, though not adjacent to each other, in the co. Peebles, Scotland. The Peebles branch of the Caledonian line has a station at Lyne, which lies on the left bank of the stream of that name, while Megget is situated within the southern part of the county, and is distant geographically 8 miles from the Lyne portion, and near the head of the Elbick and Yarrow. The whole parish, with a few exceptions, may be described as a bleak, hilly, and pastoral district. The united par. is in the presb. of Peebles and synod of Lothian and Tweeddale. The minister's stipend is £153. The church, built previous to the Reformation, was repaired in 1831. There is a small building at Megget used both as a church and school-room. The ancient church of Megget, situated at Henderland, is now in ruins. There are two parochial schools. About 1 mile E. of the parish church of Lyne is an intrenchment 6 acres in extent called Randal's Wall, supposed to have been a Roman camp from the coins and other antiquities found there. In the Megget district are ruins of two ancient towers supposed to have been erected for the accommodation of the kings of Scotland when hunting in the forest.

LYNE, or LYNE WATER, several streams of this name; one, in co. Northumberland, falls into the sea at Newbiggin Point; another, in co. Devon, falls into the Bristol Channel at Lynmouth; a third, in co. Stafford, joins the Trent at Trentham; while a fourth rises in co. Fife, Scotland, and joins the Forth at Charlestown.

LYNEAL, a tnshp. in the par. of Ellesmere, co. Salop, 3 miles S.E. of the town of Ellesmere.

LYNEHAM, a par. in the hund. of Kingsbridge, co. Wilts, 4 miles S.W. of Wootton Bassett, and 7 N.E. of Chippenham, its post town. The Wilts and Berks canal and Great Western railway pass to the N. of the parish. A priory of Augustine monks was founded near the village of Clack in this parish about the middle of the 12th century. The site is now occupied by a farmhouse called Bradenstoke Abbey. There are still traces of the old conventual buildings. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £270. The church is an ancient structure dedicated to St. Michael, and has some monuments. Brome's free school is endowed with land producing £40. The other charities amount to about £60 per annum. The Baptists and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel, and there is a National school. G. H. W. Heneage, Esq., is lord of the manor. Lyneham Court is the principal residence.

LYNEHAM, a hmlt. in the par. of Shipton-under-Wychwood, hund. of Chadlington, co. Oxford, 1½ mile N. of Shipton, and 4 miles S.W. of Chipping-Norton. The river Evenlode flows through this place. The living is a perpet. cur. in the gift of the vicar of the parish. The church is a small modern edifice. The tithes have been commuted for land and corn-rents under an Enclosure Act in 1787.

LYNEHILL, a lib. in the tnshp. of Penkridge, co. Stafford, in the vicinity of the town of Penkridge.

LYNESACK-WITH-SOFTLY, a tnshp. in the par. of St. Andrew-Auckland, north-western div. of the ward of Darlington, co. palatine of Durham, 7 miles N.E. of Barnard Castle, and 7 S.E. of Walsingham. It is bounded on the S. by the river Gaunless, and on the N. by the Lin-Burn. The people are chiefly employed in the coal mines. The township comprises a hilly and barren tract of great extent commonly called South Side. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Durham, val. £300, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is modern.

LYNESIDE, a tnshp. in the par. of Arthuret, ward of Eskdale, co. Cumberland, in the vicinity of Longtown.

LYNFORD, a par. in the hund. of Grimshoe, co. Norfolk, 6 miles N. of Brandon, and 7 N.W. of Thetford. Norwich is its post town, and Brandon is the nearest railway station on the Great Eastern line. It is situated on the river Wissey. There is no village, only a few farmhouses. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Norwich. There is no church here, the one formerly standing in the parish having for many years been in ruins. Lyndford Hall, a residence in the Elizabethan style of architecture, is the seat of S. L. Stephens, Esq.; who is lord of the manor.

LYNG, a par. in the hund. of Eynsford, co. Norfolk, 6 miles N.E. of East Dereham, its post town, and 15 N.W. of Norwich. It is situated on the S. bank of the river Wensum, on which was an extensive paper-mill. The par. includes the hmlt. of Lyng Easthaugh. A nunnery was founded here about the 11th century, but afterwards removed to Thetford. About two-thirds of the land is arable, the remainder meadow and pasture. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £513. 10s. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £365. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, has a square embattled tower. The charities produce about £6 per annum. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel. There is a National school. The monkish historian styled Jeffrey de Lyng was a native.

LYNG, a par. in the hund. of Andersfield, co. Somerset, 5 miles S.E. of Bridgwater, its post town, and 7 N.E. of Taunton. It is situated on the river Tone, and includes the tnshp. of Boroughbridge and isle of Athelney, where Alfred took refuge from the invading Danes, and afterwards founded a monastery of the Benedictine order. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £81. The church is an ancient edifice dedicated to St. Bartholomew. There is also a district church at Boroughbridge. There is a National school for both sexes. Some traces of the old monastery have been found below the surface of the soil, and a stone monument, erected at the commencement of the present century, indicates the spot. Richard Gatcombe, Esq., is lord of the manor. Fairs are held on the last Tuesday in March, and the first Monday and last Tuesday in August, for the sale of cattle.

LYNGEN. See LANGEN, co. Hereford.

LYNHER, a stream of co. Cornwall, rises under Brown Willey, and falls into Lynher Creek below St. Germains.

LYNN, a par. in the bar. of Fartullagh, co. Westmeath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles S.W. of Mullingar, its post town. Its length is 4 miles, by 2 broad. The surface lies at the head of Lough Ennel, and consists chiefly of pasture land. It is crossed by the road from Mullingar to Tyrrel's Pass. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with Moylisker, £286, in the patron. of the crown. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Mullingar and Walshestown. There is a day-school. La Mancha, Bloomfield, Lynnbury, Fortwilliam, Lynnhouse, Larkfield, and Clonmoyle, are the principal residences.

LYNN, a hmlt. united with Over Stonnal, in the par. of Shenstone, co. Stafford, 4 miles S.W. of Lichfield.

LYNN, KING'S, or LYNN REGIS, a seaport, market town, municipal and parliamentary borough, exercising separate jurisdiction, but locally in the hund. of Freebridge Lynn, co. Norfolk. It is a station on the Ely, Lynn, and Dereham section of the Great Eastern railway. The town is situated on the right bank of the estuary of the Ouse, in 52° 45′ N. lat. and 0° 25′ E. long., 99 miles N.E. from London by rail, and 98½ by road, 41½ N.E. from Cambridge, and 48½ N.W. from Norwich. Before the Norman conquest, Lynn was subject to the bishops of Norwich, and was of considerable importance both as a port and for the salt works. It is mentioned in Domesday Book as Leen or Lenn, and, during the reigns of the Norman kings, its trade was maintained. In 1190, the Jews in the town were massacred. In 1216, Lynn was taken by Louis the Dauphin, but was soon after recovered by King John, who granted the town its first charter, which has been succeeded by eighteen of more recent date, the last being given by George II. The charter which appointed the governing corporation was granted by Henry VIII., who at the same time deprived the bishops of Norwich of their feudal superiority, and changed the name of the town from Lynn Episcopi, which was its previous appellation, to Lynn Regis, which it at present bears. In the reign of Edward III. a mint was in operation in the town. During the French wars of this monarch, Lynn contributed 19 ships to his fleet. In 1551, George Van Parre, a Protestant Dutchman, was burnt there. At the commencement of the Civil Wars, Lynn was garrisoned for the king, but surrendered to the Earl of Manchester in September, 1643, after a siege of three weeks.—Lynn occupies a space of about 1½ mile by half a mile, and on the land side is surrounded by a moat, and formerly by a wall also, some remains of which can still be seen. St. Anne's Fort, a platform battery, commands the river at the N. side of the town. The three principal streets run parallel to the river, and are intersected by several smaller streets, which, though mostly narrow, are clean and well paved, and contain many good shops. On the London Road there are public walks and avenues, as far as Red Mount and the Kettle Mills. Several small streams, called "fleets," pass through the town, and are crossed by bridges. The corn market, or Tuesday Market, is about 3 acres in extent, and possesses an octagonal cross, with an Ionic peristyle to the first story, which was erected in 1710, and a corn exchange, erected in 1854. There is also a market for butchers, called the Saturday Market, near St. Margaret's, and a cattle market in Paradise Field. The Guildhall stands in the Saturday Market Place, and contains assembly rooms 87 feet by 22 feet, and 22 feet high, besides courts, council rooms, &c. An enamelled silver gilt cup, weighing 73 oz., which was presented to the corporation by King John, is preserved there, as well as a sword given by Henry VIII., which, with four silver maces, is carried before the mayor. There are also portraits of Sir Robert Walpole, Sir T. White, Sir B. Keene, and Lord George Bentinck. The front of the building is of flint and stone, checkered. The custom-house and exchange on Purfleet Quay was built in 1683 on the site of the hall of the Trinity Guild. It is in the mixed Greek style, with a pyramidal roof and an open turret. The borough gaol stands close to the Guildhall. The theatre, in St. James's-street, was formerly the session court and hall of St. George's Guild. Here are convenient public baths on Common Staith Quay, which were opened in 1856. The town is supplied with both gas and water, the latter from works which belong to the corporation. There are four banks and a savings-bank in the town. The harbour is of size sufficient to hold 300 vessels, but the bottom is shifting, owing to the large quantities of fine sand brought down by the Ouse, which is employed in making glass. The tide rises 18 feet, and with a sudden rush, owing to the shape of the channel. The old passage is very intricate and circuitous, but it is well buoyed. Its depth is from 1 to 7 fathoms, and its length about 15 miles. A new channel, which will be about 4 miles long, is being made by the Norfolk Estuary Improvement Company. The eastern half of the Wash, at the end of the channel, is called Lynn Well, or Lynn Deeps. It has from 5 to 13 fathoms of water, and is marked by a floating light. There is free communication with the canal system of the eastern counties by means of the Yare navigation. The harbour is regulated by a committee of navigation commissioners. The chief exports are corn, wool, and sand for glass making; the chief imports, corn and coal, timber, deal, tallow, and hemp from Russia; timber from America; and wine from the S. of Europe. Fish of all sorts, especially shell fish and shrimps, are sent in large quantities to London. The principal manufactures are ship and boat building, rope and sail making; but corks, lathes, pipes, and agricultural implements are also made in considerable quantities; and there are one or two malthouses and breweries. Many of the inhabitants are employed in fishing and in the coasting and foreign trade.—The borough is divided into 3 wards, and the local government is carried on by a mayor 6 aldermen, 18 councillors, a recorder, town clerk, treasurer, high steward, coroner, town crier, sword bearer, &c., with the style of "mayor and burgesses of the borough of Lynn Regis." The corporation was thus settled by the Municipal Corporation Act; but there had been many charters granted to the borough previously to that date. The parliamentary and municipal boroughs are co-extensive. Two members have been returned to the House of Commons since the 23rd year of Edward I. The population of the borough in 1851 was 19,149, and in 1861, 16,170. Its area is 2,620 acres. A local board of health provides for the lighting, cleansing, &c., of the town, and there are forces of police and coast-guards for its protection. The excise district, of which Lynn is the head, includes Lynn, Brandon, Thetford, Harling, Diss, Buckenham, Wymondham, Hingham, Walton, Swaffham, Dereham, Reepham, Holt, Fakenham, Burnham, Snettisham, and Downham. The Poor-law Union and superior registry contains the borough (which consists of the two parishes of St. Margaret's and South Lynn, or All Saints), and the parishes of North and West Lynn. The new county court district includes the registry, Freebridge Lynn, and the parishes of Anmer, Clinchwardine, Dersingham, Heacham, Holme, Ingoldthorpe, Sedgeford, Shernborne, Snettisham, Terrington, Tilney, Tilney-cum-Islington, Tottenhill, Watlington, Wiggenhall, and Wormegay. Petty sessions are held at the Guildhall on Mondays and Thursdays, as well as quarter sessions, a borough court for civil actions, a court of conscience, and a court leet, the manor being the property of the corporation. Lynn gives the title of baron to the Marquis of Townshend.—Lynn is a deanery in the archdeanery of Norfolk, and the diocese of Norwich. The livings in the town are as follows:—All Saints, a vic.,* val. £180, in the patron. of the Bishop of Norwich, is the parish church of South Lynn. The building is cruciform, with a bell turret. A tower, which formerly stood at the west end, fell in the last century. St. Margaret's is a perpet. cur., annexed to the rect. of North Lynn, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Norwich. The church was founded by Bishop Herbert de Lozinga, in connection with a priory, as a cell to Norwich. The present size is 240 feet by 132. The W. end possesses two large towers of different designs, one of which was originally the base of a spire. This fell in 1741, destroying the lantern, or large portion of the nave, which has been rebuilt. The columns of the nave, which are Saxon, were, however, uninjured. There are chapels dedicated to St. Stephen and the Holy Trinity, connected with the chancel, and there were originally two others. The architecture is principally in the pointed style. The register of the church dates from 1559. St. Nicholas Chapel in Ann-street is a chapel-of-ease to St. Margaret's. It consists of a nave, with aisles in the decorated and perpendicular style, but has neither transept nor choir. It was built in the reign of Edward III. The tower was blown down at the same time as that of St. Margaret's church. St. John the Evangelist, in the Blackfriars-road, a cur. in the patron. of the bishop, val. £300, was built by subscription in 1846, on land given by the corporation. It will seat 1,000 persons. The Roman Catholic chapel in the London-road was built in 1844, from a design by Pugin. The Independents have a chapel in New Conduit-street, the Baptists have two in Blackfriars-road, the Wesleyans one in Tower-street, and the Methodist New Connection one in the Railway-road. The Primitive Methodists, the United Methodist Free Church, the Unitarians, and the Society of Friends, also have places of worship at Lynn. The grammar school was founded by Thomas Thoresby in 1510, with an endowment of £63, and six exhibitions at the University of Cambridge. The school was built in 1825. It is managed by the charity trustees for the borough. The murderer Eugene Aram was an usher here when apprehended. There are also National and British schools. The Athenæum in Baxter's Plain was built in 1854, and consists of the following institutions: a public library, to which the subscription is one guinea; the Stanley Library and Reading Room, founded by Lord Stanley, to which the working classes can belong by subscribing one shilling per quarter; the museum, presented chiefly by J. H. Gurney, Esq.; the conversazione; the musical union, and the news-room. It contains a hall 84 feet by 42, which is used for concerts and public meetings. There is also a library called St. Margaret's, which was founded in 1617, and contains about 1,700 volumes, and a mechanics' institute. The cemetery is on the London-road, occupying about 8 acres. There are several almshouses and hospitals in the town. St. James's Hospital, or rather workhouse, was founded in the 14th century, but rebuilt in 1682. Its income is about £200, and it accommodates 50 inmates. Gaywood's almshouses were founded in the reign of Stephen. The present income is about £350. Framingham's hospital in the London-road was founded 1676 by Alderman Framingham, with an endowment of £205. It consists of rooms for 12 inmates and a chapel. The grounds belonging to it are divided into gardens for the occupants of the rooms. Vallenger's almshouses in South Lynn Plain receive 4 women from South Lynn parish. They were founded in 1811 with an endowment of £84. The Wesleyan almshouses in St. James's-road were founded in 1822 by Benjamin Smith, Esq., with an income of about £30, for the support of 8 women above 60 years of age. Other charitable institutions are, St. Margaret's infirmary, the West Norfolk hospital, near the London-road, the dispensary, and the union poorhouse in Exton-road. Among the antiquities of the town, the principal are the remains of the South Gate and the fortifications, the walk along which is called the Mall, and the Lantern of the Grey Friars church, founded in 1264 by Thomas de Feltsham, which is a very interesting object. Its height is 90 feet, and it is now used as a landmark by sailors. There are also remains of the Austin Friars and the Blackfriars, both of which houses were founded in the 13th century. At the Red Mount on the E. side of the town there is an ancient chapel to the Virgin, octagonal externally, but internally cruciform. Its size is 17½ feet by 14, and 13 in height. Besides the above monasteries, there were houses of the Whitefriars, the Friars de Penitentia, St. John's, and four leprous hospitals. William Sautre, who was burnt at Smithfield in 1401 for holding the doctrines of Wycliffe, Sir Benjamin Keene the diplomatist, and Whittingham the editor of the County History, were natives of Lynn. Lynn is a terminus of the East Anglian railway, by which there is communication with Peterborough, Norwich, Birmingham, London, and other places. The Yare navigation joins the Ouse a short distance from Lynn. There is a line of steamers hence to Hull. The newspapers published are, the Lynn Advertiser and West Norfolk Herald, the Lynn News, the Lynn Record, and the Lynn Gazette, all of which are weekly, and published on Saturday. The market days are Tuesday and Saturday, the former being for corn, the latter for cattle, sheep, and general produce. Fairs are held from the 14th to the 28th February, on the 17th October for cheese, and on the second Monday in April and November for cattle.

LYNN, NORTH, a par. in the hund. of Freebridge Marshland, co. Norfolk. It is situated on the river Ouse, opposite King's Lynn. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, with the perpet. cur. of St. Margaret and St. Nicholas annexed. There is no church. There is also the district church of St. John the Evangelist, a perpet. cur., value £300, in the patron. of the bishop.

LYNN, WEST, a par. in the hund. of Freebridge Marshland, co. Norfolk, half a mile from North Lynn. It is situated on the W. bank of the Ouse, opposite King's Lynn. The living is a rect.* in Norwich dioc., val. £338. The church, which is dedicated to St. Peter, is a structure of the 13th century, of the later perpendicular order, with a square tower. The interior contains a carved octagonal font, a stained glass window representing the Maries at the Sepulchre, and a brass of 1503. The register commences in 1695. Here are charities of about £5 per annum. The Baptists and Wesleyans have places of worship.

LYNT FARM, a tythg. in the hund. of Highworth, co. Wilts, 1½ mile N.E. of Highworth.

LYON, a river of co. Perth, Scotland, flows through Glenlyon, to which it gives name, and joins the river Tay at Taymouth Castle.

LYONS, a par. in the bar. of South Salt, co. Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles S. of Celbridge. Naas is its post town. It is 3 miles long by 1 mile broad. The soil is generally good. The Grand canal traverses the interior. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Kildare, val. with Kill, £430, in the patron. of the crown. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Kill. Here are two day-schools. Lyons is the demesne of Lord Cloncurry. There are ruins of a castle and church, which are alleged to be the vestiges of an ancient town.

LYONSHALL, a par. in the hund. of Stretford, co. Hereford, 2 miles E. of Kington, its post town, and 11 W. of Leominster. It is situated on the S. bank of the river Arrow, and was formerly possessed by the Marbury, Devereux, Fouchet, and other families. Under the last named it became a market town. A castle was built here in early times, of which there are some remains. Bricks and tiles are made, and limestone is obtained for building. Coal is brought from Brecon, and lime from the kilns near Radnor, by a tramroad, which runs through the parish. The surface is finely wooded, and the soil clayey. The land is divided between arable and pasture in nearly equal proportions, with the exception of about 350 acres of woodland. The village is situated on the road from Hereford, and on that from Worcester to Aberystwith. The appropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £430, and the vicarial for £330. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £350, in the patron. of the Bishop of Worcester. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient stone edifice, with square tower, and has several monumental tablets. The charities produce about £2 per annum. There is a parochial school for both sexes, with teacher's residence. In the neighbourhood are remains of Offa's Dyke, in good preservation. A seat called the Moor is the principal residence. Lady Langdale is lady of the manor.

LYPIATE, a hmlt. in the par. and hund. of Kilmersdon, co. Somerset, 5 miles N.W. of Frome.

LYPPIATT, UPPER and LOWER, tythgs. in the par. of Stroud, co. Gloucester, 2 miles E. of Stroud. The Great Western railway, and the canal, pass through the neighbourhood. This is said to have been a meeting-place of the conspirators in the gunpowder plot.

LYSS-TURNEY, a hmlt. and chplry. in the par. and hund. of Odiham, co. Hants, 4 miles N.E. of Petersfield. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £150. The church is dedicated to St. Peter.

